Superintendent O'Rourke of Bellevue Hospital received a letter yesterday signed "H. J. Buttonbook, care of General Delivery, Detroit, Mich.," which for coolness or ignorance, the superintendent thinks, would be hard to equal. The writer offers for sale a diploma of the New York University Medical College, obtained six or seven years ago, to save "the sick owner and his family from losing their home." The writer suggests $500 as a reasonable price, but declares that "it is not a case for bargaining, for the sick man has a thousand troubles and is offering one of the dearest things he ever owned to save himself a roof."

The writer continues at length with suggestions as to the best way to dispose of the diploma at a good price, and tells Superintendent O'Rourke that there may be $50 or $100 in it for yourself." The superintendent said, however, that he was not in the business of selling doctors' diplomas, and did not care to discuss the possible criminality of the affair.

The statute provides that any person who shall abet the selling or obtaining unlawfully of a medical diploma "shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $250, or imprisonment for six months for the first offense."

FUNERAL OF PROF. EGLESTON.

Former Colleagues Attend the Service in Trinity Church.

The funeral of Thomas Egleston, LL. D., late professor in the School of Mines of Columbia University, was held yesterday afternoon at Trinity Church, of which Prof. Egleston had been a member for nearly a quarter of a century. The church was crowded, the entire Faculty of Columbia University and more than a hundred students and alumni being present. The American Institute of Mining Engineers, of which Prof. Egleston had been one of the oldest members and an ex-President, was represented by the officers and members of its council. In addition to the members of the family there were also in attendance many prominent men, including J. Pierpont Morgan and Judge Advocate Cious of the United States Army.

The service was the usual prayer and choral of the Episcopal Church. The body was placed at the close of the service in the McVicar vault in Trinity Churchyard.

CHIEF CROKER HONORED.

His Friends Give Him a Banquet and Silver Service.

Chief Croker of the Fire Department was the guest of honor last night at a dinner given at the Waldorf-Astoria by a committee of his friends, headed by Curtis Wigg and William G. Horner. During the dinner a beautiful silver water service was presented to Chief Croker.

Among the guests were Fire Commissioner John J. Scannell, Corporation Counsel John Whalen, Lieut. Lewis Nixon, George F. Scannell, Clerk of the Surrogate's Court; Augustus T. Docharty, Secretary of the Fire Department; William Curtis, Benjamin Everett, M. W. Bronson, Frank Tunell, A. Clinton Griffith, James White, A. J. Barnes, John F. Lyons, R. C. Mudge, James Ryan, Richard Croker, Jr., Frank Croker, and Charles W. Stapleton.

During the evening a number of entertainers from the vaudeville theatres appeared, including John W. Ransone, who, impersonating Richard Croker, walked into the banquet hall and said, "How's boys," and then proceeded, amid enthusiastic applause, to sing a song, the burden of which concerned the Mazet committee and the rapid transit tunnel.

New Steamer San Juan.

The new steamer San Juan of the New York and Puerto Rico Steamship Company, in command of Capt. Lloyd, arrived yesterday on her maiden trip from Wilmington, Del. She is a sister ship to the Ponce, which was put into commission last Fall, built as a freight carrier of 3,000 tons gross, with accommodations for about fifty passengers.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Timothy W. Lord.

Timothy W. Lord, a pioneer in the development of the New Jersey coast, who bore much the same relation to Belmar that ex-Senator James A. Bradley does to Asbury Park, died at his home, 167 West Twelfth Street, yesterday morning after an illness of many months' duration. Mr. Lord was for thirty years a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church and for many years a member of the Seventh Avenue Church in this city. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was born at Trenton, N. J., seventy-six years ago. He was identified with the commission business for several years, and later engaged in the manufacture of fancy leather goods in Newark. His most important work was in connection with the organization of the Ocean Beach Association. While driving near Belmar last Summer Mr. Lord met with an accident from which he never recovered, his age precluding the success of an operation that might otherwise have brought about his recovery. He leaves a wife and one son.

Isaac Dayton.

Isaac Dayton, a well-known lawyer, died at his home, at 334 West Twenty-third Street, yesterday morning. Mr. Dayton was born in this city in 1819. At different times he was an Alderman, an Assemblyman, a Public Administrator, and Chairman of the Republican County Committee. He was one of the original Registers of Bankruptcy appointed under the old law. He was the author of a well-known work on "Surrogates." He retired from the active practice of law about five years ago.

Mr. Dayton was a member of the Union, Manhattan, Olympic, and South Side Sportsmen's Clubs, and of the Bar Association. He leaves a widow and two sons.

The Rev. Dr. Brady E. Backus of the Church of the Holy Apostles will conduct a funeral service at the family home at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The body will be taken to Hudson, N. Y., for burial.

John Haynes Lord.

John Haynes Lord of the firm of Haynes Lord & Co. died at his home in Somerville, N. J., yesterday morning from pneumonia. Mr. Lord was President of the Second National Bank of

FINANCIAL DIRECTORY.

Chemical National Bank
270 Broadway.

National Bank of Commerce
CAP. AND SUR. $5,600,000.
31 Nassau St.

Hanover National Bank
Capital $1,000,000. Surplus and profits, $2,500,000.
9 and 11 Nassau St.

The Nassau Bank
Corner Beekman and Nassau Streets.

Central National Bank
320 Broadway.

Continental Trust Company
30 Broad St.

Colonial Trust Company
CAPITAL & SURPLUS, $1,500,000.
ST. PAUL B'LD'G.
222 B'way.

Washington Trust Company
Stewart Building, 280 Broadway.

PHILADELPHIA.
Fourth Street National Bank
Capital, $1,500,000. Surplus, $1,500,000.

BANKERS' CARDS.

36 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK.

Fisk & Robinson
BANKERS
Investment Securities
HARVEY EDWARD FISK,
GEORGE H. ROBINSON.
Member New York Stock Exchange.

The Corn Exchange Bank,
William and Beaver Sts., New York.
WILLIAM A. NASH, President.
Capital and Surplus . . $3,000,000.00
Deposits 20,000,000.00
BRANCHES:
Broadway Branch, Astor Place Bank.
Broadway & Spring St. Astor Place.
Hudson River Bank, Queens County Bank.
72d St. & Columbus Ave. Borough of Queens.

Redmond, Kerr & Co.
BANKERS,
41 WALL ST., N. Y.
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
Transact a general banking business. Receive deposits subject to draft. Dividends and interest collected and remitted. Act as Fiscal Agent for and negotiate and issue loans of railroads, street railways, gas companies, etc. Securities bought and sold on commission.
DEAL IN High-Grade Investment Securities.
Lists of current offerings sent on application.
PHILADELPHIA CORRESPONDENTS,
GRAHAM, KERR & CO.

HENRY CLEWS & CO.,
BANKERS,
11, 13, 15, & 17 Broad St.
MEMBERS N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE.
Orders executed for investment or on margin. Interest allowed on deposits subject to check at sight. Railroads reorganized and trade combinations effected. Act as Financial Agents for Corporations and Investors.
U. S. Bonds, all issues, bought and sold.
Branch Offices: 252 FIFTH AV., cor. 25th St.
1 & 7 BROADWAY, Silk Ex'ge Bldg.
56 WORTH ST. & 39 Thomas St.
87 HUDSON ST., Mercantile Ex.
16 COURT ST., Brooklyn.

Sutro Bros. & Co.,
BANKERS,
56 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Negotiate Security Issues of Railroad, Street Railway, Gas, Electric, and other Companies, and transact a General Banking Business.
Investment Securities.
Private wire connection to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Atlantic City.
Members New York and Phila. Stock Exchanges.
H. F. Bachman & Co., Philadelphia.

N. Y. & N. J. TELEPHONE "RIGHTS"
BOUGHT AND SOLD.
Geo. H. PRENTISS & Co.
37 William St., New York. 298 Montague St., Brooklyn.

SIMON BORG & CO.,
BANKERS,
No. 20 Nassau St., New York,
INVESTMENT SECURITIES.

HAVEN & STOUT
Bankers and Brokers.
1 Nassau Street, Cor. Wall St.
Members of
N. Y. Stock Exchange, N. Y. Cotton Exchange,
N. Y. Produce Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade.
Branch Offices:
302 Broadway, cor. Duane St., New York.
84 Broadway, cor. Berry St., Brooklyn.

A. J. DE KANTSTEIN & CO.
Members Consolidated Stock Exchange.
30 West 23d St.
STOCKS and BONDS bought and sold for cash and carried on margin.
SPECIAL LADIES' DEPARTMENT.
DAILY MARKET LETTER ON APPLICATION.
CORRESPONDENCE INVITED.

Chester B. Lawrence, Jr.,
Member Consolidated Stock Exchange.
STOCKS, BONDS, GRAIN, COTTON.
Branch Offices:
1,300 BROADWAY, CORNER 34TH ST.
621 BROADWAY CORNER HOUSTON ST.
MAIN OFFICES, 32 & 34 BROADWAY.

FINANCIAL.

KNICKERBOCKER TRUST CO
234 FIFTH AVE., COR. 27TH ST.
BRANCH OFFICE, 66 BROADWAY.
CAPITAL $1,000,000.00
Legal Depository for State, City and Court Moneys.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON TIME DEPOSITS.
Separate Department with special facilities for Ladies.
Checks Drawn may be cashed at either office.
Takes entire charge of Real Estate, Mortgages, etc.
CHARLES T. BARNEY, President.
FRED'K L. ELDRIDGE, 1st Vice-President.
JOSEPH T. BROWN, 2d Vice-President.
ALFRED B. MACLAY, Sec. and Treas.
FRED'K GORE KING, Ass't Sec. & Ass't. Treas.
WILLIAM B. RANDALL, Trust Officer.

The Trust Co. of America,
149 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Capital and Surplus, $5,000,000.
ASHBEL P. FITCH.....President.
WILLIAM H. LEUPP, WILLIAM BARBOUR,
Vice-President. Vice-President.
RAYMOND J. CHATRY, HENRY B. MANNING,
Secretary. Vice-President.
ALBERT L. BANISTER, LAWRENCE O. MURRAY,
Treasurer. Trust Officer.

N. Y. SECURITY & TRUST CO.
46 WALL STREET, NEW YORK.
Capital and Surplus . . . $3,000,000
CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD, President.
Wm. L. Strong, 1st V.P.; Abram M. Hyatt, 2d V.P.; Osborn W. Bright, Sec.; Zelah Van Loan, Asst. Sec.

FINANCIAL.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE

CONSOLIDATED GAS CO.

January 15th, 1900.

In January, 1899, at the time of your last Annual Meeting, the Consolidated Gas Company was profitably engaged in the business of manufacturing gas and retailing the same at the price of $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The stockholders were receiving dividends upon their investment at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and the stock, by reason of these satisfactory and prosperous conditions, enjoyed universal favor and confidence on the part of the investing public.

On the first day of May, 1899, your directors saw fit to reduce the price charged to consumers for gas to 65c. per thousand cubic feet, its rivals and competitors perforce meeting this act by similar reductions in price. A ruinous rate war, thus entered upon, has resulted in serious loss to the stockholders of the Company, and in a reduction of their dividends to one-half of the amount previously paid.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company, to be held on the 22nd day of January, 1900, finds a demoralized condition of its affairs prevailing. Dividends have been gradually reduced until they are now one-half of those formerly received, and the stockholders are confronted with the possibility that if the Company continues its present policy respecting the price of gas to the consumer for any period of time, the restoration of more favorable conditions may be prevented by the enactment of hostile legislation on behalf of a public that, having become accustomed to the present price, will tolerate no change.

A matter fraught with so much of vital consequence to those whose capital is invested in the securities of the Company is one that merits the serious and thoughtful consideration of every stockholder, especially in view of the fact that a continuance of the present disastrous policy of the directors may produce further reductions in dividends and even place the Company in a position where it cannot continue to earn its fixed charges. The stockholders are copartners with each other in the business of manufacturing and selling gas, and they owe a duty to themselves to demand and obtain at the annual meeting of the stockholders full information concerning the business policy of the Company, and before re-electing any of the directors to know whether a continuance of the course adopted by the present directors is warranted by existing conditions, or is to the best interests of the Company.

One competitor of your Company has already restored the price of the gas sold by it to $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The other competitors of the Consolidated Gas Company, not being charitable institutions, would doubtless be exceedingly glad to co-operate with the Consolidated Gas Company in restoring the price of gas to a normal and proper level.

In the absence of very positive information to the contrary, this course would seem to be to the best interests of the Company, and no selfish aims or private purpose of any officer of the Company should prevail at the expense of the stockholders.

Your directors have recently purchased, by a certain private arrangement, a large number of shares of the capital stock of the New York Mutual Gas Light Company. It is believed by many that the price paid for this stock was enormously in excess of its actual or prospective value.

This transaction may have been a profitable one for the Company, but the surface facts disclosed warrant a close investigation into its details, and satisfactory assurance that it was not dominated by the individual interests of any person in a position to shape the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company to the accomplishment of his own ends.

It appears by a publication contained in The New York Herald of Jan. 4th, the correctness of which is admitted by the President of your Company, that on or about that date your Directors acquired control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company. This transaction is one of great magnitude, and the details of it should be scrutinized with great care by the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company before ratification by them. The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company is a consolidated or parent company of a number of electric light companies, most of them absorbed on a most extravagant basis of valuation. As an instance of this: $21,000,000 purchase money bonds of the present Company were issued to acquire $9,200,000 of the Common Stock of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. The assumption by the Consolidated Gas Company of the control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, with its enormous bonded indebtedness, and its $36,000,000 of Capital Stock, marks a radical step in the history of the Consolidated Gas Company, and the stockholders can certainly ask in all fairness that they be given a most thorough opportunity to consider this momentous financial operation after a submission to them of the full details thereof, before being called upon to ratify it.

It is understood that your Company has also purchased control of another great electrical company, but the persons directly interested are emphatic in their refusal to state anything concerning the price paid.

The belief is beginning to be held by many stockholders that they would receive much larger returns upon their investment, and their stock would have a much greater market value, were the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company divorced from the control of men having vast personal ambitions to serve. The stock of the Company is selling for much less than its actual worth, because its affairs have not been in the hands of men who have administered their trust with a sole view to the earning of as much money as possible by the manufacture and sale of gas, and the resulting payment of large dividends to the stockholders.

It is beginning to be felt that the stock of the Company is being used as a mere factor in vast and involved financial intrigues and in attempts at the accomplishment of far-reaching personal ambitions by men who, in their lust for financial power or the gratification of personal desires, have become indifferent to the interests of the stockholders of this gas company.

The stock of the Consolidated Gas Company is held very generally by legitimate investors, who have purchased the stock of the Company with the intention of permanently holding it for the dividends to be earned from the manufacture and sale of gas in New York. It is not fair that their interests should be subservient to those of men who, having many diverse and complicated interests, serve them at the expense of the stockholders. There are on the board of your Company many men of uprightness and integrity who are conscious of their responsibility as trustees for the stockholders, and who, it is believed, will respond at once to the just demand of an expressed public opinion that they conduct the business of the Company in the sole and exclusive interests of their stockholders.

The stockholders have it within their power, by an insistence upon conservatism and of their rights to be fully informed concerning the business of the Company, to greatly enhance the market value of their stock and to obtain much larger returns upon their investment, by way of dividends.

The attention of guardians, trustees, executors, administrators and those acting in a judiciary capacity for stockholders of the company is especially called to this communication. A duty is imposed upon them of seeking full information concerning these matters which may affect the value of the securities held by them, and of asserting and enforcing the full rights of stockholders in the management of the Company.

It is desirable that as many stockholders as possible shall attend the annual meeting in person. Those who cannot do so, and believe that the directors should be called upon to furnish information concerning the affairs of the Company, are requested to sign the proxy which has been sent to them, and to mail the same to

GEORGE ALFRED LAMB,
c/o LAMB & VOSS,
Attorneys & Counselors at Law,
32 Nassau Street, N. Y. City.

International Zinc Co., Ltd.

Yields 16% on the Present Cost of Shares.

This is the only Zinc-Mining Company in the United States giving regularly to its stockholders exact reports and full knowledge of the condition of their property. The well-known Chartered Accountants, BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & CO., of New York and Boston, supervise the company's accounts, and issue quarterly to the stockholders statements of earnings and net profits, certified by them as correct.

It is now earning 22 per cent. on its capital, and will nearly double this as soon as the four new mills now under way are completed.

It is now paying dividends equal to those paid by the highest capitalized companies in the zinc fields, yet on a much smaller investment, which allows even the smallest investors to participate in the rich returns from zinc mining.

The low price of its shares also affords investors an unusual opportunity for profit by the enhancement in value of their holdings, and through its plan of supervising accounts it furnishes absolute security to its stockholders' interests.

300,000 SHARES

are now offered for public subscription at

75c. PER SHARE,

to complete the balance of the purchase price and pay for the new mills now being built.

The shares are of the par value of $1.00 each, and are fully paid and non-assessable.

SEND FOR PROSPECTUS, and note carefully the detailed accounts and BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & CO.'S reports on the properties.

Applications dated not later than Jan. 25 will receive the dividend payable Feb. 1.

Applications for stock, accompanied by remittance, received at either of the following offices of the fiscal agents.

JOSHUA BROWN & CO., Bankers,

45 AND 47 WALL ST., NEW YORK.

89 State St., Boston. 421 Chestnut St., Philadelphia. 409 The Rookery, Chicago

TO THE HOLDERS OF Chicago & Grand Trunk Railway Co.

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.

Default having been made in the principal of the above bonds, which became due on the first day of January, 1900, and foreclosure proceedings having been begun in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, formulated by the Company, under which plan the security of the bonds is seriously impaired:

At the request of a large number of holders of these bonds, resident in England, who have deposited their bonds under the Bondholders' Protective Agreement, dated December 21, 1899, the undersigned have agreed to represent the interests of the bondholders.

Holders of bonds in the United States can become parties to this agreement by depositing their bonds with the Central Trust Company of New York City, under said Protective Agreement, copies of which may be abtained from the Trust Company or at our office. Prompt deposit of the bonds is advisable.

Simon Borg & Company,
20 Nassau Street.
New York, January 5th, 1900.

Outside Securities a Specialty.
DAVID PFEIFFER, 18 Wall St.

FINANCIAL.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

OFFICE OF THE TREASURER.
GENERAL OFFICE, PHILADELPHIA,
DECEMBER 18, 1899.

To the Stockholders of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co.

At a meeting of the board held this day the following resolution was, on motion, adopted:

"Resolved, That, for the purpose of providing a portion of the necessary capital for construction and equipment expenditures, during the year 1900, on the main and leased lines and branches, and for other corporate purposes, the privilege be given to stockholders of the Company to subscribe, at par, between December 27th, 1899, and January 20th, 1900, ON WHICH LATTER DATE THE PRIVILEGE WILL CEASE, for ten per cent. of their respective holdings as they stand registered at three o'clock P. M. on December 26, 1899. The privilege of subscribing may be sold by any stockholder. Payment in full for such stock may be made after January 14th, and must be made not later than January 20th, 1900. Receipts, which will also be negotiable, will be given bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. from January 20th to May 1st, 1900, (being 70 cents per share,) at which time said receipts will cease to bear interest.

"Certificates for the new Stock will be delivered on and after May 1st, 1900, on surrender of the receipts. Receipts covering fractions of shares will be converted into Stock when presented in multiples of Fifty dollars. All receipts must be presented for conversion before January 1st, 1901, on and after which date they will only be redeemed, at par, in cash."

Blank forms, giving the particulars of the payments as above recited, forms of subscription, and allotment of privilege, etc., can be obtained on application at this office after December 20, 1899.

Stockholders desiring their new Certificates for full shares by May 1st must deposit their receipts with the Transfer Department of the Company on or before March 15th, 1900. For all receipts for full shares deposited after that date, and for all fractional receipts, Certificates will be ready for delivery as soon after May 1st as practicable, of which notice will be given.

ROBT. W. SMITH, Treasurer.

William Trist Bailey, Auctioneer.
REGULAR AUCTION SALE OF STOCKS, BONDS, ACCOUNTS, ETC.,
by WILLIAM TRIST BAILEY, Auctioneer,
MONDAY, JANUARY 22d, 1900.

At 12 o'clock noon, at the Independent Realty Auction Mart,
No. 139 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York,
By order of the Executors the following properties and securities will be sold by the Auctioneer named above, at the time and place above mentioned, namely:
8 Union Pacific Railroad Central Branch Bonds, par value, $1,000 each.
2 Certificates of Deposit issued by the Union Trust Company of the City of New York, covering 2 Atchison, Colorado & Pacific Railroad Bonds, par value, $1,000 each.
60 Shares Atchison Elevator Company Stock, par value, $100 each.
Seat in Consolidated Exchange.
46 Shares Atchison, Jewell County and Western Railroad Company Stock, par value $100 each.
10 Shares Acme Copying Press Company Stock, par value $25 each.
1,000 Shares Clancy Mining Company Stock, par value, $5 each.
27,000 Shares Hortense Mining Company Stock, par value, $10 each.
300 Shares Marshall Loom Company Stock, par value $5 each.
500 Shares Battle Mountain Mining Company Stock, par value, $10 each.
300 Shares Silver Islet Company Stock, par value, $25 each.
50 Shares United States Telephone Manufacturing Company Stock, par value, $50 each.
Receipt for 50 Shares of same Stock.
30 Shares Union Cattle Company of Wyoming Stock, par value, $100 each.
1 Bond $500, New York, Montana Mining & Discovery Company.
80 Shares Perry Stove Manufacturing Company Stock, South Pittsburg, Tenn., par value, $100 each.
80 Shares North Jersey Land Company Stock, par value, $5 each.
50 Shares Star Spring Company Stock, Saratoga, par value, $100 each. (Company in liquidation.)
79,750 Shares The Bonanza Chief Gold Mining Company Stock, par value, $1 each.
In addition to the above there will also be sold at the same time and place balances due on certain accounts in favor of the testator, with the collaterals held for the payment of certain of the accounts and certain judgments, the full particulars of all of which will be given at the time and place of sale.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

DIVIDENDS.

OFFICE OF THE
Northern Pacific Railway Company
MILLS BUILDING,
New York, January 11, 1900.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held this day there was declared from the net earnings a dividend of ONE PER CENT. on the Preferred Stock of this Company for the quarter ending March 1, 1900, the same to be paid March 5, 1900, to the holders of record of the Preferred Stock at the closing of the transfer books on February 7, 1900.

For the purpose of such dividend the transfer books of this company will be closed at 3 P. M. on February 7, 1900, and will be reopened at 10 A. M. on February 19, 1900.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
By GEORGE H. EARL, Secretary.

23 Wall Street,
New York, January 11, 1900.

The transfer books of the Voting Trustees for Preferred Stock Trust Certificates of the NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY will close in New York and Berlin at 3 P. M. on February 7, 1900, and will reopen at 10 A. M. on February 19, 1900.

On March 5, 1900, the Voting Trustees will be prepared to distribute the above dividend of One Per Cent. when received by them among the parties entitled thereto as same appear of record on their books when closed as above.

J. P. MORGAN & CO., New York,
DEUTSCHE BANK, Berlin,
Agents for Voting Trustees.

SEMI-ANNUAL CASH DIVIDEND.
Illinois Central Railroad Co.

The Board of Directors has this day declared a dividend of 2½ Per Cent. in cash, payable March 1st, 1900, to the holders of the Capital Stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company as registered at the close of business January 31st, 1900.

The stock transfer books will be closed for the purpose of the above dividend from January 31st until February 23d, 1900.

A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.
New York, January 17th, 1900.

The Lawyers' Title Insurance Company of New York,
37 & 39 Liberty St. and 44½ & 46 Maiden Lane.
NEW YORK, Jan. 10, 1900.

The Board of Directors of this company has this day declared a dividend of 2½ Per Cent., and an extra dividend of One-Half Per Cent. payable at the company's offices on Feb. 1, 1900. The transfer books will be closed Saturday, Jan. 13, and reopened Friday, Feb. 2.

JOHN DUER, Treasurer.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 4 per cent. Registered Bonds of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago Ry. Co. will close at the office of the Central Trust Co. of N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the quarterly interest thereon, due Feb. 1, 1900, and will reopen Feb. 1, at 10 A. M.

E. F. OSBORN, Secretary.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1900.

THE ALABAMA CONSOLIDATED COAL & Iron Company, 27 William Street, New York, January 12th, 1900.—The Board of Directors have this day declared a quarterly dividend of One and Three-Quarters Per Cent. on the Preferred Stock of the Company to Stockholders of Record January 20th, 1900, payable February 1st, 1900. The Transfer books will close January 20th, 1900, at three o'clock P. M., and will reopen February 1st, 1900. JNO E. SEARLES, Treasurer.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 7 per cent. registered bonds of the Columbus & Toledo R. R. Co. will close at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the semi-annual interest thereon due Feb. 1, 1900, and will open Feb. 1st at 10 A. M.

WILLIAM N. COTT, Treasurer.
Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1900.

The German-American Bank,
New York, January 18, 1900.

The Board of Directors have declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable on and after February 1st. The transfer books will be closed from January 24th to February 1st, inclusive.

J. F. FREDERICHS, Cashier.

Pacific Fire Insurance Company.
Ninety-fifth Dividend.

A semi-annual Dividend of Five Per Cent. (5%) is payable on demand at the office of the Company, No. 32 Pine Street, New York.

GEORGE JEREMIAH, Secretary.
New York, January 18, 1900.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.
"All the News That's Fit to Print."

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

The Automatic Beer Cask Company.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the AUTOMATIC BEER CASK COMPANY will be held on the tenth day of February, 1900, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the office of Wallach & Cook, its attorneys, No. 33 Wall Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, for the purpose of voting upon a proposition to reduce its capital stock from fifty thousand dollars, consisting of one thousand shares of the par value of fifty dollars each, to one thousand dollars, consisting of twenty shares of the par value of fifty dollars each.

A. W. CHRISTOPHER,
WOLF LIMPERT,
F. O. DETTMANN,
JOHN F. JACOBS,
A majority of Directors.

General Chemical Company.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the GENERAL CHEMICAL COMPANY, for the purpose of electing Directors for the ensuing year and of transacting such other business as may properly come before the meeting, will be held at the Company's office at Phillippstown, Putnam County, in the State of New York, on Wednesday, the 31st of January, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

The stock and transfer books will be closed against the transfer of stock on Saturday, January 20, at 12 o'clock noon, and will be reopened on February 1st, at 10 A. M.

New York, January 12, 1900.
CHAS. ROBINSON SMITH, Secretary.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT A SPECIAL Meeting of the Stockholders of the CONSOLIDATED KANSAS CITY SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY will be held at the office of said Company, at Number 74 Broadway, in the City of New York, on the 2d day of February, 1900, at 3 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of considering and voting on a proposed reduction of the capital stock of said Company from $4,500,000, its present amount, to $2,500,000.

Dated January 12th, 1900.

E. W. NASH,
BARTON SEWELL,
THOMAS B. ADAMS,
Directors.
EDWARD BRUSH, Secretary.

THE PEOPLES GAS LIGHT & COKE CO.
(of Chicago).

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of The Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company will be held at the office of the Company in Chicago, Adams Street and Michigan Avenue, on Saturday, February 10, 1900, at 11 o'clock A. M. The transfer books will close, in New York, in accordance with the by-laws, at 3 o'clock P. M. on Friday, January 19th, and will reopen at 10 o'clock A. M. Tuesday, February 13th, 1900.

C. K. G. BILLINGS, President.

ENGLISH DISCOUNT RATE DOWN.

Bank of England Reduces Its Figure to 4½ Per Cent.—Weekly Statement of the Bank.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The rate of discount of the Bank of England was to-day reduced ½ per cent., to 4½ per cent.

The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes: Total reserve increased £1,282,000; circulation decreased £103,000; bullion increased £1,178,547; other securities decreased £2,240,000; other deposits decreased £1,710,000; public deposits decreased £655,000; notes reserve increased £1,367,000. Government securities unchanged.

The proportion of the Bank of England reserve to liability is 42.56 per cent., as compared with 39.47 per cent. last week.

LIPTON WANTS MEMBERSHIP.

Applies to Chicago Board of Trade—Owns Packing Plant.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Sir Thomas J. Lipton, owner of the last year's America Cup Challenger Shamrock, has applied for membership in the Chicago Board of Trade. The rules of the board require that applications be indorsed by two members of the board. In Sir Thomas's case John C. Hately and Henry Botsford, wealthy packers, are sponsors.

Sir Thomas J. Lipton has owned and operated a meat-preserving and pork-packing plant at the stock yards for several years, but heretofore has had no membership in the Board of Trade, being represented by the managers of his Chicago office.

IMPORTERS WIN THEIR CASE.

Decision in Favor of Loeb & Schoenfeld of This City.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 18.—Judge Townsend of the United States Court to-day handed down a decision in the case of the Government against Loeb & Schoenfeld, New York importers. The importing firm brought into this country a consignment of embroidery, on which the customs Appraiser imposed duty charges in excess of the invoice. The firm appealed and the General Appraiser reduced the duty.

The Government, thereupon, through the Treasury Department, appealed to the courts, thus raising the important question of the right of the Secretary of the Treasury to appeal from the acts of the General Appraiser or the Collector of the Port.

The decision handed down to-day sustains the protest of the importers, thus ruling against the Government.

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES.

The Coffee Exchange had another active day yesterday, transactions aggregating 47,000 bags. Coffee opened some 15 to 20 points up, and closed remarkably strong, with a net advance averaging not far from 25 points. Cotton improved a few points.

The Cotton Exchange market enjoyed a firm undertone, and trading amounted to some 300,000 bales. Better Liverpool advices and better demand in the South for spot cotton, the latter condition being largely due to Continental buying, were responsible for the market's strength. Receipts are still moderate.

The day was rather a dull one for the Consolidated Exchange. Chicago wheat declined a trifle. Sugar was the main feature of the day's trading, a good deal of interest being caused by the break in the product.

The wheat market was not very active on the Produce Exchange. About 160,000 bushels were taken for export. Wheat scored a small decline, and corn underwent a sympathetic movement, due partially to bear attack. Oats were steady and dull.

BOGUS DRAFT FOR $550.

Chase National Bank Gets an Odd Piece of Commercial Paper.

The Chase National Bank of this city received through the exchanges yesterday a draft for $550 on the First National Bank of Chicago, payable to bearer. The draft was dated Nov. 18, 1899, and in the lower left-hand corner was printed, "To Chase National Bank, New York."

A close examination revealed the fact that the draft was a printed sample sent out by William Zeuch & Co., publishers, of Chicago. Across the body of the draft was a list giving in very faint type the different prices for 1,000 to 10,000 drafts or checks in book form. The signature, "First National Bank," in large type, together with the written signatures of "J. L. McKinney" and "Q. Saranz." (?) were placed on the lower right-hand corner of the draft in a manner to almost obscure the price list. An imprint from a rubber stamp across the face of the draft read "Bank of New South Wales, Pahiatua," while on the back was stamped "Merchants' National Bank of Chicago." An officer of the bank said:

"Of course, no bank is likely to lose any money by reason of such a draft being put in circulation, but the great mistake and great wrong which William Zeuch & Co. made was in using the names of two banks in actual existence on their advertising form. By so doing they aided the parties who put this draft in circulation in accomplishing their object."

THE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

May Recommend Lake Ship Canal to Aid New York's Trade.

The members of the New York Commerce Commission have practically concluded their labors and expect to file their report with Gov. Roosevelt on Monday next.

The Commissioners were appointed July 19, 1898, by the then Governor, F. S. Black, to investigate the commerce of New York, to determine the cause of its alleged decline, and to suggest means for its revival.

The members of the commission are ex-Mayor Charles A. Schieren of Brooklyn, Alexander R. Smith of Pelham, C. C. Shayne, Andrew H. Green, and Hugh Kelly, ex-President of the Maritime Exchange. Ex-Congressman B. L. Fairchild of Westchester is the counsel.

A TIMES reporter saw Messrs. Shayne, Smith, and Fairchild after a session at the Hotel Manhattan yesterday. While they expressed belief that they had found a remedy, they would not, our of respect to Gov. Roosevelt, state what remedial measures they would suggest.

The Commissioners would neither deny nor affirm the truth of a report that one of their recommendations favors the construction of a ship canal from the lakes to the Hudson River.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks irregular.

STOCK TRANSACTIONS.

	Shares.
Jan. 18	271,829
To date this year	6,595,822
Corresponding date last year	13,131,446

BOND TRANSACTIONS.

Jan. 18	$3,325,000
To date this year	$25,435,800
Corresponding date last year	$81,090,240

Money rate: Collateral loans on call, 2@3½ per cent.; at three months, 5 per cent.; at six months, 5½ per cent. Commercial paper, sixty to ninety days, 5 per cent.

***

Net changes in stocks of one-half of 1 per cent. or more were:

Stocks Advanced.

Am. Cotton Oil	½	Chi. & N. W.	1½
Am. Express	7	Illinois Cent.	½
Am. S. H. pf.	½	Nat. Biscuit pf.	1½
Am. Tin Plate	1	Pacific Coast	½
Ann Arbor pf.	1½	Reading	¾
Brunswick	2½	Reading 2d pf.	¾
Chi. G. W. pf., B.	¾	St. L. S. W. pf.	⅝
Chi. G. W. deb.	⅞	Union Pacific	1
Chi., Ind. & L.	½	Wis. Central	½

Stocks Declined.

Am. Ice	½	Manhattan	⅝
Am. Malting	½	Met. Street Ry.	½
Am. Malt. pf.	1	North Amer.	⅝
Am. Sugar Ref.	2⅝	People's Gas, Chi.	⅝
Chi., B. & Q.	½	Peo., Dec. & Ev.	½
Chi., M. & St. P. pf.	½	Third Avenue	1
Chi. Term. T. pf.	1½	U. S. Leather	¾
Col. Fuel & Iron	¾	U. S. Leather pf.	½
General Electric	⅞

***

Net changes in bonds of 1 per cent. or more were:

Bonds Advanced.

Ann Arbor 4s	1¼	Int. & G. N. 2d	4½
B'klyn R. T. 5s	1	L., E. & St. L. con. 5s, t. r.	6
C., M. & St. P., C. P. & W. 5s	1	Met. St. Ry. 5s	1
C. & N. W. deb., 1909	1	Mex. Cent. 1st con. inc.	1⅝
Col. F. & I. 6s	1	N. Y., C. & St. L. 1st	1¼
Ed. El. Ill. of N. conv. 5s	1½	Ore. S. L. con. 5s	1
Erie 1st con. 4s	1⅛	Tol., St. L. & K. C. 1st, t. r.	6
Ft. W. & R. G. 1st	3½	Va. Mid. gen. 5s, stpd.	1
Ga. Pacific 1st	7

Bonds Declined.

B., R. & P. gen.	1	L., Ev. & St. L. gen. 4s	1½
C., B. & Q. conv. 5s	3½	Mo. Pac. tr. 5s	1½

MARKET CONDITIONS.

The Stock Exchange had yesterday another insignificant total of transactions, less than 275,000 shares being traded in. The course of prices was irregular; a number of the industrials were weak, while some of the railway shares scored slight advances. In very large majority the changes of the day were fractional merely and about evenly divided between advances and declines. Of news consequential enough to exert a genuine influence upon quotations there was not one development. Such railroad earnings as came out were encouraging, and from a variety of quarters there were statements showing continuance of the good times records so long now in evidence.

Much the most important event of the day was the announcement of a further reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate; that charge is now down to 4½ per cent. Superficially considered, this is encouraging to the furthest degree, seeming to indicate that easier monetary conditions are established on the other side of the ocean. Important banking interests, however, appear to incline to the suspicion that the Bank of England's conduct is to some extent influenced by political considerations. A British war loan is to come out, and to obtain for it such satisfactory reception as the Government would like it is needful that the money market situation at London shall be without stringency.

***

In New York money market prospects are encouraging. Bankers generally seem to be of the opinion that we are to have ease for some months to come. At the same time slight effort is made to disguise the feeling of bankers that more discrimination must be exercised as to the character of collateral.

***

Continued weakness in the grain market may develop into a factor of some consequence. Other countries are finding a readier market for their crops. The fact that the American farmer is prosperous, able to hold back his grain, seems to be taken advantage of by Russian and other growers to move forward supplies at whatever may be the European market's offering price. This leaves the American producer in the position where unsupplied demand would return tremendous profits, but where a fully stocked market might impose penalties. From some standpoints the situation is without precedent. Fortunate, indeed, is it that the American farmer can meet the issue with equanimity.

***

Commission house transactions in the stock market continue practically nil, and commission brokers of highest character are still advising customers to watch and wait.

DEMAND FOR BONDS.

It is a significant fact that since the easing up in the money market, leaving large sums of money available at low rates of interest, the demand for bonds, particularly good railroad bonds, has largely increased, and the tape has recorded many more sales and at better prices than for some time past. The Street takes this new demand as a very hopeful sign, and the prediction is made that once the stock market becomes settled the eagerness of purchasers to buy bonds will favorably affect other securities.

As an evidence of the present ease in money—in the opinion of many likely to be continued for some time, as the banks are steadily adding to their available resources—it may be said that the highest for call money yesterday was 3½ per cent., and the lowest 2, with the bulk of the loans at 3. For brokers' time loans the market is 4½@5 per cent., with extraordinary loans at 4 per cent. On certain of the industrials, which are not in the best favor, the loan figure is somewhat higher.

SUGAR FALLS AGAIN.

Sugar Trust stock, which for the past few days has been comparatively peaceful and strong, yesterday again furnished the sensation for the market, declining some 5 points on trading of about 58,000 shares, though the close was better, marking a net loss of 2⅝ points.

During the morning the stock held fairly strong within a range of about 1½ points. Shortly before 1 o'clock, however, the price began to go down, and in less than an hour, on comparatively few sales, had fallen to 114¼. There, however, it held and later rallied a point.

The only news affecting the situation was that the trust was shading some grades of soft sugar 5 points, and that it was believed this might be preliminary to a further and decided cut. It is said that many of the shorts who sold just before the recent decline have now covered.

In this connection Price, McCormick & Co., in their usual market letter to their customers, say:

"The reason given for the selling was that a reduction was made by the Sugar Refining Company in the price of soft sugar, but there was probably a technical reason which was even more plausible. This was that a prominent operator, recently elected a member of the Stock Exchange, had become heavily long of the stock, and, in the absence of any considerable outside buying, it was not difficult to force a decline which is supposed to have obliged the operator in question to liquidate."

LEATHER'S WEAKNESS.

United States Leather common was weak yesterday on selling by some interests who bought when the stock was around 13 and 14, and took advantage of this week's rise to take profits. On every recession brokers reported to be acting for the Standard Oil crowd bought the stock.

There continues to be much speculation as to what will be the developments at the annual meeting on Feb. 28, and what proportion of the twenty-eight members of the board the new interests in the company will have.

A statement, believed to have been semi-officially inspired, was made yesterday, to the effect that the earnings of the company for 1899 will show about $8,000,000 net surplus.

UNION COPPER.

Latest reports from the Union Copper Mine at Gold Hill, N. C., are to the effect that much progress has recently been made in the development of that property, and that it has now been put in a position considerably to increase its output, and, it is said by the friends of the company, very largely increase its profits. The concentrating plant, which has just been completed, has a capacity of 500 tons, and plans have already been formed for the erection of a second plant with the same capacity. There is now under construction a one-hundred-ton smelting plant, which, it is expected, will be completed early in March. Other minor improvements are being made, with the view to afford the most economical operation of the mine.

Work is being pursued in fourteen shafts, of which ten are already producing ore houses with out-of-town wires were present and gave their views of the matter. The Governing Committee will later consider the subject.

GOLD SUPPLY AND MOVEMENTS.

M. L. Muhleman, Deputy Assistant Treasurer of the United States in this city, has prepared a statistical review of the supply and movement of gold since the close of 1896, as follows:

"The recent exportation of gold to Europe and the suspension of production in South Africa has directed attention to the world's supply of yellow metal and its distribution. Accurate figures for the end of 1899 are not yet available, but those at hand are sufficiently so to give a comprehensive general view of the subject. I have taken for comparison the period from the close of 1896, in which year the conditions in the United States were decidedly unsettled.

"The world's production of gold in the three years 1897, 1898, and 1899 is estimated to have been between $825,000,000 and $850,000,000.

"The following table shows the location of important stocks of gold at dates named, in millions of dollars:

Jan. 1.	In All European Banks. of Issue.	Entire Stock in United States.	U. S. Treasury. Reserve.	In U. S. National Banks.
1897	1,591	693	187	181
1898	1,749	745	161	207
1899	1,632	949	246	281
1900	1,595	1,016	240	314

"It will thus be seen that the banks of Europe had on the first of the present month very little more gold than at the beginning of 1897, whereas the United States gained $323,000,000. We kept our own product and gained by imports about $135,000,000. The United States was thus best able to lose gold to England when the demand arose.

"The principal banks of Europe showed at dates named holdings as follows, in millions of dollars:

Jan. 1.	England.	France.	Germany.	Austria.	Russia.	Italy.	Spain.
1897	171	382	133	127	478	88	43
1898	154	394	149	153	614	80	47
1899	153	363	141	157	520	80	55
1900	146	370	127	162	468	79	68

"In the redistribution during the three years Russia shows a loss of $151,000,000, practically all of which went into circulation in redemption of the bank's notes, under the law for resumption of specie payments. Spain and Austria gained materially, while England, France, and Germany lost. The South African war not only stopped the usual flow of gold to London, but compelled England to send large amounts to the Cape.

"We are now prepared to estimate what became of the world's product of say $850,000,000. The consumption in arts and manufactures for the world amounts to upward of $60,000,000 annually, so that nearly $200,000,000 was probably so used; India always draws more gold from Europe than she returns, besides keeping her own product; this and the similar movement to other countries in the Orient probably accounts for $150,000,000; the United States, as we have seen, took $323,000,000, (keeping its large product and importing about $135,000,000 more than was exported,) and Russia's adoption of the gold standard accounts for say $151,000,000 disappearing from the usual depositories. These items aggregate $824,000,000, and thus practically account for the enormous sums taken out of the earth since the end of 1896. England's experts to the Cape Colony probably make up the remainder."

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Increase of $1 in the regular quarterly dividend rate on Boston and Montana Mining stock.

Election of Leroy Frost and John Howard Gray to membership in the Stock Exchange.

Heaviest day's transactions in railroad bonds in over a month.

Reduction in the Bank of England's rate of discount from 5 to 4½ per cent.

Election of Mr. Parkinson Vice President of the Boston Stock Exchange, succeeding H. S. Wainwright, resigned.

Advance of half a cent in the posted rate for long sterling exchange.

Subscriptions for the $2,800,000 first mortgage bonds of the American Hide and Leather Company, which closed Wednesday night, said to be satisfactory.

Sales on the Stock Exchange of 10 shares of Broadway Bank stock at 240 and 25 Ninth National at 90.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call was 2@3½ per cent., closing at 2 per cent.

Time money, 5 per cent. for sixty days to four months, and 5½ per cent. for longer dates. Mercantile paper, 5 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 5½@6 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 6½@7½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $167,010,385; balances, $7,563,[illegible]; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,346,527.

Money on call in London, 2 per cent. Rate of discount in open market, 3⅝@3½ per cent. for short and 3 9-16@3⅝ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange firm. Nominal rates were $4.85 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.83⅞@$4.84; demand, $4.87⅛@4.87½; cables, $4.87⅞@$4.88; commercial bills, $4.82¾@$4.83½.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.15⅝ less 1-16@5.20 and 5.16¼; reichsmarks, 94⅞@94 7-16, and 95 1-16@95⅜; guilds, 40 1-16 and 40⅜.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Boston—Par. Chicago—40c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, par; bank, $1 premium. San Francisco—Sight, 15c premium; telegraphic, 17½c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, ⅛c premium. Savannan—Buying, $1 premium per $1,000; selling, par. St. Louis—10c premium. Cincinnati—Between banks, 30c premium; over counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Prices for American securities advanced at the opening and remained generally firm throughout the session. The better feeling was due to more favorable advices from South Africa. At the close the tone was firm.

Consols for both money and the account, 101¼; Canadian Pacific, 95½; Erie, 12½; Erie first preferred, 34½; Illinois Central, 115⅝; Union Pacific preferred, 76½; St. Paul, 120⅝; New York Central, 137¾; Pennsylvania, 66; Reading, 9¼; Northern Pacific preferred, 76; Atchison, 20⅝; Louisville, 83; Grand Trunk, 7⅜; Anaconda, 8¼.

Bar silver closed steadier at 27 5-16d per ounce.

Money, 2 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3⅝@3½ per cent., and for three months' bills, 3 9-16@3⅝ per cent.

Spanish fours closed at 67.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £10,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 129.70; Madrid, 28.15; Lisbon, 44; Rome, 7.22½.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—Prices advanced on the Bourse to-day. The reduction in the Bank of England rate favored the whole list. International securities were largely purchased. Rio Tintos hardened on the rise in the price of copper. Kafirs recovered sharply on London buying and the cheerful war news and closed steady, although the best prices were not maintained. Three per cent. rentes, 100f 7½c for the account; exchange on London, 25f 20c for checks. Spanish 4s closed at 68.07½.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes: Notes in circulation increased 18,875,000f; treasury accounts current decreased 12,775,000f; gold in hand increased 14,750,000f; bills discounted decreased 25,800,000f; silver in hand decreased 1,725,000f.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—Business on the Boerse to-day was firm, owing to the favorable bank return and encouraging London advices. Exchange on London, 20 marks 40½ pfennigs for checks; private rate of discount, 4¼ per cent.

The weekly statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows the following changes: Cash in hand increased 45,080,000 marks; treasury notes increased 2,400,000 marks; other securities decreased 110,180,000 marks; notes in circulation decreased 111,240,000 marks.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 18.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were active and firm on more reassuring war news and easier money. Foreign securities were harder, especially Spanish 4s. Americans improved.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Prices were irregular yesterday in the market for outside securities, and although transactions were in larger amount than has been the average for the past ten days, little business was done. Some good buying appeared, but more often the stocks traded in were under selling pressure and showed net losses for the day. Distilling of America and Amalgamated Copper were among the issues that showed the greatest weakness, but for many other issues there was very small demand and generally disposition to sell was more marked than that to buy. At the close the market became somewhat steadier, and some recoveries from the lowest prices of the day were recorded during the last half hour of trading.

AMALGAMATED COPPER was traded in to the extent of a number of hundreds of shares from about 83⅛ down to 82¾. At the close it was offered at the latter figure, with 82½ bid, showing a three-quarter of a point loss. Stock pressed for sale and bids for the issue were readily supplied. The selling was of a kind that seemed to indicate that continuous liquidation is going on in the stock. It declined steadily, with no rallies, and closed at the lowest for the day.

CALIFORNIA COPPER was fairly active, though trading in the stock was in smaller amount than on the previous day. It sold from 3¾ down to 3, and closed at 3 bid, showing a net loss of a quarter of a point. Buying of the stock appeared to be for inside interests.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was notably weak. Trading in the common stock amounted to about 1,000 shares, while the preferred stock was active to the extent of 200 or 300 shares only. The latter sold from 22 down to 21 and closed at 21 bid, against 22 bid at the close of the previous day. The price of the common declined from 6½, the opening sale, to 6, and it closed at 5¾ bid, with stock offered at the figure at which the last sale was effected. Forced liquidation appeared to be the principal cause of the weakness which was shown by these stocks, as no news of an unfavorable character to account for the declines was had. In fact, such rumors as are heard in regard to the situation of the company are such as to indicate that its business has been put upon a profitable basis.

GENERAL CARRIAGE continued to show considerable activity, being traded in to the extent of about 2,000 shares. In the absence of further news in regard to the company's plans and the efforts being made to carry them out, the stock was under some pressure, and at the close there was little demand for the issue. It sold from 6½ down to 6, and ended the day at the latter figure.

BAY STATE GAS sold up to 1¾, but dropped back again to 1½ bid, and showed no net change for the day. Trading in the stock was fairly active. Rumors are heard to the effect that developments likely to affect the price of Bay State Gas are afoot and intimations are heard that the stock will shortly reach very much higher figures than have prevailed for many weeks past. The reports are not of a very definite character, but the friends of the stock are very confidently predicting substantial improvement.

ELECTRIC AXLE sold down to 4¼, and closed at 4 bid, with a net loss of half a point. The approach of the date of payment of the second installment of $5 was the only apparent reason for the decline in the stock. It is said that developments of a character very favorable to the business of the Electric Axle Company are maturing and may be announced shortly.

Closing quotations were as follows:

ACTIVE SECURITIES.

Gas Companies.

	Bid.	Asked.
Bay State Gas	1½	1⅝
New Amsterdam	22½	23
New Amsterdam pf	46	48
New Amsterdam 5s, with interest	95	95½

Industrials.

	Bid.	Asked.
American Agricultural Chemical	31	33
American Agricultural Chemical pf.	76¾	78
American Bicycle	14	17
American Bicycle pf.	40	50
American Bicycle bonds	92	93
American Woolen Goods	23½	24¼
American Woolen Goods pf., ex div.	78½	79
Cast-Iron Pipe	8	9½
Cast-Iron Pipe pf.	40	44¼
Distilling Company of America	5¾	6
Distilling Company of America pf.	20	22
Electric Axle Light & Power	4	4½
Electric Boat	..	20½
Electric Boat pf.	..	40
Havana Commercial	19	21
Havana Commercial pf., ex div.	59½	..
International Pump	16	18½
International Pump pf.	64	65½
National Gramophone, ex div.	60	63
National Salt	47	49
National Salt pf.	79	80
National Tube	45¼	44
National Tube pf.	92	93
Otis Elevator	20	25
Otis Elevator pf.	86	89
Royal Baking Powder pf.	94	95
Rubber Goods Mfg.	27	30
Rubber Goods Mfg. pf.	79	80
Sloss-Sheffield	28	30
Sloss-Sheffield pf.	68	70
Standard Oil of New Jersey	493	494
U. S. Pneumatic Horse Collar	..	½

Miscellaneous.

Amalgamated Copper	82½	82¾
American Air Power	35	50
American Cotton	..	60
Arizona Land	..	10½
Asphalt Company of America	12¾	13¼
British Columbia Copper	10½	11
California Copper	3	3¼
Chicago & Alton sub.	104	106
Chicago & Alton 5s, (new)	93	96
Electric Vehicle	45	50
Electric Vehicle pf.	85	95
*Electro-Pneumatic, assessment paid	1	1¼
Flemington Coal & Coke	20	33½
General Carriage	6	6½
Illinois Transportation	2½	3
*Markeen Copper	6	7
Metropolitan 5s	97	98
New York Transportation	10	10½
New England Transportation	5½	6½
Pittsburg, Bessemer & Lake Erie	19¾	21
St. Louis subs.	129	130
Retsof	25	30
Retsof bonds	80	84
Storage Power	13	14
Superior and Boston Copper	..	3-16
Tennessee Copper	13¾	15
Trust Company of America	198	199
Virginia Coal, Iron & Coke	24	28

*Selling dollars per share. Par value, $10.

LESS ACTIVE SECURITIES.

Street Railways.

	Bid.	Asked.
Broadway & Seventh Avenue	230	240
Broadway & Seventh Avenue 1st	104	105
Broadway & Seventh Avenue 2d	110	112
Broadway Surface 1st 5s	117	118
Broadway Surface 2d	104	105
Brooklyn City Railroad	235	237
Brooklyn, Bath & West End 5s	100	102
Central Park, N. & E. River	198	203
Central Park, N. & E. River 7s	108	109
Columbus Railway	20	24
Columbus Railway pf.	80	86
Con. Traction of N. J.	58	60
Con. Traction of N. J. 5s	106	108
Eighth Avenue Railroad	375	400
Kings County Elevated 4s, (new)	84	86
42d St., Man. & St. Nicholas Av.	68	75
42d St., Man. & St. Nicholas Av. 1st	115	117
42d St., Man. & St. Nicholas Av. 2d	88	92
Nassau Electric 4s	88	92
Nassau Electric 5s	108	112
New Orleans Traction	27½	29
New Orleans Traction pf.	100	102
Ninth Avenue Railroad	190	205
North Jersey Street Railway	29	31
North Jersey Street Railway 4s	86	89
Orange & Passaic Valley bonds	102	104
Steinway Railway Co. 6 p. c. 1st	117	118
Second Avenue Railroad consols	115½	117
Sixth Avenue Railroad	200	210
Syracuse Rapid Transit	13	16
Syracuse Rapid Transit pf.	25	35
Union Railway 1st 5s	115	117
Union Railway stock	190	200
United Traction, Providence	108	111
Worcester (Mass.) Traction	30	31½
Worcester (Mass.) Traction pf.	105	106½

Gas Companies.

Buffalo (N. Y.) stock	4	7
Buffalo (N. Y.) 1st, with interest	72	75
Central Union 5s, guaranteed	108	109
Consolidated Gas of Newark	33	34
Consolidated Gas of Newark bonds	..	103
Consolidated Gas bonds of N. J.	87½	89½
Consolidated Gas of N. J.	21¾	22½
Consumers' Gas (Jersey City) bonds	102	105
Denver Gas	38	40½
Denver Gas 5s	82	85
Essex & Hudson Gas	35	40
Fort Wayne Gas	33	45
Fort Wayne Gas 6s	60	64
Indianapolis Gas	100	105
Indianapolis Gas bonds	101	103
Lafayette Gas Co.	40	45
Lafayette Gas Co. 1st 6s	60	65
Logansport & Wabash Valley Gas	38	43
Logansport & Wabash Valley Gas 6s	60	63
Mutual Gas of New York	300	305
Madison (Wis.) stock	81	83
New England Gas & Coke	20	22
New England Gas & Coke bonds	71	73
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. 1st	102	103
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. con	106	109
N. Y. Suburban Gas Co. con	102½	103½
North Hudson L., H. & P. Co.	55	56
North Hud. L., H. & P. Co. bonds	107	109
Ohio & Indiana 1st 6s	60	65
Ohio & Indiana 1st 6s	60	65
St. Joseph, (Mo.)	40	46
St. Joseph (Mo.) 5s	96	98
St. Paul Gas stock	54	58
St. Paul Gas bonds	89	91
Standard Gas, New York	95	..
Standard Gas, New York, pf.	125	..
Standard Gas 1st	115	117
Syracuse Gas stock	..	15
Syracuse Gas 1st 5 per cent bonds	88	90
Western Gas 1st 6s	99	101
Western Gas 1st 5s, with interest	102	105

Ferry Companies.

Brooklyn Ferry	24	26
Brooklyn Ferry 5s	90	93
Hoboken Ferry, (new)	65	68
Hoboken Ferry con. 5s	96	94
Metropolitan Ferry 5s	108	110
Union Ferry	39	40
Union Ferry bonds	100½	101

Industrials.

American Typefounders'	51	53
American Typefounders' pf.	10	18½
Barney & Smith	98	105
Barney & Smith pf.	103	106
Barney & Smith bonds	..	..
Consolidated Rubber Tire	7½	..
Consolidated Rubber Tire pf.	35	38
Cramps' Shipyard	50	53
General Chemical	98	..
General Chemical pf.	97	100
Hudson River Telephone	116	119
Lorillard Company pf.	40	43
Standard Coupler	6	10
Trenton Potteries	45	55
Trenton Potteries pf.	24	28
Union Typewriter	110	113
Union Typewriter 1st pf.	120	122
Union Typewriter 2d pf.	98	100
Worthington Pump pf.	..	..

Miscellaneous.

American Bank Note	47	50
Central & South American Tel.	105	105½
Iron Steamboat	..	8
Iron steamboat bonds	59	60

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—Business in the stock market was all but stagnant. There was no animation in any speciality or group of stocks. The Boston and Montana Company declared a quarterly dividend of $8 per share—$1,200,000—payable Feb. 20, to stockholders of record Jan. 25. The total dividend payments, including to-day's declaration, by the Boston and Montana Company are $15,725,000. The stock declined 5, to 255. Arcadian lost 1½ to 18½; Osceola, 1½ to 67½; Santa Fé, ⅛ to 5, recovering to 5⅜; Old Dominion, 1, to 17½. Butte sold at 45½. Dominion Coal lost 1, to 41; Gas and Coke lost ⅛ to 19; the 5s sold at 73. United States Oil was ½ lower, at 18⅝. Mexican Central 4s gained 1, to 74, and first incomes ⅛, to 21½.

Although 6 per cent. is still the nominal rate at the Clearing House, no new business is doing at that figure, and, with outside loans now being made quite freely at 5 per cent. and better, it is perfectly clear that this rate must come down very soon. New York funds sold to-day at par and 5 cents premium.

Closing bid and asked:

Mining Stocks.

	Bid.	Asked.
Adventure	6	6½
Allouez	3	3⅜
Arcadian	18	19
Arnold	6	7
Ash Bed	.25	.50
Atlantic	24½	25½
Baltic	17¾	18
B. & Cr. C.	.30	.35
Bost. & M.	255	258
Butte & B.	46	50
Cal. & Hec.	730	740
Centennial	16	17
Franklin	14	14½
Humboldt	1	2
Isle Royale	23	..
Mohawk	15	16

Railroad Stocks.

Bost. & Alb.	240	Cent. M. pf.	60
Bost. & Low.	242	Fitchburg pf.	119
Bost. & Me.	200	N. Y. & N.	..
Bost. & Prov.	300	E. 6s	110½
Bost. Elev.	95½	N. Y. & N.	..
Bost. G. 5s.	80	E. 7s	114½
Cent. Mass.	10	West End	92

Miscellaneous Stocks.

Am. B. Tel.	320	N. Eng. Tel.	135
Chi. S. Y.	133	U. S. Oil	18½
Dom. Coal	41½	Westinghouse Electric	40¼
Dom. C. pf.	115	Westinghouse Elect. pf.	..
Erie Tel.	103		63
Lamson St.	35
Mex. Tel.	3

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Linseed common was steady to-day at 14⅝ to 14¼, opening at 14½ and closing at 14⅝. The preferred opened at 55 and closed at 54½. Consolidated Traction closed at 39, a gain of 2 points during the day. Metropolitan stock was neglected, the preferred selling at 75 and the certificates at 25. The bonds brought 95½.

Sales.	High.	Low.	Close.
455 American Linseed	14⅝	14¼	14⅝
1,307 American Linseed pf.	55	54½	54½
100 American Radiator	50	48	50
161 American Radiator pf.	105	104½	105
50 American Strawboard	31½	31½	31½
50 Canal & Dock	70	70	70
6 Chicago Pkg. Co. pf.	29	29	29
42 Chicago Con. Traction	39	37	37
5 City Railway	278	278	278
100 Diamond Match	122½	121¾	121¾
200 Lake St. Elevated	13¾	13¾	13¾
40 Lake St. Elev. ctfs.	12	12	12
10 Metropolitan Elevated	25	25	25
20 Met. Elevated pf.	75	75	75
1,010 National Biscuit	36½	36¼	36½
10 National Biscuit pf.	91¼	91	91
2 National Carbon	17½	17½	17½
125 National Carbon pf.	82½	82	82
3 National Steel pf.	94	94	94
100 South Side Elevated	100	100	100
10 Street's W. S. C. Line pf.	70	70	70
28 West Chicago	110¼	110½	112¼

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—Local speculative conditions are the same as they have been for two weeks past. Little interest is taken in the dealings, for the reason that they are too insignificant to be followed from day to day. The transactions here to-day were few and far between, with many stocks stationary and others fluctuating ⅛ to ½. Consolidated Lake Superior declined 2, to 16, and it was the only stock which moved a point or more.

The close was steady, at these bid and asked prices:

	Bid.	Asked.
Cambria	21½	21⅝
Choctaw	33	34
El. Co. of A.	13½	13¼
Lehigh Val.	24½	25
Marsden	11¾	11¾
Phila. Trac.	90½	90⅝
Union Trac.	37⅝	38
Un. Gas Imp.	15½	15⅝
Welsbach Lt.	40	45
W. N. Y. & P.	..	..
Penn.	0⅝	6½

MINING STOCK QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The official closing quotations for mining stocks to-day and yesterday were as follows:

	Thursday.	Wednesday.
Alta	.02	.02
Alpha Con.	.02	.03
Andes	.08	.05
Belcher	.10	.10
Best & Belcher	.23	.21
Bullion	.03	.03
Caledonia	.48	.48
Challenge Con.	.18	.19
Chollar	.25	.23
Confidence	.60	.61
Con. Cal. & Va.	1.60	1.40
Con. Imperial	.01	.01
Crown Point	.10	.10
Gould & Curry	.24	.21
Hale & Norcross	.40	.40
Julia	.02	.02
Justice	.03	.03
Kentucky Con.	.01	.02
Lady Washington Con.	.02	.02
Mexican	.37	.30
Occidental Con.	.18	.16
Ophir	.76	.66
Overman	.05	.06
Potosi	.28	.23
Savage	.16	.14
Sag Belcher	.03	.02
Sierra Nevada	.49	.41
Standard	2.80	2.75
Syndicate	.05	.05
Union Con.	.29	.25
Utah Con.	.03	.03
Yellow Jacket	.23	.22
Silver bars	59¼	59¼
Mexican dollars	47⅛@48¼	47⅛@48¼
Drafts, sight	.12¼	.12½
Telegraph	.15	.15

Special to The New York Times.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Jan. 18.—Gardner & Co. report closing quotations as follows:

	Thursday. Bid.	Asked.	Wednesday. Bid.	Asked.
Acacia	41¼	41⅞	41⅞	42¼
Alamo	14½	14⅝	15	15¼
Anaconda	43	45	42	44½
Anchoria	80	85	80	85
Argentum	13½	22	13	21
Bankers'	13	13½	13¼	13⅝
Battle	34½	34⅞	34½	35
Blue Bell	13	14	12¾	12¾
Coin	200	230	240	265
Columbine	19¾	20	19¼	20½
Consolidated	16	16¼	15⅞	16
Damon	29⅝	29⅞	29½	29⅝
Elkton	119¾	120½	119	121
El Paso	35	36	33¼	34
Findlay	14	15	14⅝	15
Fleece	27	31	28	31
Garfield	15½	16½	15⅝	16⅝
Gibson	23	25	23¼	24
Gould	33	34	32⅝	33
Isabella	133½	134	134	135
Independence	50	54	55½	57½
Jackpot	50	60	58¾	59
King	98	101	98	101
Moon Anchor	70	73	71	73
Matoa	25	30	29	30
National	11¾	12¼	11⅞	12
Ophir	59½	62	55	63
Pharmacist Con.	14½	14⅞	14½	14½
Pinnacle	26½	27	26¼	26½
Portland	238½	240	235	239¼
Raven	83½	84	82	85
Rawlings	29¾	32	30	32
Rosa	61½	65	61¾	65
Sovereign	14	14¼	14½	14¾
Tornado	47	49	47½	50
Union	44¼	44½	44¼	44½
Vindicator	150	157	150	157
Work	30½	30⅝	30	30¾
Zenobia	23	23¾	23¼	23¾

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

Complete Transactions in Stocks—Thursday, Jan. 18, 1900.

Closing. Bid.	Asked.	Sales.		First.	High.	Low.	Last.	Net Change.
58	59¾	20	Am. Car & Found. pf.	60	60	60	60	.....
34½	36	228	American Ice	35½	35½	34¼	34½	−½
71½	75	35	American Ice pf.	72½	72½	72½	72½	.....
14⅞	14¾	550	American Linseed	15½	15½	14⅝	14⅞	+⅛
54⅝	55	533	Am. Linseed pf.	54⅞	54⅞	54½	54⅝	−⅛
33¼	33½	500	American Cotton Oil	33	33⅝	33	33½	−⅛
90	93	100	Am. Cotton Oil pf.	92	92	92	92	−⅝
145	150	100	American Express	145	145	145	145	+7
5¼	5½	170	American Malting Co.	5¼	5¼	5⅛	5⅛	−⅛
26⅞	28	400	Am. Malting Co. pf.	28	28	27	27	−1
37⅝	37¾	1,766	Am. Smelt. & Ref.	37⅝	38¼	37⅝	37⅝	−¼
88	88½	888	Am. Smelt. & Ref. pf.	89	89	88½	88½	−½
46⅝	46⅞	1,735	Am. Steel & Wire	47	47¼	46⅝	46⅝	−⅜
31	32	235	Am. Steel Hoop pf.	81	81½	81	81½	+⅛
115½	115¾	57,875	Am. Sugar Ref. Co.	119½	119¾	114¼	115¾	−2¾
90	96	117	Am. Tel. & Cable Co.	92½	92½	92¼	92¼	.....
28	29½	550	American Tin Plate	29½	30	29½	30	+1
81½	82¾	40	Am. Tin Plate pf.	81⅝	81⅝	81⅝	81⅝	.....
99⅝	100	20,680	American Tobacco	100	100¾	99	99¾	.....
133	140	40	American Tobacco pf.	140¼	140¼	140¼	140¼	.....
40	40⅜	100	Anaconda Copper	40	40	40	40	−⅛
42½	46	210	Ann Arbor pf.	42½	42½	42½	42½	+1½
19¾	20¼	1,100	At., T. & S. F.	19⅞	20	19⅞	20	.....
60⅝	60¾	7,820	At., T. & S. F. pf.	60⅝	60⅞	60⅛	60⅝	−⅛
58⅝	58¾	2,755	Baltimore & Ohio	59⅝	59⅝	58¾	58⅝	−⅛
75	75½	1,830	Baltimore & Ohio pf.	75½	75½	75	75¼	−⅜
69⅛	69¾	18,990	Brooklyn Rapid Tran.	69¾	70¾	68⅞	69¼	−⅝
14½	15	1,240	Brunswick City	14½	15	14½	15	+⅛
30¼	30⅜	3,555	Chesapeake & Ohio	30⅜	30⅝	29⅞	30¼	+⅛
121	121⅜	5,620	Chi., Bur. & Quincy	121⅜	121¾	120¾	121¼	+⅛
38	40	100	Chicago Con. Traction	39½	39½	39½	39½	.....
12½	12⅜	1,625	Chicago Great West.	12⅝	12¾	12⅜	12⅝	+⅛
37⅝	38	100	Chi. Gr. West. pf., B.	38½	38¾	38½	38½	+⅛
87	87¾	100	Chi. Gr. West., deb.	88	88	88	88	+⅛
16	16¼	325	Chi., Ind. & Louis.	16	16	16	16	+⅛
117½	117¾	4,920	Chi., Mil. & St. Paul.	118	118½	117¼	117¾	−⅛
169	172	140	Chi., Mil. & St. P. pf.	169½	169½	169¼	169½	−⅛
161½	162½	850	Chicago & Northw.	160¾	162¼	160¾	162	+1½
101	106½	1,200	Chi., R. I. & Pac.	105¾	106	105¾	106	.....
35½	37¾	100	Chi. Term. Trans. pf.	32½	32½	32½	32½	−1½
60⅝	60⅞	650	C., C., C. & St. L.	61	61	60⅞	60⅝	−⅜
16½	17	465	Cleve., Lor. & W.	15¾	16	15¾	15¾	+⅜
43⅝	43⅞	2,410	Colorado Fuel & Iron.	44½	44⅝	43	43½	−¾
130	135	70	Col. Fuel & Iron pf.	130	130	129	129	.....
23	23½	310	Colorado Midland pf.	23	23	22¼	23	−⅛
5⅞	5⅝	500	Colorado Southern	5½	5½	5½	5½	.....
43	43¼	312	Col. Southern 1st pf.	43½	43½	43	43	−⅜
32½	32⅝	740	Continental Tobacco	33	33⅛	32⅝	32⅝	−⅜
84	85	55	Continental Tobac. pf.	84½	85	84½	85	.....
115	116	15	Delaware & Hudson	116	116	116	116	.....
69¼	69¼	720	Denver & R. G. pf.	69¼	69¾	69	69¼	+⅜
32⅝	33	750	Erie 1st pf.	33	33	32¾	32⅝	.....
104½	105	400	Erie Tel. & Tel., ex r.	105	105½	105	105½	.....
50⅝	50½	3,875	Federal Steel	50½	50¾	50⅛	50½	+⅛
73	73¼	125	Federal Steel pf.	73	73	73	73	−⅛
122	123	150	General Electric	122	122	122	122	−⅛
49½	50¼	100	Glucose Sugar Ref.	50	50	50	50	−⅛
97	99	10	Glucose

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Liberty and Cedar Street Properties Sold—No. 13 Broadway Transferred—Other Dealings and Auction Sales.

John T. Williams has bought the four and six story buildings 114 and 116 Liberty Street, running through to 117, 119, and 21 Cedar Street. These properties, which are occupied by John Anderson & Co., the tobacco dealers, and are owned by Alfred Wagstaff, the Secretary of that concern, have frontages of 47 feet on Liberty Street and 68.7 feet on Cedar Street, with a depth of about 112 feet between streets. In exchange Mr. Williams gives the six-story building 274 and 276 Church Street, 50 by 100. It is understood that Mr. Williams will erect a modern business structure on the Cedar and Liberty Street lots.

William H. Mairs of Brooklyn took title yesterday from the Lichtenstein estate to the property 13 Broadway, 35.9 by 101.11 by 37.7 by 110. The expressed consideration was $200,000. Mr. Mairs had been for some time the owner of the Stevens House at the southwest corner of Broadway and Morris Street. The acquisition by him of adjoining properties has on several occasions given rise to the report that he was about to erect a big building on the corner, which report was revived in connection with yesterday's transfers. Mairs's representative, who negotiated the purchase of 13 Broadway for him, said yesterday afternoon that nothing had yet been decided as to the future of the property.

Daniel Birdsall & Co. have sold the six-story building 241 and 243 West Broadway to an investor, who will occupy the premises after extensive alterations have been completed.

Final contracts for the purchase of the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-first Street by the Union Club from the Barney-Sheldon syndicate for $700,000 were signed and exchanged at noon yesterday and a deposit of $35,000 was paid by the purchasers. The deal was arranged by W. E. & F. B. Taylor and Bryan L. Kennelly & Co. The plot fronts 75.5 feet on Fifth Avenue and 100 feet on Fifty-first Street and contains five and two-fifths lots. Messrs Taylor and Kennelly made the highest bid to the Trustees of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum for the entire block, $2,470,000, but their offer was subject to the agreement of the Union Club to take the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-first Street. The Purchasing Committee of the Union Club authorized them to offer $700,000 for this corner, subject to a vote of the club, to be taken at the annual meeting on Dec. 20, 1899. The Orphan Asylum people, however, fearing an adverse decision on the part of the club, accepted an offer of $2,450,000 from another syndicate, whose members agreed to purchase the entire block the day before the club took action.

L. J. Phillips & Co. have sold for Michael Tully to Alfred Vondermuhll the four-story brownstone-front dwelling 25 West Seventy-first Street, 19 by 102.2.

Henry D. Winans & May have sold for Mrs. Babette Lehman, for about $125,000, the five-story dwelling 5 East Sixty-second Street, 25 by 100.

It is reported that Michael Tully has sold to Peter Banner the unfinished dwelling 306 West Eightieth Street, 25 by 100.

Frank R. Sharrott has sold for the Leopold Kahn Company to Max Vogel two lots on the north side of One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, 100 feet east of Morningside Avenue, for improvement with a seven-story apartment house.

Greene & Taylor have sold for William Murray the four-story dwelling 47 West Forty-seventh Street, Columbia College leasehold.

James McClenahan has bought the plot of four lots at the northeast corner of Broadway and One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street.

Max Marx has bought, through Solomon Marcus, the three-story dwelling, 18 by 100.11, at the southwest corner of Park Avenue and One Hundred and Eleventh Street.

Mandelbaum & Lewine have sold to I. D. Schlachetsky the three-story building 15 Division Street, 25 by 70.5.

Results at Auction.

Yesterday's offerings in the Trinity Building Salesroom resulted as follows:

By D. Phoenix Ingraham & Co.

Park Avenue, east side, 350 feet south of One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street, running through to Washington Avenue, 50 by 200.1, frame dwelling and vacant; foreclosure sale, to the plantiff, George R. Henken $11,450

By James L. Wells.

Harrison Avenue, west side, 100 feet south of McGraw Avenue, 25 by 90, three-story frame dwelling, with store and barn on the rear of lot; foreclosure sale, to the plaintiff, Christian Pfaff 3,750

By Richard V. Harnett & Co.

Marian Street, South Mount Vernon, west side, 117.3 feet north of Becker Avenue, 50 by 100, two-story frame dwelling; foreclosure sale, to the plaintiff, William D. Berrian 500

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co.

259 East Seventy-eighth Street, 13.10 by 102.2, three-story brick dwelling; assignee's sale, to Arthur Cohn 6,485

To-day's Auction Sales.

The following sales at auction are down for to-day at 111 Broadway:

By William M. Ryan, foreclosure sale, Eugene H. Pomeroy, referee, 62 West Ninety-sixth Street, north side, 141 feet east of Columbus Avenue, 21 by 100.11, four-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $22,664.

By William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, George H. Hart, referee, Mosholu Parkway, south side, the block front line between Decatur and Hull Avenues, being 246.9 feet on the Parkway, 50 feet on Decatur Avenue and 122.7 feet on Hull Avenue, vacant. Due on judgment, $8,723.

By McVickar & Co., partition sale, Thomas F. Donnelly, referee, 615 West End Avenue, west side, 44 feet south of Ninety-fifth Street, 20 by 90, four-story stone-front dwelling.

By Philip A. Smyth, foreclosure sale, Sylvester L. H. Ward, referee, 619 West One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, north side, 270 feet west of the Boulevard, 15 by 99.11, three-story stone-front dwelling. Due on judgment, $9,200.

By Richard V. Harnett & Co., partition sale, Gilbert M. Speir, referee, 50 Ridge Street, east side, 125 feet north of Broome Street, 25 by 100, five-story brick and frame tenement at the rear; 279 Hart Street, Brooklyn, north side, 110 feet east of Sumner Avenue, 20 by 100, two-story brownstone-front dwelling.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Charles W. Culyer, referee, 37 and 39 Attorney Street, west side, 175 feet north of Grand Street, 51.6 by 100 by 51.8 by 100, three-story front and five-story rear brick tenements on 37, five-story front and rear brick tenements on 39. Due on judgment, $6,409; subject to other mortgages for $39,000.

THE BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

List of Plans Filed for New Structures and Alterations.

Webster Avenue, northeast corner of Zittner Place, for a one-story frame shed, 22 by 30; Peter Quinn, owner; J. S. Ballard, architect; cost, $150.

Riverside Drive, northeast corner of One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, for a seven-story brick flat, 103 by 105 by 81.6; Homer J. Beaudet of 132 Nassau Street, owner; George Keister, architect; cost, $225,000.

Bleecker Street, southwest corner, of Wooster Street, for an eight-story brick store and loft building, 25 by 100; R. F. Ritterbusch of 11 Broadway, owner and architect; cost, $65,000.

Alterations.

Nos. 444 and 446 West Seventeenth Street, to a brick factory and stable; J. C. Cady of 446 West Twenty-second Street, owner; B. W. Berger, architect; cost, $10,000.

Nos. 244 and 246 Bowery, to two two-story brick and stone dwellings; Sondheim & Co., premises, owner; G. A. Spelman, architect; cost, $400.

West End Avenue, southeast corner of Eighty-first Street, to a one-story stone and brick church; All Angels' Church, owner; Barney & Chapman, architects; cost, $200.

Fourth Street, northeast corner of Mercer Street, to a six-story brick store; D. L. Newborg of 33 East Sixty-seventh Street, owner; Buchman & Fox of 11 East Fifty-ninth Street, architects; cost, $250.

Mulberry, Houston, Elm, and Jersey Streets, to a seven and nine-story brick factory; A. Schwarzmann and others, premises, owners; Wagner & Jahn, architects; cost, $1,500.

No. 53 East Twenty-fifth Street, to a four-story brick and frame dwelling; William E. Wyatt and others, owners; Marc Eidlitz & Son, builders; cost, $60.

Recorded Real Estate Transfers.

Thursday, Jan. 18.

BROADWAY, 13, w s, 167.2 ft s of Morris St, 35.9x101.11x37.7x110; Sarah Lichtenstein and others, executors, &c., to William H. Mairs $200,000

CENTRAL PARK WEST, 247, n s, 22.2x100; Helen J. Erickson to Lizzie A. Williams 100

COLUMBIA ST, s e corner of Broome St, 20x55; Bridget McKenna to Jacob Fritz.. 1

HAGUE ST, 4 and 6, 33.10x24.11x31.3x36.1; Michael J. Mahony and another to Henry Campbell 5,000

HESTER ST, 5 and 7, 50x100; John Kafka to Michael Fay and William Stacom, re-recorded 1

KELLY ST, e s, 75.1 ft n of Westchester Av, runs e 30.5x s e 39.5 to avenue x n e 25x n w 52.6x w 52.6 to street x s 25; James G. Potter to Robert Proddow..... 100

LEWIS ST, n w corner of 7th St, 74x70.11x73.1x70.8; Rebecca Cohn to Aaron J. Cohn and another 100

PIKE ST, 32, 25x85; David Simcox to Mary Simcox 1

THOMPSON ST, 133, 22x100; Antony Reisert to William Evans and John H. Buscall 1

THOMPSON ST, 131, 22x100; Harris Mandelbaum to Evans and John H. Buscall.. 1

WASHINGTON AV, e s, 123 ft n of 169th St, 25.7x—x25.7x105.5; Washington Av, e s, 199.9 ft n of 169th St, 51.2x100x51.2x105.5; Marie B. Denicke to Leopold Hutter 100

WASHINGTON AV, e s, 123 ft n of 169th St, 25.7x106x25.7x105.5; Marie B. Denicke, executrix to Leopold Hutter..... 3,000

4TH ST, 376, s s, 23x96; United States Trust Company, trustee, to Pincus Lowenfeld and another 12,500

6TH ST, s s, 180 ft w of White Plains Road, 25x114, Wakefield; Ebenezer K. Noltke to Joseph L. Liscomb 500

7TH AV, n w corner of 138th St, 20x77.5; Tillie Bernstein to James M. Fitzsimons 1

12TH ST, s s, 445.6 ft s e of Avenue A, 25x103.3; Martin H. Kempner and Irving I. Kempner, ½ part 1

12TH ST, 520 East, n s, 25x103.3; Martin H. Kempner to Irving I. Kempner, ½ part 1

48TH ST, 317 and 319 East, 50x100.5; Louis Brill to Henry Freeman 1,665

61ST ST, 338 East, 28x100.5; Edward Wilckens to Irving I. Kempner..... 1

67TH ST, n s, 150 ft e of Madison Av, 25x100.5; James R. Steers to Mary D. Steers 1

74TH ST, n s, 44 ft w of Park Av, 17x102.2; Jeremiah C. Lyons to William G. Cogswell 45,000

78TH ST, 316 West, 16x102.2; Edward C. Williams to Louisa L. Williams and others 1

111TH ST, 219 East, 25x½ block; Jacob H. Westheimer and others to Annie Levy.. 1

116TH ST, 329 East, 16.8x100.11; Michael Feeney to Harris Friedman..... 100

117TH ST, s s, 225 ft e of Lenox Av, 100x100.11; Maurice Leyne, referee, to J. Allen Townsend 1,000

118TH ST, 11 to 15 West, 75x100.11; Sebastian Sander to Catherine M. Fish.. 1

127TH ST, e s, 200 ft e of Columbus Av, 25x99.11; James Reynolds and another to Annie Hagan 1

129TH ST, n s, 375 ft e of 7th Av, 50x99.11; Globe Realty Company to Benjamin F. Luyster 100

136TH ST, s s, 225 ft e of St. Ann's Av, 25x100; Ada A. Entz to Richard Herrmann 1

137TH ST, n s, 450 ft e of Willis Av, 87.6x100; John Immel to William Wetterer 1

139TH ST, n s, 100 ft e of Boulevard, 75x99.11; Annie Hagan to James Reynolds and another 1,000

145TH ST, s s, 300 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 100x99.11; George M. Van Hoesen, referee, to Jacob D. Butler..... 40,000

155TH ST, centre line, 1,046.10 ft w of bulkhead line, runs s 1,046.10 to said bulkhead line x n 300 to centre of 156th St x w — to centre of 8th Av x n — to bulkhead line x w 765x s —; 156th-157th St, 8th Av and Exterior St, block; 157th-158th St, 8th Av and Exterior St, block; 158th-159th St, 8th Av and Exterior St, block; Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., to Harriet G. Coogan 1

156TH ST, n s, 58.11 ft w of Westchester Av, 27.6x100x irregular; James F. Meehan to Henry Boschen..... 25,000

Recorded Leases.

ASINARI, Helena L. G., to the Manhattan Trust Company; Nassau St, 1 and 2, n w corner of Wall St, 20 years ..... $20,000 to $25,000

BANGIER, Max, to Dominico Romano; 2d Av, 2,040 to 2,044, 10 years..... 4,200

MARSHALL, Wilson, to the Bowery Company; Bowery, 270, and 254 and 256 Elizabeth St, 10 years..... 5,000

MICHAELSON, Lena, and another, to Paul Kalmus; Division St, 13 and 13½, 4 9-12 years 1,650

RANDALL, Anna J., and another to Paul J. Bornvit and another; 23d St, 58 West, 5 years 20,000

SCHNITZER, Hyman, to Bernard Sacks and another; Henry St, 49, 10 years..... 3,000

SPERLING, Josephine, agent, to James S. Unger; 120th St, 310 East, 3 years..... 600

SPRAGUE, Marguerite E., and others, devisees, and Carrie Strobel to George H. Holden; 6th Av, 240, 4 years..... 3,650

Recorded Mortgages.

BAYLIES, Catharine, to Jacob Ruppert; Amsterdam Av, w s, 74.11 ft n of 130th St, demand..... $107,029

BOEHM, Abraham, and Lewis Coon to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; West End Av, s e corner of 82d St, 2 years 72,500

BROWN, George D., to Austin B. Fletcher and another, trustees, &c.; 152d St, n s, 75, 100, and 125 ft w of Wales Av, (three mortgages,) 3 years..... 35,000

BRUGNELLE, Virginia, to William T. Hooker; 123d St, 237.6 ft w of Pleasant Av, demand..... 3,000

BURLINGAME, Fred C., to William Henderson; Union Av, s w corner of Dawson St, secures contract 1,827

BUTLER, John D., to Citizens' Savings Bank; 145th St, s s, 300 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 1 year..... $2,800

CARPENTER, Emma F., to Mary M. Sullivan; 34th St, s s, 128.4 ft e of 11th Av, ½ part, demand..... 500

COGSWELL, William B., to Ernest G. Stedman; 74th St, n s, 44 ft w of Park Av, 3 years..... 25,000

COHEN, Aaron J., and another to Rebecca Cohn and another; Lewis St, n w corner of 7th St, 1 year..... 5,500

EVANS, William, and John H. Buscall, to Harris Mandelbaum and another, 131 and 133 Thompson St, 1 year..... 6,500

EVANS, William, and John H. Buscall to Antony Heisert; 133 Thompson St, 1 year 6,000

FRIEDMAN, Harris, to Michael Feeney; No. 229 East 116th St, one yr..... 1,000

FRITZ, Jacob, to Sigmund Cohn; Columbia St, s e corner of Broome St, 2 years.. 1,500

FRITZ, Jacob, to Herman Gotthelf; Columbia St, s e corner of Broome St, instalments 11,000

GUTIERA, Nene, to Ernst-Marx-Nathan Company; Brook Av, n e corner of St. Paul's Place; also Brook Av, w s, 362.7 ft s of 171st St, and Brook Av, w s, 162.7 ft s of 171st St, demand..... 40,000

GUTIERA, Nene, to Daniel M. Shallenberger and another, trustees; same property, secures notes..... 18,109

GUILFOY, Samuel, and Charles R. Partridge to George Fowler; 139th St, n s, 300 ft e of St. Ann's Av, demand..... 3,200

GUILFOY, Samuel, and Charles R. Partridge to George Fowler; 139th St, n s, 300 ft of St. Ann's Av, demand..... 3,200

HARRISON REALTY COMPANY to John J. Hughes and others; 90 Prince St, 1 year..... 7,915

HASSELL, August, to Mutual Life Insurance Company; 97 Amsterdam Av, 5 years..... 25,000

HENNESSY, Ellen M., to the Mutual Life Insurance Company; 97th St, s s, 225 ft w of West End Av, extends to 98th St, 1 year 20,000

HERRMANN, Richard, to Paulina Roth; 136th St, s s, 225 ft e of St. Ann's Av, 1 year..... 1,000

HONECK, John G. W. and others, to East River Savings Institution; No. 495 2d Ave, one yr..... 11,000

HORNE, Louther S., to William Henderson; 165th St, s s, 121.6 ft e of Prospect Av, ½ year..... 6,371

HORNE, Louther S., to William Henderson; Webster Av, s e corner of St. Paul's Place, due..... 1,500

HUBERT, Conrad, and Samuel Stern to Katharina Koch; 33 Ridge St, 3 years.. 8,500

HUTCHINGS, Kate, to Martin D. Fink; Bathgate Av, widened, e s, 133.4 ft s of 179th St, 3 years..... 4,200

HUTTER, Leopold, to Marie B. Denicke; Washington Av, as widened, e s, 225.5 ft n of 169th St, 10 years..... 2,175

HUTTER, Leopold, to Marie B. Denicke; Washington Av, e s, widened, 123 ft n of 169th St, 10 years..... 2,250

HUTTER, Leopold, to Marie B. Denicke; Washington Av, widened, e s, 199.10 ft n of 169th St, 10 years..... 2,175

JACKSON, Richard C., to Rebecca Ladew and another, trustees; 632 West 100th St, 3 years 7,000

KASSEWITZ, Jacob, to Jacob Klingenstein; 3d St, n s, 325 ft e of 2d Ave, demand..... 20,000

KATZENSTEIN, Simon, to Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank; Av C, s e s, 48.9 ft n of E 7th St, one yr..... 4,500

KAUFMANN, Leopold, to Monas Weil and another; 97th St, n s, 115 ft e of 3d Ave, demand..... 20,000

KENNEDY, Carrie S., to Edward and Henry Hirsh; 114th St, s s, 125 ft e of Broadway, 2 months..... 10,000

KNIGHT, Alonzo B., to Eleanor L. S. Cencl; 86th St, n s, 234 ft w of West End Ave, three yrs..... 28,000

KRAKOWER, Fanny and Gerson, to Laetitia M. Meyers; No. 220 Clinton St, three yrs..... 24,000

KRAKOWER, Fanny, to Louis Merzbach, same property, one and one-half yrs..... 4,000

LANDGRAFF, Louisa, and A. Charles, to Anton Boss; Road to Middletown, s w corner Mapes Av, 5 years..... 2,000

LOWENFELD, Pincus, and William Prager to United States Trust Company, trustee; 376 East 4th St, demand..... 11,000

LUYSTER, Benjamin F., to Globe Realty Company; 129th St, s s, 375 ft e of 7th Av, ½ year..... 10,375

MANDELSTEIN, Morris, to Frederick A. O. Schwarz; 100th St, n s, 125.6 ft w of Lexington Av, 3 years..... 20,000

MANDELSTEIN, Morris, to German-American Real Estate Title Guarantee Company; 100th St, n s, 125.6 ft w of Lexington Av, demand..... 4,500

METZGER, Theresa, and Isidor, to Simon Adler and others, trustees, &c.; 437 East 123d St, 3 years..... 4,000

MOOREHEAD, Martha, to Harris Solomon; Amsterdam Av, w s, 24.11 ft s of 160th St, 3 years..... 5,000

MOOREHOUSE, Frank B., to National Academy of Design; 807 3d Av, 3 years.. 27,000

MOOREHOUSE, Frank B., to Wright D. Goss; 807 3d Av, 1 year..... 14,000

MURRAY, Mary and John H., to Mount Morris Co-operative Building and Loan Association; Rogers Place, e s, 552.5 ft n of Westchester Av; installments.... 4,125

NEILOR, Margaret C., to Dollar Savings Bank; Willis Av, w s, 87.6 ft s of 141st St, 1 year..... 2,500

PAURITSCH, Caroline and Joseph, to John Eichler Brewing Co., Walnut St, n e cor of 81st, otherwise Bender or Walton Ave, one yr..... 3,500

REYNOLDS, James, and John T. McMahon, to Annie Hagen, 139th St, s s, 100 ft e of Boulevard, two yrs..... 5,000

RICHARDSON, Benjamin F., to Jacob Ruppert; 3d Av, n w corner of 176th St, saloon lease, demand..... 2,500

SACKS, Bernard, and Morris Sikowitz, to Hyman Friedman; 49 Henry St, leasehold, secures notes 2,000

SCHNOERING, John, to Fatmelia A. Eustis; West End Av, w s, 75 ft s of 94th St, 1 year..... 2,000

SIMONSON, Harry, to Thomas M. Blake; 319 East 53d St, lease, instalments.. 842

SMITH, Mary F. and George W., to Elizabeth A. Stone; Forest Av, e s 100.10 ft s of Home St, new line, 3 years 4,500

SQUIER, Addie W., to Title Guarantee and Trust Company; 21 East 79th St, 2 years..... 18,000

STRAUSS, Jacob, and wife to Charles R. Protze; 16 West 134th St, 5 years..... 20,000

TARPEY, John, and wife, to Phebe J. Arnow, and others; executors, &c, Green Lane, w s, 150 ft n of Lyon Ave, three yrs 375

TURNER, Jane E., to Rebecca Ladew and another, trustees; 430 West 147th St, 3 years 6,000

WEINER, Eugene, to Title Guarantee and Trust Company; 317 East 13th St, 5 years 12,000

WOLFF, Etta, to Mary J. Crotty; 132d St, n s, 210 ft e of Lenox Av, 1 year..... 1,250

WOLFF, Etta, to Charles M. Hough, trustee; 132d St, n s, 210 ft e of Lenox Av, 1 year 1,037

WOLFF, Etta, to William E. Rogers; 132d St, n s, 210 ft e of Lenox Av, 5 years.. 21,000

Assignments of Mortgages.

BAKER, Laura S., to Henry Hochmeister, guardian, &c ..... Nom.

FRANKLIN SAVINGS BANK to Agnes E. Tracy $10,000

FREUND, Jacob, and others to Moses Freund ..... Nom.

FRITZ, Jacob, to Sigmund Cohn..... Nom.

GILLIG, John G., and another, executors, &c., to the Fred Oppermann, Jr., Brewing Company ..... Nom.

HENCKEN, Hancke, to Eva E. Schaefer. 15,082

OTTENBERG, Ella G., to Joseph C. Levi, trustee 1,500

RAABE, Henry, Jr., and Herman, to Preston Stevenson ..... Nom.

SCOTT, Alys P., to Alfred B. Scott..... Nom.

Mechanics' Liens.

BEDFORD ST, s e corner of Commerce St, 45x51; Adelstein & Avrutine against Gottlieb M. Karpas and others, owners and contractors $1,350

GOUVERNEUR ST, 3 to 9, 282 to 286 East Broadway, and 271 and 273 Division St; Louis Kramer against R. Cohen & Sons, owners; Cohen & Epstein, contractors... 774

HENRY ST, 263 and 265; Adelstein & Avrutine against Samuel Barkin, owner and contractor 950

HOME ST, n s, Boston Road or Ave, e s, and Jackson Av, w s, —x—gore; The Staines Piece and Taber Company against R. E. Smith and P. H. J. Daly, owners and contractors..... 278

3D AV, 1,517 and 1,519; James W. Conlon against Jacob Sommers, owner and contractor 319

4TH ST, 57 East; Isseks Bro hers against Loes Zwerbaum and Jacob Sommer, owners and contractors..... 75

6TH AV, e s, extends from 18th to 19th Sts, —x500; Hermann & Grace against Siegel-Cooper Company, owners; The Armstrong and Bolton Company, contractors 915

7TH AV, s w corner of 114th St, 100.11x100; Safety Armorite Conduit Company against Hugo F. Hoeffer, owner; Armstrong & Bolton Company, contractors... 542

7TH AV, s w corner of 114th St, 100.11x100; Thomas & Betts against Hugo F. Hoeffer, owner; Armstrong & Bolton Company, contractors..... 30

18TH ST, n s, 460 ft e of 6th Av, 75x100; Maurice Swartz against Siegel-Cooper Company, owners; The Armstrong and Bolton Company, contractors 150

93D ST, 24 East; F. Klingman & Co. against Greenwald Brothers, owners and contractors 3,221

95TH ST, s s, 48.9 ft w of Madison Av, 71x100; The New Jersey Adamant Manufacturing Company against William H. Grahame, owner; William H. and Thomas Graham, contractors 99

118TH ST, 33 and 35 West; Harry W. Bell against Katz & Abelman, owners and contractors 87

119TH ST, 19 and 21 West; Harry W. Bell against Katz & Abelman, owners and contractors 61

129TH ST, 58 and 60 East; Orrin D. Person against Ida Van Valin, owner; J. F. Reilly, contractor..... 1,916

136TH ST, s s, 150 ft w of 3d Av, 125x100; Myer Hellman against James J. Pryor, owner; the John E. Scharsmith Building and Contracting Company, contractors.. 135

138TH ST, n s, 281.6 ft e of Alexander Av, 50x99.11 to 139th St; the Danville Stove Manufacturing Company against Kapelanski & Kronenberg, owners and contractors 113

BUILDING LOAN CONTRACT UNDER CHAPTER 418, LAWS OF 1897.

134TH ST, s s, 285 ft e of Lenox Av, 50x99.11; Globe Realty Company and Dudley S. Harde with Thomas S. Quinn, 11 payments 22,000

ORDERS UNDER CHAPTER 418, LAWS OF 1897.

GOUVERNEUR ST, 3 to 9, 282 to 286 East Broadway, and 271 and 273 Division St; Cohen & Epstein on R. Cohen & Sons to Louis Kramer 74

WASHINGTON AV, n w corner of 173d St, 75x100; Nathan Passman on George Blumenthal and another to Zax K. Berlin 400

Lis Pendens.

HOUSTON ST, s s, 50 ft w of Wooster St, 25x95; the rector, &c., of St. Matthew's Church against Edward Judson and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, I. B. Stewart.

RIVINGTON ST, 323; Department of Buildings against Abraham J. Dworsky, (violations of building laws;) attorney, Otterbourg.

SPENCER PLACE, w s, 200 ft n of 144th St, 50x100; Edward Farrell against Maria Damiano and others, (foreclosure of mechanic's lien;) attorney, M. J. Sullivan.

UNION AV, e s, 75 ft s of Jennings St, —x—; Department of Buildings against Catherine Larkin, (violation of building laws;) attorney, E. Otterbourg.

1ST AV, n e corner of 16th St, 69x94; James F. Galligan against Samuel A. Robinson and others, (foreclosure of mechanics' lien;) attorney, J. H. K. Blauvelt.

45TH ST, n s, 100 ft w of 1st Av, 20x100.5; M. Adele Smith and another, executors, &c., against Joseph Reuth and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Bowers & Sands.

59TH ST, 226 to 230 East, 125x100; The German Savings Bank against Rosina Vollhart and others, (five actions,) (foreclosure of ten mortgages;) attorney, A. H. Mosle.

59TH ST, 338 to 342 East; Department of Buildings against Joseph Dominguale, (violation of building laws;) attorney, E. Otterbourg.

71ST ST, n s, 30 ft e of Columbus Av, 20x102.2; John G. McCullough against Anna J. Lennon and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Stetson, Jennings & Russell.

70TH ST, n s, 312 ft e of 1st Av, 26x102.22; M. Adele Smith and another, executors, &c., against William Fritzel and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Bowers & Sands.

82D ST, 121 West; John Dougan against Winston H. Hagen and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, W. H. Stockwell.

90TH ST, n s, 350 ft w of Central Park West, 25x100.11; Joseph Hamilton and others against Angelo Filocco and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Richards & Bryan.

96TH ST, n s, 125 ft w of Park Av, 100x100; Christ Lieberum against Samuel Ginsberg, (foreclosure of mechanic's lien;) attorney, C. P. Hallock.

104TH ST, s s, 84.11 ft e of Boulevard, 15x70.2; Henriette H. Smith against David H. McCord and another, executors, &c., (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Black & Kneeland.

115TH ST, 48 West; Archer V. Pancoast, trustee, against Cecilia Cassell and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Hubbard & Rice.

122D ST, n s, 300 ft e of 8th Av, 18.4x100.11; Citizens' Savings Bank against Martha T. Smith and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, J. W. Pierson.

146TH ST, n s, 125 ft e of Willis Av, 25x100; Charles A. Rae against Jeannette W. Ryer and others, (accounting, &c.;) attorney, M. P. Doyle.

146TH ST, n s, 150 ft e of Willis Av, 50x100; Charles A. Rae against Richard H. Dewes and others, (accounting, &c.;) attorney, M. P. Doyle.

FEDERAL COURTS.

United States Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Supreme Court of the United States:

102—Frederick Stearns, County Auditor, plaintiff in error, vs. the State of Minnesota on the relation of James N. Marr.—Argument concluded by William B. Hornblower for the plaintiff in error.

104—John E. Roller, plaintiff in error, vs. Stephen Holley et al.—Submitted by John E. Roller and W. S. Laidley for the plaintiff in error and by W. T. Jackson, H. W. Williams, and Joseph Peeples in propria persona.

105—C. P. Huntington, special receiver, &c., appellant, vs. W. K. Cowden, administrator, &c., et al.—Argument commenced by Maxwell Evarts for appellant and continued by Z. T. Vinson and Holmes Conrad for the appellees.

Call for Friday: 105, 108, 109, 110, 113, 114, 117, 118, 119, and 120.

Calendars for Friday, Jan. 19.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—Lacombe, J.—Opens at 11 A. M. in Room 124 Post Office Building. Motion calendar. Adjourned cases.

1—Lamb vs. Macdonald. Cases noticed.
2—New Brunswick Rubber Co. vs. Jacobs.
3—Murdock vs. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co.
4—Welsbach Light Co. vs. Rex Incandescent Light Co.
5—Same vs. Daylight Incandescent Gas Lamp Co.
6—Same vs. Union Incandescent Light Co.
7—Roche vs. Penn. R. R. Co.
8—Welsbach Light Co. vs. Anhaltzer.
9—McKay vs. Hudson.
10—Welsbach Light Co. vs. M. Schaffer Co.
11—Same vs. Freeman.
12—Same vs. R. Mornand Co.
13—Bigelert vs. Neisz.
14—Young vs. Long.
15—McKay vs. Hudson.
16—Brown vs. Wagner Typewriter Co.
17—Bragg Mfg. Co. vs. City of New York.
18—Real Estate Trust Co. of Phila. vs. N. E. Loan & Trust Co.
19—Dickerson vs. James.
20—Same vs. same.
21—Colliery Engineer Co. vs. Peale & Hill Co.
22—Welsbach Light Co. vs. United Incandescent L. Co.
23—Same vs. Kaufmann.
24—Same vs. Friedberg & Kurtz.
25—Klotz vs. Winter.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—Brown, J.—Opens at 11 A. M. in Room 86 Post Office Building.

19—Tucker vs. Gallagher & Trans. Co. vs. Morse Iron Works.
42—N. J. D. D. & Vigilant.
44—Beasley vs. Tug
60—Denning vs. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.

STATE COURTS.

Court of Appeals.

To-day's calendar: 125, 210, 214, 215, 224, 226, 227, and 228.

New York Calendars—This Day.

SUPREME COURT—Appellate Division.—Van Brunt, P. J.; Barrett, Rumsey, Ingraham, and McLaughlin, JJ. Opens at 1 P. M. Motions.

1—Niehrbach vs. Mayor, &c.
2—Morgan vs. Am. Air Power Co.
3—Lang vs. York.
4—Vidvaud vs. 42d St., &c., R. R.
5—Day vs. Carmichael.
6—Hearle vs. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R.
7—Simpson vs. Jersey City Con. Co.
8—C. H. Dimond Co. vs. Hartley.
9—In re Mayor, &c.
10—Met. St. Ry. vs. Oppenheim.
11—Same vs. Oppenheim.

SUPREME COURT—Appellate Term—For the hearing of appeals from City Court and Municipal Courts.—Recess.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Part I.—Andrews, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Litigated motions.

1—Gimenez vs. Gimenez.
2—Chisholm vs. Weed.
3—In re Safety Third Rail Elec. Co.
4—Bergoffen vs. City of New York.
5—Emigrant Ind. Sav. Bank vs. Lange.
6—Post vs. Kendall.
7—Magnus & Lauer vs. Acme Soap Co.
8—Wilson vs. Liberty Cycle Co.
9—Lazarowitz vs. Goldschlag.
10—Early vs. Ferris.
11—Scherrer vs. Ground Hog Con. M. & M. Co.
12—Bank of the State vs. Rereira.
13—Bernheim vs. Winezimmer.
14—People, &c., vs. Man. Island Corp.
15—In re Canda.
16—In re Diossy.
17—Shields vs. Craig.
18—In re Healy.
19—Coutrie vs. Caldwell.
20—Roger vs. Boessneck.
21—In re Breckenridge.
22—People, &c., vs. Bushe.
23—Burnett vs. King.
24—Hawkins vs. Pakas.
25—Ry. Equipment Pub. Co. vs. Biglin.
26—Simmons vs. Simmons.
27—Mayer vs. Jacobs.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Part II.—Fitzgerald, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Ex-parte business.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Part III.—Leventritt, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Calendar clear. Motions.

1—In re Hunt's Point Road.
2—In re Court House Site.
3—In re Concord Av.
4—In re E. 138th St.
5—In re Willis Av. B'ge.
6—In re Public Place at E. 138th St.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Day calendar—To be called in Part IV. Room at 10:30 A. M. Cases will be assigned to the several parts of Special Term for trial. Law and Fact.

4260—Venner vs. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co.
4311—Gorman vs. East River Sav. Bank.
2172—Koezly vs. Koezly.
3360—Puller vs. Waller.
4141—Hannah vs. Anderson.
6461—Hinckle vs. Hayes.
1533—Wiedermann vs. Everard.
8250—Sweeney vs. Brennan.
4009—Raymond vs. Dittenhoefer.
4018—Reiman vs. Dreicer.
4113—McManus vs. 3d Av. R. R. Co.
6782—Murray vs. Brennan.
4803—Di Pascale vs. 3d Av. R. R. Co.
4305—Buchanan vs. same.
4522—Steele vs. Hutkopf
2980—Holzer vs. Frank.
2329—Kissel vs. Flint.
5972—Herrick vs. Guarantors' Finance Co.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Part I.—(Criminal Term.)—Fursman, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Acting District Attorney McIntyre and Assistant District Attorneys Hennessy and Schwarzkopf for the People.
No day calendar.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Part II.—McAdam, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Calendar clear. Preferred causes.

11048—Istel vs. City of New York.
11084—O'Neil vs. same.
11207—Stein vs. Met. St. Ry. Co.
11239—Heilferty vs. same.
11240—Connor vs. same.
11294—Kalendar vs. Kurnan.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Day Calendar—To be called in Part III. Room at 10:30 A. M. Cases will be sent from this calendar to Trial Term, Parts III. and IV., for trial.

4313—Garvey vs. Met. St. Ry. Co.
4763—Oliveri vs. Hughes.
4302—Doherty vs. Met. St. Ry. Co.
4365—Bangham vs. same
4366—Same vs. same.
4331—Sheridan vs. same.
5445—Snyder vs. City of New York.
4056—Thilemann vs. City of New York.
5128—Howard vs. Rankin.
6388—Edwards vs. Hoffman House.
6667—Hamburger vs. Provident Sav. Life Assn.
6766—Werner vs. Rannheim.
5921—Levene vs. Clark.
10299—Ward vs. St. Vincent's Hospital.
6719—Leavitt vs. City of New York.
4897—Sternberger vs. Croner.
6701—Danuco vs. Murray
474—Rasines vs. Olcott.
6709—Doorley vs. Electric Vehicle Co.

Highest number reached in regular call on general calendar, 7166.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Part III.—Beach, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Cases to be sent from day calendar for trial. Calendar clear.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Part IV.—Maclean, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Cases to be sent from day calendar for trial. Case on.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Parts V., VI., and VIII.—Adjourned for the term.

SUPREME COURT—Trial Term—Day Calendar—To be called in Trial Term, Part VII. Room, at 10:30 A. M. Cases to be sent from this calendar to Trial Term, Parts VII., IX., X., and XI., for trial.

Inquest, 4976—

FOR SALE.

Typewriters Rented & Sold. : 1,000 new and second-hand Remingtons, Smith Premiers, and other standard makes rented $3.00 per month. Stands, ribbons, and inspection service free. F. S. WEBSTER COMPANY, 317 Broadway. Telephone 1338 Franklin.

DRY GOODS.

ORIENTAL PEARLS, FINEST IMITATIONS OF real pearls by Parisian manufacturers; all sizes and varieties; necklaces, collars, scarfpins, long-nette chains, brooches, &c., at very reasonable prices. JAMMES, 4 West 37th, near 5th Av.

SITUATIONS WANTED—FEMALES.

Chambermaids.

CHAMBERMAID or KITCHENMAID.—By Irish Protestant just arrived, as chambermaid or kitchenmaid in good family. Bustard, 78 King St.

CHAMBERMAID.—By a young Swedish girl as chambermaid in private family; city preferred; good reference. 206 West 17th St.

Dressmakers.

DRESSMAKER.—By first-class dressmaker and fitter; tailor-made dresses, latest styles; out by day or week; terms reasonable; city references. D. D., Box 32, 1,242 Broadway.

Seamstresses.

SEAMSTRESS.—As seamstress or help dressmaker; by the day. McLinden, 142 East 84th St.

Miscellaneous.

STENOGRAPHER.—By educated, experienced, and refined stenographer; with lithographers and engravers preferred; references. Miss Lang, 50 West 12th St.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALES.

Bookkeepers.

BOOKKEEPER, &c.—By party of long experience as bookkeeper, cashier, correspondent, &c., of good education, ability, and character, now out of business, with good business house in active, responsible capacity; particulars by letter, W., Box 376 Times Up-Town Office, 1,269 Broadway.

Butlers.

BUTLER.—By an English butler; in a permanent place; long and personal references if required. A. B., Box 352 Times Up-Town Office, 1,269 Broadway.

Miscellaneous.

CARPENTER.—Boy, 17, industrious, ambitious, desires to learn the carpenter trade; best of references. R. P. W., Box 128 Times Office.

YOUNG MAN (19) RESIDING WITH PARENTS seeks position as clerk in bank or broker's office; good penman and quick at figures; three years with present employer; highest references as to character, ability, &c. Arthur, Box 174 Times Office.

HELP WANTED—FEMALES.

UMBRELLAS.—A competent forewoman for an out-of-town umbrella factory. Amasa Lyon, 814 Broadway.

WANTED—A nurse for a child two years old. Call at 906 Madison Av. on Friday morning between 10 and 1 o'clock; liberal wages for a thoroughly competent, trustworthy woman.

WANTED—Lady agents to sell my new lamp shade calendars for 1900, (patent pending.) State rights sold. O. Schaller, 7,528 Virginia Av., St. Louis, Mo.

WANTED—A competent waitress and parlormaid; city references required. Apply 9-12, 24 East 73d St.

HELP WANTED—MALES.

IMMEDIATELY—Six competent men of good appearance as outside solicitors in Greater New York; excellent opportunity for responsible men; salary and commission. Call, with references, Friday morning, Room 926 St. James Building, 26th St. and Broadway.

SUMMONSES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—THE GREENWICH SAVINGS BANK, plaintiff, against CHARLES STEINHARDT and Elizabeth Cora Steinhardt, his wife; Joseph Fernando, Paulina Fernando, Charles Schmitt, and Margaretha Schmitt, his wife, and The Jacob Hoffman Brewing Company, defendants.—Summons.—Trial to be had in the County of New York.

To the defendants above named: You are hereby summoned to answer the complaint in this action, and to serve a copy of your answer on the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service, and in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint. Dated New York, October 4th, 1899.

GEORGE G. DE WITT, Plaintiff's Attorney.

Office and Post Office address, No. 88 Nassau Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, New York.

To the defendants Charles Steinhardt and Elizabeth Cora Steinhardt, his wife: The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of the Hon. Miles Beach, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, dated the 13th day of December, 1899, and duly filed with the complaint in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York in the County Court House in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City, County, and State of New York, on the 15th day of December, 1899.—Dated New York, December 19th, 1899.

GEORGE G. DE WITT, Plaintiff's Attorney.

Office and Post Office address, No. 88 Nassau Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, N. Y. d22-law7wF

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—WILLIAM HILDRETH FIELD, as trustee for Margaret M. Hawes, plaintiff, against GEORGE E. FOWLER and May Adele Fowler, his wife; William Fulton, Sarah L. Henningsen, John B. Harrison, Edmund A. W. C. Hammond, Simonds Furnace Company, The Staines Peck & Taber Company, William T. Brewer, William Hanley, defendants.

To the above-named defendants and each of them:

You are hereby summoned to answer the complaint in this action and to serve a copy of your answer on the plaintiff's attorneys within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service, and in case of your failure to appear, or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint.—Dated New York, December 23, 1899.

FIELD & HARRISON, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Office and Post Office address, 237 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, N. Y.

To the defendant, Sarah L. Henningsen:

The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of Hon. Miles Beach, a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, dated the 14th day of December, 1899, and filed with the complaint in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York in the County Court House, in the Borough of Manhattan, in said City of New York.—Dated New York, December 15, 1899.

FIELD & HARRISON, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Office and Post Office address, 237 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, N. Y. d15-law6wF

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK County.—ROBERT J. EDWARDS, Plaintiff, against HELEN CAMPBELL SMITH and George A. Smith, Defendants.—Summons.

To the above-named defendants: You are hereby summoned to answer the complaint in this action, and to serve a copy of your answer on the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service, and in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Dated N. Y., May 16, 1899.

JOHN R. ABNEY, Plaintiff's Attorney, Post Office address and office, No. 71 Broadway, New York City, New York.

To Helen Campbell Smith, one of the defendants herein: The foregoing summons is served upon you, by publication, pursuant to an order of Hon. H. A. Gildersleeve, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court for New York County, dated December 28, 1899, and filed in the office of the County Clerk for said county on the said 28th day of December, 1899, the complaint herein having been filed in said County Clerk's Office on the 28th day of November, 1899.

Dated N. Y., December 29, 1899.

JOHN R. ABNEY, Plaintiff's Attorney, 71 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.. d29-law6wF&f9

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ASSIGNMENT OF JOSEPH AGOSTINI to AUGUSTUS T. GILLENDER for the benefit of his creditors.

In pursuance of an order made by Hon. Miles Beach, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, in and for the County of New York, on the 7th day of December, 1899, notice is hereby given to all the creditors and persons having claims against Joseph Agostini, lately doing business in the City of New York, that they are required to present their claims, with the vouchers therefor duly verified, to the subscriber, the assignee of said Joseph Agostini, for the benefit of his creditors, at his place of transacting business, the office of Arnold & Greene, No. 3 Broad Street, New York City, Borough of Manhattan, on or before the 19th day of February, 1900.

Dated New York, December 7th, 1899.

AUGUSTUS T. GILLENDER, Assignee.

ARNOLD & GREENE, Attorneys for Assignee, 3 Broad St., New York City.

THE UNDERSIGNED, RECEIVER OF THE firm of Richter & Company, lately conducting a general laundry business at No. 2,283 Eighth Avenue, in the City of New York, will entertain sealed bids for the sale of the good-will, fixtures, and entire plant of said business. Said property will be sold subject to three chattel mortgages. All bids must be directed to the undersigned, at the office of his attorneys, who will give further particulars upon inquiry. HERMAN PAUL, Receiver. STERN & SINGER, Attorneys for Receiver, 256 Broadway, New York City, Borough of Manhattan.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—MEYER COHEN, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Meyer Cohen, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 16th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

F. K. PENDLETON, Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—RICHARD R. DITZEL, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Richard R. Ditzel, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 17th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

ERNEST HALL, Referee in Bankruptcy.

Dated January 18, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—ADOLPH RUEHL, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Adolph Ruel, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated Jan. 6th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

F. K. PENDLETON, Referee.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—HYMAN SELIGMAN, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Hyman Seligman, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 4th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

F. K. PENDLETON, Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—FRANK M. WEILER, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Frank M. Weiler, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 17th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

ERNEST HALL, Referee in Bankruptcy.

Dated January 18, 1900.

SURROGATE NOTICES.

APPLETON, WILLIAM H.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Abner C. Thomas, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against WILLIAM H. APPLETON, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscribers, at their place of transacting business, the office of D. Appleton & Co., No. 72 Fifth Avenue, Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on or before the 20th day of July next.—Dated New York, the 11th day of January, 1900. WILLIAM W. APPLETON, MARY APPLETON, DANIEL APPLETON, Executors. H. HADDEN DOUGHERTY, Attorney for Executors, No. 7 Nassau Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. ja12-law6mF

SAILEY, ELLENE A.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. James M. Varnum, a Surrogate of the County of New York, dated September 25, 1899, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against ELLENE A. SAILEY, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at his place of transacting business, No. 256-257 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan in the City of New York, on or before the first day of April next.—Dated New York, the 1st day of September, 1899. OSCAR F. GUNZ, Executor. ANDERSON PRICE, Attorney for Executor, 80 Broadway, New York City. s29-law6mF

CONLON, JOHN P.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. James M. Varnum, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against JOHN P. CONLON, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at his place of transacting business, No. 220 West Thirty-eighth Street, Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on or before the 6th day of May next.—Dated New York, the 27th day of October, 1899. ROBERT M. LYMAN, Administrator. ROBERT W. TODD, Attorney for Administrator, 229 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. n3-law6mF

HALSTEAD, JOHN.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Abner C. Thomas, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against JOHN HALSTEAD, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at her place of transacting business, at the office of Lillian Herbert Andrews, No. 38 Park Row, in the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan, on or before the 20th day of July next.—Dated New York, the 11th day of January, 1900. HANNAH C. WIBIRT, Executrix. LILIAN HERBERT ANDREWS, Attorney for Executrix, 38 Park Row, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. ja12-law6mF

HILTON, HENRY.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against HENRY HILTON, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscribers at their place of transacting business at the office of the estate of Henry Hilton, No. 280 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on or before the 30th day of June, 1900.—Dated New York, the 21st day of December, 1899. HORACE RUSSELL, EDWARD S. HARRIS, Executors. RUSSELL & HOLMES, Attorneys for Executors, 280 Broadway, New York City. d23-law6mF

LINLEY, HARRIETT.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against HARRIETT LINLEY, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at his place of transacting business, the office of Arthur A. Michell, No. 220 Broadway, in the City of New York, on or before the twelfth day of May, 1900, next. Dated New York, the 2d day of November, 1899. WILLIAM J. LAWRENCE, Administrator. ARTHUR A. MICHELL, Attorney for Administrator, 220 Broadway, New York City. n3-law6mF.

LYMAN, THOMAS C.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against THOMAS C. LYMAN, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at his place of transacting business, No. 420 West Thirty-eighth Street, Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on or before the 6th day of May next.—Dated New York, the 27th day of October, 1899. ROBERT M. LYMAN, Administrator. ROBERT W. TODD, Attorney for Administrator, 229 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. n3-law6mF

MARTIN, HENRIETTA.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. James M. Varnum, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against HENRIETTA MARTIN, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at his place of transacting business, Room 101, No. 22 William Street, Borough of Manhattan in the City of New York, on or before the 1st day of June next.—Dated New York, the 22d day of November, 1899. THOMAS M. MARTIN, Executor. MURRAY, BENNETT & INGERSOLL, Attorneys for Executor, 22 William Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York, N. Y.

PONVERT, LOUIS J.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against LOUIS J. PONVERT, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same; with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at her place of transacting business, at the office of Lawrence & Hughes, No. 120 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the 26th day of February next.—Dated New York, the 12th day of August, 1899. AMY K. PONVERT, Executrix. LAWRENCE & HUGHES Attys. for Executrix. 120 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. au26-law6mF

RHOADS, GEORGE B.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against GEORGE B. RHOADS, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at her place of transacting business, at the office of Benjamin Wright, No. 38 Park Row, in the City of New York, on or before the 16th day of April next.—Dated New York, the 2nd day of October, 1899. ELIZABETH RHOADS, Administratrix. BENJAMIN WRIGHT, Attorney for Administratrix, 38 Park Row, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, N. Y. oct6-law6mF

WOOLSON, JOHN A.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against JOHN A. WOOLSON late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same with vouchers thereof to the subscriber, at my place of transacting business, No. 578 Eighth Avenue, in the City of New York, on or before the 1st day of May, 1900, next.—Dated New York, the 17th day of October, 1899.

SADIE B. WOOLSON, Executrix.

SURROGATE NOTICES.

DEVLIN, DANIEL.—The People of the State of New York, by the grace of God free and independent, to Caroline McNulty and Sarah O'Connor, send greeting:

You and each of you are hereby cited and required personally to be and appear before our Surrogate of the County of New York, at the Surrogate's Court of said county, held at the County Court House, in the City of New York, on the thirteenth day of March, 1900, at half past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to show cause why Daniel C. Devlin, petitioner herein, should not be appointed as administrator, with the will annexed, of the estate of DANIEL DEVLIN, deceased, and such of you as are hereby cited as are under the age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceedings.

In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto [L. S.] affixed. Witness, Hon. Abner C. Thomas, a Surrogate of our said county, at the City of New York, the 16th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred.

(Sd.) J. FAIRFAX McLAUGHLIN, Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

ja19-law6wF&m2

WEBB, WILLIAM H.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against WILLIAM H. WEBB, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscribers, at their place of transacting business at the office of George S. Hamlin, No. 18 Wall Street, in the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan, on or before the 26th day of June next.—Dated New York, the 21st day of December, 1899. HENRIETTA A. WEBB, THOMAS B. HIDDEN, Executors. GEORGE S. HAMLIN, Attorney for Executors, 18 Wall Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. d22-law6mF

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —JOHN D. QUACKENBOS, as executor of the last will and testament of LOUISE B. QUACKENBOS, deceased, plaintiff, against HENRY B. MEAD and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the fifth day of January, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesrooms, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the seventh day of February, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Lewis J. Phillips, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

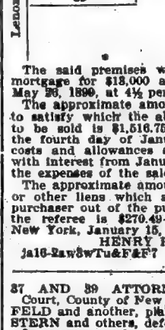
All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the building thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, County and State of New York, and bounded and described as follows, viz.:

Beginning at a point in the easterly line of Lenox (formerly Sixth) Avenue, (as widened and now established by law), distant eighty-seven feet southerly from the southeasterly corner of Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street; and running thence easterly parallel with One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, and part of the way through a party wall, eighty-five feet; thence southerly and parallel with Lenox Avenue sixteen feet and six inches; thence westerly and again parallel with One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, and part of the way through another party wall eighty-five feet to Lenox Avenue; and thence northerly, and along the easterly line of Lenox Avenue sixteen feet and six inches to the point or place of beginning, be the said several dimensions more or less—the boundary lines on each side running along the middle lines of the said party walls.—Dated New York, January 15, 1900.

HENRY H. SHERMAN, Referee.

THEODORE R. SHEAR, Attorney for Plaintiff, 32 Liberty Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

The premises are No. 882 Lenox Avenue.



The said premises will be sold subject to a mortgage for $18,000 and interest thereon from May 26, 1899, at 4½ per cent. per annum.

The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is $1,516.75-100, with interest from the fourth day of January, 1900, together with costs and allowances amounting to $151.37-100, with interest from January 5, 1900, together with the expenses of the sale.

The approximate amount of taxes, assessments, or other liens which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the referee is $270.45-100 and interest.—Dated New York, January 15, 1900.

HENRY H. SHERMAN, Referee.

ja16-law3wTu&F&F7

37 AND 39 ATTORNEY STREET.—Supreme Court, County of New York.—PINCUS LOWENFELD and another, plaintiffs, against REBECCA STERN and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 19th day of December, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 19th day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Peter F. Meyer & Co., auctioneers, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

All those two certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land, situate, lying, and being on the westerly side of Attorney Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, which, taken together, are bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point on the westerly side of Attorney Street distant one hundred and seventy-five (175) feet northerly from the northwesterly corner of Attorney and Grand Streets, and running thence easterly and parallel with Grand Street, part of the way through a party wall, one hundred (100) feet; thence northerly and parallel with Attorney Street fifty-one (51) feet and eight (8) inches; thence easterly one hundred (100) feet to the westerly side of Attorney Street, and thence southerly along the westerly side of Attorney Street fifty-one (51) feet six (6) inches to the point or place of beginning, be said several dimensions more or less

Dated New York, December 27, 1899.

CHARLES W. CULVER, Referee.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —E. CAROLINE KOPPER, plaintiff, against MARGARET G. KOPPER, Jr., and others, defendants.

In pursuance of an interlocutory judgment of partition and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 22d day of December, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 19th day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Peter F. Meyer & Co., auctioneers, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

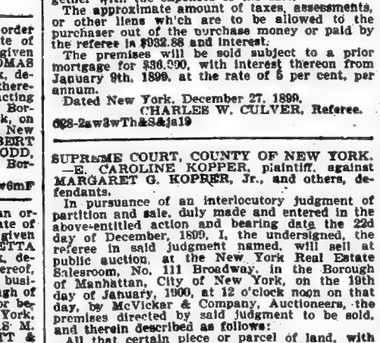
All those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York and bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the southwesterly corner of Decatur Avenue and the Mosholu Parkway, running thence southwardly along the westerly side of Decatur Avenue fifty (50) feet, thence westwardly parallel with Suburban Street one hundred and fifty-nine and 33-100 feet to an angle, thence westwardly at right angles to Hull Avenue sixty-five and forty one-hundredths (65 40-100) feet to the easterly side of Hull Avenue; thence northwardly along the easterly side of Hull Avenue one hundred and twenty-two and fifty-nine one-hundredths (122 59-100) feet to the southerly side of the Mosholu Parkway; thence southeastwardly along the southerly side of said Mosholu Parkway two hundred and forty-six and eighty-one one-hundredths (246 81-100) feet to the point of beginning.—Dated New York, December 28th, 1899.

GEORGE H. HART, Referee.

DAVID M. NEUBERGER, Attorney for Plaintiff, 256 Broadway, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold:



The approximate amounts of the liens or charges to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $8,413.24, with interest thereon from the 26th day of December, 1899, together with costs and allowance amounting to $309.85, with interest from December 26th, 1899, together with the expenses of the sale.

The approximate amount of taxes, assessments, or other liens which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the referee is $345.40-100, and interest.—Dated New York City, December 29th, 1899.

GEORGE H. HART, Referee.

d29-2aw3wTu&Th&Sa&ja19

REFEREES' NOTICES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—GEORGE RAUCHFUSS, plaintiff, against LOTTIE M. FOWLER, ELLEN BYRNES, and others, defendants.

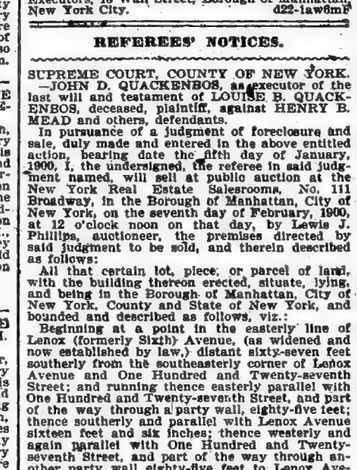
In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, and bearing date the 18th day of December, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 24th day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by William Kennelly, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Twenty-second Ward of the Borough of Manhattan, and City of New York, and located in Section Four, on Block 1,214, on the land map of the City of New York, and bounded and described as follows, viz.: Beginning at a point on the northerly side of Eighty-third Street, distant three hundred and twenty-five feet westerly from the corner formed by the intersection of the northerly side of Eighty-third Street with the westerly side of Columbus (formerly Ninth) Avenue; thence running northerly, and part of the way through a party wall and on a line parallel with Columbus Avenue, one hundred and two feet and two inches to the centre line of the block between Eighty-third and Eighty-fourth Streets; thence westerly along said centre line of the block, and on a line parallel with Eighty-third Street, twenty-five feet; thence southerly, on a line parallel with said Columbus Avenue and part of the way through another party wall, one hundred and two feet and two inches to the said northerly side of Eighty-third Street, and thence easterly, and along the said northerly side of Eighty-third Street, twenty-five feet to the point or place of beginning, and being now known by the street number 135 West Eighty-third Street, in the said city, and being a part of the same premises conveyed to the said George Rauchfuss by Nellie F. Brennan and husband by deed dated November 19, 1891, and recorded on the same day in Liber Eight, Page 241 of Section Four of Block Series of Conveyances, in the office of the Register of the City of New York, together with all the gas fixtures, carpets, window shades, and other personal property appertaining to the said premises and belonging to said defendant Ellen Byrnes, and also being the same premises conveyed to the said defendant, Ellen Byrnes, by the said plaintiff, George Rauchfuss, by deed bearing even date with said mortgage, and which mortgage was also given to secure part of the consideration money of said premises, and also, together with all the right, title, and interest of the said defendant Ellen Byrnes, of, in, and to a certain party wall agreement made between Thomas J. Brennan of the one part, and Mark P. Brennan of the other part, dated August 28, 1890, and recorded on the same day in Liber 2,308, Page 441 of Conveyances in said Register's office.—Dated New York, December 29, 1899.

GEORGE H. HART, Referee.

GEORGE A. McDERMOTT, Attorney for Plaintiff, 621 Broadway, New York City, New York.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold. Its street number is No. 135 West 83d Street, New York City.



The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $8,355 56-100, with interest thereon from the 22d day of December, 1899, together with costs and allowances amounting to $422 81-100, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, and water rates, or other liens to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is $1,180 and interest. The premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage of $22,000.00, with accrued interest.—Dated New York, 29th day of December, 1899.

GEORGE H. HART, Referee.

ja2-2aw3wTu&F&ja24

BROADWAY, NO. 652.—Supreme Court, County of New York.—ALLEN D. M. DEFANDORF, plaintiff, against WINIFRED I. SICHEL and others, defendants.

In pursuance of an interlocutory judgment of partition and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action bearing date the 13th day of December, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 24th day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, by Peter F. Meyer, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being in the Fifteenth (formerly Eighth) Ward of the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, known and distinguished on a map of the lands of Samuel Jones, Esq., lying between Broadway and Bowery, made from actual survey by Stephen Hallam and E. W. Bridges, City Surveyors, and recorded in the office of the Register in and for the City and County of New York, in Liber 125 of Conveyances, &c., Page 58; as Lot Number Twenty-eight, (28,) which said lot, piece, or parcel of land is bounded northwesterly in front by Broadway, northeasterly by a lot of land distinguished on said map as Number Twenty-seven, (27,) southeasterly by road or way, by the name of Cross-lane, designated and properly described in and by a certain deed duly expressing and declaring the uses and purposes thereof, and the conditions and limitations affecting the same, made and executed by said Samuel Jones and Cornelia, his wife, and recorded in the office of the Clerk of and County of New York, in Liber 72 of Conveyances, Page 18, and southwesterly by a lot of ground distinguished on the aforesaid map as No. 29, and contains twenty-nine feet in width in front and rear, and one hundred and thirty feet in length on each side, and known and distinguished as Number 652 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, together with all and singular the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

Dated Borough of Manhattan, New York City, December 18th, 1899.

EDWARD JACOBS, Referee.

Bond St.

All taxes and assessments and water rates which are liens or encumbrances on the premises above described at the time of the sale thereof will be paid by the purchaser or allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money.

The premises above described will be sold subject to a lease, dated October 22nd, 1894, made between Wilson L. Defendorf and others to Robert Lindheim. Such lease being for the term of ten years, commencing January 1st, 1895, at a rental of $10,000 per year, payable in equal monthly installments in advance, and Croton water rent. Tenant allowed $50 annually for roof repairs.

Dated Borough of Manhattan, New York City, December 18th, 1899.

EDWARD JACOBS, Referee.

MOSES ESBERG, Esq., Attorney for Plaintiff.

EDWARD RUSSELL, Esq., Attorney for defendant Matilda Cleland.

ARMOUR C. ANDERSON, Esq., Attorney for defendants Joshua Kantrowitz et al.

EMANUEL ESCHWEGE, Esq., Attorney for defendants Wilson L. Defendorf et al.

DAVID E. GROSSMAN, Esq., Attorney for defendant Winifred I. Sichel.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —JAMES EVERARD, plaintiff, against MICHAEL J. CALLAHAN and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, and bearing date the 20th day of December, 1899, I, the undersigned, referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 19th day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by William Kennelly, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

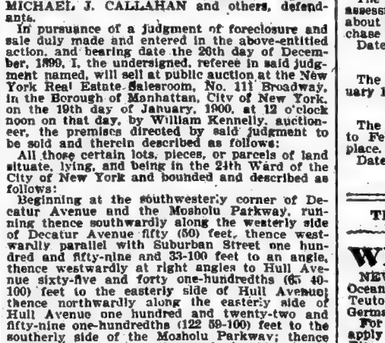
All those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying, and being in the 24th Ward of the City of New York and bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the southwesterly corner of Decatur Avenue and the Mosholu Parkway, running thence southwardly along the westerly side of Decatur Avenue fifty (50) feet, thence westwardly parallel with Suburban Street one hundred and fifty-nine and 33-100 feet to an angle, thence westwardly at right angles to Hull Avenue sixty-five and forty one-hundredths (65 40-100) feet to the easterly side of Hull Avenue; thence northwardly along the easterly side of Hull Avenue one hundred and twenty-two and fifty-nine one-hundredths (122 59-100) feet to the southerly side of the Mosholu Parkway; thence southeastwardly along the southerly side of said Mosholu Parkway two hundred and forty-six and eighty-one one-hundredths (246 81-100) feet to the point of beginning.—Dated New York, December 28th, 1899.

GEORGE H. HART, Referee.

DAVID M. NEUBERGER, Attorney for Plaintiff, 256 Broadway, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold:



The approximate amounts of the liens or charges to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $8,413.24, with interest thereon from the 26th day of December, 1899, together with costs and allowance amounting to $309.85, with interest from December 26th, 1899, together with the expenses of the sale.

The approximate amount of taxes, assessments, or other liens which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the referee is $345.40-100, and interest.—Dated New York City, December 29th, 1899.

GEORGE H. HART, Referee.

d29-2aw3w&ja19

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —CHARLOTTE DEMMERLE and others, plaintiffs, against LOUIS DEMMERLE and others, defendants.

In pursuance of an interlocutory judgment of partition and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 19th day of December, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 19th day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon, on that day, by Richard V. Harnett & Co., auctioneers, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that lot of land, situate, lying, and being in the Thirteenth Ward, in the Borough of Manhattan, (formerly City of New York,) and bounded as follows: Westerly in front on Ridge Street, beginning at a point one hundred and twenty-five feet northerly from the northeasterly corner of Broome Street and Ridge Street, thence running twenty-five feet on Ridge Street, containing in width in front and rear twenty-five feet, and in length on each side one hundred feet, formerly known as Number 80 (thirty) Ridge Street, but now known as Number 50 Ridge Street.

And also all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Brooklyn, County of Kings, and State of New York, together with the dwelling house thereon erected, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the northerly side of Hart Street, distant one hundred and ten feet easterly from the northeasterly corner of Hart Street and Sumner Avenue, running thence northerly parallel with Sumner

MOLINEUX'S DEFENSE TO BEGIN NEXT WEEK

Mr. Osborne Promises to Close the Prosecution's Case To-day.

MORE EVIDENCE ABOUT BARNET

Medicine Packages Sent to the Dead Clubman—Handwriting and Poison Experts Testify.

Evidence that H. C. Barnet had received at his office in the Produce Exchange Building a package from some unknown person, containing a powder, which was found after his death by Edmund Barnet, his brother, was introduced yesterday at the Molineux trial. This was the first time it had developed that Barnet had actually received a package of this kind. The evidence did not show, however, that this powder was poison, and the material had been thrown away.

The witness who attracted most attention was Dr. Robert Boocock, a homeopathist of forty years' practice, who uses cyanide of mercury for cases of diphtheria in observance of the principle similia similibus curantur of that school of medicine. He said that the symptoms of poisoning by cyanide of mercury would be naturally mistaken for diphtheria and cyanide of mercury would be used as a cure. Mr. Weeks asked if his position was that a case of poisoning could be cured by giving more of the poison. The doctor said that he could, by changing the dilutions, cure such a case, but he later said that in a case such as that which Barnet's had been said to be he would have given an antidote. The doctor instanced a case of erysipelas being cured by poison ivy, which produces the same disease.

There was more expert writing evidence, and finally there was the interesting announcement by the Assistant District Attorney that he positively would conclude the case for the people to-day.

Vincent G. Hamill, President of the Marsden Remedy Company, was the first witness called yesterday. He was asked to identify some of the letters which were received by his company from the person renting the letter box at 257 West Forty-second Street and signed "H. C. Barnet."

"Have you ever had any business with Von Mohl & Company?" Mr. Osborne asked.

"Yes, Sir."

"You know of a remedy they sell?"

"Only in a general way."

"What is it?"

The witness described the character of one of Von Mohl's remedies.

"What particular remedy do they sell?"

"Can't answer that."

"Something by the name of calthos?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Did you receive that letter?" showing one asking for a remedy.

"Yes, Sir."

"Did you open it?"

"Yes."

"Letter answered?"

"Yes."

"Anything sent but answer?"

"No."

"Sent answer where?"

"Box 217, 57 West Forty-second Street."

BASIS OF PRESCRIPTION.

The witness testified that the letter asking for the remedy was received about June 4 or 5, 1898. Mr. Weeks directed his questions on cross-examination to learn if the doctor pretended to prescribe on the information contained in the diagnosis blank sent out by the company, which in ordinary practice would be regarded as of a confidential character.

"Your company has a physician?" he asked.

"Yes, I am one of them."

"You are admitted to practice in this State?"

"Yes."

"You presumably replied to Exhibit C?" (This was the letter asking for the remedy.)

"Can't say. There was another physician."

"Was the Exhibit I sent for the purpose of getting information on which to treat a patient?"

Mr. Osborne objected and was sustained. Exhibit I is the diagnosis blank sent by the firm to the Forty-second Street address and returned with the blank spaces filled out with answers to questions.

The witness said that they treated some 10,000 or 12,000 cases a year, and of this number some 2,000 they saw personally.

Mr. Weeks asked: "You had received Exhibit I and $5 before giving treatment?"

"Yes."

"Did Exhibits C and I remain in your possession some time?"

"Until January, 1899." The witness said at that time they were given to Detective McCafferty.

Mr. Weeks—You received Exhibit H? (That was the one asking for the marriage guide.)

"Yes."

"That was the latter part of June?"

"Yes."

The witness said that the concern had twenty-four employes. The Recorder asked if papers passed through the hands of all these employes. The reply was that they did, but a question from Mr. Weeks led to a qualification to the effect that diagnoses did not.

ANOTHER BARNET LETTER.

William O. Inglis, a reporter, next took the stand to identify some papers which he had previously handed to the Assistant District Attorney. They consisted of a letter and envelope. The letter was as follows:

Dear Sir: Please send prescription and oblige
H. C. BARNET,
Box 217, 257 West Forty-second Street.

It was addressed to G. B. Wright, Box 1,712, Marshall, Mich. The writing resembled that of the rest in the so-called Barnet series. The word prescription was spelled "perscription" and the post-mark showed that the letter had been mailed at the General Post Office at 5 P. M., the hour at which the others were mailed.

On cross-examination it developed that the witness had known Molineux for several years, and the Assistant District Attorney objected to his proceeding on the ground that if Mr. Weeks was going into questions not touched on in the direct examination, he must make the witness his own, and call him when the case of the defense was presented. The witness had been present at a conference between Gen. Molineux, his son, and Capt. McClusky, and Mr. Weeks was asking him concerning this incident when the Recorder ruled out the evidence on Mr. Osborne's objection.

Edmund Barnet, brother of the late H. C. Barnet, was recalled. Mr. Osborne asked:

"What was the size of your brother's chest?"

"Forty inches."

"He was born when?"

"May 19, 1866."

DESCRIPTION OF BARNET.

Called upon for a description of his brother, Mr. Barnet said that he had a good, clear complexion, the face having a tinge of color, but not florid. He weighed 180 pounds, and was 5 feet 8 inches in height, the waist being larger than the chest. He had a small brown mustache. The Assistant District Attorney sought to have him identify a picture of his brother, but this evidence was ruled out.

Exhibit A (the poison package address) was then shown to Mr. Barnet. "I show you Exhibit A, Mr. Barnet, and ask you if you ever saw that handwriting before?" said Mr. Osborne.

"I did see it."

"Where did you see it?"

"In my brother's effects."

The Recorder sustained an objection to these questions and ordered the answers stricken out because they seemed to refer to the exhibit, when the District Attorney only meant the handwriting.

"Did you see a piece of brown paper with United States stamps upon it among your brother's effects?" persisted Mr. Osborne.

This question was ordered stricken out also and the witness was excused, Mr. Weeks having no questions to ask him.

James S. Hudson was next called. He was associated with H. C. Barnet, being employed by the same concern, with an office in the Produce Exchange Building. After he had described Barnet in answer to questions, he was asked if he recollected that on a particular day in the latter part of the Summer of 1898 something came through the mail for Barnet. The witness said that a package had come, three or four inches long and an inch and a half wide and of the same depth. The wrapper was a light-colored paper. It was addressed to Mr. Barnet, who opened it and found that it contained a smaller box in which were some pink or red capsules.

"Do you remember what Mr. Barnet said?"

"I remember distinctly."

"What was it?"

The question was ruled out.

The witness said that there was no writing except the address about it, and that Mr. Barnet had gathered up the wrapper and contents and put them in his overcoat pocket.

BOXES OF PILLS AND CAPSULES.

The Recorder asked how all this was relevant, and Mr. Osborne said: "We propose to show that somebody sent anonymous packages through the mails to Barnet, and we have already proved that the defendant bought things under the name of Barnet."

Edmund Barnet was recalled and testified that among his brother's effects he had found a package similar to that which had been described by the last witness. There was a small wooden box containing fifty pills which were pink or blue, and a small white box containing capsules with white powder in them.

Dr. Witthaus was then recalled. He was asked to describe cyanide of mercury and its uses.

He had, since his last testimony, read up his books on the subject of the history and uses of cyanide of potassium, he said. Cyanide of potassium was discovered in 1782. Up to some years ago it was used by physicians, but it was not used much now. It is used as a reagent in chemical work, also in the making of fulminate for exploding cartridges, and, to some extent, in making paint for the bottoms of ships to resist the action of barnacles and other water life.

On cross-examination Prof. Witthaus told Mr. Weeks that the bromo-seltzer in the composition in the bottle he had received from the Adams flat was not in a normal form, as it had been pulverized more than was usually the case.

Joseph Moore was recalled and testified that he had taken notes for Molineux to Blanche Chesebrough, at 251 West Seventy-fifth Street.

Benjamin F. Kelly, another writing expert, was then called. He said that he had had eighteen years' experience as an expert before admitted. Mr. Osborne said that he thought sufficient expert testimony had been admitted. Mr. Osborne said that he had many more experts, but proposed only to put on record their opinions as to the similarity of the disputed writings, and the acknowledged writings of the defendant. The Recorder told him that he thought he had reached the limit, but permitted the testimony to be taken.

POISON ADDRESS LEFT-HANDED.

Mr. Kelly's testimony bore out the anticipations of the Assistant District Attorney, and Mr. Weeks then took him in hand and drew from him information as to how much time he had given to an examination of the writings before offering his opinion the first time, and as to the compensation he was receiving from the District Attorney's office.

"Did you in January, 1898, express the opinion that the poison package address had been written by the left hand?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"Yes."

"Was that to a reporter?"

"Yes."

"Was the idea original with you?"

"No. It was suggested by Mr. Spencer," (another expert.)

"And then you gave it to a newspaper?"

"Yes."

The witness had received $37.50 for his opinion to the newspaper. He explained that the writing looked childish. That was the way it would look written by one who was not accustomed to writing with the left hand.

"You never expressed the opinion that it was written by a left-handed person?"

"No."

"If it was written by a person with the left hand it was by one who had practiced with the left hand?"

The witness had previously expressed this opinion and admitted it.

Dr. Boocock was next called. He said that he had made a special study of diphtheria and had personally used cyanide of mercury in its treatment for twenty-seven years. It was some thirty years ago that a French physician had discovered in a case of poisoning from cyanide that the symptoms were exactly like those of diphtheria, and following the principle of homeopathy, cyanide had been used to cure diphtheria. He said that it was used by many physicians, and with marked success.

The Recorder—"You are testifying solely from the standpoint of your school of medicine?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Not as to treatment by allopathic physicians?"

"No Sir."

OFFERED TO TAKE POISON.

The doctor said that in an epidemic of diphtheria on Long Island twenty-seven years ago he had cured 150 cases. He said that he spoke from his personal knowledge of the effects of cyanide, as he had experimented with himself, and to show that the effects were precisely as he described he volunteered to subject himself to cyanide treatment to show the symptoms. He had found that cyanide of mercury was also a preventive of diphtheria. The doctor said that he took the cyanide himself when he had occasion to treat diphtheria cases as a protection.

When Mr. Weeks took the doctor in hand for cross-examination he said: "Dr. Boocock, would a culture taken from pus of a case like this poisoning show diphtheria germs?"

"Well, there is a difference of opinion," said the doctor, "as to whether the microbe emanates from the disease or causes the disease."

"Could one dose develop the symptoms of diphtheria?"

"That would depend upon the size of the dose. Dr. Beck of Paris found that two grains caused death, with diphtheritic symptoms."

"Just what dose could be taken so as to produce diphtheritic symptoms without producing death?"

The doctor refused to answer the question outright, but insisted on explaining that if certain dilutions were administered and a teaspoonful taken every hour, according to the dilution, then the symptoms would appear in varying periods. He finally said as to the effects of one dose that it would depend upon the system and how large the dose.

Mr. Weeks sought to find out what with a system of average health would be the dose which would produce the symptoms without causing death, and the doctor said that he could not say.

DILUTIONS OF THE DRUG.

Then it transpired that the doctor had been answering questions on the supposition that the doses referred to were the diluted ones, and not, as Mr. Weeks meant, the crude poison. As to the latter the doctor said he could not speak, because he had not tried to poison himself. The dilution would be made, he said, by putting one teaspoonful of mercuric cyanide in ten teaspoonfuls of water, and then one teaspoonful of the dilution in ten teaspoonfuls of water, thus making the second dilution one-hundredth strong. That, he said, would prevent infection if taken two teaspoonfuls each day. If taken often enough it would produce diphtheria symptoms.

"Doctor," asked Mr. Weeks, "if you were called in a case of what was supposed to be diphtheria and you found that the patient had taken something from a box found to contain cyanide of mercury, would you diagnose the case as one of diphtheria?"

"I would not."

"What would you do?"

"I would give the antidote."

"What is the antidote?"

"Wild indigo."

A recess was then taken. On the reopening of court the doctor was again called to the stand and was permitted to make this statement: "I want to explain one or two little matters in which Mr. Weeks must have misunderstood me this morning. I thought his questions had reference to the amount of the solutions I had in my mind. I want to tell you what the records show.

MERCURIAL POISONING RECORD.

"There is a case on record of mercurial poisoning by two grains; there is a case of death by twenty-three grains; another case in which the quantity was 100 grains, and in another case it was a solution of indefinite quantity, and then there is this fifth case of Barnet. These are the only cases on record of deaths being caused by poisoning by mercury."

Juror No. 5 asked: "In these cases, doctor, was the taking of the mercury followed by immediate death?"

The witness said: "I presume not. The records show that in the first two cases death followed eleven and nineteen hours afterward respectively. In the third and fourth cases some days elapsed before death occurred."

Mr. Weeks asked: "By whom are those cases reported?"

"By Dr. Allen in his materia medica, and he quotes as his authority a French work."

"Then these are the only cases that you know anything about?"

"Yes, these are the only cases of mercurial poisoning on record so far as we know."

Mr. Weeks asked the doctor, should he be called in a case where the patient was suffering from this poison, if he would take it for diphtheria and administer more of the poison. It was some time before a direct answer could be obtained, but finally the doctor said that higher dilutions would increase the power to save tissue.

ACTION OF THE POISON.

The doctor said that the drug had a metallic taste. It coated the tongue, inflamed the throat, and also acted on the stomach, affecting the gastric conditions and causing ulcers.

Mr. Weeks asked him if he had heard of the Capella case, and he said that he had not. In reply to a question, he said that the poison caused a slight exhilaration of the pulse, a constriction of the throat, and severe headache, and also dulled the eyes, dimming the vision and drawing in the eye.

"These are not the symptoms of diphtheria, are they?"

"Several of them are."

The doctor again said that he would be very willing to show by experiment on himself the effects, but his offer was not accepted.

The last witness of the day was the writing expert, William E. Hagan of Troy, who said he had been studying the subject of handwriting since 1851. He named a number of important cases in which he had figured as an expert. Among these were the Morey letter case, in which D. N. Carvalho, as now, was an opposing expert. Another was the Whittaker case at West Point.

In the present case he said that he had studied all of the specimens, and was satisfied that they were all written by the same person as were the specimens admitted to be the defendants.

Enlarged copies of specimens of the writing on charts were placed before the jury, and the expert called attention to what he considered points of similarity. It was largely a repetition of other evidence as to the technical formation of letters, the indications as to the holding of the pen, and pen habits.

During the afternoon Molineux's brother, Leslie Molineux, sat between him and Gen. Molineux. The courtroom was more than usually crowded, and there were more women present than on any preceding day of the trial.

The announcement by Mr. Osborne that he would finish the case for the people to-day gave renewed interest to the question as to the probable course of the defense, but Mr. Weeks has given no intimation on this point.

FATAL ELEVATOR ACCIDENT.

Two Men Killed and Three Probably Fatally Injured—Car Drops Seven Stories.

An accident to the machinery operating the freight elevator in O'Reilly Brothers' storage and warehouse, at West One Hundred and Twenty-third Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, yesterday afternoon resulted in the death of two men and perhaps the fatal injury of three others. The dead are Michael McLean, aged twenty-two, of 300 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, and Peter Leddy, aged twenty-seven, of 300 East Twentieth Street. The injured are Bernard Cahill of 868 Second Avenue, James Reilly of 227 East Forty-third Street, and Peter Burns of 2,121 Eighth Avenue.

The accident occurred about 1:30 o'clock. The elevator was at the seventh floor when the five men got on it with as many wheelbarrows, loaded with porous fire brick. As soon as the gates were closed the car began to descend with frightful rapidity. During the fall McLean and Leddy put their arms about each other. When the cellar floor was reached there was a terrible crash. McLean and Leddy fell to one side directly under the counter-balance weights, which, being detached from the cable by their rapid ascent, fell on the heads and chests of the two men, crushing the life out of them instantly.

The other three men were buried in the débris of fire brick and cables incidental to the fall. They were unconscious when they were extricated and they were removed to the J. Wood Wright Hospital.

Thomas Berry, Superintendent of the building, was immediately arrested and taken to the Harlem Police Court, where he was arraigned before Magistrate Mayo. Detective Kerns related the details of the accident. Berry refused to make a statement regarding the affair, and he was given into the custody of the Coroner.

The elevator was about 12 feet square and had no sides. On the walls of the shaft is painted the warning that "employees ride in this elevator at their own risk." It was said by an employe that the elevator was tested to carry two tons. Thomas J. O'Reilly, a member of the firm, said:

"We don't know how it happened. It was an elevator which we had been using right along and we supposed it perfectly safe. It has been regularly inspected and was put in about 1893."

Special Inspector Fred Frankenbergh of the Building Department examined the elevator after the accident. He found that the small cog wheel, which imparts motion to the drum upon which the cable is wound, had broken off at its standard. The breaking of this pinion released the car from control by the motive power. The heavy load on the elevator caused the opposing weights to ascend so rapidly that the cables were pulled or broken out of them and dropped down the shaft.

It was said at the J. Hood Wright Hospital last night that the three injured men were hurt internally and that their condition was critical.

MUSICAL CRITICISM IN COURT.

Broker's Playing and Singing Led to Threats Against His Life.

Harry Clayson, a young broker living in the Hotel Avon, at One Hundred and Sixteenth Street and Madison Avenue, was the complainant in the Harlem Police Court yesterday afternoon against Henry Schmidt of 16 East One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, whom he accused of threatening his life and disturbing the peace. Clayson told Magistrate Mayo that he frequently called on a young woman named Blanche Evans, who lives in the same house with Schmidt. Clayson said that he played the piano and sang, and that Schmidt criticised his efforts. He said that Schmidt had bored holes in his floor and threatened to shoot him through them. Wednesday night, Clayson said, Schmidt threatened to cut his throat to prevent him from singing any more.

Schmidt said that all day and all night some one was singing in the place. Neither the piano nor the tenants had a moment's rest. He was a law-abiding citizen, he said, but he wanted a few hours' sleep. He characterized Clayson's singing as the worst noise he had ever heard. He said it made his wife howl and caused everybody in the house to feel sad and dejected. Others played and sang, he said, but Clayson was the worst of the lot. Schmidt denied that he meant anything when he threatened Clayson.

Mrs. Evans, the mother of the girl, and several musicians were called and testified that Clayson was an admirable pianist and a good singer. Magistrate Mayo adjourned the case till Monday and paroled Schmidt.

IN THE INTEREST OF SAILORS.

Meeting to Further the Naval Branch of the Y. M. C. A.

A meeting in the interest of the Naval Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday. Rear Admiral John W. Philip, who is the Chairman of the Naval General Committee of the association, presided. Among the speakers were William McAdoo, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Rear Admiral Francis J. Higginson, Capt. Chadwick, and other naval officers; Col. J. J. McCook, William Miller, R. C. Morse, and F. L. Smith of the Young Men's Christian Association. The enlisted men in the navy were represented by Richard Keating, chief gunner's mate of the Indiana; Randolph Clausen, who was with Lieut. Hobson when the Merrimac was sunk; Lee Dickinson, torpedoist of the Massachusetts, and several others.

Ex-Secretary McAdoo said that as the Port of New York got more protection from the navy than any port in the United States, the business men of the city were willing to contribute liberally for the Naval Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. He said the Young Men's Christian Association had done good work in helping to make the men sober and respectable. The old-time man-o'-war's man, he declared, was a thing of the past, and in his place was a sober, well-educated, self-respecting man.

Mr. Miller, who is Secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, said that in order to establish a place for the sailor ashore about $300,000 would be required. One-half of that amount had been secured, he said, and the remainder had nearly all been promised. In a short time it was hoped to have the new building in Brooklyn completed. Subscription blanks were distributed among those present.

While we frequently advertise that we make to fit by altering garments, just as a good tailor does, too much stress can't be laid on our ability to fit the majority without alteration.

Once it is settled which of our sizes is your size, how comfortable to walk into a garment when you want it and as you want it.

Clothes, shoes, hats and furnishings for man and boy.

ROGERS, PEET & Co.

350 Broadway, cor. Leonard.
569 Broadway, cor. Prince.
Thirty-second and Broadway.

SOUTH TRUSTS THE NORTH

Ex-Gov. McCorkle's Plea for a Union of Interests.

At Newark Board of Trade Dinner He Advocates the Retention of the Philippines.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 18.—The thirteenth annual dinner of the Newark Board of Trade was held to-night in the drill room of the First Regiment Armory, in Orange Street. Thirteen tables in three columns of four and one cross table at the head were arranged to accommodate the 400 guests. At the head table President Richard C. Jenkinson occupied the post of honor, with ex-Gov. William A. McCorkle of West Virginia, and Gov. Foster M. Vorhees of New Jersey. Others at the table of honor were Mayor Seymour of this city, William P. Hepburn, Congressman R. Wayne Parker, Congressman Charles N. Fowler, Senator A. L. McDermott, Speaker Jones of the House of Assembly, Charles Reed, Senator Thomas N. McCarter, Judge J. F. Fort, Gen. E. P. Meaney, John F. Dryden, Col. J. N. Barlow, Dr. W. P. Wilson, William R. Tucker, Dr. A. Nelson Hollifield, Col. Charles W. Fuller, and W. H. Truesdale.

At the close of the dinner ex-Gov. McCorkle was introduced by President Jenkinson to speak on "The Attitude of the Progressive South Toward Measures for Promoting the Country's Foreign Trade." The ex-Governor declared that the most important question of the day to the North was that of foreign markets. Of critical importance, he said, is the market of China, "an empire of 4,000,000 square miles, inhabited by an energetic people, just opening its eyes to civilization."

"We are face to face," said ex-Gov. McCorkle, "with the great question of how we shall keep open to our country the door of the great Chinese and Eastern markets. There is but one door for us, and that is through the Philippine Islands. Here is the real strategical and commercial position of the East. Without our position in the Philippines, our commercial treaties with China would be valueless, and upon our withdrawal from these islands its rich markets would be forever lost to the people of this country.

"Those who suggest that the South has been ultra-conservative as to the widening of the sphere of this country's influence, do not know her traditions. As to her action in the future, I confidently refer you to her past. Korea, Siam, China, Philippine Islands, Japan, South America, and the islands of the sea desire your merchandise; and these markets must be reached by a cheaper route than around Cape Horn. England, by the completion of the Suez Canal, has the advantage in trade routes. The South has never faltered and no interest has ever interfered with the persistent desire to see the great work of the Nicaragua Canal completed by American hands and for the glory of American commerce.

"The South wishes a navy sufficiently powerful to entitle this country to respect in every sea and clime. The control of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea is essential to our commerce. Here, at the mouth of the Mississippi, is garnered the wealth of the great valley, and through the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea every vessel laden with the product of your manufactories must take its way to the East and the South.

"We ask in return for our devotion to your interests a more liberal treatment of the South in the expenditure of the public money. Ungrudgingly we have voted to deepen your harbors and widen your rivers until now the world's commerce can ride in safety in your harbors. The deepening of our Southern harbors and rivers that our raw products may reach your furnaces and mills at a minimum price means your underselling the world. In a night the South has grown into a great manufacturing region. It must be the sensible policy of the North to give the various manufactured products of the South the greatest opportunity through your own deep harbors to reach the people of the world rather than to cast this great trade inland to become a competitor of your mills. Instead of being your competitor in business, we wish to go through your own ports out into the world as your handmaiden and helper. We trust you implicity. The honest, substantial sentiment of the North is what we crave. With the great growth of the South we are part and parcel of your life, industrial and social."

Following ex-Gov. McCorkle came Congressman Hepburn, who spoke on "How Shall We Enlarge Our Labor Fields?"

Congressman Fowler, who is a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, responded to the toast, "Banking, Domestic and Foreign." Other toasts were responded to by Judge Fort and Senator McCarter.

WOMEN ON POLICE REPORTS.

Official Answer to Complaints of Saloon Evils Called Unsatisfactory.

Two reports from the Police Department were read before the West End Women's Republican Association at its meeting yesterday, and aroused the women present to a high state of indignation. The reports were in answer to complaints made by the association against the Sunday liquor traffic in the upper section of the city.

Mrs. Connor Irwin, Treasurer of the association, declared that the reports were nothing more than a "whitewash" for the department, and moved that they be put on the association's records, not as reports, but as communications. This was carried.

In the complaint sent to the department specific cases were cited of the violation of the law. Several saloons were declared to have been open and doing business on a certain Sunday. It was stated that churchgoers passing Eighty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue on Dec. 3 last were witnesses of the ejection of three intoxicated men from a saloon. Other cases were also cited. The neighborhood of the Circle, at Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, was declared to be a "hotbed of iniquity." The police reports, signed by Capt. Schmittberger of the Thirtieth Precinct and Capt. Norton of the Twenty-sixth Precinct characterized the complaints as rather "sweeping." No other answer was made to the complaints, except one from Capt. Norton, saying that the three intoxicated men at Eighty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, were laborers, and were arrested and fined. Mrs. Irwin said she saw the men, and that they were not laborers.

The association proposes to continue its crusade against the opening of saloons on Sunday.

A paper entitled "Is War a Benefit to a Nation?" written by Miss A. Phillips, was then read. Miss Phillips took the ground that war was a benefit. In the debate that followed Mrs. Cornelia S. Robinson, President of the association, admitted the good results that war brought, but she said she deplored the means.

Ladies' Gloves.

2 clasp, or 4 button,—Piqué sewn, — shades suitable for street dress.
$1.00 per pair.

Fine suède,—Jouvin make, —every fashionable shade for evening wear, 12 button length, $1.50 per pair,

16 " " 1.75 " "
20 " " 2.00 " "
24 " " 2.50 " "
Sizes 5¼ to 7.

James McCreery & Co.,
Twenty-third St.

PROTECTIVE TARIFF LEAGUE.

A Practical Indorsement of the Marine Subsidy Measure at the Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the American Protective Tariff League was held yesterday afternoon at its headquarters, 135 West Twenty-third Street. Ex-Mayor William L. Strong, the President, was in the chair, and among the others present were ex-Secretary Cornelius N. Bliss, Homer Laughlin of California, Charles E. Coffin of Maryland, Charles S. Landers of Connecticut, F. C. Cheney of New Hampshire, Le Grand B. Cannon, George J. Seabury, and F. S. Witherbee. Appraiser Wilbur F. Wakeman acted as Secretary, although he resigned that office several months ago. His successor was not chosen, and all the other officers were re-elected.

The most important action taken was practical indorsement of the marine subsidy measure now pending in Congress, though the measure was not mentioned specifically. The following resolution on the subject was adopted:

Whereas, The scarcity of American built vessels carrying the American flag available for use by the United States in war emergencies is an element of danger that should no longer be ignored or disregarded, and

Whereas, It is not creditable to us as a nation that we are carrying in American vessels not more than one-eighth of the total volume of American commerce; therefore,

Resolved, That it is the duty of Congress to heed the recommendation of President McKinley in his last annual message and to enact legislation that shall remedy these defects and place the American merchant marine upon the footing demanded alike by the possible exigencies of war, and the pressing requirements of our increasing export trade.

There was some discussion of the tariff policy with respect to Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines, but it was decided that action at this time would be premature.

Appraiser Wakeman said after the meeting that if Puerto Rico and the Philippines should become, through the action of Congress, integral parts of the United States, which would bring about free trade between the islands and the home country, it would also bring this trade under the operation of the Coastwise Shipping laws, which necessarily would give a great impetus to American shipbuilding, and that this might be expected largely to offset any injury that would result to other industries by doing away with the tariff on imports from the islands.

The reports of the officers of the league showed that it has 967 members and that last year it expended $25,902.75, employed material to 6,633 newspapers and distributed 10,109,083 pages of Protective Tariff literature. As this is a Presidential year, it was estimated that $37,500 would be required for the work of the organization.

DISPUTE GAYNOR INDICTMENTS.

Question of Validity Raised—Contention of Carter's Counsel.

The question of the validity of the indictment against Col. John F. Gaynor, E. H. Gaynor, W. T. Gaynor, and B. D. Greene was raised by counsel for the defense in their examination on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with the Savannah River and Cumberland Sound contracts, which was continued yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields, in the Federal Building. B. M. Erwin, Deputy Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of the Southern District of Georgia, and John M. Barnes, United States Marshal for the Southern District of Georgia, were questioned concerning the selection of the Grand Jurors who found the indictment against the defendants at Macon, Ga., instead of at Savannah. In explanation of this line of testimony, L. Lafin Kellogg of counsel for the defense said that he intended to show that the Grand Jury had not been legally drawn or constituted. Commissioner Shields, however, said that, as a committing Magistrate, he had no power to pass upon the validity of an indictment, that being properly a matter for the courts.

Lieut. Col. Alexander Mackenzie of the United States Engineers was recalled and questioned as to the statutes which provided for the Savannah River and Cumberland Sound improvements.

Mr. Rose, for the defense, said that in asking such questions, he was endeavoring to prove that the scheme to defraud alleged in the indictment could not have been organized as charged, but had been sanctioned by ex-Capt. Carter's superiors and approved by Congress.

The hearing will be continued at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD DEBT.

Arrangement to Provide for It Said to Have Been Completed.

Third Avenue Railroad stock lost another point in the market yesterday, opening at 119 and closing at 116½. The transactions in it amounted to only about 1,200 shares. Representatives of the company reiterated their denials that the road was to be reorganized.

Edward Lauterbach, counsel for the road, said that details of the plan for providing for the floating debt of some $17,000,000 were being expeditiously attended to, and that the terms made were eminently satisfactory to all concerned. "The property owned by the Third Avenue is extremely valuable," said Mr. Lauterbach. "If anything, it is more valuable than it ever was. The company is in no difficulty and will have no trouble in getting all the money it needs."

Mr. Lauterbach said the Directors had made a mistake last June in issuing only $4,000,000 of new stock at a time when money was easy and conditions good and the entire $28,000,000 would have been readily subscribed for at par. It is, in fact, because of the unsatisfactory condition of the financial market now, and the consequent doubt that the new stock would be subscribed for, that it is not issued and that other steps are taken instead to provide for the floating debt. Money for the new power house and other improvements is to be provided for by the syndicate which takes care of this floating debt, and there is no doubt that eventually the whole debt will be paid off by issuing new stock. It was rumored yesterday that the aforesaid syndicate was closely identified with the Metropolitan Street Railway people. This was officially denied, however.

There was a meeting of the leading interests in the Third Avenue road at the office of Hoadly, Lauterbach & Johnson in the afternoon. While no formal statement was given out, it is understood that arrangements for adjusting the company's finances were completed. The terms were not made public.

Engineer Found Dead in Cabin.

Hiram J. Tyson, sixty years old, chief engineer of the steamboat Saratoga of the Troy Line, now lying at Hoboken, was found dead in his cabin yesterday morning by his son, who is also employed on the boat. Mr. Tyson was in good health when he retired on Monday night. Heart disease was the cause of death. The body was taken to Troy, N. Y., where Mr. Tyson's family resides.

Stern Bros

in their
Dressmaking Dep't
(Third Floor)
are prepared to take orders for Tailor-made Gowns, Reception, Dinner and Evening Costumes during the month of January at Great Reductions from Regular Prices
West 23d St.

FF FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE
Dining-Room Masterpieces
In modified Colonial style—their pilgrim fathers never had half the simple elegance.
Sideboards, with rich, shell-like carvings, projecting tops, supported by delicate fluted pillars, slightly accessed cellaret, cupboard and drawers, claw feet, exquisite mouldings—no end to their artistic points.
Side Tables also, as finely finished as art and skill can make them, many now reduced below even factory prices, as you
"BUY OF THE MAKER"
GEO. C. FLINT CO.
43 45 AND 47 WEST 23RD ST
NEAR BROADWAY.
FACTORY 154 AND 156 WEST 19TH STREET

Imparts Energy
Horsford's Acid Phosphate
When vitality and nerve force have become impaired by illness its value is wonderful. Induces refreshing sleep.
Genuine bears name HORSFORD'S on wrapper.

AMUSEMENTS.

EMPIRE THEATRE. B'way & 40th St. Evs. 8:20. Matinées Wednesday & Saturday.
"Another Empire success."—Charles Frohman.
EMPIRE THEATRE COMPANY in BROTHER OFFICERS

Charles Frohman's Criterion Theatre, B'way & 44th St. Evs. 8:20. Matinées Wednesday and Saturday.
MAUDE ADAMS in The LITTLE MINISTER

GARRICK THEATRE. 35th St. & B'way. Evenings, 8 o'clock. Mats., 2:15.
3D MONTH. MATINEES SATURDAY ONLY.
Wm. Gillette in New Play. Sherlock Holmes.

MADISON SQ. THEATRE, 24th St., n'r B'way. Evgs. 8:30. Matinées, 2:15.
Matinées Wednesday and Saturday.
Greatest Hit This Season. WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS

GARDEN THEATRE. 27th St. & Madison Av. Evgs. 8:20. Matinée Saturday.
MRS. LANGTRY—THE DEGENERATES.

DALY'S B'way & 30th.....at 8:30
Matinées Wed. & Sat., 2:15
Daniel Frohman's Company
2D MONTH.
The Maneuvers of Jane
Comedy, 4 acts, by Henry Arthur Jones.

LYCEUM 4th Av. & 23d .....at 8:30.
Daniel Frohman, Manager
LAST 2 NIGHTS. LAST MAT. SAT.
CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS
ANNIE RUSSELL in MISS HOBBS
Next Monday, "The Surprises of Love."

CHICKERING HALL,
TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 23.
A. Henry Savage Landor.
Subject—IN THE FORBIDDEN LAND. Illustrated. Thrilling story of his journey into TIBET, capture by the Lamas, imprisonment, torture, and ultimate release.
Tickets, $1.50, $1.00, and 75c. J. B. POND, Mgr.

Koster & Bial's
Jarbeau, Fred'k Hallen & Mollie Fuller, Solaret Goldin, Tim Cronin, & others.
MAT. TO-MORROW. Popular Prices, 50c.

CASINO! Last Wk! Mat. To-day! Mat. Every Day! Farewell Mat. Tmrw! Adieu Tmrw Ngt
LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD!
Nxt. Mon.—Famous London "Belle of N. Y." Co.

Keith's Continuous Performance.
MINNIE SELIGMAN, GEORGE WILSON.
LOUISE CUNNING, THE DE FOREESTS.
Matthews & Harris, Biograph, etc.

BIJOU. B'way & 30th St. Evs. 8:15. Mat. Sat. Only
MAY IRWIN Phone 2224 Mad. Sq.
IN SISTER MARY
BEST ORCHESTRA SEATS ONLY $1.50.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC. 14th St. & Irving Pl.
Grander Than Ever. "WAY DOWN EAST."
Prices, 25, 50, 75, $1.00. Mats. Wed. & Sat. 2. Evs. 8:10.

Weber & Fields' MUSIC HALL. Matinées B'way & 30 St. Tues. & Sat.
Whirl-I-Gig & BARBARA FIDGETY

WORLD IN WAX. CINEMATOGRAPH.
EDEN MUSEE
NEW GROUPS. CHARMING MUSIC

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. THE GUNNER'S MATE.
Next Week.—"A Stranger in a Strange Land."

14th St. Theatre, nr. 6th Av. Mats. Wed. & Sat.
LAST WEEK but one of the best of rural plays,
THE VILLAGE POSTMASTER.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE. Sat. Mat. red. pr.
LAST WEEK. SCHWEIGHOFER in Gebildete Menschen (Educated People.)

HERALD SQ. Thea. Evs. 8:20. Mats. Wed. & Sat.
DAVID BELASCO presents his new triumph, Naughty Anthony

MURRAY HILL THEATRE. 42d St. & Lex. Av.
Matinee Every Day, 25c.
THIS WEEK—AN ENEMY TO THE KING.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S Music Hall. 125th st. and 7th av. Res. 50c. Bal., 25c. Mats. Wed. and Sat. MINNIE PALMER AND CO., etc

WATCHMAN FROZE TO DEATH.

Brewery Employe Collapsed in the Refrigerating Department.

Simon Weigern, twenty-nine years old, who was employed as a night watchman in the brewery of Obermeyer & Leibmann, at Noll and Bremen Streets, Brooklyn, was frozen to death yesterday in the refrigerating department of the brewery. About 3 o'clock in the morning Weigern set out to make a tour of the brewery from the engine room, where he had been talking with the engineer. He was in a slight perspiration. The temperature in the refrigerating department is never above thirty degrees. When Weigern reached the department, it is believed that he was either stricken with apoplexy, a congestive chill, or heart disease, and fell to the stone floor, where he froze to death before he was discovered.

His body was discovered by one of the employes in the brewery. A call was sent to St. Catharine's Hospital and Dr. Keller responded. He found the body frozen stiff, and gave it as his opinion that the sudden change of temperature had caused Weigern to collapse. Weigern lived at 193 Cornelia Street, and leaves a family.

The New York Times Saturday Review of Books and Art.

FEATURES TO-MORROW:

CATHOLIC LIBRARIES.
Cathedral and Other Collections in New York—What They Are Doing.

THE CITY OF ROME.
Destruction of Its Buildings and Statues Due to the Italian People—Lanciani's Interesting Statements.

PRE-RAPHAELITES.
A Memoir of Rossetti and Mr. Bate's Volume on the Brotherhood and Their Successors—

DAILY, ONE CENT. SUNDAY, THREE CENTS.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

The New York Times.

THE WEATHER. Rain; fresh southeasterly winds.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.

VOL. XLIX...NO. 15,611. NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1900.—TWELVE PAGES. ONE CENT In Greater New York, Elsewhere, and Jersey City. TWO CENTS.

TO-DAY:

TWELVE PAGES, With REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

Stocks firm.
Cash wheat, No. 2 red, 73⅝c; cash corn, No. 2 mixed, 40⅝c; cash cotton, 7 13-16c.

CONGRESS.—A number of new witnesses testified yesterday before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections on the alleged bribery case in Montana. Senator Allen's resolution of inquiry concerning the Transvaal was adopted after being modified. Representative Payne of New York yesterday introduced a bill providing for free trade between Puerto Rico and this country. The House passed the Pension Appropriation bill. Senator Morgan spoke against the Financial bill.—Page 3.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.—The Senate adjourned without transacting any business. The Assembly passed a few minor bills and then adjourned until Monday. No bills of importance were introduced.—Page 5.

FOREIGN.—Gen. Buller telegraphed the British War Office yesterday that Lord Dundonald had occupied a strong position after a sharp fight with the Boers, whose losses were considerable. It is reported that the Boers have evacuated Colenso in order to reinforce the troops opposing Buller's flanking movement. The Boers describe the British bombardment of their trenches as probably the most terrific ever seen on land. It was rumored in London yesterday that Ladysmith had been relieved after a fight of eighteen hours, during which Gen. Warren was killed. It was not confirmed. Dr. von Koerber has formed a new Ministry in Austria. About 49,000,000 people are now affected by the famine in India. The Swiss market was yesterday opened to American fruit. The condition of the Kaiserin's mother is much improved. No bodies of victims of the Helgoland wreck have been recovered. Isman Digna, the late Khalifa's principal General, is a prisoner.—Pages 1, 2, and 7.

Page 1.

Bryan's proposed visit to Baltimore is resented by leading Democrats there who were not consulted, and a cold reception is predicted.

John B. McDonald, the successful rapid transit tunnel bidder, will be ready to sign the contract next Tuesday.

Mr. Bryan has granted the request of the State Committee of the Chicago Platform Democracy for a conference upon his arrival here.

At the conference of the Governor, Senator Platt, and Chairman Odell to-day it is expected that the question of a successor to State Superintendent of Insurance Payn will be decided.

Ida M. Frazer, who, in her suit for divorce against her husband sought to implicate Mrs. Lucy Scribner, withdrew her statements in regard to the latter and expressed sorrow. The suit was afterward decided in her favor.

Page 2.

The City Club discussed last night the subject of charter revision. Wheeler H. Peckham, Simon Sterne, Frank Moss, ex-Judge Dillon, and Edward M. Shepard spoke. There was much diversity of opinion.

Page 4.

The Executive Committee of the Standard Gaslight Company held a meeting yesterday. No attack upon President Sage was made.

Gen. Andrews issued a statement yesterday denying he had made public any facts concerning the recent investigation into the State Trust Company's loans.

Edgar A. Garbutt of 204 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, will leave the Seney Hospital to-day, after having undergone a most dangerous operation, in which the inner covering of the shells of hens' eggs was used for the first time in the United States for skin-grafting purposes.

Page 5.

The December salaries of the teachers of Manhattan and the Bronx will be paid on Monday.

Controller Morgan's figures for 1899 of assessed values throughout the State show an increase of $375,568,234, with a total of $5,562,204,198.

Page 6.

The members of the Gould family believe that the report regarding excessive stock speculations on the part of Count Boni de Castellane were inspired by politics.

Page 7.

Martin Bergen, catcher of the Boston League team, yesterday killed his wife, two children, and himself.

Page 12.

The Palisades Preservation Commission has drawn up a bill which provides in effect for the establishment of an interstate park.

The Molineux case yesterday again assumed the appearance of a Barnet inquiry. Dr. H. Beaman Douglass, who attended the dead man, and who was called as a witness for the prosecution, would not be shaken in his declaration that cyanide of mercury did not cause death.

Amusements.—Page 6.
Arrivals at Hotels and Out-of-Town Buyers.—Page 2.
Business Troubles.—Page 10.
Court Calendars.—Page 10.
Insurance Notes.—Page 9.
Losses by Fire.—Page 2.
Marine Intelligence and Foreign Mails.—Page 3.
Markets.—Page 11.
New Corporations.—Page 9.
Railroads.—Page 2.
Real Estate.—Page 10.
Society.—Page 7.
United Service.—Page 3.
Weather Report.—Page 2.
Yesterday's Fires.—Page 2.

AMERICAN RAILS FOR EXPORT.

Large Shipments Being Made to Australia and Other Countries.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 19.—Another large order for steel rails for the Victoria Railroad of Australia has been awarded the Maryland Steel Company, and other orders will follow until about 200,000 tons of rails have been shipped by the big works at Sparrow's Point. Shipments of nearly 50,000 tons of rails have been made already to Australia, and the steamship Monmouth, which sailed a few days ago, carried nearly 6,000 tons. Robert Singleton of Melbourne, an official of the Victoria Railway, has arrived here and will inspect the rails as they are turned out.

Until a few years ago all the rails used in Australia were made in England, but the Maryland Steel Company, furnished a better product at lower prices. The British steamship Howick Hall is now taking to Yokohama, Japan, 3,000 tons of Maryland-made rails, and the British steamship Etrickdale is now on her way to this port from Alexandria, Egypt, to take a similar load for Kobe. Shipments of rails for the Eastern China and trans-Siberian Railways are being made at short intervals to Port Arthur, China, and Vladivostock, Russian Siberia. Ten steamers laden with Maryland rails are now bound to those ports.

Inventor Harris's Home Burned.

WILLIAMSPORT, Penn., Jan. 19.—The suburban home of Charles R. Harris, the inventor, was destroyed by fire late last night, entailing a loss of from $50,000 to $60,000. The insurance carried will aggregate about $26,000. Beyond a small amount of wearing apparel, no property was saved from the dwelling. An overheated furnace is supposed to have caused the fire.

County to Pay for Lynching.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 19.—A bill was introduced in the upper house this morning providing that the family of any person lynched shall receive $5,000 damages from the county in which the lynching occurred.

Fast Time to St. Louis.

Leave Centre of New York City—Grand Central Station—1:00 P. M., arrive St. Louis 6:56 P. M. next day, by New York Central. No excess fare. Trains illuminated by Pintsch light.—Adv.

RAPID TRANSIT CONTRACT

Mr. McDonald Will Be Ready to Sign It by Next Tuesday.

LITTLE DANGER OF DISEASES

Coming Excavations Can Cause Malarial Ones Only, Dr. Edson Says—Terminal Company's Plans.

John B. McDonald, the successful bidder for the rapid transit tunnel, will post his securities for the fulfillment of his contract with the city, and that document will be ready for signature not later than next Tuesday. Mr. McDonald walked into Controller Coler's office late yesterday afternoon and announced he would furnish his cash security of $1,000,000 on Monday. He also signified his intention of qualifying in the one-million-dollar continuing bond and the five-million-dollar bond either on that day or the next. So far as the Controller or Mr. McDonald now knows, there is every reason to believe that Mr. McDonald will have completed the thirty-five-million-dollar contract agreement by Tuesday afternoon, and the next actual step, barring the necessary preliminaries to the work, will be the turning up of the first shovelful of dirt at some place along the line yet to be selected.

Mr. McDonald appeared at his office, 100 Broadway, in the morning, and was met with a mountain of mail, and throughout the day with hosts of callers, just as he has been since his bid was accepted. He took care of all mail matter and humanity, in a way which serves to keep up his reputation for handling big things. Principals or agents of concerns manufacturing nearly all the various kinds of material to be utilized in the work, have called, either upon Mr. McDonald or Engineer Parsons, since the contract was designated, so much so that both have been almost overwhelmed. And with the coming and going of each day, the aggregate number of applicants for work is large enough up to date to build two tunnels of equal magnitude simultaneously.

The statement that Richard Croker, John F. Carroll, Senator Gorman, Stephen B. Elkins, the Duke Brothers, the tobacco men, and others are Mr. McDonald's supporters was denied yesterday by the fortunate contractor. "Not so," said he. "No foundation for it. Anybody can make a guess. I am the responsible man, and even if there were others with me, it would make no difference. When I have anything to say on this score, I will say it; not before.

"So far as the public is concerned on this rapid transit contract, I will say that while it is a big contract, the biggest I have ever had, it is not the only business I have on hand. There are other interests I am attending to, but the tunnel will get all the time necessary to put it through with all possible speed. I am a man of my word; there will be no delay after the ground is broken, for it is material to me that I put the road on an earning basis as soon as I possibly can."

CARNEGIE NOT BACKING HIM.

Among the many rumors floating around about Mr. McDonald was one that the Carnegie Steel Company is backing him. Mr. McDonald calls this rubbish. He said it does not seem to be understood that the city furnishes the money as fast as the work is completed, and that that is the best backing, and the only backing he needs.

"I will buy steel wherever I can to the best advantage," said he, "either from Carnegie or any other manufacturer. So far as letting sub-contracts is concerned, it would be foolish to give out any until I qualify and the contract is actually signed."

Andrew Onderdonk was asked if he intended to bid for some of the sub-contracts that Mr. McDonald will have to dispose of. He replied that until the Commissioners actually accept Mr. McDonald's qualifications he would not say definitely. "It might turn out," said he, "that I could get all the work, although I have no reason to think McDonald will back out of his contract. If I get the opportunity there's no limit to the amount of work I would undertake."

According to Dr. Cyrus Edson residents along the line of the rapid transit tunnel need have little anxiety on account of their health while the construction is in progress. "I should not think," said he, "the work would have any material effect on health, especially not in the deeper rock work. Of course, we know that digging up does make trouble in the way of malarial diseases, but there is no reason to dread the thing as a possible source of any very great danger, as it is easy to disinfect the material as it is taken out, and if this is properly done there will be no danger whatever of any disease.

"I lived directly over the line of the Croton Aqueduct tunnel, which went through my neighborhood a hundred feet or more under the ground, and although it was a malarious district there was no increase in these disorders during the years that the work was in progress. No typhoid fever can be caused by the coming excavations—positively, no other disease than malarial diseases, and they are easily cured."

An official of the Board of Health said citizens exaggerated the danger from excavations because of the bad smells that accompany them, which, as a matter of fact, are really the greatest safeguard. The foul odors, he said, are caused by sulphureted hydrogen, which comes from gas leaking from the mains and which the soil retains, and which in itself is one of the most powerful disinfectants known to science.

PROJECTS FOR NEW TUNNELS.

Projects for new tunnels are already simmering. Arthur C. Hume, who represents the Terminal Railroad and Tunnel Company as counsel, said yesterday that it is the purpose of this concern to lay its plans before the Rapid Transit Commission probably next week, when it will outline a project to connect New Jersey with Manhattan and Brooklyn, the present intention being to tap the Flatbush district in the latter borough, and perhaps even beyond.

While Mr. Hume would not disclose all that the company contemplates doing in the near future, he said it is its intention to build a tunnel from this city to Jersey City, making a terminal to connect with the different roads over there, then running under the East River from the City Hall in Manhattan, making connections with the present contemplated tunnel to the Borough Hall, in Brooklyn; from there to the Flatbush Avenue station of the Long Island Railroad, out to Prospect Park, and eventually beyond.

"We will lay our plans before the Rapid Transit Commission," said Mr. Hume, "and then endeavor to get a franchise and take all necessary legal steps to go ahead. There are good men behind this company, and once we get permission and our plans are approved, sufficient money will be found to carry out the entire project."

Members of the Terminal Railroad and Tunnel Company met last night, but announced that they had nothing additional to give out for the present.

Controller Coler, in speaking of Assemblyman Brennan's bill, for the construction of tunnels to Brooklyn under the supervision of separate commissions, said: "These bills are mischievous in the extreme, though probably not intentionally so. When the contracts for the underground system are well under way, the Rapid Transit Commission purposes taking up the subject of the extension of the route to the Battery, and the construction of a tunnel to Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn.

"The entire work should be in charge of the present commission, which has for years been studying the subject and has made rapid transit a reality. With one commission supervising the main line in Manhattan and the Bronx and its branches to the other boroughs, through trains can be run from the northern city line to the south end of Long Island, and the interests of the public will be best subserved."

EXPECT RUSH OF IMMIGRANTS.

United States Immigration Commissioner Powderly came over from Washington yesterday to confer with Assistant Commissioner Sweeney, among other labor matters, about the rush of immigrants expected within the next few weeks. It is thought that the building of the rapid transit tunnel will attract thousands of Italians and other South of Europe emigrants, and preparations are being made to receive them. Mr. Sweeney said that the agents of the various steamship lines are already posting the news of the big tunnel contract and the Government officers at the various Italian ports report a regular "Klondike" rush preparing.

"Every Italian," he said, "who can beg, borrow, or steal his passage money is getting ready to come to New York to dig his share of the tunnel and get part of that $35,000,000."

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday granted an application made on behalf of the Rapid Transit Commissioners for compensation, and fixed the amount to be paid to each member of the board at $7,500. This is for the period from March 19, 1896, to Dec. 31, 1899.

The Commissioners who will receive this sum are Alexander E. Orr, John H. Starin, Woodbury Langdon, George L. Rives, and Charles Stewart Smith. Morris K. Jesup, who is now a member of the board, joined in the application, but waived all claim to compensation for himself.

Mr. Jesup became a member only on May 5 last, when he succeeded Mr. Orr as President of the Chamber of Commerce, and since that time the board has not had any of the labor of laying out a route. The last time the court allowed compensation for the Commissioners was in June, 1896, when they were allowed $5,000 each for the period prior to March 19, 1896.

Edward R. Emerson of 332 Spring Street has come out with an offer to pay $1,000 for the privilege of chartering for himself and his friends the first train to go through the tunnel.

"I am a patriotic American," said he. "All I want is a chance to ride through the tunnel first. Let the Mayor's special make its entrance and exit, and then let me come. I said I'd pay $1,000. As a matter of fact, I am willing to pay $100,000 if necessary, if the Directors of the subway will let me and my friends make the first trip. Ask any trust company or bank if I am good for that amount. I'll guarantee any amount up to $100,000. It's worth that to me as a speculation."

Mr. Emerson does not say what his "speculation" is.

PALACE FOR COL. J. J. ASTOR.

It Is Said He Will Commence to Build at Ferncliffe Before the End of the Year.

Special to The New York Times.

RHINEBECK, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The old brick mansion of Col. John Jacob Astor, at "Ferncliffe," will be razed, and on its site will be erected a palace. Such is said to be the plan of Col. Astor, who is now abroad with his wife and son, his intention being, it is added, to have the plans for his new residence prepared abroad, so that building can be commenced before the end of the year.

The old mansion stands on a plateau overlooking the Hudson River, and is surrounded by large lawns, beautified by shrubbery, trees, and flowers. The front entrance to the house commands an eastern view. The carriage road from the main entrance is nearly a mile in length and twenty feet wide. It is divided from the grounds by granite walls five feet high. To the right of the entrance to the estate are greenhouses, conservatories, and vegetable houses. The plateau in front of the large conservatories is one of the most elevated parts of the estate, and from it a view can be had of the Hudson and the Catskills miles away.

The boundaries of Ferncliffe inclose about 500 acres of land. It was originally purchased by William Astor, whose attention was attracted by visiting in the neighborhood when a boy. His father, William B. Astor, was the owner of a beautiful country place, Rokeby, near Barrytown-on-Hudson. There William Astor spent many happy summers. When William Astor first began to spend the Summers at Rhinebeck-on-Hudson his first purchase comprised a farm of some 100 acres. The plateau where now stands the house of Col. Astor was bleak and bare. Much of the farm was made up of bogs, wildwood, devastated forest land, and stony hills, but in a little more than twenty years has grown the magnificent estate of Ferncliffe.

From the time that the landscape gardeners began to beautify Ferncliffe, adjacent farms have been added. Ferncliffe had large stables during the life of William Astor. Since his death, however, the breeding of running horses has been practically abandoned, and Col. John Jacob Astor has given most of his attention to the breeding of hackneys, many being raised yearly on the estate.

IDA M. FRAZER DIVORCED.

Woman Who Sought to Implicate Mrs. Lucy Scribner Withdraws Her Charges and Expresses Sorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 19.—Ida M. Frazer has been granted a divorce from Dr. J. C. Frazer upon an amended complaint, in which no mention was made of Mrs. Lucy Scribner, widow of the New York publisher, against whom sensational charges were first preferred, and who sent a lawyer here from New York to protect her good name in court.

Mrs. Frazer alleged that her husband, Dr. Frazer of Pasadena, had treated her with extreme cruelty, and that he said that Mrs. Scribner was a superior woman and he intended to marry her as soon as he could get a divorce. All the statements implicating Mrs. Scribner have been withdrawn, and Mrs. Frazer has written a letter to her in which she deplores her misfortune in having been misinformed regarding Mrs. Scribner's relations with the doctor.

In the proceedings the sole ground of action upon which evidence was offered was the alleged cruelty of the doctor to his wife. The specific charges included use of abusive and insulting language, and similar offenses of minor importance. Notwithstanding this, the public was excluded from the courtroom during the trial.

Mrs. Frazer, her sister, Mrs. Kittie Flanders, and Mrs. Nellie Brown were the only witnesses examined. They told of the language used by the doctor toward his wife and his customary treatment of her during their residence at Pasadena, and the Court ordered a decree to be issued. The attorneys of Mrs. Frazer carried away the letter addressed to Mrs. Scribner, and no objection was offered to the testimony introduced.

Heart Disease Kills a Child.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., Jan. 19.—While in the act of bidding her mother an affectionate good-bye, Lillie D. Williams, the ten-year-old daughter of Mrs. James H. Williams of this city suddenly fell dead from heart disease at the feet of her parent. The girl had been apparently in perfect health, and had placed her hat on her head, picked up her bundle of books, and was about to run out of the house to join a group of schoolmates who were waiting for her when death came.

Pardon for Banker Agnew.

OCALA, Fla., Jan. 19.—E. W. Agnew, former President of the National Bank of Ocala, who was convicted in the Spring of 1897 for misappropriating the funds of the bank, and sentenced to five years in the United States Penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, has had his sentence commuted by the President and will be set at liberty in March.

PERFECT SERVICE VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD. Luxury, speed, and comfort on all trains to Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and Toledo; via the Standard Railroad of America.—Adv.

To-morrow.

THE NEW YORK TIMES to-morrow will devote the seven columns opposite the editorial page to the following articles: "Problems of Bookselling in England," by Sir Walter Besant, author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," "For Faith and Freedom" &c. "Capital Punishment Not a Deterrent of Crime," by Gen. Newton M. Curtis. "Municipal Trading in Great Britain," by Edward W. Bemis of the Bureau of Economic Research. "Delagoa Bay," by Poultney Bigelow, author of "White Man's Africa," "History of the German Struggle for Liberty," &c. Interesting articles on the Drama, Music, and Society, together with a variety of entertaining miscellaneous matter, and "All the News That's Fit to Print," will be found in to-morrow's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES. Price 3 cents. Daily edition, 1 cent. "All the News That's Fit to Print."—Adv.

BRYAN DIVIDES DEMOCRATS

His Visit to Baltimore Resented by the Leaders.

ORGANIZATION NOT CONSULTED

Officials Decline to Attend the Meeting Arranged—Ex-Senator Gorman's Influence.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 19.—William Jennings Bryan's visit to this city to-morrow and the action of the Democratic majority in the lower house of the Legislature in shelving a resolution asking him to address that body has had the effect of dividing the Maryland Democracy and opening the fight for control of the delegation to the National Convention. Thomas C. Weeks, a free silver leader, said to-day that he was sorry Bryan was coming to Maryland at this time, and that he would not improve his chances by his meeting here to-morrow night. He was compelling the Democratic organization to take sides this early in his candidacy.

"If Mr. Bryan wants the Maryland delegation," continued Mr. Weeks, "he must have the State party organization on his side. But he is coming here without consulting that body on the invitation of an association not in touch with the party organization."

All the Democratic officials and party leaders will give Bryan the cold shoulder. The committee of the Maryland Democratic Association (free silverites) in charge of the arrangements for the meeting at Music Hall have been receiving "regrets" and "declinations" from the officials invited. Even Mayor Hayes will not take part in the reception. Gov. Smith has a previous engagement. Chairman Van Diver of the State Committee will not be there. It is likely to be the worst political "frost" Bryan has felt since he began his Eastern preliminary campaign tour.

Behind it all is the influence of Arthur Pue Gorman and Gov. Smith, who are determined to control the Maryland delegation in the interest of sound money and against Bryan. It is also becoming more and more apparent that Gorman is in the fight himself for the nomination.

BRYAN IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—W. J. Bryan arrived in Washington early this morning, and before 9 o'clock the hall near his room was thronged with friends who were anxious to see him, and who suggested important reasons for being at once admitted to his presence. Senator J. K. Jones, who was an early visitor, had the visitor all to himself for about an hour, after which the crowd was admitted. Col. Bryan has been getting fatter, a trifle balder, but is not a bit less buoyant and brilliant. To a reporter who made a request that he say something for publication Col. Bryan responded:

"What is there to talk about? So much that I say is not published, and so much that I do not say is published, and there is such misrepresentation of my motives and movements that I am at a loss to understand what is meant by it all. I know that most newspaper men try to be accurate in their work. I know that their work is hard and the greater part of it is done hastily and under high pressure. So do not think I mean to imply that the press deliberately misrepresents me or anybody else."

"Perhaps you would like to say something about your Minneapolis interview that has aroused so much discussion in the East," was suggested.

Col. Bryan caught up two sheets of paper and standing in front of the bureau he hastily wrote the following interview with himself:

"What about the Minneapolis interview? Have you changed your views on expansion?"

"Not in the least. That interview as sent out contained some things that I did not say. I am advocating to-day exactly what I did in the interview given out the day after I resigned from the army Dec. 13, 1898. I am opposed to imperialism. I am opposed to the permanent retention of the Philippines.

"I believe that this Government should at once declare its purpose to give independence to the Filipinos on the same terms that independence has been promised to the Cubans, and I believe further that we should protect the Filipinos from outside interference while they work out their destiny, just as we have protected the South American and Central American republics. I am not opposed to expansion. Each proposed annexation must be settled upon its own merits.

"I have tried to distinguish between the peaceful extension of the limits of a republic and the change of a republic into an empire."

No set programme has been arranged for Mr. Bryan's present stay in Washington. Senator Jones said this morning he did not know what the plans were. The presumption is that Mr. Bryan will hold extended and important conferences with the party leaders before leaving for Baltimore to-morrow afternoon. He will return to Washington one week from to-morrow to attend the Gridiron Club dinner.

Col. Bryan called at the Capitol this afternoon and held quite a reception in the Speaker's lobby. When his presence became known on the floor many of the Democrats crowded into the lobby and shook hands with him.

ANOTHER BRYAN CONFERENCE.

When William Jennings Bryan comes to this city next week he will have a conference with the State Committee of the Chicago Platform Democracy—the organization which grew out of the dollar dinner given at the Grand Central Palace last April. Since the dinner, the Chicago platform men claim they have effected an organization which embraces the entire State, and they have been in correspondence with Mr. Bryan for the purpose, if possible, of obtaining recognition.

The State Committee of the organization held a meeting at Teutonia Hall last night, and a letter from Mr. Bryan making an appointment for a conference was read amid great applause. In his letter Mr. Bryan signified his willingness to meet the members of the committee and appointed the Hotel Bartholdi and Tuesday afternoon as the place and time of the meeting.

According to one of the members of the committee, the latter body will impress upon Mr. Bryan the alleged fact that it has a large following throughout the State, and will demand that adequate representation be given to it in the National Convention. It will also, it is said, denounce Tammany Hall and lay claim to the title of the original and pure Democracy of New York State.

Officers for the current year were elected by the State Committee as follows: President—James R. Brown, New York; Vice President—A. J. Elias, Buffalo; Secretary—George R. Thompson, New York; Corresponding Secretary—H. C. S. Stimpson; Financial Secretary—Edward L. Rider, Sing Sing; Treasurer—Henry A. Goulden, Brooklyn; Directors—J. W. Ruttenber, Newburg; C. B. Matthews, Buffalo; Jerome O'Neil, New York; Edward L. Rider, and George R. Thompson. Willis J. Abbot was chosen as delegate to the Anti-Trust Conference to be held in Chicago on Feb. 12.

According to the present plans, Mr. Bryan will reach this city about 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon. He will dine with some friends on Monday night, and on Tuesday night he will be the guest of Charities Commissioner John W. Keller at a dinner to be given at the Democratic Club.

Travel, a Luxury.

The "Royal Limited," Finest Day Train in the World, leaves New York, South Ferry and Foot of Liberty St., Daily, 3 P. M.; arrives Washington 8 P. M. Splendid Dining and Café Car Service.—Adv.

TO DECIDE PAYN'S FATE

Governor May Force Platt's Hand at To-day's Conference.

MR. PAYN'S LAST DEFIANCE

Superintendent Declares No Power on Earth Can Stop His Contest and Expresses Confidence.

Politicians and the public generally await with interest the result of the conference to be held this morning between Senator Platt, Gov. Roosevelt, and Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee.

Gov. Roosevelt arrived from Albany yesterdays afternoon. Senator Platt reached the city from Washington last night. Mr. Odell has been in town some time.

It is conceded that one of the main questions to be considered is the nomination of a suitable candidate to succeed Louis F. Payn as Superintendent of the Insurance Department.

Gov. Roosevelt is determined that Payn shall go.

Superintendent Payn is just as determined that he will not permit another to supersede him.

Senator Platt has not committed himself, but many politicians believe he favors the retention of Payn.

Chairman Odell is as non-committal as the Senator, and the utmost that he will say is that the party organization is committed to no man for Mr. Payn's place.

None of the conferrees will admit or deny that Payn's fate is to be practically settled at the conference to-day, though the general belief is that a settlement will be reached.

While the Governor will not talk about the matter, the report is that he proposes to force Senator Platt's hand. He will, it is said, present a list of names to the Senator and say, in effect: "Pick any one you like from these names and I will send the name of the person you select to the Senate if you will give me assurance that every organization Senator will vote for confirmation."

When Gov. Roosevelt arrived at the Grand Central Station yesterday afternoon his invariable answer to questions on the subject by reporters was, "Really, I can't say a word about it."

The Governor evaded the reporters as quickly as possible, and jumping into a cab was driven to the residence of his sister, at 422 Madison Avenue. Last evening he dined with Col. Franklin Bartlett.

Myer Nussbaum, ex-Senator from the Albany district, who has been named as a possible successor to Mr. Payn, is in the city.

Of course I don't know whose name Gov. Roosevelt will send to the Senate to succeed Mr. Payn," he said to a TIMES reporter. "There are so many contingencies. But, really, I believe Payn is beaten, and that any nomination sent in by the Governor will be confirmed."

Mr. Payn said last night at the Grand Union Hotel:

"There never was a time when the Governor could command more than ten votes to confirm the nomination of Charles T. Saxton; there never was a time when he could command more than nineteen votes to confirm any other man in the State he might desire to name for the office of Superintendent of Insurance Department other than myself."

Mr. Payn made that assertion to a reporter for THE TIMES. He looked worried, but in conversation he professed the utmost confidence in his ability to defeat Gov. Roosevelt. Continuing he said:

"There is practically no change in the situation, and I am confident of success. I will fight this thing through to the end, if I get only one vote in the Senate. I do not believe the Governor can force me out. I shall stand on my record and fight, and no power on earth can prevent me from making a contest."

Mr. Payn saw Chairman Odell yesterday at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, but neither would discuss with outsiders the subject of their conversation.

There were many prominent politicians about the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night. Among them were Senators Parsons, Goodsell, and Eisberg, ex-Superintendent of Public Works George W. Aldridge, Speaker S. Fred Nixon, ex-Mayor George E. Green of Binghamton, and others. Mr. Parsons is Chairman of the Senate Committee on Insurance, and Mr. Aldridge is regarded as a warm friend of Mr. Payn.

Neither Senator Parsons nor Mr. Aldridge would discuss the Payn matter.

Senator Platt, after a brief stay in his rooms, joined his son, Frank H. Platt, and Chairman Odell. They left the hotel, and, entering a cab, went to Frank H. Platt's home, where a conference was held. On their return they entered the Twenty-third Street door of the hotel, and, going to Senator Platt's rooms, were closeted there until nearly midnight. Mr. Aldridge and Mr. Nixon were present at this conference a portion of the time.

A TIMES reporter saw Chairman Odell again at midnight.

"Did Senator Platt see Mr. Payn to-night?" the Chairman was asked.

"He did not."

"Is it true that Mr. Payn has been urged to withdraw by the Senator?"

"Not that I am aware of, and, knowing Mr. Payn as I do, I should consider his withdrawal very improbable."

"Report says that you will recommend the appointment of Robert M. Hunter of Poughkeepsie, Mr. Payn's deputy, for Mr. Payn's place."

"That is news to me. I certainly shall make no such recommendation."

Senator Coggeshall of Oneida came to town yesterday and politicians discussed the report that Mr. Coggeshall intended to stand by Gov. Roosevelt in his fight with Mr. Payn. But one of them added, "Mr. Coggeshall has been known to change his mind." Mr. Coggeshall is reported to have said at Albany yesterday:

"I will vote to confirm any competent Republican whose name is sent into the Senate to fill the vacancy that will exist in the office of Superintendent of Insurance. It is the prerogative of the Governor to name certain State officials, and among them is the Superintendent of Insurance.

"Political appointments by the Governor which require confirmation have in the past been concurred in by Senators belonging to the same political party as the Executive, and I do not know of any reason that can be advanced why this precedent should be disturbed."

MR. PLATT SEES THE PRESIDENT.

Later He Intimates that He Is Still for Mr. Woodruff.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Among the President's callers to-day was Senator Platt. They did not talk politics, according to the Senator. Mr. Platt appears to think little of the talk about a Western man for Vice President. As to his own attitude, he says that he is for the man who can get a united delegation from New York. That is taken to mean that he is still in favor of Lieut. Gov. Woodruff.

When asked about the daily outcropping of new Western booms, he merely said, "They have got to have something to talk about."

Mr. Croker Cables He Is Well.

Corporation Counsel Whalen yesterday received a cablegram dated Wantage, England, from Richard Croker, in which Mr. Croker stated that he was "very well."

$100,000 Fire in Bridgeport.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 19.—Fire at the Barnum & Bailey Winter quarters tonight destroyed one of the large car barns, containing eleven cars, and also the quarters of the Italian laborers on the railroad improvements near by, causing a loss all told of $100,000. Among the cars destroyed were two sleepers, the Buffalo Bill Show buffet car, and Mr. Bailey's private car, formerly used by P. T. Barnum.

Notice to the Public.

Now open. Hotel Royal Palm, Miami, Florida, and all other East Coast hotels. Golf. Address Travelers' Information Co., 3 Park Pl., N. Y.—Adv.

REV. MR. CRAFTS IN ERROR.

Man Who Said the President Drank Wine Did Not Know Bottles Contained Only Mineral Water.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Some time ago the Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, a professional temperance "reformer" who frequents the Capitol, made a charge in a speech delivered in Boston that during the last hours of the Fifty-fifth Congress the President and Cabinet, while in the President's room at the Capitol, were served with quantities of champagne while the President was waiting to sign bills passed shortly before adjournment. This report, only recently reached A. D. Gaston, who for several years has been in charge of the President's room, and who stood watch at the door during the entire time the President occupied it on March 4.

Mr. Gaston recently met Mr. Crafts in the Senate lobby, and, taking him to task for his reckless statement, asked him on what he had based it.

"I saw bottles carried to that room on that day," replied Mr. Crafts.

"Perhaps you did," replied the doorkeeper, "but if your eyes were good you must have plainly seen the label and known that the bottles contained mineral water. I directed an attendant to bring some mineral water to the room for the President and his Cabinet."

He told Mr. Crafts that he had slandered the President, and should be branded as a libeler.

SHEPARD DEFENDS HIMSELF.

Soldiers' Home Commandant Denies All Charges and Says Testimony Against Him Is False.

Special to The New York Times.

BATH, Jan. 19.—Col. Charles O. Shepard, Commandant of the Soldiers' Home, who is on trial before a committee of the State Board of Charities, was recalled this morning at the opening of the session, and was on the stand until 5 o'clock this afternoon, at which time the committee adjourned the investigation until Tuesday. Col. Shepard's testimony was in the nature of a general denial of the charges against him. His direct examination was not completed to-day, and the Colonel will be recalled and cross-examined by Deputy Attorney General Coyne when the committee returns here.

Most of the time to-day was spent by the committee questioning the Colonel in reference to his alleged intemperate habits. He admitted that he took a drink occasionally, but declared he never used liquors to excess. Asked concerning the statement of other witnesses that he had been intoxicated while on duty, he most emphatically denied the charge and said:

"I have never been intoxicated nor under the influence of liquor since I have been Commandant of the Soldiers' Home."

In reference to the Hammondsport incident, it being testified by the station agent that he ejected the Colonel from the baggageroom last Summer, and that he was intoxicated, he said the statement was utterly false, and said: "I was not ejected; Mrs. Shepard did not interfere, as was stated. I consider the statement so absurd that it is hardly worth while contradicting."

Col. Shepard also denied that he ordered wine brought to the home chapel when the Legislature committee was there. He also declared that he had never directed any one to charge his private bills to the State. In regard to his thirty-dollar allowance per month for groceries outside the home, and for which, it was stated, he secured other goods, he said he supposed the money was a perquisite of his office, and he was at liberty to buy whatever he wished with it. He presented a number of badges of honor, medals, certificates of character, &c., that had been given him while he was in the Diplomatic Corps and Controller's office as tokens of the esteem and high regard of his former employers.

FINDS NO REMEDY FOR TRUSTS.

Industrial Commission Puzzled by the Testimony Offered.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Industrial Commission, composed of members of Congress and men who have been members, is beginning to justify the prediction made some time ago that its chief use would be to demonstrate that such a commission could only decide that some things cannot safely be done. It is understood that the commission finds it difficult to agree upon a recommendation concerning trusts.

The report prepared by Prof. Jenks does not quite suit. He recommended that pooling be allowed among railroads, but the commission is not ready for that recommendation. Chairman Phillips wants a strong report against the Standard Oil Company, but the commission is not prepared for that.

If the recommendation is obtained that the powers of the Inter-State Railroad Commissioners be extended, there will be about the extent of the suggestion of the commission to check the trusts.

OSMAN DIGNA A PRISONER.

Capt. Burgess Captures the Late Khalifa's Principal General.

CAIRO, Jan. 19.—News was received here to-night that Osman Digna, principal General of the late Khalifa Abdullah, has been captured.

It had been known that he was in the neighborhood of Toker six days ago, and several expeditions were organized from Suakim, under Capt. Burgess, with the result that Osman Digna was taken unhurt in the hills yesterday. He will arrive at Suakim to-morrow.

NO PURCHASE FROM DENMARK.

State Department Says Talk of Sale of the Islands Is Premature.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Department of State will not take up, at present, the suggestion that negotiations be resumed with Denmark for the acquisition of the Danish West Indies. Talk about negotiations is said to be premature, warranted only by the fact that certain business men in New York regard it as desirable that Denmark be again approached on the subject.

No opportunity will be afforded to anybody who aspires to carry on negotiations for the purpose of enjoying a commission from the sale. It is felt to be quite safe to leave the islands in Denmark's hands, as no foreign power would undertake to secure them without the approval of the United States. It is known that the islands are a burden to Denmark, but it is also felt that Congress would not just yet sanction a purchase of them.

BIG FIND IN OLD MINE.

Rich and Large Ore Body Uncovered in a Montana Property.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 19.—For many years the East Pacific Mine, situated fifteen miles east of here, was one of the largest gold producers in this district, but more recently, having failed to make a favorable showing, was generally regarded as about having exhausted its resources. It was not abandoned, however, and reports just received from there state that while doing development work in a tunnel over 2,000 feet from the surface a large body of sulphide ore was encountered. Assay returns on the sulphide are most gratifying, running as high as $100 in gold, silver, and copper, principally gold.

It is estimated that the ore body is fully 1,500 feet long by 200 feet wide, thus making it one of the richest uncovered in this section for many years.

A Beautiful Souvenir Mug Will Be presented to our bottled beer customers on record February 1st. THE OTTO HUBER BREWERY.—Adv.

SHORT LINE TO CHICAGO, CINCINNATI, AND ST. LOUIS. P

Jan. 15 and returned northward across the river.

WHITE HEARS BULLER'S GUNS.

LADYSMITH, Jan. 17, via Spearman's Camp, Jan. 18.—Everything is quiet. The position is unchanged, and there is very little bombarding.

The welcome sound of the guns of the relief columns was heard yesterday from Colenso and Springfield.

The heat is intense, but there is no increase of sickness.

BOERS DESCRIBE BULLER'S MOVE.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Boer accounts of the passage of the Tugela River are given in the following two dispatches from Commandant Viljoen's camp, on the Upper Tugela, via Lorenzo Marques, Jan. 18:

"Jan. 16. Buller's second move was a reconnoissance in force with an armored train and a large body, supported by cannon, toward Colenso last night. A heavy bombardment ensued, and thereupon the British returned, having wounded one of our men.

"No reply was made. This move was a feint to cover extensive movements up the river. Kaffirs on this side of the Tugela have been warned by the British to leave their kraals, as the fight will commence shortly."

The second dispatch runs thus:

"Jan. 17. The night was unbroken, save for slight rifle encounters between outposts, which led to nothing. At daybreak the enemy was located as before. He had not brought a single gun across the river. But from the ridges of Swartz Kop a battery and a half of siege guns opened on our position at 5 A. M.

"The bombardment was probably the most frightful ever witnessed on land. Frequently five heavy naval guns fired simultaneously at one schanze (encampment)."

SERVICES FOR THE VOLUNTEERS.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A special service was held in St. Paul's Cathedral this evening at which 800 City of London Volunteers—the second contingent to attend such a service—were present. Lord Mayor Newton and the Sheriffs of London, with the Duke of Cornaught, were also in attendance.

Despite a drizzling rain the line of march from the barracks was crowded, and the enthusiastic people filled the cathedral and stood cheering outside.

After a service of song Dr. Mandell Creighton, Lord Bishop of London, addressed the troops and congratulated them upon rising above their ordinary selves to do their duty to country and to God, with whom rested the issues of every endeavor.

The volunteers then repaired to Lincoln's and Gray's Inns, where they were banqueted. To-morrow they take their departure.

NOTED CORRESPONDENT IS DEAD.

LADYSMITH, Jan. 16—(Via Spearman's Camp.)—George Warrington Steevens, special correspondent of The London Daily Mail, died yesterday of enteric fever and was buried at midnight.

Mr. Steevens, who was one of the most brilliant of the modern school of English journalists, was born Dec. 10, 1869. He was educated at the City of London School and Balliol College, Oxford. He joined the editorial staff of The Pall Mall Gazette in 1893, and went with The Daily Mail in 1897.

In addition to many remarkable contributions to both papers, he published "Naval Policy," "Monologues of the Dead," "The Land of the Dollar," "With the Conquering Turk," "Egypt in 1898," "With Kitchener to Khartoum," "In India," and "The Tragedy of Dreyfus."

METHUEN IN ROBUST HEALTH.

MODDER RIVER, Cape Colony, Jan. 18.—Gen. Methuen, who is in robust health, personally directed another strong reconnoisance yesterday.

The Highlanders succeeded in driving the Boers from the Brush River bank by long-range volleys. The Boer fire was ineffective.

BOERS SUFFER SEVERE LOSSES.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The War Office has made public dispatches from Field Marshal Lord Roberts, dated to-day, recording the scouting movements in Cape Colony, including the ambushing of the Australians, when two of the latter were killed and fourteen were reported missing. He adds:

"A Boer deserter states that the enemy suffered severely in attacking French's advanced post Jan. 15. Seventy Boers are still unaccounted for."

MAKING BULLET-PROOF SHIELDS.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Speaking yesterday at a Conservative meeting in Bradford, Mr. Williamson, a Municipal Councilor, said that it was within his personal knowledge that thousands of bullet-proof shields, weighing seven pounds each, were being manufactured in Sheffield for the British soldiers.

These are designed to protect the vital parts at a range of 400 yards.

To Mobilize Another Division.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Formal orders have been issued to mobilize the Eighth Division of the British Army.

Canadians Seeking to Enlist.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 18.—A number of Canadians, including two experienced scouts, have arrived here and have offered their services for scouting purposes. They have paid their own expenses, and say that there are hundreds of others anxious to follow them.

Consul Hay in South Africa.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 19.—Adelbert Hay, the new United States Consul at Pretoria, arrived yesterday, and will start for his post Saturday.

FENIAN PLOT IS UNEARTHED?

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Under the caption "Revival of Fenian Activity," The Times this morning gives extracts from a secret circular and other details of conferences held last September in the United States between the Croninites and the Anti-Croninites. It gives also a long secret circular from the Croninite headquarters, dated Nov. 20 of last year, to the officers and members of the organization urging that "the time is opportune to take advantage of England's difficulties in the Transvaal, the first object being to smash the Anglo-American understanding, leaving England without a friend in the world."

The circular then invites "volunteers for active service wherever needed." The Times regards this as proof of the existence of a Fenian plot.

PLANS FOR BIG BOER MEETING.

Kilian Van Rensselaer, Treasurer of the New York Committee to Aid the United Republics of South Africa, reported, at the third meeting of that body at the Morton House last night, that, although the first appeal for funds had only been issued Thursday night, more than enough money had already been received to pay all the expenses of the big mass meeting in aid of the Boer cause which will be held at the Grand Central Palace Jan. 29.

It was reported that Montagu White, who was Consul General of the Boer Republic at London, and Dr. Muller, Consul General of the Orange Free State at The Hague, have promised to address the meeting, and efforts are to be made to secure William J. Bryan and Senator Foraker as speakers.

Assemblyman Harburger wrote accepting a Vice Presidency and announcing that it is his intention to introduce a resolution into the Legislature next week pledging the sympathy of the Empire State to the Boer cause.

LIBRARY FOR COVINGTON.

Enough Money Contributed by Mr. Carnegie and Poolroom Fines.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 19.—Covington, after many years, is now assured of a public library, through the generosity of Andrew Carnegie. The news was contained in a telegram received at Covington to-day from ex-Mayor Rhinock, who is at Hot Springs, Va. He stated that Mr. Carnegie had decided to give $40,000 for that purpose.

Covington has collected a fund from poolroom proprietors which now aggregates over $35,000. The poolrooms have paid a daily fine of $12, and until recently there were four rooms in operation, paying $48 daily. There are now three rooms that pay $36 daily, and the amount of the sum total is constantly growing larger.

Under the Goebel library law Covington has a fund of $25,000 to be used for library purposes. This money is now in hand. The city has never had a free library.

GERMAN VIEW OF SEIZURES

Reichstag Discusses the Action of Great Britain.

NOTE OF WARNING IS SOUNDED

Reparation Already Offered, but Further Detention of Vessels Will Be Considered Unfriendly.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—In the Reichstag to-day the debate on Herr Moeller's joint interpellation of the Government regarding the seizure of German steamers by British warships was opened. Herr Moeller said vigorous expression must be given to the indignation felt at the fact that the subsidized line to which the seized vessels belonged had observed the strictest neutrality, and expressed the opinion that the matter should furnish the opportunity of defining the rights of mail steamers. The unloading of the Bundesrath, he added, could have been effected with a few days' delay, and showed want of consideration for international courtesy, and it should be made incumbent upon the British officials to announce whether and to what extent their views in regard to those rights had been changed.

COUNT VON BULOW REPLIES.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Count von Bülow, replied. He declared that Herr Moeller, in his introductory remarks, had justly pointed out the feeling of annoyance which the seizure of German steamers by British war vessels had aroused throughout Germany, and continued:

"Out of regard for the excited state of public opinion, if for no other reason, I readily consented to reply to the interpellation. But you will understand if, in view of the significance and very serious nature of the affair, as well as out of consideration for the seriousness of the whole political situation, I confine myself to a practical statement of facts. The situation was so correctly set forth in all its bearings by the interpellator that I have scarcely to add anything to his exposition of the case.

ARREST OF STEAMERS.

Vount von Bülow proceeded:

"In the present position of practical international law, no protest can be sustained against the arrest of the three German steamers, either on the high seas or at Aden, nor against the examination of their papers. On the other hand, the conveying of the Bundesrath and Herzog to Durban without adequately founded suspicion and the discharge of the cargoes of the Bundesrath and General do not appear to have been justified by international law.

"We endeavored at the beginning to induce the British Government to adopt in reference to neutral ships bound for Delagoa Bay that theory of international law which promised the greatest security for the trade of neutrals during the war. Great Britain objected to this theory, which holds that goods on a neutral vessel consigned from a neutral port to a neutral port are never contraband. We left the matter open for future discussion, because it was important to us practically to settle the existing points of difference, and because the theory is not yet universally recognized. The standpoint which we have adopted in regard to the confiscation of our ships is based on this conception of the law, which, we assume, coincides with the general interpretation of the civilized world, which may be stated to be as follows:

"We recognize the rights which international law actually concedes to belligerents with respect to neutral ships, neutral trade, and neutral intercourse. We do not misapprehend the duties which a state of war imposes on neutral ship owners and merchants. But we ask that belligerents shall not extend their powers beyond the limits of absolute necessity, and that they shall respect the inalienable rights and legitimate trade of neutrals, and, above all, that they shall exercise the right of search and the ultimate capture of neutral vessels and goods in such a way as to meet the necessity for the maintenance of neutral trade and the normal relations between friendly, civilized people.

PROTEST WAS FILED.

"Taking up this standpoint, we forthwith lodged a strong protest in London against the proceedings of the British naval officers. We demanded:

"Firstly—The immediate release of the Bundesrath, Herzog, and General. The latter two were immediately released on our request, and the Bundesrath was released yesterday.

"Secondly—Compensation for the unjustified detention and losses therefrom.

"The duty of compensation has been admitted in principle, and Great Britain has declared her readiness to give all legitimate satisfaction.

"Thirdly—We laid stress on the necessity of instructing the British naval officers not to molest German vessels outside of the vicinity of the seat of war, especially from Aden northward, and Great Britain has given instructions through which the stoppage of vessels and the search of vessels will not be exercised at Aden or a similar distance from the seat of war.

"Fourthly—We pointed out the high desirability of not stopping German mail steamers, and Great Britain issued instructions that such vessels shall not be stopped or searched on mere suspicion. These instructions remain in force until other arrangements are reached.

"Fifthly—We have proposed that all contentions and questions not otherwise settled shall be submitted to an arbitration tribunal to be promptly summoned. Great Britain expressed the hope that arbitrators would not be required, but declared her willingness for arbitration in order to assess the claims for damages.

"Finally, the British Government has expressed its regret for the incidents which have occurred."

This last statement caused loud cheering in the House.

WARNING TO GREAT BRITAIN.

The Foreign Minister then said:

"We therefore permit ourselves to expect that such regrettable incidents will not be repeated. We hope the British naval officers will not again act in an unfriendly manner toward our ships. The straightforwardness and loyalty of the German shipowners, which have again been proved, should alone have prevented this, and the consideration which one friendly State owes to another should, more particularly, have prevented it, because we have sincerely endeavored to maintain friendly relations between Great Britain and Germany. Our desire is that incidents should not occur which are calculated in a high degree to make the maintenance of such relations difficult, that being only possible on the basis of complete parity and mutual consideration. The German Empire has so often shown itself so far removed from aggressiveness that it is entitled to the most considerate treatment from all other States. We are grateful for the fact that the interpellation is supported by a large majority of the Reichstag, as it affords fresh proof that, where the protection of national rights is concerned, concord which is a sure pillar of our foreign policy exists between the House and the Federal Government."

Count von Bülow, in conclusion, said Germany would maintain friendly relations with Great Britain, but the Government hoped that such incidents would not recur, making it impossible for the good relations to continue.

BRITISH VIEW OF THE SPEECH.

London Press Seeks to Minimise the Yielding Spirit Displayed by the Government.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Several of the London morning papers omit editorial comment upon Count von Buelow's speech in the Reichstag yesterday in reply to Herr Moeller's interpellation. Others endeavor to minimize the yielding spirit displayed by the British Government by arguing that Count von Buelow was obliged to play to the gallery and to do his utmost for the naval plans of Emperor William.

The Standard particularly takes this view, and says:

"Superficially read the speech creates an impression that the British Cabinet considers that the British naval authorities acted without justification. Closer examination, however, dispels that idea; and it must be understood, though we have expressed regret at the incident, that we do not intend to abandon our clear right of detention and search. There is nothing in the speech which need disturb us, notwithstanding the Count's oracular solemnity."

The Daily News says:

"Count von Buelow has no reason to complain of the settlement, for Lord Salisbury has apologized and promised that nothing of the kind shall occur again. The most pacific of Ministers could hardly go further. One cannot help feeling glad that the two great Teutonic States have arrived at a friendly understanding."

The Daily Chronicle says:

"Count von Buelow's speech may fairly be described as a case of much cry and little wool. The right of search remains intact. The German East African Company will have handsome compensation. It is entitled to that, but nothing more. Great Britain has simply observed international law to the letter."

The Times says:

"Count von Buelow's speech was much ado about nothing. His language can hardly fail to produce in England a feeling of mingled surprise and regret. One might have expected that the ample assurances which the British Government have given testifying to so earnest a desire for the maintenance of friendly relations would have elicited some less stinted appreciation than was bestowed by Count von Buelow, if, indeed, the term appreciation can be applied to the almost animatory tone in which he closed his speech."

The editorial, going on to infer that Count von Buelow was "animated by a desire to serve the purposes of internal policy," says:

"At the same time, we feel bound to observe that it may not be wise to push too far the practice of exploiting international questions of a delicate character even for the furtherance of a big navy bill."

The editorial concludes as follows:

"Great Britain is willing to discuss proposals or to make generous amends where she may have accidentally infringed upon international rights; but, if negotiations on delicate and complicated questions are to be carried to a successful issue, Germany must bear in mind the admirable doctrine expounded by Count von Buelow that friendly relations are only possible on the basis of complete equality of treatment and reciprocal considerations."

ANOTHER GERMAN SHIP SEIZED.

LORENZO MARQUES, Jan. 18.—The German bark Marie, from Australia with a cargo of flour for the Transvaal Government, has been taken as a prize by the British third-class cruiser Pelorus, near the Island of Inyak, Delagoa Bay, and has been sent to Durban with a prize crew on board.

HAMBURG, Jan. 19.—A dispatch received here from Durban, Natal, says the Bundesrath's cargo has been redelivered to her agents and will be reloaded. The steamer expects to sail for Delagoa Bay Monday.

Notified of Release of Flour.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The small doubt that remained as to the state of the cargo of the ship Maria, which was seized by British warships off Delagoa Bay, was dissipated to-day by the receipt of word from Mr. Choate that the agents of the owners of the goods had been informed from Lorenzo Marques that the goods had been landed there and were in their hands. Nothing further has been heard of the status of the cargo of the other two ships, Beatrice and Mashona.

SAYS COFFEY AIDED COLER.

Isaac M. Kapper, counsel for State Senator Michael J. Coffey, enlivened last night's session of the special committee of the Kings County Democratic Committee, which is hearing the charges of disloyalty against the Senator, by rehearsing alleged inside political history. In the course of his alleged revelations, he asserted that the nomination of Mr. Coler as Controller had been secured by Senator Coffey, from Tammany Hall, after it had been declared that Brooklyn should supply neither the candidate for Mayor nor Controller, and at a time when Mr. McLaughlin was in despair over the situation. Mr. Kapper also asserted that in the last Gubernatoral campaign Senator Coffey had contributed one-fifth of the $25,000 allotted to the Brooklyn Democratic organization as its share of the State Democratic Campaign fund.

"Assuming these facts to be true," said Mr. Kapper, "do you regard those actions of Senator Coffey as political conduct having for its object the tearing down of the Brooklyn Democracy? My statements are true, and Mr. McLaughlin will not deny them. Senator Coffey did not want this to come out, but I insisted on it."

P. J. De Contilion, James Murtha, Charles Gail, John Nicholls, and M. J. McDonough were the witnesses examined before the committee at last night's session. De Contilion said that he and Senator Coffey were once "like Damon and Pythias." The witness testified that Senator Coffey's attitude toward the Democratic ticket had dampened the ardor of many of the voters in the Ninth Assembly District.

Murtha, who was a speaker in the campaign, said that he was not allowed to talk in support of Mr. Gray at a meeting in the Ninth District.

Nicholls and McDonough, who were watchers at the polls in the district on Election Day, testified to alleged opposition shown by Senator Coffey and his friends to Mr. Gray's candidacy.

The committee will meet again next Friday evening.

CALLS QUIGG A DISORGANIZER.

The Republicans of the Twenty-first Assembly District, of which Abraham Gruber is leader, had a "smoker" last night at Colonial Hall, at One Hundred and First Street and Columbus Avenue. Capt. George W. Homans presided. Mr. Gruber made a speech, in which he attacked Lemuel E. Quigg. He said among other things:

"This man Quigg is a disorganizer, not an organizer. He drove Adler out of the field and turned the Eighth District over to the Democrats. He forced the nomination of Folks in the Twenty-ninth, and lost the district to Tammany. He also lost his own district, the Nineteenth, and was beaten in the Thirty-first, where he interfered.

"This district, the Twenty-first, where he could not interfere, polled 8,500 Republican votes and elected a Member of Assembly and one of the few Republican Aldermen.

"Unless they call off their dogs before the March primaries there will be the greatest Republican revolution New York has ever seen. All the Republican district leaders feel very much as I do, but some of them have been placed by Platt and do not proclaim their views from the housetops. But at the right time most of them will stand with me."

The Kentucky Contest.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 19.—The Democratic attorneys to-day made a determined fight against the admission of the counter claim of the Republicans in the Gubernatorial contest, saying that it covered so much ground and so many different counties that it would be impossible for them to prepare evidence to controvert it inside of three months. After it had been admitted, they declared they would make no attempt to offset its allegations, because of the physical impossibility of bringing to Frankfort the great number of witnesses necessary for the operation.

Ex-Gov. Bradley, in asking the board to grant him as much time as possible, announced that the Republicans had subpoenaed 2,700 witnesses.

Florida Republican Convention.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 19.—The Republican State Convention to-day chose as delegates to the National Convention at Philadelphia John G. Long and Henry Chubb, white; Joseph Lee and Mark White, colored. President McKinley's Administration received hearty indorsement, but the delegates were not instructed for any candidate.

The leaders in the convention agreed that the Vice Presidential candidate would come from New York, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff being the favorite, though Secretary Bliss had many supporters.

CHICAGO GRAND TRUNK SUIT.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 19.—Simon Borg & Co., New York bankers, representing holders of first mortgage bonds of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway, have filed a petition in the United States District Court, asking leave to intervene and be made a party to the proceedings recently begun to foreclose the first mortgage upon the road with a view to reorganization.

The petitioners allege that the road has been manipulated by the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada for the purpose of carrying out a plan of financiering inimical to the interests of the first mortgage bondholders. They assert that the road's property is amply sufficient to realize enough to pay off the first mortgage indebtedness, and they allege that the proposed plan of reorganization is proposed for the purpose of inducing them to part with a portion of their security and forcing them to divide the same with the second mortgage bondholders for the benefit of the Canadian Grand Trunk and the second mortgage bondholders.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

HUDSON, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Fire this afternoon damaged the lower mill of the Aiken Knitting Company, at Philmont, to the extent of about $10,000. Three looms were destroyed, but the remainder of the building was saved.

DISCUSS CHARTER REVISION

Members of the City Club Express Different Opinions.

SIMON STERNE SEES A REMEDY

For Adequate Minority Representation —Views of Mr. Peckham, Judge Dillon, and Mr. Shepard.

The City Club discussed the subject of charter revision at its clubhouse last night after a dinner. There were some distinguished speakers, and a good many opinions expressed in positive language, but those who took part in the debate had many different views.

President Wheeler H. Peckham presided and started the discussion. "If the men we elected to office did their duty," said he, "we wouldn't be so much in need of charter revision." Then he cited an instance "right on the steps of the Governor's chair," where, he said, "a new choice has to be made for one of the most important offices of the State." Mr. Peckham said if he were revising the charter he would not have any legislative body at all, or, if he did, it would be composed of the heads of departments, and every member of it would be elected by the people as a whole.

Simon Sterne, the next speaker, said: "We have been in this city a sick man rolling upon his bed for the last forty years, supposing that some change of position might alleviate his sufferings. [Laughter.] Every change of position has made us wish we hadn't changed our position."

Mr. Sterne went on to say that all the conservative elements of the city had opposed the charter, had prophesied that it would do no good, and the result of the work had been as they had anticipated. "The creation of Greater New York was caused by false pride," said he. "We wanted to be bigger than Chicago, forgetting that Chicago's name was a synonym for corruption and that the corruption was because of its bigness."

Mr. Sterne said all the devices which had been tried as a means of overthrowing boss rule—the Australian ballot, civil service reform, and protecting voters in primaries—had failed. The only remedy he thought feasible was that of an adequate system of minority representation. "The ordinary citizen is no match for the politician," said he, "because he is bound by the law of differentiation of employment. The politician is a politician all the year round. We who sit here are dilettante politicians—necessarily such because our minds and our hearts are in the work we have to do in the world. The politician beats us precisely as the trained soldier beats the militiaman. You must organize your minority voters so as to beat the politician in his own field without attempting the imposing task of organizing majorities.

"Now, what is minority representation? It is to divide a community into intellectual sections instead of geographical divisions. If a municipal legislative assembly is to be elected of one hundred members, give to every one-hundredth part of the community the opportunity of electing one member and not, as now, dividing the community into one hundred districts and give to the majority in each district the election of each member, leaving minorities in each district totally unrepresented.

"Any system of minority representation should of course be wide enough and drastic enough to permit freedom within party lines. By that I mean that districts must be made large enough, not less than five to be elected from a single district, and probably not more than nine, so as to give within the minority party the chance to break away from the nominations of the regular political organizations, and so as to permit citizens dissatisfied with the nominations of the majority of their own organization to act independently therefrom and make their own nominations with a chance of election.

"If the municipal body is composed of 100 men, and every one hundredth part of the community the power is given to elect their representative, no matter in what district the voters lived, you dissolve the powers of the bosses—Mr. Croker and Mr. Platt—on the instant that that permission is given. We have recently seen what one resolute man—Mr. Coler—could do to prevent corruption, and were it true, as the Mazet committee has said in its report, (which I believe to be untrue,) that the majority of the citizens of New York City are in favor of the dominant power, base as it is, they and their representatives could be held in check by a powerful minority of forceful and intellectual men in the municipal body."

Mr. Sterne presented some figures to show that had this plan prevailed in the election of 1886 there would have been an actual anti-Tammany majority in the Municipal Assembly.

Frank Moss, the next speaker, said that the fact that the charter fell for its first administration into "the rapacious organization," Tammany Hall, was a blessing in disguise, as it showed what purposes of greed it could be made to serve. He said the Commissioners in the Government were selected for the Mayor by a leader who avowed that he was in politics to make his living, and they followed that principle.

"What difference if they are turned out after four years?" said he. "No man wants to work forever. A man can amass a fortune in a few years. Scared as these men are morally, they would be fools not to do it."

Mr. Moss expressed the opinion that the members of the Municipal Assembly who some time ago disobeyed the courts were making a fight for a principle, for what they believed to be the rights of their constituents to know what they were appropriating city money for, and that their action should have the approval of the City Club.

Ex-Judge Dillon, who was on the Charter Commission, was then introduced, and warmly defended the work of the Commissioners. Of the boroughs he said: "They will never be disunited, never, and they ought not to be disunited. It is not a problem henceforth to be agitated whether we should have consolidation. We have it, and it has come to stay!"

Judge Dillon defended the Municipal Assembly. "If we had presented a scheme of government for this city without a representative assembly we should have been the laughing stock of the whole American world," said he. He said that Mr. De Witt had presented to the commission a scheme to give the boroughs autonomous government, each with its own representative body, and all forming a federation, but it had been voted down. He approved of engaging the powers of Borough Presidents. Of the charter he said:

"I am amazed at the perfection of the machine in its actual workings. No serious case of dispute has arisen as to any important feature of the charter." Judge Dillon expressed himself as in favor of a two years' term for the Mayor. The idea of making all the Commissioners removable at pleasure by the Mayor he did not approve.

Edward M. Shepard criticised the charter severely for providing for so many minute details which could not be altered save by going to Albany. He cited a certain market to let a single fish monger into which it would be necessary to appeal to the Legislature. "The charter," said he, "is a series of devices to deprive the people of the city of the control of the Government." He said the Municipal Assembly had no real power. "The Mayor and Controller," said he, "say it is a contemptible body. That is the universal practical judgment."

Ex-Justice Daly and the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer were among those present. President Bowley of Queens sent a letter assailing the charter for its insufficient treatment of borough representation.

AT THE HOTELS.

BUCKINGHAM—Ex-Congressman Benjamin L. Fairchild, Pelham, N. Y.

FIFTH AVENUE—Senator William B. Bate of Tennessee; Senator Thomas C. Platt, Washington, and Judge Alfred Hand, Scranton.

HOFFMAN—Col. A. M. Dickinson, Waterbury, Conn.

HOLLAND—Gov. William M. Crane of Massachusetts.

MURRAY HILL—A. M. Law, Jr., London.

NETHERLAND—J. C. Blagden, Mexico, and Mayor Conrad Diehl of Buffalo.

SAVOY—John B. Chapin, Philadelphia.

WALDORF-ASTORIA—Ex-Senator Watson C. Squire, Seattle, Washington, and C. W. Kirk, Chicago.

YESTERDAY'S FIRES.

(From 12 o'clock Thursday night until 12 o'clock Friday night.)

8:55 A. M.—160 Rivington Street; A. Weinstein; damage, $100.

7:30 A. M.—125 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Street; owner unknown; no damage.

9 A. M.—3,414 Third Avenue; John Thompson; damage, $100.

11:40 A. M.—200 West One Hundred and Eleventh Street; Alice Hewitt; damage, $600.

2:10 P. M.—615 Madison Avenue; owner unknown; damage, $20.

4:40 P. M.—170 East One Hundred and Eighth Street; Mrs. L. Lowenthal; damage, $400.

5:25 P. M.—157 East Houston Street; Samuel Weiser; damage, $200.

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

The Washington Club had an excellent chance to win the Harlem League championship last night by winning two games. The team, however, after winning the first game easily, was beaten by the Phoenix team. The Washingtons are now tied for first place with the Knickerbockers, each having won fifteen games and lost five. The Belvideres have still four more games to bowl, and as these games are with some of the weaker teams, it is not unlikely that the Belvideres will tie the Washingtons and Knickerbookers for first place. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Washington—Zenn, 188; Boehm, 181; A. Shiman, 212; Linden, 192; D. Shiman, 172. Total, 945.

Lotus—Warmuth, 177; Heath, 206; Modersohn, 188; Rehm, 151; W. Gerdes, 188. Total, 904.

SECOND GAME.

Phoenix—Pearse, 201; McLean, 186; Bolroth, 194; Gross, 184; Young, 181. Total, 946.

Lotus—Warmuth, 186; Heath, 169; Modersohn, 208; Rehm, 150; W. Gerdes, 153. Total, 816.

THIRD GAME.

Phoenix—Pearse, 201; McLean, 191; Bolrath, 163; Gross, 202; Young, 167. Total, 924.

Washington—Zenn, 176; Boehm, 157; A. Shiman, 186; Linden, 157; D. Shiman, 214. Total, 890.

The Corinthian, Village, and Columbia teams bowled a postponed series in the Columbia League last night. The Corinthians had out their best team and won two games. They are now on even terms for first place with the Orientals, with a record of seventeen victories and one defeat. Each team has two more games to play. Schaeffer and Walter of the Corinthian team bowled in splendid form. Schaeffer averaged 231 for the two games. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Corinthian—S. Walter, 222; Baker, 173; Mulford, 171; Holden, 175; Schaeffer, 226. Total, 967.

Village—Feeley, 172; Mahoney, 160; R. Coleman, 158; Powers, 153; Faulk, 202. Total, 850.

SECOND GAME.

Columbia—Johansmeyer, 147; Le Beau, 175; Koster, 180; Hall, 160; Guilliaume, 168. Total, 791.

Village—Feeley, 155; Mahoney, 162; R. Coleman, 113; Powers, 130; Faulk, 160. Total, 735.

THIRD GAME.

Corinthian—S. Walter, 188; Baker, 153; Mulford, 191; Holden, 198; Schaeffer, 230. Total, 966

Columbia—Johansmeyer, 158; Le Beau, 188; Koster, 161; Hall, 170; Guilliaume, 191. Total, 858.

The scores made in the Arlington National tourney last night were low, the Amity team failing to roll up to the 700-mark in two games. The Straggler team won two games easily, and the winning—Maxwell & Moore—team won and lost a game. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

M. M. & M.—Cramer, 224; Whitney, 144; Blue, 132; Coomes, 141; Nimnels, 144. Total, 835.

Amity—Snyder, 117; Daub, 123; Lentz, 121; Carell, 100; Mackey, 119. Total, 580.

SECOND GAME.

Straggler—Eastmead, 144; Marten, 158; Gaynor, 127; Le Touzel, 129; Browne, 162. Total, 715.

Amity—Snyder, 127; Daub, 128; Jentz, 123; Kalb, 107; Mackey, 132. Total, 617.

THIRD GAME.

Straggler—Eastmead, 198; Marten, 109; Gaynor, 132; Le Touzel, 145; Browne, 178. Total, 722.

M. M. & M.—Cramer, 124; Whitney, 145; Nenelis, 94; Coomes, 165; Blue, 175. Total, 703.

The East New York Council had everything its own way last evening, and won two games in the Brooklyn Royal Arcanum League. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

De Witt Clinton Council—Quinn, 177; Houghton, 168; Page, 153; McElroy, 126; Butler, 173. Total, 797.

Fern Council—Miller, 151; Thomas, 127; Haff, 150; Waldman, 169; Trimmer, 170. Total, 767.

SECOND GAME.

East New York Council—A. Kiefer, 191; Senior, 147; G. Moore, 154; W. Moore, 167; C. Kiefer, 214. Total, 873.

De Witt Clinton Council—Quinn, 183; Houghton, 183; Page, 149; McElroy, 170; Butler, 161. Total, 865.

THIRD GAME.

Fern Council—Miller, 155; Thomas, 154; Haff, 133; Waldman, 164; Trimmer, 145. Total, 751.

East New York Council—A. Kiefer, 170; Senior, 152; G. Moore, 145; W. Moore, 171; C. Kiefer, 192. Total, 830.

The three games decided in the Royal Arcanum League at the Tennis Club alleys last night were closely contested. Colonial Council defeated Harlem Council in the first game by three pins. The Harlems won the second game from the second team of Our Council with only twenty-two pins to spare. The third game was interesting for eight frames. Then the Our team, by good strike bowling, secured a comfortable lead, winning by fifty-two pins. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Colonial—Davis, 171; Brucker, 128; Reichhard, 126; Wanderer, 138; Haus, 160. Total, 723.

Harlem—Cowles, 141; Manheim, 139; Holt, 154; Diederick, 146; Wyman, 140. Total, 720.

SECOND GAME.

Harlem—Diederick, 150; Manheim, 149; Cowles, 167; Holt, 196; Wyman, 154. Total, 822.

Our No. 2—Wragge, 201; Dent, 127; Schiff, 138; Coleman, 139; Schencke, 143. Total, 800.

THIRD GAME.

Our No. 2—Wragge, 154; Dent, 192; Schiff, 166; Coleman, 130; Schencke, 175. Total, 707.

Colonial—Davis, 146; Brucker, 132; Reichhard, 162; Wanderer, 179; Haus, 126. Total, 745.

The Arlingtons scored a double victory last night in the American National tourney. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Metropolitan—Breen, 178; Meyer, 178; Fisher, 164; Leuly, 152; Arnold, 216. Total, 888.

Columbia—Taylor, 176; Drew, 170; Brophy, 163; Hartley, 168; Roche, 161. Total, 846.

SECOND GAME.

Arlington—Arps, 174; Boemmermann, 133; Harlbe, 210; Maass, 175; Meyer, 152. Total, 853.

Columbia—Taylor, 153; Drew, 140; Brophy, 145; Hartley, 182; Roche, 193. Total, 813.

THIRD GAME.

Arlington—Arps, 165; Boemmermann, 166; Harlbe, 169; Maass, 177; Meyer, 159. Total, 836.

Metropolitan—Breen, 137; Meyer, 159; Fisher, 152; Leuly, 139; Arnold, 185. Total, 768.

In the Brooklyn Royal Arcanum sub-tournament at the Elephant Club alleys last evening the Burnside Council failed to put in a full team to bowl. The Brooklyn Council won two games. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Fulton Council—White, 127; G. Miller, 130; Wilson, 138; W. Miller, 113; Silveria, 134. Total, 542.

Burnside Council—Finister, 123; N. King, 120; A. King, 137. Total, 380.

SECOND GAME.

Brooklyn Council—Murray, 131; Claus, 140; Wild, 136; Phillips, 122; Broward, 122. Total, 651.

Burnside Council—Finister, 134; N. King, 129; A. King, 119; Corcoran, 89. Total, 471.

THIRD GAME.

Brooklyn Council—Murray, 190; Claus, 134; Wild, 139; Phillips, 123; Broward, 153. Total, 732.

Fulton Council—White, 156; G. Miller, 108; Wilson, 160; W. Miller, 117; Silveria, 115. Total, 656.

Tournament Games To-day.

Wholesale Drug Trade Association—Dodge & Olcott, Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Company, Parke, Davis & Co., National Lead Company, Merck & Co., Colgate & Co.

Bank Clerks' League—Seaboard National, Hamilton, Mount Morris.

Fire Insurance League—German-American, Phenix, Germania.

Associated Cycling Clubs of Long Island—Amphion, Greater New York, Montauk.

ARRIVAL OF BUYERS.

Rosenberg Brothers, Troy, Ala.; J. Rosenberg, clothing and shoes; Colonnade Hotel.

Auerbach, J., & Brother, Salt Lake City, Utah; S. H. Auerbach, cloaks, suits, notions, and millinery, 7 Mercer Street; Hoteli Empire.

Hochschild, Kohn & Co., Baltimore, Md.; N. Schonthal, shoes; Herald Square Hotel.

Thompson, N. J., & Co., Elmira, N. Y.; V. S. French; notions, furishing goods, and laces; St. George Hotel.

Field, Marshall, & Co., Chicago, Ill.; A. G. Liscomb, furs, 104 Worth Street.

Taylor, Son & Co., Pittsburg, Penn.; J. M. Taylor, notions and furnishing goods; Hoffman House.

Webber, W. G., & Co., Salem, Mass.; F. O. Palmer, woolens, cloaks, and suits, 52 Franklin Street; Park Avenue Hotel.

Wannamaker, John, Philadelphia, Penn.; A. R. Lovejoy, carpets, Broadway and Tenth Street; Albermarle Hotel.

Strauss & Co., Hamilton, Ohio; P. Strauss, clothing; Hotel Imperial.

Hood, J. G., & Co., Charlotte, N. C.; H. C. Long, clothing and shoes; St. Denis Hotel.

Connell, M J., Company, Butte City, Mon.; B. H. Albertus, ladies' and infants' wear; Hotel Cadillac.

Schlesinger & Mayer, Chicago, Ill.; H. A. Burnett, gloves; 377 Broadway; Hotel Imperial.

Straus, Isaac S., & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; J. Straus, furnishing goods; 106 Franklin Street; Hotel Imperial.

Fisher Brothers, Gonzales, Texas; L. Fisher, dry goods; Hotel Imperial.

Delaplain Dry Goods Company, Wheeling, West Va.; J. Gibbs, millinery and jewelry; 95 Franklin Street; Hotel Imperial.

Green, L. E., & Son, St. Louis, Mo.; M. E. Greene, millinery; Herald Square Hotel.

Pittsburg Dry Goods Company, The, Pittsburg, Penn.; F. B. Patton, lihings; 48 Leonard Street; Herald Square Hotel.

Field, Marshall, & Co., Chicago, Ill.; C. E. Catlin, hosiery; 104 Worth Street; Hotel Marlborough.

Fair, The, Chicago, Ill.; G. W. Montgomery, toys, stationery, and fancy goods; Hotel Marlborough.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

President Callaway Denies Truth of Reported Reorganization of Eastern Railroads.

When President S. R. Callaway of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company was shown the statement from Chicago, published yesterday, in regard to a reorganization of the entire transportation system between the Mississippi River and the Atlantic seaboard and other results of recent trunk railway consolidations and agreements, he said: "I read that early this morning." Taking the clipping of the story and holding it top and bottom between his forefingers and thumbs, he remarked:

"There is absolutely no truth in this story from beginning to end, if you except the abolition of commissions for the sale of tickets. This has recently been agreed on, and has always been agreed on periodically ever since railroads have been in existence, and always will be agreed on. There is nothing founded on fact in the rest of the story.

Another story from Sing Sing to the effect that there have been negotiations by the Central to acquire the site of Sing Sing Prison was disposed of more curtly by President Callaway: "To get Sing Sing Prison for our repair shops or for any other purpose of the road would be the most idiotic thing that could be done. There have been no such 'negotiations.'"

In Wall Street denials by heads of various railroad companies, including Lackawanna, Baltimore and Ohio, and Lehigh Valley, of participation in one of the schemes outlined in the dispatch were quoted. This scheme comprehends, according to the story, the abandonment of city ticket offices, and

CLARK IS AGAIN ACCUSED

More Witnesses from Montana Charge Him with Bribery.

ASSEMBLY CHAPLAIN INVOLVED

The Latter Admits that the Senator Gave Him a Check for $100 After the Contest Was Ended.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections today resumed its investigation of the charges of bribery made against Senator Clark of Montana in connection with his election to the United States Senate. Mr. William F. Rector was again on the stand at the beginning of the day's session. He said that all he did in securing rooms was reported to the higher authorities, and volunteered in this connection the statement that "in the case of every man purchased it was necessary to report to Mr. Clark." He had not made such reports himself, being "only a private" and not on such terms of familiarity with the "big guns" as to justify his approaching them.

Mr. Rector testified as to Mr. Davidson's bringing money over from Butte and leaving it in his charge for Mr. Steele, he being then employed by Davidson.

"I don't remember the times when he brought it," he said. "The typewriter and I looked at it. We were both awful glad to see it, as the typewriter had not been paid for four months and I had not a cent."

Davidson had, he said, left the money with him for Steele in an open envelope, and he and the typewriter had looked at it after Mr. Davidson had left. Money had been thus brought to the room by Davidson and left for Steele on three different occasions just before the meeting of the Legislature.

Mr. Rector said he did not know what sum was brought in by Davidson at any time.

"I only know," he said, "that we suddenly accumulated a drawer full of money." He did not know what was done with it.

He did know, however, that Mr. Powell Black had been sent out to "get" a member of the Legislature, who was to have $5,000, and that after returning he had said that he had had a hard trip, but that "it was all right."

Mr. Rector was excused at 11:35, and the Rev. B. E. H. Warren, who was Chaplain of the Montana House of Representatives in the last session, took the stand.

Mr. Warren related the details of two conversations he had had with Senator Clark while the Legislature was in session and just previous to the election of Mr. Clark. He said he had been a supporter of Mr. Clark; that he had heard the reports that he was using corrupt means to secure his election, and that he has called upon him for the purpose of satisfying himself.

"I asked the Senator," said the witness, "what the prospects of election were. Mr. Clark replied that they were all right. 'I will be elected,' Clark said. He spoke assuredly, but said he did not want the election until he could get a majority of the Democrats. He could, he said, with the assistance of the Republicans, be elected at any time, but he did not want the election that way. Mr. Clark added that the members were coming to him at the rate of one or two a day. I then asked if he expected the Republican vote. He replied that he did, and I asked him if he was sure of all of them, to which he replied that there might be one or two defections, adding, 'that is all arranged for.' I then told him that I heard a Democratic member (giving the name of a member of the House) say he would support you for a consideration.

"'How much does he want?' Mr. Clark asked.

"'About $10,000, I think,' I replied. Mr. Clark studied a moment, and said:

"'I can't do anything like that myself, but I will have it fixed.' He did not, however, say who would fix it."

Mr. Warren said he had seen Mr. Clark the next morning in the lobby of the hotel, and Mr. Clark had asked him where "the man" was. He had replied that he had not seen the member, when Mr. Clark said: "Tell him I want his vote to-day."

On cross-examination, Mr. Warren said that he had resigned his ministry in the Methodist Church after giving his testimony before the Montana Supreme Court, because of numerous scandalous reports that were put in circulation about him. He said, in reply to questions, that, previous to going to Helena, he had had a difficulty at Sweet Grass.

"A man called me a bad name," he said, "and I knocked him down and gave him a thrashing."

"Isn't it a fact," asked Mr. Faulkner, bluntly, "that you were charged by the members of your congregation with embezzlement and immorality?"

Mr. Warren replied in the negative, saying there had been no official charges.

He added: "But I felt indignant. Indeed, I expect to have an investigation yet—a very warm one."

"You have not assaulted any one as you did at Sweet Grass?"

"No, Sir; but I am liable to do so before this thing is over."

Mr. Faulkner also brought out the fact that during his conversation with Mr. Clark, Mr. Warren had told him that his church was in a bad way; that the latter had promised to make a contribution for it as soon as the Senatorial contest was ended, and that afterward Mr. Clark had sent him a check for $100, which he had appropriated to the payment of his own salary because the church was behind with him. He added, however, that he had reported this transaction to the Presiding Elder.

Z. T. Cason, an attorney at Butte, told how he had been sent for to come to Helena to use his influence with Representative Marceys of Custer County, and that when he went there he saw Senator Clark, who told him he would like to have him see Marceys and talk with him, and that Marceys had not been approached, that service being left to him, (Cason,) as he could handle him better.

"He authorized me to say to him that he would pay him $10,000 for his vote for him (Clark) for the United States Senate," said the witness, adding, "He also said to me that Mr. Wellcome was handling his funds and would supply me with expense money."

Mr. Clark also said, the witness went on: "Since Whiteside has betrayed us, I have very little confidence in any one, and would like to have you handle him very carefully."

Continuing, Mr. Cason said he had seen Mr. Wellcome, who had given him $50 for expenses, and that afterward he had seen Mr. Marceys several times, and after satisfying himself that Marceys would vote for Clark, had so reported to him. He had not, however, made any suggestion of a money consideration to Mr. Marceys. Afterward Marceys had voted for Clark, and on Feb. 4 he had received a letter from Mr. Clark inclosing a check for $500 for "professional services." This letter was produced and identified, and Mr. Cason said that the only services he had rendered Mr. Clark were in connection with the Senatorial race.

He had testified before the Grand Jury in the Wellcome disbarment case, and after doing so had felt sorry for the part he had taken in that case. He then told how Mr. Root had prepared a letter which he (the witness) had copied and signed, in which he had said there was no truth in anything he had testified to in the Wellcome case. This was put in strong language, and in the letter he was made to dwell upon the disgrace he had brought upon himself by the part he had taken in the matter.

In return for this letter Root had given him $1,500 with which to get out of the country, Mr. Root promising to hold the letter as sacred and only to make it public in case he (Cason) should come to Washington. He had then gone to Baker City, Ore., corresponding from there with Mr. Root under the name of G. Z. Taylor. He had, however, not been there long when he saw his recantation in the newspapers. Soon afterward he had received a summons to come to Washington and had responded, arriving to-day, only an hour before he went on the stand.

Mr. Cason identified the recanting letter he had given to Mr. Root. It covered three pages of foolscap, and was read by the witness amid roars of laughter by all present, including the witness himself, this laughter being due to the abject character of the language used.

"Do you pretend to say that when you wrote that letter you knew it was not true?" said Mr. Faulkner.

"Why, certainly," responded the witness coolly.

"Then you confess here to having written and signed three pages of lies in that letter," said Mr. Faulkner.

In his reply the witness gave the second unique definition of a lie that the hearing has brought out.

"No, I do not," he replied. "I confess to writing the letter, but I don't think any statement is ever a lie which is made with the understanding that it is false."

At this point the cross-examination was postponed until to-morrow, and the committee adjourned.

THE SENATE AND THE BOERS.

Mr. Allen's Resolution of Inquiry Is Modified and Adopted—Hale Defends the Transvaal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Senate to-day adopted a resolution calling upon the President, "if not incompatible with public interests," to furnish information whether any representative of the Transvaal had applied to the United States Government for recognition, and if such application had been made if it had been accepted, and if not why not. The resolution was a modification of the original resolution of Mr. Allen, (Pop., Neb.,) which called upon the Secretary of State to furnish the desired information.

The resolution was changed on motion of Mr. Spooner, (Rep., Wis.,) who said the Senate had no right to demand information from the President, but the President was the absolute judge as to whether it was proper to communicate the information asked for. He utterly repudiated, he said, the doctrine advanced repeatedly by Senators that the people were entitled to information from day to day regarding the conduct of our foreign business.

Mr. Allen replied at length to Mr. Spooner, in the course of which he said it had been reported throughout the country in the daily and weekly press that the Populist Party had gone to pieces.

"I say to you, Mr. President," said Mr. Allen, "that these statements are circulated with a political purpose. There are more Populists in the country to-day than ever before. We can cast 2,500,000 votes, and not all of these voters are fools, either. The organization, far from having gone to pieces, is stronger to-day than at any previous time."

In the course of a brief speech in opposition to the amendment Mr. Teller (Silver Rep., Col.,) said he would not say a word that would be offensive to the Government of Great Britain, yet he felt his sympathy go out to the Transvaal Republic in its great contest at arms with England.

Mr. Hale (Rep., Me.,) did not regard the amendment as essential—that either the President or the Secretary of State should give to the American people information regarding the negotiations between the United States and Great Britain and the Transvaal.

Mr. Hale said he could not believe that any accredited representative of the Transvaal Republic had been rejected by the President.

"I should," said he, "deem that a most unfortunate event if it occurred. I do not believe it has occurred. I have heard that irresponsible, unaccredited persons (perhaps United States citizens) have appeared in Washington claiming to represent the gallant people who are struggling for liberty, but no such mission could be recognized.

"I have yet to be made to believe that any duly accredited representative of that brave people of South Africa has appeared before the President of the United States and been denied a hearing. If that be true, the country we are informed about it the better for the American people.

"I do not fail to take notice that throughout the length and breadth of the land the sympathies of the great American people are in favor of the struggle which the Boers are making to-day to preserve a republican Government against one of the greatest powers of the world. I do not doubt that the American people agree with me that the war which Great Britain is waging is the most stupendous war at human liberty that has been struck in the last century. I do not doubt that the Administration representing the people of the United States feels to-day as I feel on the subject and as nine-tenths of the American people feel."

Mr. Hale quoted from a speech of Mr. Balfour, in which the British statesman had declared the Boer war had knit together every branch of the English-speaking race.

"I deny, Sir," declared Mr. Hale, with great feeling, "that the American section of that race is in sympathy with Great Britain in the South African war to stamp out the liberty of a people. I deny that the American people are to be tied to the chariot wheels of war against the South African republics. And when the leader of the Conservatives in the House of Commons asserts that he should be met by some disclaimer from this side of the Atlantic.

"I do not wish international complications," said Mr. Hale, in conclusion. "I do not wish war. I recall that we have not been so much in love with neutrality in times past that we could not speak up boldly for Hungary, Poland, Armenia, Cuba, and Greece; and I do not know why it is now that we must speak with bated breath in favor of liberty.

"I do not believe," continued he, "that the English people are in favor of this war. I believe that the great Queen on bended knees has prayed that the war might be averted; I do not believe that the great Premier of England favored the war. It was the act and movement of a sharp Cabinet Minister, engaged with gold speculators, which favored the war."

Mr. Hale said that we had had nothing to do with bringing on the war, and quoted these lines:

There is weeping by England's hundred streams,
By Severn and Thames and Trent,
And o'er the graves of her fallen braves
The Queen of the Sea is bent.

One lesson should serve this haughty isle,
Girt around with stately towers,
Thank God, the blow that has laid her low
Was dealt by no hand of ours.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hale's speech the resolution as amended by Mr. Spooner was adopted.

MONEY TO PAY PENSIONS.

House Passes the Bill After Hearing the Commissioner and the Administration Censured.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The House today passed the Pension Appropriation bill after amending it by providing that "the Commissioner of Pensions shall furnish all necessary blanks to claimants, and that said Commissioner may, in his discretion, refuse to pay the fee to an attorney of record when he is satisfied that said attorney failed to prepare the case under his or her personal supervision and did not discharge his full duty to claimant."

Mr. Barney, (Wis.,) who was in charge of the bill, made a general statement of its contents. He said the Commissioner of Pensions had estimated that the amount for pensions during the coming year would be largely decreased, but that, owing to the influx of claims on account of the Spanish war, he did not deem it wise to reduce the general appropriation.

Mr. Talbert (S. C.) asked if the pension laws were not now liberal enough to dispense with the Friday night sessions, at which special bills were passed to pension "bounty jumpers" and "coffee coolers."

Mr. Barney replied that, in his opinion, the bills passed Friday night were meritorious and benefited persons who could obtain relief in no other way.

Mr. Curtis (Kan.) assailed some of the rulings of the Commissioner of Pensions, tracing their origin to the "startling, false, and fictitious charge made in 1893, that thousands of fraudulent pensioners were on the rolls."

When the present Administration came into power, he said, the old soldiers expected a change in the rules and regulations. They looked for more liberal construction, but, he was sorry to say, they were disappointed. The new Commissioner of Pensions continued in force the rules and regulations of a predecessor.

"If the present Commissioner is not conducting the office properly, is not the remedy in the hands of the Administration?" asked Mr. Bartlett, (Ga.)

"I do not believe the President indorses the acts of the Commissioner," replied Mr. Curtis. "I do not believe he knows what is going on."

"Is it not his duty to know?"

"He has not the time to examine into minor details."

"Was not the Commissioner a soldier of the Union?"

"They say he was," replied Mr. Curtis. "I do not believe he ever carried a musket."

Here Mr. Grosvenor (Ohio) intervened to say that Commissioner Evans was a native of Pennsylvania. "When I first knew him," said he, "he was a private soldier in a Wisconsin regiment. Later he joined the Army of the Cumberland. I do not know how long he served, but that he served as an enlisted man I do know. Before the close of the war he was made a clerk in the Quartermaster's office at Chattanooga."

Mr. Ray, (N. Y.,) former Chairman of the Committee on Pensions, characterized as "unwarranted and unjustifiable" Mr. Curtis's attack upon the Commissioner of Pensions. He defended the action of the Commissioner in refusing back pension to minor children who have long since grown to manhood.

Mr. Fitzgerald (Mass.) complained of the course of the Pension Department toward the veterans of the Spanish war. Only 300 of the 25,000 claims had been adjusted. There were men who had lost limbs or who had been completely incapacitated whose claims were pigeon-holed.

Mr. Ray replied, saying that the Pension Office had wisely decided to postpone action for a time, in all except urgent cases. He indorsed this course.

During the course of some remarks, Mr. Talbert (S. C.) gave notice that hereafter there would be no Friday night pension legislation without a quorum.

Mr. Mahon (Penn.) paid his respects to the "pension shark lawyers" in this city who robbed the old soldiers. He was in favor of indorsing the Commissioner of Pensions in the pending bill.

Morgan Opposes the Financial Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.,) addressed the Senate to-day in opposition to the Financial bill. One of the principal points Mr. Morgan made against the bill was that it conferred too great power on National banks. He strongly argued against the further disqualification of silver as a money metal, because of the vast use which could be made of it by the United States in the island possessions of this country.

Republican Senators Fail to Agree.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Republicans of the Senate were in caucus for nearly two hours to-day, considering the reorganization of the Senate official force. No conclusion was reached, and the caucus adjourned until Wednesday next.

A Congressman in Quarantine.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Congressman and Mrs. Alexander of Buffalo, N. Y., have been placed in quarantine in their apartments here because of the discovery yesterday that Mrs. Alexander's maid was suffering from smallpox. The maid was removed to a hospital. It is not thought that either Mr. Alexander or his wife has contracted the disease.

President Refuses Pardons.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The President has denied the application of Joseph Wilkins and Howard Butler for pardons. These men were convicted of a violation of the oleomargarine laws, and sentenced in the United States District Court at Philadelphia March 17, 1898, the former to imprisonment for six months and to pay a fine of $1,500, and the latter to imprisonment for four months and to pay a fine of $500 and costs. After a long legal fight, they were committed in November last to Moyamensing Prison, Philadelphia.

President Respites a Condemned Man.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—In the case of Homer Bird, who is under sentence of death for murder alleged to have been committed in Alaska, the President has granted a respite until March 16, 1900, in order that the circumstances connected with the case may be more fully examined.

The Remains of John Paul Jones.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Senator Penrose was recently instructed by the Senate Naval Committee to ascertain what steps had been taken by the Secretary of the Navy to rescue and return to this country the remains of John Paul Jones. To-day he received a letter from the Secretary, in response to an inquiry sent him, saying that the department had instructed the Naval Attaché in Paris to investigate and report upon the truth of the report that the resting place of Capt. Jones had been located in that city.

GEN. ANDERSON RETIRES TO-DAY

Gen. Brooke May Succeed Gen. Merritt When the Latter Retires.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Brig. Gen. T. M. Anderson, commanding the Military Department of the Lakes, with headquarters at Chicago, will be retired to-morrow. His retirement has been already anticipated by the appointment of Gen. William Ludlow as Brigadier General. The President's action in filling this vacancy by sending Gen. Ludlow's nomination to the Senate in advance of its existence is said to be without precedent in the army, and was avowedly taken to spare the President from further importunity.

Gen. J. F. Wade, commanding the Department of Dakota, has been ordered, in addition to his present duties, to take temporary command of the Department of the Lakes until a permanent assignment can be made.

Major Gen. J. E. Brooke, who was recently relieved by Gen. Wood as commander of the division of Cuba, may be assigned to the Department of the Lakes, but the general impression is that he is more likely to be assigned to relieve Gen. Wesley Merritt in New York on the latter's retirement next June. Gen. Brooke is now at St. Augustine, Fla., recuperating.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

Second Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee, Jr., First Cavalry, will proceed from New York City to Fort Meade, South Dakota, and join his troop.

Chaplain Rowland S. Nichols, recently appointed, will report on or about March 1, to the commanding officer at Fort Slocum, New York, for assignment to duty with recruits to be sent from that post on the transport Sumner to Manila.

Lieut. Col. John B. Babcock, Assistant Adjutant General, and Major Stephen W. Groesbeck, Judge Advicate, are detailed as members of the board of officers appointed to meet at the office of the Chief Surgeon, Department of California, for service therewith only during the examination of such officers as may have been reported by the board as physically disqualified for promotion.

The resignation of Capt. Ashton B. Heyl, Assistant Surgeon, has been accepted to take effect Feb. 28.

The resignation of Capt. George McK. Williamson, Assistant Quartermaster, of his commission as First Lieutenant of Cavalry, (Eighth Regiment only,) has been accepted to take effect Dec. 13, 1899.

First Lieut. Bailey K. Ashford, Assistant Surgeon, on the expiration of his leave of absence, will proceed from Washington to San Francisco, in time to arrive there on or before Feb. 5, and report to the commanding General for duty.

The following-named officers of the Medical Department will proceed from the places hereinafter designated to San Francisco in time to arrive there on or about Feb. 5 and report to the commanding General for duty: Lieut. Col. Benjamin F. Pope, Deputy Surgeon General, from Columbus Barracks, Ohio; Capt. William J. Wakeman, Assistant Surgeon, from Fort Thomas, Ky.

A board of medical officers to consist of Lieut. Col. Benjamin F. Pope, Deputy Surgeon General; Major Guy L. Edie, Surgeon, United States Volunteers, (Captain and Assistant Surgeon, United States Army;) Capt. William J. Wakeman, Assistant Surgeon, and First Lieut. Bailey K. Ashford, Assistant Surgeon, is constituted to meet in Manila as soon as practicable for the examination of candidates for admission to the Medical Corps of the army.

Capt. Wilds P. Richardson, Eighth Infantry, and First Lieut. Howard R. Hickok, Ninth Cavalry, are ordered to Washington. They will accompany Col. George M. Randall, Eighth Infantry, to Alaska—Capt. Richardson as Acting Adjutant General of the department and Lieut. Hickok as aide de camp to Col. Randall.

The retirement from active service Jan. 18 of Major William H. Manner, Paymaster, at his own request, he having served more than forty years, is announced.

Major Henry I. Raymond, Surgeon, United States Volunteers, (Captain and Assistant Surgeon, United States Army,) is honorably discharged from the volunteer service of the United States only upon tender of his resignation.

Lieut. Col. Charles A. H. McCauley, Deputy Quartermaster General, will make not to exceed six trips from Philadelphia to Trenton, N. J., on official business pertaining to the Quartermaster's Department.

First Lieut. William J. Calvert, Assistant Surgeon, is detailed as a member of the board of medical examiners appointed Jan. 16, vice First Lieut. Jere B. Clayton, Assistant Surgeon, who is relieved as a member of the board.

Navy.

Lieut. F. M. Russell is ordered to temporary duty on the Vermont in connection with the crew of the Albany Jan. 31.

Lieut. J. G. Doyle will assume the duties of Inspector of Ordnance at Neafie & Levy's, Philadelphia.

Lieut. B. C. Decker will assume the duties of Inspector of Ordnance at Harlan & Hollingsworth's, Wilmington, Del.

Medical Director J. M. Flint is retired from Feb. 7.

Pay Director E. May is retired from Jan. 20.

Medical Director G. S. Beardsley is retired from Jan. 22.

Lieut. C. T. Vogelgesang is promoted to Lieutenant from June 11, 1899.

Movements of Troops.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Quartermaster General has been informed that the transport Kilpatrick left Nuevitas to-day with the Eighth Cavalry bound for Newport News, whence the troops will be forwarded by rail to Fort Riley, Kan.

In accordance with orders, Troop M, Ninth Cavalry, (colored,) has left Spofford, Texas, for Fort Grant, Arizona, its regular station. It was relieved from duty in Texas by a troop of the Tenth Cavalry, just returned from duty in Cuba.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Machias has arrived at San Juan.

The Wilmington is at Ensenada.

Admiral Farquhar, on his flagship, the New York, has arrived at Port of Spain.

The Scindia has arrived at Mare Island.

Orders have been given at the Navy Department to put the new cruiser Albany in commission at Newcastle-on-Tyne about Feb. 7, and as soon as possible thereafter she will sail for New York with a crew of American sailors carried out on the Prairie.

We are Still Closing Out Our entire range of heavy weight fabrics. This comprises the finest and most select assortment of novelties imported for custom work—25% to 33⅓% saving guaranteed. No deviation in quality of work nor withdrawal of patterns or qualities.

Burnham • Phillips

Custom Tailoring Only.
Temple Court Annex, 119 Nassau St.

YALE WINS AT HOCKEY.

Princeton Shut Out Without a Goal in a Fast Game.

The fast hockey team from Yale University whitewashed the team from Princeton at the St. Nicholas Rink last night before 2,000 enthusiasts of the game. The admirers of the team were about equal in numbers, and there was a large number of women present.

As soon as Referee Walton gave the signal, Campbell captured the puck, and, passing it to Bronson, left a clear field for his clubmate, who quickly shot the disk accurately past Ford and Wilson and scored a goal within forty seconds from the time the rubber was put into play. Four minutes later Inman captured the puck in a scrimmage, and, cleverly dodging past Little and Ford, lifted the rubber again between the goal posts. He again repeated the manoeuvre two minutes later, making the score 3—0 in favor of the "sons of Eli."

The play then became rough, and Homan's nose was laid open in a scrimmage. His skate was also broken before the players were separated, and time was called for repairs. Bronson then scored twice, the last goal being made twenty seconds before the end of the first half.

In the second half Princeton was clearly outclassed, and the Yale players scored as they pleased. Bronson made the first goal, Walworth captured the second and third, Campbell sent the rubber through twice more, and Inman scored the final goal. The present Princeton team is the first that that university has entered in the Intercollegiate League. The line-up:

Princeton.	Position.	Yale.
Wilson	Goal	Smith
Ford	Point	Brock
Little	Cover Point	Coxe
Alexander	Forward	Inman
Homans	Forward	Bronson
Purnell	Forward	Walworth
Poe, Bonner	Forward	Campbell

Referee—Howard Walton, Naval Reserves. Goal Umpires—Bonner and Barron. Goals Scored—By Campbell, 2; Inman, 3; Walworth, 2; Bronson, 1. Score, 11 to 0 in favor of Yale.

SCHAEFER TAKES THE LEAD.

Makes Two Big Runs in the Billiard Match with Morningstar.

Jacob Schaefer made two sensational runs in his billiard match with Ora Morningstar, the "shortstop" player, at the former's academy yesterday, and holds the lead now for the first time. In his second inning, he clicked off 174, and ended the game with an unfinished run of 234.

Schaefer—1, 177, 13, 1, 13, 1, 20, 79, 0, 16, 0, 1, 16, 91, 234. Total, 669. Average, 41 13-16.
Grand total, 2,000. Grand average, 18 92-106.
Morningstar—2, 15, 0, 9, 1, 2, 0, 24, 0, 3, 5, 57, 2, 10, 2. Total, 138. Average, 9 3-15. Grand total, 938. Grand average, 8 90-106.

TENNIS PLAY AT TUXEDO PARK.

T. Suffern Tailer Plays a Draw with Morton Paton.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, Jan. 19.—The Tuxedo tennis courts were crowded to-day. Two good matches were played, and were witnessed by a large and fashionable crowd. In the morning T. Suffern Tailer of Tuxedo met Morton Paton of New York. Mr. Tailer played with excellent service to-day. The game was decided a draw.

In the afternoon "Teddy" Johnson, late of the Princess Club, London, played an excellent game with George Standing, the well-known racquet player of New York, in which Johnson was victorious, winning the match in three straight sets at 6—5, 6—1, 6—1. The court was new to Standing, but he kept the ball moving.

Saturday's match is exciting great interest. A large crowd is expected. All the rooms at the clubhouse are occupied, and lovers of tennis will have a chance to see a good match. Lawrence M. Stockton, American amateur, of Boston, will be pitted against Eustace H. Miles, amateur champion, for international honors.

Both players rested to-day, and are in the best possible shape for their game. It will be a question of Stockton's service against Miles's returns.

Yale's Athletic Adviser.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 19.—W. Camp has been elected graduate adviser of athletics. He is already Treasurer of the athletic fund and is a popular choice.

Schedule of Yale Gymnasium Team.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 19.—The schedule of the gymnasium team of Yale College begins with an exhibition at Newark on Feb. 10, to be followed by a contest with the Newark Young Men's Christian Association at the same place on March 2. A contest with the Columbia team will take place at the Columbia gymnasium on March 23, and one with the Princeton team at Princeton later. The first meet of the intercollegiate associations takes place in the Columbia gymnasium March 31.

Seventh Regiment Marksmen.

The marksmen of Company A of the Seventh Regiment who shot last night at the armory in the contests for the Kemp and Clark Trophies disappointed their friends. Company A is the fifth company that has contested, and its record is the poorest thus far. Its score for the Kemp Trophy was 486 at the 200 yard and 463 at the 500 yard range, making a total of 949. In the trial for the Clark Trophy it scored 384 at 200 yards and 392 at 500 yards, making a total of 776.

Bernstein Beaten by Broad.

"Kid" Broad of Cleveland received the decision over "Joe" Bernstein, the feather-weight champion of the east side, last night in a twenty-five-round bout at the Broadway Athletic Club. Broad did almost all the leading and knocked the east sider down several times. The preliminary bout between "Jack" Lynch and "Bob" Gormley, welter weights, lasted only 57 seconds, Gormley getting the decision.

San Francisco Races.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—Tanforan results:

FIRST RACE.—Three-eighths of a mile; two-year-olds; selling. Sofala, 110 pounds, (Bullman,) 7 to 10, won; Rathgar, 104, (Jenkins,) 9 to 5, second; Moonbright, 105, (E. Jones,) 7 to 1, third. Time—0:35½. Ada Fox, Princess Leota, Location, and Core also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Five-eighths of a mile; selling. Tizona, 93 pounds, (Henry,) 12 to 1, won; Gold Baron, 105, (Jenkins,) 3½ to 1, second; Orion, 100, (Spencer,) 6 to 5, third. Time—1:00⅘. Indra, Ann Page, Red Cherry, Melvin Burnham, Lena Marie, Cymoma, and My Dear also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Mile; selling. Facade, 104 pounds, (Vittatoe,) 25 to 1, won; Grand Sachem, 109, (Morgan,) 25 to 1, second; Tom Cromwell, 112, (E. Jones,) 8 to 1, third. Time—1:42. Merops, Chimura, Tirade, Greyhurst, and Inverary II. left.

FOURTH RACE.—Mile and an eighth; selling; hurdle. Major S., 125 pounds, (Sullivan,) 4 to 1, won; Monita, 147, (Len Hart,) 6 to 1, second; Lomo, 147, (D. Henry,) 3½ to 1, third. Time—2:05. University, and J. O. C. also ran. Granger and Credo fell.

FIFTH RACE.—Mile; selling. The Lady, 84 pounds, (J. Walsh,) 3 to 1, won; Merry Boy, 101, (Buchanan,) 9 to 1, second; Catastrophe, 107, (Jenkins,) 2 to 1, third. Time—1:40½. Bishop Reed, Harry Thoburn, Red Pirate, and Rainier also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Seven-eighths of a mile; purse. Norford, 104 pounds, (J. Martin,) 12 to 1, won; Owyhee, 114, (Jenkins,) 4 to 1, second; Afghan, 119, (Spencer,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:28⅘. Tempo, Tom Smith, San Augustine, Cypriano, Beautiful Bill, Red Wald, Senora Caesar, and March Seven also ran.

SHIPPING AND FOREIGN MAILS.

Miniature Almanac—This Day.

A. M.	P. M.	A. M.	P. M.
Sun rises...7:20	Sun sets...5:08	Moon rises...10:00

High Water This Day.

A. M.	A. M.	A. M.
S. Hook...10:12	Gov. Isl'd...10:31	H. Gate.....
P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
S. Hook...10:48	Gov. Isl'd...11:08	H. Gate...12:27

Outgoing Steamships.

TO-DAY, (SATURDAY,) JAN. 20.

	Mails Close.	Vessels Sail.
Alamo, Key West and Galveston		3:00 P. M.
Altai, Jamaica, &c.	10:00 A. M.
British Empire, Antwerp
Coleridge, Pernambuco	9:00 A. M.
Colorado, Hull
El Norte, New Orleans		3:00 P. M.
Etna, Naples and Genoa		11:00 A. M.
Havana, Havana	11:00 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
Knickerbocker, New Orleans		3:00 P. M.
Lauenburg, Nuevitas, &c.	1:00 P. M.
Mesaba, London
Norge, Christiania	11:00 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
Pennsylvania, Hamburg		7:30 A. M.
Philadelphia, San Juan, La Guayra		1:00 P. M.
Prins Willem III., Haiti	10:30 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
Ravensdale, Yucatan	1:00 P. M.	3:00 P. M.
Seminole, Charleston		3:00 P. M.

MONDAY, JAN. 22.

Orinoco, Bermuda	10:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:30 A. M.

TUESDAY, JAN. 23.

Lahn, Southampton and Bremen	7:00 A. M.	10:00 A. M.
	*10:00 A. M.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 24.

Advance, Colon	9:30 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
Friesland, Antwerp	10:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
New York, Southampton	7:00 A. M.	10:00 A. M.
	*9:00 A. M.
Oceanic, Queenstown and Liverpool	8:00 A. M.	11:00 A. M.
Roraima, St. Thomas	12:30 P. M.	3:00 P. M.
	*1:00 P. M.
San Juan, San Juan	1:00 P. M.	3:00 P. M.
U. S. transport, Puerto Rico	10:30 A. M.
Vigilancia, Havana, &c.	1:00 P. M.	3:00 P. M.

THURSDAY, JAN. 25.

Auguste Victoria, Naples, &c.
La Bretagne, Havre	7:00 A. M.	10:00 A. M.

FRIDAY, JAN. 26.

Maracaibo, San Juan	11:00 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
	*11:30 A. M.

SATURDAY, JAN. 27.

Adirondack, Jamaica, Costa Rica	10:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:30 A. M.
Andes, Haiti	10:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:30 A. M.
Campania, Queenstown and Liverpool	8:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:00 A. M.
Horatio, Para	7:00 A. M.
John Sanderson, La Plata
Countries	1:00 P. M.	3:00 P. M.
Pos, Havana	11:00 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
Vancouver, Rotterdam	8:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:00 A. M.
Ethiopia, Glasgow	10:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
Trinidad, Bermuda	8:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
Yarmouth, Nuevitas	1:00 P. M.	3:00 P. M.

*SUPPLEMENTARY MAILS.—Additional supplementary mails are opened on the piers of the American, English, French, and German steamers and remain open until within ten minutes of the hour of sailing.

TRANSPACIFIC MAILS.

Mails for Australia, (except West Australia,) New Zealand, Hawaii, Fiji, and Samoan Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. after Dec. 30 and up to Jan. 20, inclusive, or on day of arrival of steamship Campania, due at New York Jan. 26, for dispatch per steamship Moana. Mails for China and Japan and Philippine Islands, via Seattle, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. 21, for dispatch per steamship Riojun Maru, (registered letters must be directed "via Seattle.") Mails for China and Japan, via Vancouver, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. 23, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Empress of Japan, (registered mail must be directed "via Vancouver.") Mails for Society Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. 23, inclusive, for dispatch by ship City of Peking. Mails for Hawaii, Japan, China, and the Philippine Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. 27, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Doric. Mails for Hawaii, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Feb. 2, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Australia. Mails for Australia, (except West Australia, which go via Europe, and New Zealand, which go via San Francisco,) Hawaii and Fiji Islands, via Vancouver, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Feb. 3, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Miowera. Mails for Australia, (except West Australia,) New Zealand, Hawaii, Fiji and Samoan Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. after Feb. 3 and up to Feb. 17, inclusive, or on day of arrival of steamship Campania, due at New York Feb. 17, for dispatch per steamship Alameda. Mails for Hawaii, China, Japan, and the Philippine Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Feb. 24, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Nippon Maru.

‡Registered mail closes at 6 P. M. previous day.

Postmaster Van Cott announces that the mails from Hongkong of Dec. 20; Shanghai, Dec. 23; Yokohama, Dec. 30, and Honolulu, Jan. 9, which arrived at San Francisco per steamer China, are due in New York on the morning of Saturday, Jan. 20.

Postmaster Van Cott announces that full mails for Europe via Plymouth and Hamburg will be dispatched from New York by the steamer Pennsylvania to-day instead of by the Etruria, which has been disabled. The mails will close at the General Post Office at 4:30 A. M. to-day.

Incoming Steamships.

TO-DAY, (SATURDAY,) JAN. 20.

Algonquin, Jacksonville, Jan. 17.
Bendo, Hamburg, Dec. 31.
Buenaventura, Gibraltar, Jan. 6.
Campania, Liverpool, Jan. 13.
Cluden, Amsterdam, Jan. 6.
Critic, Dundee, Dec. 30.
Evelyn, New Orleans, Jan. 16.
Excelsior, New Orleans, Jan. 13.
Florida, Brunswick, Jan. 11.
Gera, Bremen, Jan. 7.
Glanton, Hamburg, Jan. 1.
Hesperia, Gibraltar, Jan. 4.
King Bleddyn, Rotterdam, Jan. 3
La Grande Duchesse, Savannah, Jan. 10.
Llandaff City, Swansea, Jan. 4.
Maracaibo, Curacoa, Jan. 10.
New York, Southampton, Jan. 13.
Ohio, Hull, Jan. 6.
Pauillac, Pauillac, Jan. 6.
Pretoria, Bermuda, Jan. 17.
Pretoria, Hamburg, Jan. 8.
Stalheim, Christiania, Jan. 2.
Vigilancia, Havana, Jan. 15.

SUNDAY, JAN. 21.

Briscoe, Gibraltar, Jan. 7.
El Sud, New Orleans, Jan. 16.
Indrani, Lisbon, Jan. 7.
La Bretagne, Havre, Jan. 13.
St. Cuthbert, Antwerp, Jan. 8.
St. Leonards, Antwerp, Jan. 8.

MONDAY, JAN. 22.

Amity, Bordeaux, Jan. 8.
Fontabelle, St. Thomas.
Pocahontas, Gibraltar, Jan. 8.
State of Nebraska, Glasgow, Jan. 10.
Winifred, New Orleans, Jan. 16.

TUESDAY, JAN. 23.

Adirondack, Port Limon,

The Wanamaker Store

Probably Last Day of the Hosiery, Knitted Underwear and Glove Sale—Main floor and Fifth floor.

We Are Critical Folks

WE ask you to believe in this store. And you do. We ask you not to try to satisfy yourself with anything that doesn't suit. Bring it back.

The other day we heard some one bemoan the fact that a garment made by a reputable house was not right after seven fittings—and yet the bill was paid. We are re-making it, not to belittle the maker who failed, but as part of our business.

Don't put up with a wrong thing or a thing wrongly done or delivered. What one buys should be right and exactly as one has fair reason to believe that it should be.

Infallible? Not a bit of it—else we should have a business that would tax a store many times as big. But we do not dodge responsibility.

And because we ask you to be strict with us we must be strict with ourselves—hence, the very decisive losses we take on goods that have stayed too long, or are in danger of lingering.

To-day's news is almost all of bargains—and they are real and important ones.

Children's Gingham Dresses Some new styles for wee folks have been coming in. There's an exceptional good assortment here now. The ginghams are pretty, the making is neatly done and the prices are fair.

FOR GIRLS

50c—Pink and blue stripes; pointed yoke, finished with ruffle of self-material.

$1.25—Pink and blue checks; full waist; pieces over shoulder trimmed with fancy braid.

$2.25—With guimpe; full waist; neck trimmed with fine embroidery insertion and ruffle; belt of embroidery. Another style at $3.

FOR BOYS—$1; pink and blue stripes; collar, cuffs and belt of white lawn.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Shoe News Briefly Told

Men's $3 and $3.50 Shoes at $1.75—some we have told of before; some lots are entirely new. Only 1,528 pairs in all—black kidskin, calfskin, enameled leather, russet

Men's $3.50 and $4 Shoes at $2.30. Kidskin and calfskin.

Boys' Shoes at $1.50 instead of $2.50 and $3.

Children's Shoes, 80c and 95c. Black calfskin; spring heels.

Fifth Floor—the Shoe Store Annex.

Brushes—Bargains Howard Hair Brushes are famous—are kept famous of course by the maker's care and progressiveness.

We have taken his stock-on-hand of 90c and $1 Brushes and shall sell them to-day at 50c.

Other brush bargains are ready as well—these—

15c to 50c—Half dozen kinds of wood-back hand brushes. Should be at least a third more. At the same prices, and as many kinds, wood-back nail brushes; exceptionally good values.

10c and 15c—Assorted lot of French tooth brushes; 3 and 4 rows of bristles. Nearly all of these are 25c brushes. Fifth floor.

Colored Dress Goods

AT ONE-FOURTH TO ONE-THIRD PRICES

An imported fancy suiting, for instance, at 50c that we brought over to sell at $2.

There's a whipcord suiting also at 50c that came in a $2 group.

Are we bad managers that we are forced to take such losses? No, but we are very liberal providers—and we keep stocks up to high-water mark till the very end of the season—give you several hundred choices whether you come for a dress-pattern in late September or mid-December.

We lose heavily on what we force our, but it is only a drop in the bucket as measured by the whole business—and you like the store all the better for it.

Some of these lots were reduced considerable early in the month—but now comes the decisive clearance. It seems fairest to compare the price with the full early figures—because it takes the place of long-drawn-out descriptions.

50c for $2 French Drap d'Ete
50c for $1.75 French Camel's-hair Suiting
50c for $1.50 Satin-faced Granite Cloth
50c for $1.50 Two-toned Wool Velours
50c for $1.50 Whipcord Covert Cloth
75c for $2.25 French Camel's-hair Suiting

And there is more than we tell of.

Fourth avenue and Tenth street, Main floor.

Belts The new ribbon belts are charmingly pretty—stiffened where they shouldn't pucker, yet with all the careless grace of a narrow sash. 50c, 75c, $1—black or colors; 85c, but only black.

And now we've collars to match—they don't crush down like unsustained ribbon, nor do they look rigidly prim. A success. 50c and 75c—colors or black.

There's much news of leather belts to tell—but let's shorten the story into an invitation to come and see them.

Stout figures are comfortably helped by the new flare belt of leather, that fits the waist line and spreads wider below it. $1 and $1.50.

All these belts at one selling place.

Broadway toward Tenth street.

Warm, Durable Petticoats These have more to recommend them, however, than just warmth and durability. They're prettily made in the newest styles—and they're most moderately priced. Some of black sateen, lined with flannelette, with deep ruffle, corded and lined with crinoline, are 75c each. Some of melton cloth at 85c, $1 and $1.25. Of mohair, at $2.25 and $2.75.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Women's Handkerchiefs

LESS THAN HALF PRICE

Very much less, in many cases, for of this lot of 1440 many would sell at $1 a piece if perfect.

There's the rub: "Seconds," but it is chiefly in name—the Belfast shippers have to inspect the goods very closely, as it doesn't pay to send things through the Custom House and then have them rejected.

Hemstitched, embroidered, lace-edged, some worked in colored silks—handkerchiefs of the qualities, barring little lapses, that fetch 25c to $1 a piece.

These are all marked 12½c

Broadway.

If There is a Boy to Dress

We are very careful dressers of boys—use fabrics for boys' wear that are in every way as good and strong as those we make into clothes for men. Seems strange that we need say this, when you know so well that boys are hard on clothes. Yet you can count on your fingers the stores that do the boys' clothing business carefully; you can count on your thumbs the stores that are both careful and entirely fair in their prices. We absolutely will not sell clothes for either man or boy unless we know that the fabric is strictly all-wool. "Commercially all-wool" means a fabric not over one-third cotton; our "all-wool" means "100 per cent. wool."

Well, just now we are straightening up the stocks—selling at a loss whatever we have too much or too little of. Hence—

Double-breasted Jacket Suits at $3.50 instead of $5. For ages 7 to 16.

Top Coats, frieze, for boys of 3 to 16, at $3.

Sailor Suits for boys of 3 to 12, at $5 instead of $6 and $7.50.

Reefers of blue chinchilla, for boys of 13 to 16, at $5. Values up to $7.50.

Knee Trousers, at 65c and 75c.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Enameled Kitchen Utensils Half Prices "Seconds"—so classed because of little blemishes. There's no serious fault in any piece, no leaky utensils in the lot. Simply imperfections in the enamel that count for nothing in the usefulness of the articles, yet count for a reduction to half prices:

Coffee and Tea Pots, 21c to 39c.
Pie Plates, 5c to 13c.
Muffin Pans, 28c to 38c.
Cake Moulds, 15c to 18c.
Pudding Pans, 10c to 20c.
Milk Pans, 8c to 23c.
Covered Buckets, 15c to 35c.
Dish Pans, 8 qts., 28c.
Water Buckets, 12 qts., 48c.
Wash Basins, 14c to 20c.

Basement.

Calendars A few thousand too many of the pretty Calendars for 1900—so the quick way out of it is to sell them at five cents

though they were published to sell at 25c to $1.50.

Book Store, Ninth street.

Laundry Soap This is Fairbank's Mascot Soap—you doubtless know it. But did you ever know it at $2 a box of 100 cakes? That's the price here on this lot—several hundred boxes.

Basement.

Men's Collars 50c a Dozen

We sold sixteen hundred and four dozens last Saturday. To-day we have less than twelve hundred dozen—and no more to be had at the price, so far as we can see.

Troy made, Troy laundered—but they didn't pass Troy inspection. Yet the hurts do not hurt, as you can easily see.

All normal sizes; all the regular and accepted styles. Two-thirds of the lot are linen collars; the rest are cotton—no mix-up. We tell you plainly which is which.

Men's Shirts at 50c

Percale—of the regular $1 quality, with detachable cuffs; and White Shirts of the $1.75 to $3 qualities. All usual sizes among the percales; but the white shirts only in sizes 13½, 14, 14½, 16½, 17 and 17½—that's why we cut the prices so much.

Men's Store, Ninth street.

Flannel Waists Perfectly fitting, neatly made and finished garments in numerous styles and qualities—two that are especially good values:

One at $1.25—Solid colors, red, navy blue and black; full front, yoke and French back; dress sleeves, detachable collar.

The other, $1.75—Red, navy blue and black; full front; prettily braided yoke and French back, flare cuffs, detachable collar.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Jabots and Collars Chiffon; silk; whatever of fluffiness makes a pretty neck-fixing—

25c and 50c

—though the finest of them will compare with the earlier lots at $3.

How does it come about? We set some nimble fingers to working up the remnants from the lace stock. You'll be pleased with the results.

Broadway.

Men's Trousers More of the stylish $7 and $8 trousers are here to sell at $5. They're appreciated—going rapidly. And there's another collection at a lower price—equally interesting. Cheviot trousers, blue or black; about 300 left over from suits; the lowest priced sort was a good $3.50 value, and many are fairly worth $5. Choice at $2.50.

Second Floor.

Formerly A. T. Stewart & Co.

JOHN WANAMAKER

Broadway, Fourth Ave., Ninth and Tenth Streets.

THE GAS WAR SITUATION

Standard Executive Committee Makes No Attack on Mr. Sage.

Meeting Not Wholly Agreeable, a Director Says—More Charges Against the Consolidated Directorate.

The meeting yesterday afternoon in the Bank of Commerce Building of the Executive Committee of the Standard Gaslight Company was attended by Directors Terry, Tilford, and McAlpin and President Sage. The absentee was Charles Dana, who is sick. Nothing happened. Mr. Sage was not "talked to," as at the monthly meeting of the board, and the session was short. One of the Directors said:

"The meeting was not as agreeable as some of the former ones have been. Somehow or other, while no one said it, there was a feeling that it was not pleasant to meet Mr. Sage."

After the meeting Mr. Sage went to his private office, and sent word that he had nothing to say about the meeting or the gas question. Mr. Sage has not been communicative on many matters of late. One of his old friends who visited him yesterday remarked this and commented: "I can't really make out what has come over Mr. Sage these days. I don't think he understands himself. It seems to me as though he were becoming very sly."

A report that the Protective Committee had control of four-fifths of the shares, and that the only stock not in its control was included in the Sage and Wallace C. Andrews blocks, was denied promptly by a member of the committee, who said that the committee had not yet a control of the majority of the stock.

B. B. McAlpin of counsel for the committee said that he could only say that its efforts were meeting with success. As to the purchasers of the Sage and Andrews holdings, the story that they were acquired by the New Amsterdam Gas Company was repeated and as promptly denied by those who should have full information on the subject.

George A. Lamb of Lamb & Voss, who appealed to the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company to attend the annual meeting on Monday, or to send him their proxies, in an advertisement which arraigned the administration of the company, issued statements and explanations last night. These said in part:

"For years the policy of the Consolidated Gas Company has been to oppose, by every means in its power, the passage of legislation to reduce the price of gas. The Directors, however, by an apparently voluntary reduction in price, have inflicted more drastic punishment upon the Consolidated Gas Company and greater pecuniary loss to its stockholders than any Legislature ever dared to suggest. This reduction has probably already caused the company a cash loss of nearly $6,000,000, and the stockholders, by sharp reductions in their dividends, have been compelled to bear this loss.

"The most hostile legislation that ever menaced the Consolidated Gas Company was the introduction of a bill to reduce the price of gas to 90 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. Yet the Directors of the Consolidated Gas Company to-day continue to sell gas at 65 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, despite the fact that all necessity for the continuance of such a disastrous policy has apparently passed away.

"My clients intend to find out whether this course is pursued in the true interests of all the stockholders or whether it is part of a great speculative scheme for the benefit of a few of the Directors and their friends at the expense of the stockholders.

"If meritorious reasons prevail for a continuance of the present course of the Directors, though that course involve present and future sacrifices for the stockholders, my clients will be found among the first to give to the Directors their hearty co-operation and help. I may say, frankly, however, that my clients at present feel that the extraordinary situation of affairs now prevailing is not one that has been created or exists for the benefit of the average stockholder, but is one that is maintained by a few men for the benefit of themselves.

"In reply to a very large number of communications which have been addressed to me by stockholders of the company, I have uniformly requested that instead of sending proxies to me, they should personally attend the meeting or send their own agent to represent them. I have accepted proxies only from stockholders residing out of town or those who could not personally attend the meeting. It is not sufficient for the Directors that they should have at this meeting the support of a majority of their stockholders. A conscientious and intelligent Directorate will not be satisfied with anything short of the hearty co-operation and sympathy of all of its stockholders, and this co-operation is an essential of successful corporate management.

"This is a matter which affects the pecuniary interests of all the stockholders, and it is desirable that they should devote to it their personal attention and be guided by their own judgment."

FOUR MEN FALL SEVEN STORIES.

Loss of Control Over an Elevator Causes a Peculiar Accident.

The fall of a hod-hoisting elevator in a new building at 429 and 431 Fourth Avenue yesterday afternoon caused four men to be precipitated from the seventh story to the cellar. All were badly hurt. They are James Deegan of 143 Ninth Street, Long Island City, fractured ribs and internal injuries; Giuseppe Gastello of 432 East Thirteenth Street, fracture of right thigh; Jacob Carboni of 114 Roosevelt Street, ribs broken and spine injured, and Jacob Boni of 981 Third Avenue, left leg fractured and internal injuries.

The building where the accident occurred is owned by Thomas H. Bell of 145 West Ninety-sixth Street.

The injured men were standing on two boards placed across the elevator shaft on either side of the hod-hoisting apparatus. The elevator ascended at a high rate of speed and struck the cross beams to which the pulleys were attached. The beams gave way, and the elevator, loaded with the hods, started downward. It struck the boards on which the men were standing, and the elevator, hods, planks, and the men fell together to the cellar beneath the building. Two of the men alighted in a box of mortar, but there was not enough of the material in the box to prevent them being injured. All of the men were taken to Bellevue Hospital, where it was said last night that they all had a fair chance for recovery.

AUTOMOBILE AND CYCLE SHOW.

Opening at Madison Square To-night—Managers' Expectations.

The fifth annual Cycle and Automobile Show will open to-night at the Madison Square Garden. The managers of the show declare that it will be the greatest of its kind ever held in this country.

It is expected that the largest amount of interest will be displayed in the automobiles. All kinds of these vehicles will be shown, from runabouts, costing from $600 to $1,000, to broughams, ranging in price from $2,000 to $6,000. Automobile coaches, victorias, surreys, traps, and delivery wagons will also be on view, together with an automobile theatre 'bus. Many prominent members of the Automobile Club of America have promised to visit the Garden this evening.

The bicycle portion of the show will, it is said, be extremely interesting. In the 1900 model the general lines of last year's machine are retained, the improvements being mostly with rgard to details.

The show will be open daily from 9:30 o'clock A. M. to 10:30 P. M.

Pennsylvania Alumni Dinner.

The annual dinner of the New York Society of Alumni of the University of Pennsylvania is to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria this evening at 7 o'clock. Among the guests will be the following, representing the university and the various departments: Provost Charles C. Harrison; Dr. J. M. Da Costa, department of medicine; George M. Dallas, department of law, and William W. Porter, representing the alumni. The members of the Dinner Committee are William B. Boulton, Henry R. Towne, S. Mallet-Prevost, William H. Patterson, Robert C. Hill, H. Galbraith Ward, and Harry Bowers Mingle.

Gets Two Years for Stealing Pug Dog.

James Kelly of 232 West Thirty-second Street was sentenced to two years' imprisonment yesterday for the theft of a pug dog. Mrs. Lily Mason of 237 West Thirty-fourth Street, the owner of the dog, said in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions that the pug was unusually fat and ugly. "I would not sell it for any amount of money," she added. "When I lost it I was so broken up that I was confined to my bed for months."

Nobody of Intelligence in these days is ignorant of the importance of purity in all articles of food. We take it for granted that every one appreciates fully the value of a baking powder which is absolutely pure. Such a baking powder is

SOLAR

"IT RISES EVERYWHERE."

It is an absolutely pure cream of tartar baking powder, the only kind which any one having consideration for the human stomach should use. After its purity, freshness and strength its next merit—and a most important one to millions of housewives—is that It Is 8 Cents a Pound Cheaper than other cream of tartar powders, because it is not made by a trust.

CUSHMAN BROS. CO., Selling Agents.

New York, 78 Hudson st.
Boston, 34 Central st.
Philadelphia, 125 So. Front st.
Washington, 600 F st., N. W.
Pittsburg, McCance Block.

STATE TRUST EXAMINATION

Gen. Andrews Denies He Made Public Facts Concerning It.

President Johnston Lays Blame on Mr. Decker, but Mr. Bacon Assumes All Responsibility.

Abram Kling's fight against the State Trust Company was enlivened yesterday by statements and counter statements. Gen. Andrews, who has hitherto been reticent in the matter, was drawn out by a previous statement of President Johnston of the State Trust Company, which struck him as being an insinuation that he, Gen. Andrews, had revealed secrets. He accordingly issued the following:

"My attention has been called to the following statement, which appears in the morning's papers as coming from President Johnston of the State Trust Company:

"'It is a remarkable circumstance that from Albany we hear that the official reports are confidential, and doubtless are treated so by the officials, but all the same the proceedings against this institution have been conducted in such a way that there has come into the possession of persons anxious to use them to our injury, records which, instead of being treated as confidential, are daily distorted in the morning press with false imputations and references.'

"I have from the beginning absolutely refused to discuss with any person or in any degree the affairs of the State Trust Company, but the inference from President Johnston's public statement is that the publicity which has recently been given to the affairs of the company has been due directly to the manner in which my official investigation was conducted. As I am solely responsible for the manner in which the investigation was made, I cannot permit this inference, if correct, to remain uncontradicted.

"Possibly Mr. Johnston is not aware of the fact that before the special investigation was ordered there had been carefully collected by the minority stockholders a great deal of data in regard to the State Trust Company, including not merely Mr. Kling's petition, but alleged copies of every loan card of the State Trust Company and other important data. Although I had no control over or authority in regard to this information, it was at my urgent personal request that it was withheld from the press until my official investigation had been completed, and until both the Superintendent of Banks and myself had been able to make a favorable statement as to the financial condition of the company.

"I have carefully kept in my possession all memoranda which were made during the investigation, either by myself or my two assistants, including the original stenographer's notes, and know that no information in regard to the company's affairs, directly or indirectly, has been made public by any one connected with me in the investigation. My original report was handed to Superintendent Kilburn and a copy to the Governor. I am responsible for what I have said to them, and for nothing else which has been said in regard to the company, except a favorable announcement as to its financial condition."

When Mr. Johnston read Gen. Andrews's remarks he decided to issue this explanation, to the effect that not Gen. Andrews, but Mr. Decker, the ex-Secretary of the company, who assisted in the Andrews investigation, was the man who "doubtless" revealed the company's affairs:

"I have never entertained a belief, or even a suspicion, that Gen. Andrews or any official from the Banking Department had furnished information regarding the affairs of the State Trust Company to the press or to any one not entitled to receive it. My reference in the statement which he quotes was to the fact that when Gen. Andrews came to the State Trust Company for the purpose of making an examination he was accompanied by the former Secretary, to whom I have before referred. Doubtless he was the person through whom information was improperly given out. He was not a shareholder of the company."

The last statement was shown to Gen. Andrews and he refused to comment on it. Charles P. Bacon, Mr. Kling's attorney, said, however:

"Mr. Decker had absolutely nothing to do with the matter. I made the thing public myself. Mr. Johnston seems to think it his duty to protect the secrets of the borrowers from his institution instead of the stockholders and depositors." Mr. Bacon said he delayed the publication of Mr. Kling's petition twenty-four hours so as to give the men in the State Trust Company "time to make good, so to speak, what was not good." This, he said, was done at Gen. Andrews's request.

"If it is necessary," said he, "after the affair is over, I will appear before Gov. Roosevelt, not as a lawyer but as a citizen, and demand that he appoint some one to re-examine every trust company in this city. I want an honest man at the head of the State Banking Department."

Mr. Bacon referred in vehement terms to having been shadowed by State Trust Company detectives, who he supposed wanted to involve him in some kind of public row so as to blacken his character. He said he caught one of the detectives on the street and told him to report to his employers that since they had hired men to dog his steps he would make things warmer for them than ever before. "The detectives were taken off in five minutes," said he.

"A goodly medicine for my aching bones."—Shakespeare.

Maryland Club

PURE RYE is used almost exclusively in the leading hospitals, and recommended by physicians generally because it is pure and wholesome. It is nutritious as well as stimulating. Some whiskies are stimulating but not nutritious. They are green, not ripe. Maryland Club is ripe with age. It tastes old because it is old.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

CAHN, BELT & CO., Baltimore, Md.

HENS' EGGS IN RARE OPERATION

Inner Covering of the Shells Used for the First Time in the United States for Grafting Purposes.

Edgar A. Garbutt, thirty-six years old, of 204 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, will leave the Seney Hospital, Brooklyn, to-day, after having undergone one of the most dangerous operations ever performed. Garbutt fell off his bicycle two years ago, and as a result leaves the hospital minus the whole of his left arm, his left shoulder blade, and the left side of his collar bone.

Mrs. Garbutt, in order that Garbutt might leave the hospital a well man, offered to allow skin to be taken from her body and grafted on to her husband. A nephew of Garbutt and a young man, both employed by Garbutt, also offered to make the same sacrifice, and their offers were about to be accepted, when it was suggested by one of the surgeons that the inner covering of the shells of hens' eggs be used for grafting purposes.

After Garbutt fell from his wheel he noticed a slight bruise on his left arm above the elbow, and three weeks later felt severe pains in the arm. He placed himself under the care of a physician in the Post-Graduate Hospital, and remained with the left side of his body incased in plaster of paris for six weeks. He then communicated with a well-known surgeon in Brooklyn, and as a result went to the Seney Hospital, where, after a consultation, it was decided that the bone of the patient's left arm was in such a diseased condition that part of it would have to be removed.

The head bone of the arm was then taken out, and it was believed no further operation would be necessary. The disease had eaten its way through Garbutt's whole arm, however, and a second operation was performed, when the whole of Garbutt's left arm was removed. Then it was found the disease had eaten its way into the man's left shoulder blade and into the left side of his collar bone. The surgeons, after much deliberation, decided to remove the shoulder blade and part of the collar bone, although there had been but four such operations previously performed with success.

The operation was performed on Garbutt on Dec. 10 last, and on account of the septic condition of the patient, it was found that in order to bring the slits of flesh together after the operation skin grafting would have to be resorted to. Mrs. Garbutt willingly offered to sacrifice part of her skin, but the surgeons were loath to take the large amount necessary from her, so she consulted Garbutt's nephew and the young man employed by the cyclist, and they consented to help out.

A surgeon who had read extensively of the German discovery that the inner covering of the shell of a hen's egg had been used in replacing skin grafting, suggested that eggs be secured. His suggestion was accepted, and for the first time in the history of surgery in the United States the membrane of the shell of hens' eggs was used, and the grafting process proved successful.

GLEASON GAVE AWAY MONEY.

Ex-Mayor and Petitioner in Bankruptcy on the Stand.

Proceedings in the petition of Patrick J. Gleason, ex-Mayor of Long Island City, to be declared a voluntary bankrupt, were continued yesterday before Referee in Bankruptcy Wadley at Long Island City. Mr. Gleason's creditors were represented by Mr. Burnett, who expressed the desire of his clients to oppose Mr. Gleason's petition, and to ascertain what had become of the property which the petitioner had possessed at various times.

Mr. Gleason was placed upon the stand and questioned by Mr. Burnett regarding his real estate, bond, and stock holdings, and his disposal of them. The witness was compelled at several points of the examination to take medicine to stimulate the action of his heart, which has been weak for several years. He could not remember what stocks and bonds he had owned, he said. He had owned a great deal of real estate, some of which had been sold under foreclosure, and some voluntarily at a large profit. He testified that he had made $60,000 on the sale of the property at 112 Front Street. He remembered that $20,000 of that amount he had lost in backing "a fellow with an invention." He also told of selling other property, but could not remember what he did with the money. He might have given it away, he said; in fact, had given a great deal away.

When the examination ended for the day Mr. Gleason expressed regret. He said he was "just getting warmed up," and felt like going on for an hour or so longer. Mr. Burnett, however, had had enough for the day.

THE FOUNDATION OF HEALTH

Abbey's Salt is Different.

"THE 'SALT' OF SALTS."

Don't confound Abbey's Effervescent Salt with mineral salts, Rochelle salts or Epsom salts.

Abbey's Salt is made principally from fruit acids. It is mild and gentle, though efficacious in its action. It is so pleasant to the taste that even children take it eagerly. It is the best aperient ever made and is equally good for old and young. Its regular and constant use will keep you in good health.

There are some people who never do anything until they have to. Don't be one of them. Take care of your health while you have it. Retain it by the daily use of Abbey's Effervescent Salt.

25c., 50c. and $1 per bottle. All druggists.

FREE Send two 2-ct. stamps, to pay postage and packing, and we will mail you one of the most dainty and beautiful colored calendar creations of the year.

The Abbey Effervescent Salt Co., Dept. E, 13 Murray St., New York.

USED DAILY, GIVES HEALTH.

SPORTING GOODS.

The Dunlop Pneumatic Tire

in its improved form is on exhibition at Stands 10 and 11 at the Cycle Show in Madison Square Garden.

It is worth seeing.

The tire is shown in sizes suitable for bicycles, carriages and automobiles.

These are the only tools you'll need.

THE AMERICAN DUNLOP TIRE CO.,
Belleville, N. J. Chicago, Ill

DRY GOODS.

ARE YOU WEARING OUR GLOVES? DUCHess, Albert, or Lavalliere? No better made and none as reasonable. JAMMES, 4 W. 27th St., near 5th Av.

RISE IN ASSESSED VALUES

Controller Morgan's Figures for New York State in 1899.

TOTAL IS NOW $5,562,204,198

Increase Is $375,568,234—Real Estate Rises in Value, While Personal Property Decreases.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—State Controller William J. Morgan has compiled statistics showing the assessed valuation of real and personal property in the several counties of the State as returned to his office by Boards of Supervisors for the year 1899, and has issued a table setting forth the same. This shows the total valuation of real and personal property to be $5,562,204,198, as compared with $5,186,635,964 in 1898, an increase of $375,568,234. There has been a large increase in the value of real property and a decrease in the value of personal property as compared with the preceding year. The total value of real property is $4,813,779,260, as compared with a value of $4,410,918,435 in 1898, an increase of $393,860,825. The total value of personal property is $748,424,938, as compared with $766,617,529 in 1898, a decrease of $18,192,591.

Upon these statistics the State Board of Equalization will equalize valuations for the fiscal year commencing Oct. 1, 1900.

The Controller was compelled to use in the case of Erie, Schnectady, Wayne, and Westchester Counties the figures of 1898, because the Boards of Supervisors of those counties have been unable to certify the figures for 1899. This is the experience yearly, and in order to publish this table on time the Controller uses the figures of the year previous for these counties.

The total valuation of real estate in New York County is fixed at $2,178,605,905, which is an increase of $322,137,982, as compared with the preceding year. The personal property in that county has decreased in value, however, being fixed at $490,482,930, a decrease of $18,539,519.

In Kings County there was an increase in both real and personal property. The value of the real estate is fixed at $669,822,267, an increase of $39,714,525, and of personal property at $45,270,713, an increase of $11,-681,962.

Nassau County, like New York County, shows an increase in real and a decrease in personal property. The values are, respectively, $21,176,703, an increase of $1,356,041, and $1,536,260, a decrease of $44,620.

Richmond County shows an increase in the value of both real and personal property. The real is valued at $40,264,692, an increase of $15,893,141, and the personal at $8,858,830, an increase of $2,210,181.

The other larger counties of the State show the following: Queens—Valuation of real estate, $103,752,600, an increase of $21,-162,057; valuation of personal property, $6,314,632, an increase of $4,306,232.

Albany—Valuation of real, $91,066,799, a decrease of $46,068; personal, $9,562,940, a decrease of $265,886.

Rensselaer—Valuation of real, $71,302,808, a decrease of $45,899; personal, $7,551,432, a decrease of $405,499.

Monroe—Valuation of real estate, $137,-058,462; an increase of $355,977; personal, $10,217,432, a decrease of $3,030,068.

Onondaga—Valuation of real, $103,248,842, an increase of $1,002,462; personal, $15,124,-626, an increase of $1,230,609.

Oneida—Valuation of real estate, $76,815,-539, a decrease of $5,160,032; personal, $18,-163,208, a decrease of $92,739.

The valuations on real and personal property in each county of the State are as follows:

Counties.	Assessed Valuation of Real Estate.	Assessed Valuation of Personal Property.
Albany	$91,066,799	$9,562,940
Allegany	13,608,866	2,031,784
Broome	31,713,448	3,221,588
Cattaraugus	22,892,027	2,260,616
Cayuga	29,255,317	3,290,442
Chautauqua	35,121,486	3,266,215
Chemung	23,121,548	1,714,618
Chenango	14,615,486	2,247,204
Clinton	6,038,214	792,003
Columbia	22,102,954	2,014,828
Cortland	12,490,986	1,403,127
Delaware	13,099,517	1,759,580
Dutchess	40,628,128	5,507,071
*Erie	271,977,192	17,618,263
Essex	9,833,697	1,093,875
Franklin	9,850,308	1,142,449
Fulton	12,388,650	1,606,342
Genesee	19,912,826	3,056,595
Greene	11,820,751	1,600,040
Hamilton	3,244,790	289,099
Herkimer	23,550,435	2,727,137
Jefferson	32,686,956	4,274,143
Kings	669,822,267	45,270,713
Lewis	8,846,653	1,321,377
Livingston	23,194,952	3,013,223
Madison	18,049,906	2,903,204
Monroe	137,058,462	10,217,432
Montgomery	24,752,427	2,955,576
Nassau	21,176,703	1,536,041
New York	2,178,605,905	490,482,930
Niagara	41,356,213	2,295,649
Oneida	56,815,559	13,163,598
Onondaga	103,248,842	15,124,620
Ontario	26,535,284	3,104,027
Orange	35,891,904	4,263,747
Orleans	14,629,495	1,560,464
Oswego	24,586,324	2,613,402
Otsego	19,378,209	2,899,533
Putnam	6,912,500	1,245,990
Queens	103,752,600	6,314,032
Rensselaer	71,302,808	7,551,422
Richmond	40,264,692	3,828,890
Rockland	16,810,870	932,117
St. Lawrence	34,811,770	3,058,965
Saratoga	23,508,405	1,761,365
*Schenectady	15,310,694	1,490,485
Schoharie	10,946,022	1,562,774
Schuyler	6,023,823	685,213
Seneca	13,902,401	1,866,989
Steuben	32,033,340	2,621,322
Suffolk	45,147,907	3,680,732
Sullivan	5,573,900	275,683
Tioga	12,274,552	1,383,058
Tompkins	15,683,902	1,043,231
Ulster	26,665,270	2,802,425
Warren	7,425,923	1,863,695
Washington	16,782,059	2,558,057
*Wayne	22,359,423	2,351,581
*Westchester	166,869,055	19,811,880
Wyoming	13,349,072	1,850,371
Yates	10,103,335	878,005

*Figures of 1898.

LEGISLATURE'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—There were but twelve Senators in the chamber this morning, and no business other than the introduction of a few bills was attempted. An adjournment was taken until Monday evening.

In the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—In the Assembly this morning the bill of Mr. Hill appropriating $11,000, the unexpended balance appropriated for the canal advisory commission, and authorizing the same to be expended by the Superintendent of Public Works, was passed.

Mr. Allds, acting for Mr. Fallows, as Chairman of the Committee on Contested Seats, offered the usual resolution, which permits the committee to sit in counties of the State other than Albany County. There are two contests—one in New York and one in Onondaga County.

Other bills passed were: Mr. Allds, providing for the payment of the balance due newspapers for the publication of the general and session laws; Mr. Allds, releasing to Sherburne Union Free School of Sherburne the title of the State of New York in and to certain lands.

The Assembly then adjourned until 8:30 P. M. Monday.

OCEAN PARKS FOR BROOKLYN.

Bill Introduced at Albany Authorizes One on Coney Island.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—Assemblyman De Graw to-day introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a public recreation park in front of Bath Beach and Bensonhurst along the shore of Gravesend Bay, and extending up to Cropsey Avenue.

If the public interests demand it, the Commissioners provided for in the bill may include within the bounds of said park the lands between the Atlantic Ocean on the south, West Seventeenth Street on the east, Coney Island Creek and Gravesend Bay on the north, and the land of the Norton Point Land and Improvement Company on the west.

NEW KIND OF STOCK CORPORATION.

Assembly Bill Designed to Aid Men of Small Means to Co-operate.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—Assemblyman Minton of New York to-day introduced a stock corporations law bill, the object of which is to protect the investor, and at the same time to prevent the watering of stock.

It requires payment in cash for all shares issued and prohibits the purchase of plants and properties with shares of stock, which are to be issued at par to such bidders as signify their willingness to accept the lowest dividends for the use of their money.

The proposed plan does not affect existing corporations nor existing modes of incorporation, but permits persons to organize a corporation of the kind specified if they desire to do so. It contains nothing obligatory.

Mr. Minton, explaining his bill, said: "The especial advantages to the community which will be derived from my bill are the opening up of a new opportunity for investment to men of small means, who are now practically excluded from corporate enterprises, and the cheapening of goods to consumers. As the dividends would be fixed by the stockholders the corporation would have no reason for trying to reduce wages after the profits were sufficient to pay the dividends so fixed, inasmuch as the excess would not go to the stockholders but to the State on dissolution.

Amendment to Good Roads Law.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—Mr. Baker of Onondaga introduced a bill in the Assembly today amending the good roads law. It provides that all moneys raised by towns for highway purposes shall be placed under the direction of the Town Boards, to be distributed in such manner as they may deem just and proper. Under the present law the Commissioner of Highways distributes such moneys.

Other Bills in the Senate.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—These bills were introduced in the Senate to-day:

Senator COGGESHALL—Fixing the compensation of Loan Commissioners for superintending each sale $10; for preparing notices of each sale, $2; for drawing and executing a conveyance, $2; which compensation shall be retained out of the moneys collected from such sale.

Senator RAINES—Appropriating $15,000 for dredging the harbor and entrance thereto at the foot of Canandaigua Lake.

Senator BRACKETT—Amending the Code of Civil Procedure so that the word creditor shall include any person having a claim for the expense of administration or any person having a claim for funeral expenses.

Senator FORD—Appropriating $5,000 for the care, maintenance, and repairs of the quarantine station.

In the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—The following bills were today introduced in the Assembly:

Mr. FOWLER—Appropriating $35,000 for dredging and deepening Cnautauqua Lake.

Mr. POST—Providing that any medical officer in the service of the State hospitals, who may be physically disabled by reason of any injury or illness incurred in the discharge of his duties, shall receive a pension.

Mr. DOUGHTY—Providing that no contract for electric lighting in the County of Nassau shall be made unless the petition signed by a majority of the taxpayers represents 50 per cent. of the assessed value of the property in such lighting district.

Mr. McKEOWN—Providing for the inspection of cold storage warehouses by Boards of Health in cities of the first class. The board is to appoint four Inspectors whose compensation shall be fixed by it.

Mr. HEEMSEN—To legalize certain improvement bonds issued by the town of Gravesend.

Mr. BURNETT—Appropriating $15,000 for deepening and excavating the harbor and channel at the foot of Canandaigua Lake, and to protect the same by extending the pier and breakwater.

Mr. TRAINOR—Senator Grady's bill, making provision for the payment of the salaries of the school teachers in New York City.

MORE PLAGUE IN HONOLULU.

Authorities Burn Chinatown to Prevent Spread of Disease.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—The steamer Doric arrived from Asiatic ports, via Honolulu, to-day. From Honolulu comes news of a fresh outburst of the plague, six deaths having occurred between the departure of the steamer China, which arrived here on Monday, and the departure of the Doric, which left Honolulu Jan. 13. This brings the total number of deaths from the plague for the present outbreak up to eighteen, and it is understood that there are twenty-six cases in the hands of the health authorities.

The Doric brings the news that Honolulu's Chinatown is being burned and that every effort is being made to stamp out the disease. The Doric did not dock at Honolulu, but the Hawaiian mails were taken out to her in tugs. The local health authorities have detained the vessel, pending an investigation.

WILL TRY TO REACH CAPE NOME.

Miners at Dawson to Attempt the River Trip This Winter.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Vice Consul Morrison, at Dawson City, reports to the State. Department that the excitement caused by reports of the phenomenal richness of the Cape Nome goldfields has not by any means abated. Many miners will attempt to make the trip out of the Klondike this Winter down the river, which, the Consul says, seems a foolhardy undertaking.

While Dawson has lost in popularity during the past Summer, it has gained in wealth, and much money has been spent to make it a thriving town, equipped with sewers, drains, and other improvements. The gold output for the past year was estimated at $15,000,000, $3,000,000 more than the preceding year, and better results are expected in the future from the introduction of mining machinery.

The Tugboat Daylight Burned.

The tugboat Daylight, Capt. Charles Peterson, was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning, while the boat was lying at the foot of First Avenue, College Point. The fire was first discovered by Policeman John Kraemer, who aroused the crew of four men. They barely had time to escape. The Captain lost a gold watch and chain and $40 in cash. The crew also lost their personal effects. The fireboat William F. Havemeyer extinguished the fire. The loss is about $5,000, covered by insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown. The Daylight was owned by the Williams Towing Company of 106 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn.

Competing for Cicquel's Post.

Seven Chiefs of Battalion of the Fire Department appeared before Chief Examiner Ireland at the rooms of the Civil Service Commission yesterday and competed in examination for promotion to the position of Deputy Chief of Department, made vacant by the death of Benjamin A. Cicquel. Not one of the Fire Chiefs of the Borough of Brooklyn and Queens entered the race, most of them looking upon Acting Deputy Chief Thomas J. Ahearn as the probable successor to Cicquel. Acting Deputy Chief Ahearn was among the seven who took the examination.

Telegraph Lines Extended.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and the Postal Telegraph Company are extending their lines through Long Island. The former has given out contracts for building a new trunk line from Brooklyn to Riverhead. Seven new central offices are to be opened in the Borough of Queens. The company is to expend nearly $2,000,000 in improvements on Long Island. The Postal Telegraph Company has nearly completed its line through Brooklyn, Queens and Nassau Counties, and a part of Suffolk to Fire Island.

Funeral of Mrs. Hannah May Stetson.

The funeral of Mrs. Hannah May Stetson, the actress, known professionally as Hannah May Ingham, took place yesterday from her home at 443 Lexington Avenue. Mrs. Stetson died from apoplexy Tuesday. She was leading lady of the Murray Hill Theatre company. The service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. William F. Crowe of the Church of the Atonement, in West Eighty-first Street, of which Mrs. Stetson was a member. Many floral pieces were sent to the house by friends of the dead woman.

Unknown Man Killed at Clubhouse.

An unknown man fell into a hatchway at the New York Athletic Clubhouse, Fifty-ninth Street and Sixth Avenue, last evening, and was instantly killed. Those who saw the accident say the man leaned against an iron gate leading to a hatchway over the engine room. The gate opened and he was precipitated into the engine room, a distance of thirty-five feet. He was apparently about thirty-five years old.

Three Killed on the Central Tracks.

BUFFALO, Jan. 19.—M. Daily, J. Kelley, and M. Palmer, New York Central section men, were run down at Crittenden during a heavy fog this morning and killed. It is said the men stepped out of the way to avoid a freight train and were run down by an express train.

The Teutonic to Sail Feb. 3.

The White Star line has changed the sailing of the steamer Teutonic from Wednesday, Jan. 31, to Saturday, Feb. 3. The change has been made to accommodate the postal authorities, as there would have been no mail steamer on that date.

The New York Times

TO-MORROW

Will devote the seven columns opposite the Editorial Page to the following articles:

Problems of Bookselling in England

By SIR WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," "For Faith and Freedom," &c.

Capital Punishment Not a Deterrent of Crime

By GEN. NEWTON M. CURTIS.

Municipal Trading in Great Britain

By EDWARD W. BEMIS of the Bureau of Economic Research.

Delagoa Bay

By POULTNEY BIGELOW, Author of "White Man's Africa," "History of the German Struggle for Liberty," &c.

INTERESTING ARTICLES ON THE DRAMA, MUSIC, AND SOCIETY, TOGETHER WITH A VARIETY OF ENTERTAINING MISCELLANEOUS MATTER, WILL BE FOUND IN TO-MORROW'S ISSUE OF

The New York Times

Sunday THREE Cents.

Daily ONE CENT.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

TEACHERS TO BE PAID.

December Salaries Will Be Ready on Monday—Mr. Coler Again Criticises School Board Methods.

The teachers in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx will receive their December salaries on Monday, according to the plan outlined by Controller Coler. Police stations will be notified when the checks are ready for distribution, and policemen on post will carry the word to the schoolhouses.

In explanation of the delay in sending out the checks, Controller Coler said yesterday:

"The payrolls for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx have been somewhat delayed by complications which the unsatisfactory condition of the records of that School Board have made it difficult to surmount. Superintendent Jasper has, however, lent the most willing assistance to the Commissioners of Accounts, and I am assured that the Manhattan and Bronx troubles will be finally solved this week.

"I can readily believe that the Manhattan School Board could not, as it claimed, accomplish in two months what the Commissioners of Accounts have done in two weeks, but the reason for these enormous difficulties lies wholly with the bad system of keeping accounts and records which prevails. Under proper methods the necessary information could be furnished at once.

"As soon as these troubles are finally disposed of, I shall make it my business to see that proper records are kept in the future, and I believe that the inauguration of a system which will make the teachers sure of getting their pay on a certain date will be worth all the trouble that has ensued. I shall also endeavor to change the system of charging deductions for absences so that the teachers may be paid between the first and fifth of each month instead of the fifteenth."

MR. FORD ON SCHOOL BILLS.

Confusion in Proposed Legislation—The Actual Requirements.

State Senator Ford, when asked yesterday his opinion of the numerous bills which have recently been introduced in the Legislature with regard to the salaries of teachers in the public schools, after reviewing the provisions of the various bills, said:

"Much confusion has been caused by the great number of bills introduced, but the requirements of the situation are perfectly clear:

"First—That we should provide for the arrears of salaries in the Boroughs of Queens and Richmond.

"Second—That we should limit the power of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to reduce teachers' salaries and compel the amount fairly required.

"Third—That we should provide for a uniform salary schedule such as is contained in Senator Elsberg's bills."

Brooklyn Teachers Paid.

The public school teachers of Brooklyn received their salaries for December yesterday afternoon. The checks for the teachers were sent to Secretary Brown of the local School Board by Paymaster Timmerman. Mr. Brown turned the checks over to the Principals of the borough schools, who distributed them. The checks were made out on the basis of the Harrigan schedule.

THE GEORGE JUNIOR REPUBLIC.

Its System of Operation and Plans for the Future.

A parlor meeting in behalf of the George Junior Republic was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Levi P. Morton, 681 Fifth Avenue. An audience of about 200, largely members of the Woman's Aid to the Republic, was present and discussed this youthful government, which was established near Freeville, N. Y., in 1895, for the purpose of fully testing new and important methods of controlling and reforming children. Several former "distinguished citizens" of the Junior Republic were present. Addresses were made by Thomas Mott Osborne, President of the George Junior Republic Association, and William R. George, the founder and Superintendent of the Republic. Mr. Osborne's address dealt with the serious aims of the Republic, which is by developing the principles of self-government and self-support to turn out from apparently hopeless child material honest, useful men and women and prevent pauperism and crime.

Mr. George in his address gave many interesting details of the little government, which now consists of about seventy citizens, male and female.

The labor question has received a good deal of attention in the Legislature this year. At a recent session an eight-hour bill was brought up by a boy, who it was claimed by his political opponents never did much work, but who himself claimed to represent the "laboring class." There was considerable opposition to the bill, but it finally passed by a good majority, and Mr. George, the President, signed it, knowing as he admitted yesterday, that it was a bad bill. On the day the bill went into effect the girls who had gone to work at 8 A. M. quit promptly at 4 P. M., and then refused to get supper, claiming that they had already worked eight hours. The entire male population of the republic was horrified and hungry. Two or three of the girls were arrested, but when brought before the Judge that sanitary decided that he could not hold them. Hunger began to stalk through the land. Finally an extra session of the Legislature was called, and within a half hour the eight-hour labor law had been repealed and the girls cooked supper.

At the close of the meeting the women present subscribed several hundred dollars in aid of the little government and promised much more.

RELIGIOUS NEWS AND VIEWS

Prof. McGiffert's Answer to be in Printed Form Next Week.

EPISCOPAL INTERESTS IN CUBA

Bishop Whittaker and Secretary Powers of the Church Missionary Society to Visit That Island.

It is said that Prof. Arthur C. McGiffert of Union Theological Seminary will have his answer in printed form early next week, that it will be along the lines of the one sent by him last May to the General Assembly, and that it will end with an announcement of his willingness to withdraw from Presbyterian Church membership. Members of the Presbytery say the answer will not be given out until the meeting of that body on Feb. 12.

The Rev. Dr. W. Dudley Powers, General Secretary of the Church Missionary Society, will leave next week for Cuba, accompanied by Bishop Whittaker of Pennsylvania. They go to look over Episcopal interests in general, but have for a special object the matter of a new Episcopal church in Havana.

Buildings adjoining the Second Avenue Baptist Church, which were the subject of contention between the Baptist City Mission and the Rev. Dr. D. C. Potter, are to be put to use as a Baptist missionary home for trained women workers. A woman's auxiliary will undertake the management of the new home.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Notes on the International Series Selection for Jan. 28, 1900.

Copyright, 1900, by John R. Whitney.

SUBJECT—The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus.—Matthew, iii., 13, to iv., 11.

GOLDEN TEXT—This is My Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—Matthew, iii., 17.

As incidents in the life of a man, the baptism, and the temptation of Jesus of Nazareth, like His circumcision and presentation in the Temple, were only ordinary, common incidents of no special importance or value. They were entirely personal. No one was helped by them, and they were probably soon forgotten outside of a very narrow circle.

But as incidents in his great work of redemption, they were of immense importance. They were essential features in that wonderful plan of grace, and as such they have given comfort, and strength, and assurance to countless numbers in every tribe and nation for nineteen hundred years, and will give joy and peace to countless numbers more until the end of time. To understand them, therefore, we must look at Jesus, not as simply a man of Nazareth, but as "the Son of the Highest" clothed in flesh; as "the last Adam," the sinner's Substitute, Saviour, and Redeemer. What He did then and there, He did for us now and here. The circumstances attending these incidents are, therefore, worthy of our most careful study, and the facts themselves of our adoring faith.

When John the Baptist stood at the mouth of his cave—or upon some jutting rock as a pulpit, or upon the banks of the River Jordan—to address the multitude that thronged to hear him, it must have been a very inspiring scene. There was nothing in his social position, however, to attract men to him, or to give him power over them. (Matthew, xi., 8.) Neither was there anything attractive about his personal appearance. He was meanly clad in a coarse robe of camel's hair—or of hair and wool interwoven—with "a girdle of a skin about the loins," (Mark, i., 6,) and his face was solemn and austere, lit up by no pleasant smile, but marred by long night vigils, thin from scanty food, and terribly in earnest. But when he spoke it was with a voice which—like a trumpet call—commanded instant and universal attention.

The one great theme of his preaching was "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." The one great anxiety which he awakened was to "Flee from the wrath to come." The one great demand which he made upon every hearer was, "Repent ye." Men stood before him trembling with a consciousness of sin, and anxiously inquiring how they could obtain a righteousness acceptable to God. When he directed them to "Repent," it was no exhortation to a merely outward reformation, but to that "godly sorrow" that "worketh repentance to salvation."

"For behold this self same thing that ye sorrowed after a godly sort." St. Paul says; "what carefulness it wrought in you" lest ye should again be enticed unawares; "yea, what cleansing of yourselves," that no taint of sin might remain; "yea, what indignation," that you should be thought willing to yield yourselves to it; "yea, what fear," of your own weakness; "yea, what vehement desire," for strength to resist; "yea, what zeal," to be made free and strong; "yea, what revenge," as if sin were a deadly enemy which must be destroyed, (Second Corinthians, vii., 10, 11.)

JOHN'S EXHORTATION.

Many responded to this earnest exhortation of John. They acknowledged their sins, and they stood before him to receive the rite of baptism by water, signifying thereby that the stains of the old life were washed away, and that the new life would be pure and holy. But as he administered this rite he told them that there was even then among men One through whom—although as yet they knew Him not (John, i., 26)—they should receive a renewal of their whole nature, not reformation only, but regeneration also. For He would baptize "with the Holy Ghost and with fire." (iii., 10.)

He referred to Jesus of Nazareth, who was not as yet known outside of His "own city." (ii., 39.) Although he and Jesus were cousins according to the flesh and were nearly of the same age, yet they had been brought up far apart, and probably had never seen each other, except perhaps occasionally and for a very short time at the annual feasts in Jerusalem. All that he knew of Jesus, probably, was what his father had told him, that he was to "go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways." (i., 76.) In fact, he says, "I knew Him not; but He that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on Him, the same is He which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." (John, i., 33.)

As John fulfilled his ministry with this great but uncertain expectation always before him, the narrative says, "then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan, unto John to be baptized of him." (Matthew, iii., 13.) Apparently He came alone, and without any announcement of His coming. And when He arrived, He did not make Himself known to John, or in any way identify Himself with him or his work. He did not even stand at his side to give countenance to his preaching and to strengthen his hands. But He took His place among those who acknowledged themselves to be sinners. Thus voluntarily, "He was numbered with the transgressors," at the beginning of His ministry, just as He was at its close. (Mark, xv., 28.) As one of them He came forward to be baptized.

But there must have been something about His acts, or His looks, which at once arrested John's attention. His face had none of the marks which characterized the best of those about Him, for He was "without sin," and John hesitated to administer the rite to Him, which was so fitting for them. So he "forbade Him, saying, I have need to be baptized of Thee, and comest Thou to me!" (iii., 14.)

The answer of Jesus is very striking. When others presented themselves to John, by that act each one said: Suffer me to be baptized and declare my desire and intention to fulfill all the righteousness demanded of me. Each one looked to himself alone. He did not expect or desire that his righteousness should be of any value to any one else, excepting in a very indirect manner. It would not more than suffice for himself. But Jesus looked entirely away from Himself. "Suffer it to be so now." He said, "for"—or because—"thus it becometh us"—you and Me together—"to fulfil all righteousness." (iii., 15)—not My righteousness, but "all righteousness"—"all" of the righteousness demanded by the law—and "all" the righteousness demanded of all men, in all time, and in all conditions.

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS.

This was the first public act of Jesus' official ministry. He had now reached the age of thirty years (v 23), the age when by the law, those who were to be priests to God entered upon their duties. (Numbers, iv., 1-3, 22, 23, 32-35.) For eighteen years the law had made no special demand upon Him, and we hear nothing of Him. But now it does.

Now He must enter upon his official work. In His infancy the obligation to render a perfect obedience to the law had been laid upon Him by others in the rite of circumcision. Now He voluntarily and publicly took it upon Himself. Standing with those who were "under the law," and condemned by the law, He proclaimed by His baptism that He would be "the end of the law for righteousness, to every one that believeth." (Romans, viii., 4.) He would do for the sinner what the sinner desires to do, but which he cannot do for himself, however penitent he may be. (Romans, vii., 3, 4.)

When Jesus had thus been baptized, as He "went up out of the water, lo! the heavens were opened unto Him and He saw the Spirit of God, descending like a dove, and lighting upon Him," (iii., 16.) This was the sign which had been given to John, by which he was to know Him who should baptize with the Holy Ghost. At the same time there came "a voice from heaven, saying, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (iii., 17.)

Then John understood the meaning of Jesus' strange request at His baptism. He was the Son of God, entering upon His great work to give redemption to Israel. In that work He was "to fulfill all righteousness," that His righteousness being "imputed" (Romans, iv., 24,) to us, "the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Romans, viii., 4.) That work being thus inaugurated, was then stamped and sealed with the royal signet of the Triune God. The Father in heaven spoke. The Son on earth was baptized. The Holy Ghost descended to anoint. No wonder that "the Prophet of the Highest" then also "bare record," and said, "This is the Son of God." (John, i., 26-34.)

But when Jesus thus entered upon this great obligation that He might "redeem them that were under the law," (Galatians, iv., 5,) He must not only in outward form be "numbered with the transgressors," but—"to be made like unto His brethren," (Hebrews, ii., 17)—He must be "in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin," (Hebrews, iv., 15.) For there is no merit in keeping the law if there is no temptation to break it. So we read that after this significant baptism—"then," (Matthew, iv., 1,) "immediately," (Mark, i., 12)—"Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness." (Luke, iv., 1,) "to be tempted of the devil," (Matthew, iv., 1.) Not only was he "led," as one willing to go, but "the Spirit driveth Him" (Mark, i., 12,) He went as one under the constraints of a strong conviction, but with a willing mind.

TEMPTED BY SATAN.

Probably the assaults of Satan upon Adam began soon after he entered upon his career as "the Son of God," (Luke, iii., 38,) just as they did upon Jesus. How long they were continued before Adam was "beguiled," we are not told. Probably, however, it was not done in a day, or by simply three distinct assaults following each other in quick and consecutive order, as we are apt to imagine from the brevity of the narrative. That is not the way in which Satan usually accomplishes his purpose. It is generally little by little, and by many repetitions in many different forms. The narrative of Adam's fall is therefore probably only the summing up of long experiences.

So also with Jesus. St. Mark and St. Luke say that he was "forty days tempted of the devil." (Luke, iv., 2.) These may, to be sure, have been literally forty days of twenty-four hours each, but it is more than probable that the term is simply an indefinite expression for many days. During the whole life of Jesus, Satan must have desired to sift Him as wheat, just as he does us, and "to be made like unto His brethren," He must have been constantly exposed to his buffetings. It is not unreasonable therefore to look upon the narratives of St. Matthew and St. Luke, as we may upon that of Genesis, as a summary of all these assaults, rather than as the report of only three, in a limited number of days. (See Luke, xxii., 28.) Probably these assaults, like those made upon Adam and upon us, took many forms and were often repeated.

But there is a remarkable parallelism between the assaults made upon Adam and those made upon Jesus. In both cases they may be classified under three heads:

1. TO DISTRUST GOD.
2. TO PRESUME UPON GOD.
3. TO ALTOGETHER IGNORE GOD.

Under one or more of these heads every temptation common to men may be found. Let us look at them in their order:

I. TO DISTRUST GOD.

It will be noticed that in the first recorded assault both upon Adam and upon Jesus, Satan fixed attention upon the things which God had denied them. This is a very common and insidious temptation. It has slain its thousands.

To Adam every blessing of Eden had been given, and the fruit of only one tree had been denied him, and that denial was for his own good. But when Satan came to him with his suggestions, all of the gifts were forgotten, and the one thing denied was so magnified in importance that it filled the whole horizon of his thoughts. He could see nothing else, and the more he looked at it, the more unreasonable and unkind it seemed that he should be deprived of its enjoyment.

So in the case of Jesus. Satan tried to induce Him to look in the same way upon the one great fact that He was hungry, and that there was no means at hand by which to provide for His condition. God had actually denied Him necessary food. In both cases the object was to awaken doubt and distrust as to the wisdom and love of God. So he said, with a tone of great interest in the welfare of each:

To Adam, "Yea; hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree?"

To Jesus, "Command that these stones be made bread."

II. TO PRESUME UPON GOD.

But Satan can be an angel of light as well as of darkness. So the next recorded form of temptation is in exactly the opposite direction from the first. Now the attention is fixed upon the goodness and the promises of God, and Satan would persuade the victim of his assaults that God is so very merciful and loving that He will not enforce His own laws to the harming of His children, even if they carelessly or recklessly expose themselves to their operation. This one thought he so impresses upon the mind that every other consideration is entirely blotted out of view. So he asserted without fear of contradiction:

To Adam, "Ye shall not surely die."

To Jesus, "He shall give His angels charge concerning Thee." If the first form of temptation has slain its thousands, this has slain its tens of thousands.

III. TO ALTOGETHER IGNORE GOD.

This form of assault is still more insidious, attractive, and plausible. It is, as to the surest way of accomplishing the purpose for which men are put into the world. This is the one great question before men, and Satan meets it by fixing the mind and heart upon the material things about them. To gain them, and to use them, and to enjoy them, "the god of this world" makes the one overmastering thought which crowds out everything else, and the world itself seems to be the only power able to give that which it alone seems to possess. God and eternity—His law and His love—are of so little importance that they are forgotten altogether. So Satan, with supreme audacity, said:

To Adam, "God doth know that your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods."

To Jesus, "All these things will I give Thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

Ten thousand times ten thousand have fallen under this deciful promise.

Both "the first Adam," and "the last Adam," were thus "in all points tempted like as we are." (Hebrews, iv., 15.) The "first" listened, parleyed, and fell, and by his fall "sin entered into the world." (Romans, v., 12.) The "last" stood, and through His "righteousness the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." (Romans, v., 18.) "In Adam, all die." "In Christ, shall all be made alive."

QUESTIONS ON THE LESSON.

Why were not the baptism and the temptation of Jesus, important simply as incidents in His life?

What made them important, and how must we, therefore, look upon Him?

What is said of John the Baptist?

What were the characteristics of His preaching, and what did He mean by repentance?

What was the effect of His preaching, and what did He say to those who came to Him to be baptized?

What is said of Jesus of Nazareth, and of John's knowledge of Him?

How did Jesus come to John, and with whom did He take His stand?

How did John receive Him, and what is the significance of Jesus' reply?

What is said of this baptism as the first incident in Jesus' public official ministry?

What occurred when Jesus was baptized, and what did it reveal concerning Him and His work?

Why was it necessary that Jesus should be tempted, and what is said of it?

What is said of the assaults of Satan upon Adam and upon Jesus and how may the narratives be considered?

Under what three heads may all of the temptations be classified?

What is said of the first, of the second, and of the third?

What was the result in the case of Adam, and of Jesus, and what is said of it?

Church News and Notes.

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Rylance will preach to-morrow morning and evening in St. Mark's Church.

The Rev. Thomas R. Slicer will speak to-morrow morning in All Souls' Unitarian Church on "The Inspiration of Work."

An entertainment in aid of the First Congregational Church of Coytesville, N. J., will be given at the Broadway Tabernacle on Jan. 25.

The Rev. Dr. Roderick Terry will preach to-morrow morning in the South Church on "Children of God" and in the afternoon on "The Mission of the Apostles."

The Rev. Dr. Anthony H. Evans will preach to-morrow morning in the West Presbyterian Church on "The Meaning of the Gospel" and in the evening on "The Tongue."

The Feast of St. Agnes will be observed in St. Agnes's Church to-morrow by a solemn pontifical mass. Bishop Quigley of Buffalo will officiate and Archbishop Corrigan will be present.

The pastor of the New Jerusalem Church, the Rev. Julian K. Smyth, is to deliver four discourses explanatory of the nature, position, and teachings of the New Jerusalem Church on Sunday evenings beginning Jan. 28. The subjects to be presented are "Emanuel Swedenborg: the Man and His Mission"; "What Is the New Church?" "The Key and the Book; or, the True Character of the Bible"; "The Cornerstone of the Christian Religion; or, Who Was Jesus Christ?" "The Right of Ownership" will be the subject of Mr. Smyth's sermon to-morrow morning.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

A. C. DIXON and L. G. BROUGHTON WILL PREACH

in Marble Collegiate Church, Cor. Fifth Av. and 29TH STREET, MONDAY, AT 3:30 P. M.

Fisk Jubilee Singers will sing. Seats free.

ADAMS CHAPEL, UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, 700 Park Avenue.—Sunday afternoon service at 4:30 o'clock. Preacher, the Rev. Francis Brown, Ph. D., D. D.. All are welcome.

ALL ARE INVITED TO METROPOLITAN Temple, 7th Av. and 14th St.—Dr. Cadman will preach morning and evening; services every night in large auditorium; Wednesday night public discussion; subject, "Faith"; Thursday night Dr. Doherty speaks; Friday night orchestral concert, Mr. Phasey; Saturday night, vocal and instrumental concert.

ALL ARE WELCOME AT OLD JANE STREET Church, East of 8th Av., South of 13th St.—Rev. Thomas Bond preaches morning and evening; Dr. Cadman speaks at 4 o'clock; song service at 3:30; services every night during week; Dr. Cadman on Wednesday night.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH, UNITARIAN, 4TH AV. and 20th St.—Sunday school, 10 A. M. The pastor, Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, will preach at 11 A. M. Third in the course of sermons on "The Inspirations of Life." "The Inspirations of Work." The public cordially invited.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH, MADISON AV. AND 66th St., Rev. R. Heber Newton, Rector.—Rev. R. M. W. Black will preach at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.

AS USUAL, OLD PERRY STREET CHURCH, near Greenwich, is open to the public, and all are earnestly invited; Rev. J. C. Coddington will preach.

AT CHURCH OF THE STRANGERS,
57TH ST., NEAR 8TH AVE.
The Rev. D. Asa Blackburn will preach
11 A. M., "THE EMPTY HOUSE."
7:45 P. M., "THE LAD'

The New York Times.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JAN. 20, 1900.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK:
Publication Office.....41 Park Row
All American District Telegraph Offices.
WASHINGTON.....515 Fourteenth St.
LONDON: Trafalgar Buildings, Trafalgar Sq., W.C.
SWITZERLAND, Geneva: P. Drehmann, Librairie Nouvelle, Rue du Mont Blanc.
GERMANY, Mainz: Suarbach's News Agency, Agency for Germany and Austria.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

DAILY, per Month	$0.50
DAILY, per Year	6.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Year	7.50
SUNDAY, per Year	1.50
SATURDAY, with Review of Books and Art, per Year	1.00
MONDAY, with Financial Supplement, per Year	1.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Month	0.65

For postage to foreign countries add 80 cents per month.

TWELVE PAGES
AND REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART.

THE CAMPAIGN.

The present has been called a "Stock Exchange war" by Englishmen not in sympathy with it. The description is superficially plausible, even though it be essentially unjust. In such a war, it is to be expected that there shall be an abundance of "Stock Exchange rumors." When fortunes can be made or saved by causing a lie to be believed for half an hour, there will be no failure in the crop of lies. But why anybody should be deceived by these lies is a question that can be answered only by reference to the inexhaustible gullibility of human nature. Everybody knows that every cable line out of South Africa, excepting the one which leads from Delagoa Bay, is not only in British hands, but under a strict British censorship. From Delagoa Bay, if we get any false news, it will be likely to be false news of Boer successes. Over any of the British lines, it is certain that we shall get nothing which the British authorities do not wish to have sent. That is to say, we shall get nothing either contradictory or anticipatory of the official dispatches.

Now, all that the official dispatches tell or indicate is that there is a general advance on both sides of the Orange Free State. In the course of the advance there has been some skirmishing on the Natal border, and a reconnaissance in force on the Cape Colony border. These operations, in and of themselves, are not only indecisive, but unimportant. There is really no news, and the first that can be expected is the British official reports.

It will be observed that the war, though technically defensive on the British side, on account of the Boer ultimatum, is really one in which Great Britain is the assailant, and that her object is to put such a pressure on the Boers that they shall come to her terms, without even knowing what her terms are. Toward any such result she has not made an inch of headway. Suppose her troops succeed in relieving both Ladysmith and Kimberley. She will still be within her own borders, and defending herself. She will not be in "the enemy's country." She will not have overcome the mountain slopes that divide her from it. On the other hand, the Boers will have lost nothing but prestige by the relief of both places. Their country will still be intact. Whereas if they succeed in getting both places they will have destroyed the British prestige and won the campaign.

There was published yesterday an official statement of the British losses up to date. They foot up nearly 9,000. Of course, they do not include the 11,000 men under the command of Sir GEORGE WHITE at Ladysmith, nor the men, perhaps half that number, at Kimberley and Mafeking. Yet these garrisons are as completely neutralized, as far from being available for offensive operations, as if they had been killed, wounded, or captured. The losses of the Boers have not equaled or approached the British figures. But the British can afford a loss ten times as great as the Boers can afford. If Great Britain is really in earnest about ending the war by the subjugation of the Transvaal, and will bear the sacrifice, it would be "business" for her Generals to act upon the calculation upon which GRANT acted in the campaign of the Wilderness. She could afford to give up ten Englishmen to disable one Boer. It is a frightful computation. The Boers are sick of the war. The British are even sicker. Is there not enough statesmanship in Great Britain to find out "a more excellent way"?

ANTI-IMPERIALISM HARD HIT.

A lamentable disaster has befallen the anti-imperialists. A piece of argumentative apparatus known as the consent of the governed which they have constructed with great toil and have employed as a battering ram against the expansionists and the Administration has suddenly turned its armored front against themselves and planted a blow in the region of the midriff that they would instantly perceive to be fatal were their minds not tightly shut against the light of truth and reason.

It was the hand of Senator DAVIS, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, that reversed their machine. In executive session he is reported to have said that the Administration decided to take and hold the Philippine Islands because it learned, during the treaty negotiations, that Germany would take them if we did not. We quote from a Washington dispatch published in THE TIMES yesterday morning:

> At the time that the negotiations at Paris were proceeding, and it was a matter of doubt whether the United States would take up the burden of responsibility for good order and peace in the Philippines, there was reason to believe that Germany stood ready, upon the intimation of our intention to abandon our territory there, to make a dash and gain a footing at Manila, and eventually upon such islands as were deemed desirable to extend Germany's colonial policy. This was not only a menace to our prestige, but it might have created illfeeling in Great Britain, where the sentiment favoring our retention of control in the islands was strong, not unselfishly, but also not jealously, so far as the United States were concerned.
>
> It is represented that Senator DAVIS made this plain, and that he showed that the Administration thereupon changed the instructions to the commission, abandoning the idea of partial occupation and deciding that for the time at least it was the duty of the United States to assume complete control of the archipelago. Further, the Senator is reported as having declared that the plan of the Philippine Commission to extend civil government throughout the islands, with native participation as great as possible, is to be the purpose, and that there is to be no cause for regret on the part of the Filipinos that have ceased to be subjects of Spain and required to yield temporary obedience to the United States.

The consent of the governed argument is the cornerstone of the anti-imperialists' structure. They have wept at the condition of the Filipinos, stripped of their liberties, ground under the oppressing heel of WILLIAM MCKINLEY, and compelled to obey laws they have no part in framing. And they have insisted that Admiral DEWEY should either have sailed away after he had destroyed MONTOJO, leaving the insurgents to achieve their liberty and enjoy it; or that we ought now to scuttle out and give AGUINALDO an opportunity to set up and operate his republic.

But it now appears that the alternative to American possession and control is not and could not have been a Philippine republic, but German conquest and a German colonial Government. Is WILLIAM MCKINLEY a worse ruler for the Filipinos than the man with the spiked helmet? Is the announced policy of the Administration to admit the natives to participation in the affairs of the government of the islands as fast and as far as they show themselves capable and worthy of trust. Under a German colonial Governor the Filipinos would have been the subjects of a military power that has no faith in such nostrums as popular institutions and the consent of the governed. The governed would never have been consulted about their government.

In the light of Senator DAVIS's statement, what becomes of the anti-imperialists' cause? They are engaged in an attack upon the President for not adopting a course in the Far East that would have turned the Philippines and their people over to the tender mercy of the Kaiser. That would indeed have been imperialism in the strictest sense of the word. And the Boston anti-imperialists insist that it is not yet too late.

THEY LAG SUPERFLUOUS.

There was a Free Soil Party in this country half a century ago. It used to adopt platforms declaring slavery to be a sin against GOD and a crime against man. It nominated MARTIN VAN BUREN for President in 1848 and JOHN P. HALE in 1852. The voters, somehow, declined to elect either of these able gentlemen to the office of President, and most of the Free Soilers became Republicans when that great and very successful party was organized in 1856. It will be remembered, also, that slavery was abolished during the civil war.

For these and other reasons the Free Soil Party has not held a National Convention for a good many years. But the American Protective Tariff League held a meeting on Thursday and elected officers for the ensuing year. Persons who are alive, awake, and aware of what is going on about them will read of the meeting of this League with the same irreverent emotions that would be aroused by an announcement that the Free Soil Party was organizing for the campaign.

Why does the American Protective Tariff League persist in existing? What does it protect? Certainly not the protective tariff, for that is fast going to the bowwows. The policy of protection has for years been known as McKinleyism, but Mr. MCKINLEY had not a word to say for it in his message, and he has negotiated reciprocity treaties with several other Governments under which foreign commodities will be admitted to this country at rates materially lower than those of the Dingley Tariff act. President MCKINLEY and the wisest and most influential leaders of the Republicans are feeling their way along toward free trade. They do not go by leaps and bounds, and they have engaged no brass band for the expedition. But none the less surely, and pretty rapidly, too, they are converting the Republican organization into a low tariff party.

They must abandon the prohibitive tariff policy or the manufacturers will abandon them. Protection has had its day, has outlived all the usefulness it ever had, and is now a hindrance to the expansion of the industries of the country. It must go.

Why doesn't the American Protective Tariff League go? Its vocation is gone, its influence is shattered, it is pulling the wrong way. It has $1,133.22 in its treasury. We advise the League to turn over this unexpended balance to the Society for the Relief of the Aged and Destitute and then tranquilly disband.

THE FOUNDATION PRINCIPLE.

Has the Educational bill prepared by the Governor's Unification Commission any friends? The Governor himself does not seem to be enthusiastic about it. Senator WHITE in the Senate and Assemblyman LEWIS in the Assembly have introduced it, but each said it was done "by request," which is equivalent to a disclaimer of all responsibility and liking for the bill. Indeed, Senator WHITE said that he should presently introduce the Statutory Revision Commission's bill dealing with the same subject; also, that he intended to draw a bill himself.

The measure introduced on Wednesday ought not to pass, and probably will not pass. It is foredoomed by its adoption of the vicious principle of giving the appointment of the Chancellor of the University to the Governor, subject to confirmation by the Senate. It is a political and spoilsman's bill on the face of it. No amount of protesting will deceive the public as to its purpose. It is an attempt to take the executive control of the educational system out of the hands of the Regents, a Constitutional, non-political body, and lodge it where the party machine can have a grip on it.

The Legislature may as well understand that public sentiment will approve no bill that is not built upon the fundamental principle that the schools must be kept out of politics. If the head of the educational system is appointed by the Regents, the intention of the Constitution, which is the deliberate expression of the people's will, will be respected.

There is some probability that the people will have to look to Gov. ROOSEVELT as the chief defender at Albany of this sound and essential principle.

THE FOUR HUNDRED OF HAVANA.

That was a very striking item of news which appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday from Havana. This was the dispatch which set forth that Havana has a "Four Hundred," and which set forth also how the Four Hundred was to be chosen and composed. It is, it seems, to be a joint society of Americans and Cubans. The American members of it are to be certified and passed by a committee of Americans. Cuban members are to be similarly certified by a committee of Cubans.

There may be some austere Americans in the back districts who will think this performance frivolous. Such an American takes a view which is itself of the utmost frivolity and superficiality. It is like the view of the cheerful British officers forty years ago who thought it beneath them to pander to the caste prejudices of the Hindus, and who accordingly brought on the most dangerous revolt against the British supremacy that had at that time been raised within this century, by ordering native troops to bite greased cartridges. British officers know better now. There is no fear of another sepoy mutiny from their ignorance of native customs and sentiments.

The person from the back districts whom we suppose to be sneering at the formation of a Four Hundred in Havana by the joint scrutiny of Americans and Cubans is the kind of person who would regard as negligible the objections either of "foreigners" or "natives" to biting greased cartridges or crow or any other viand which he might think good for them. He does not think anybody's prejudices worthy of respect except his own. These he calls convictions and principles, has no notion that they are provincial, and would like to impose them upon all mankind. He has his merits. But he is not fitted for an effective missionary or a good colonizer.

As a matter of fact, this announcement means this immense thing, that the representatives of the United States in Cuba have brought the "best people" in Cuba to accept them as associates. That is a triumph of tact as well as of merit. It means that we are conciliating the Cubans, in spite of the great differences between their ways and ours. To be socially acceptable is a fortune which very seldom comes to a conqueror or a usurper. It is true that we are in Cuba on the footing of neither, but on that of a guide, philosopher, and friend. But that fact does not make it easier for us to "get into society." That is a feat which the conqueror or usurper always attempts and seldom performs. NAPOLEON BONAPARTE never attained it. Neither did DICK CROKER. In fact, the few ill-advised attempts which have been made to introduce the Boss into "Society with a big S" have been so obviously futile that they were not even resented as insults, but dismissed as jokes.

It is into this envied if not enviable state that the Americans in Havana have been received who have contrived to make themselves acceptable to those of their own countrymen who are the official representatives of their country. There is nobody in the world who prides himself more than a Spaniard, or a man of Spanish descent, upon being a "well born" man and a well behaved man, a caballero, and nobody, we may add, who does so with better reason. The fraternization which is taking place in Havana has scarcely any precedent in history. The lion shall lie down with the lamb, and a little Lieutenant of cavalry shall lead them in the german. This is what we have achieved by being represented in Cuba by "the best we breed," and we shall keep it as long as we do not lower the standard of our representation.

It is interesting to hear Mr. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, who has been accused of Americanizing the politics of England, greatly to the disgust of some of his conservative friends and his individual advancement, preaching to the people of Birmingham the need of following in the footsteps of the Americans in education and in commercial enterprise. As to the former, his warning was long since justified. The movement for general education is in England a comparatively new one, and it is far from the development that it has attained here. Much as there is admirable in the English political system, it has only recently ceased to be a system of class domination, and it will be a long time before even the conception of true democracy in education can prevail. There is something of the same condition of things in the commercial contest to which Mr. CHAMBERLAIN refers. The democratic spirit in our people, the feeling that the field is open to all and that inherited or arbitrary advantages are of little value, together with the very general schooling given to our children, has had much to do with the development of initiative, of independent energy and ingenuity in dealing with all the possibilities of trade and production which now impresses observers like Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. It is only just to say of him at a time when he is blamed for so many things that he has done his best to direct his countrymen aright in the struggle he so clearly foresees.

The report of the business of the port of Havana for the year just closed is, on the whole, satisfactory. The total imports for the eleven months ending with November were of the value of $52,189,738, or at the rate of nearly $57,000,000 for the year, of which some $8,000,000 was in gold and silver coin. The duties collected on imports for the full year were $8,500,582, or at the ratio of 19 per cent. This would be regarded by our protectionists as the extremest free trade. As a matter of fact, it is probably above the true revenue rate, and it ought to be one of the objects of our policy to reduce the burden as rapidly as possible. As yet the tariff on imports from Cuba to our own ports is a mass of incongruities, though it is much more civilized than the Spanish tariff was. One of its peculiarities is that Americans cannot import iron ore taken from mines owned by them without paying a tax on it, while at the same time they are paying war taxes incurred from the wresting of Cuba from oppression by Spain.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Attention, company! (We mean the company of anti-imperialists, and throw in free the flattery implied by the assumption that there are enough of them to make a company.) The Yaqui Indians announce to the world—a synonym for Massachusetts, of course—that they have long been fighting bravely for liberty and independence and that they want sympathy and assistance in their holy struggle. This is a plea to which, we are sure, the anti-imperialists will not turn a deaf ear, and as the Philippine question will soon be a very dead one, they should avoid the danger of finding themselves left without a mission by taking up at once the cause of the Yaquis. It's really a cause in behalf of which there is a good deal to be said—by an experienced admirer of the Filipinos, that is. The Yaquis have a deadly hatred of domination by white men. They love liberty with a fervid affection, and for years and years they have been fighting with undoubted and unquestioned bravery to attain it. Sonora is theirs by right of a conquest so ancient that the thought of the original owners will trouble nobody, and as for their ability to govern themselves and stray tourists, that is a matter as unnecessary as it would be inconvenient to consider. All things taken into account, we pronounce the Yaqui issue one of great potential value, and earnestly commend it to the attention, not only of the Atkinsonians, but also of Boards of Aldermen throughout the country and of such pro-Boer orators as find themselves, owing to the censorship established by the loathsome British, with moments of leisure on their hands. A suggestion: If anybody asks what use the Yaquis have hitherto made of such temporary liberty as they have been able to secure, and what they would be likely to do with it in the future, silence the interrogator with a scornful look, and tell him to go hire a hall of his own if he wants to talk nonsense of that kind.

—Out in Oakland, Cal., the Board of Health has taken a step which, whether it be wise or not, or necessary or not, is certainly worthy of thoughtful consideration in all parts of the country. What the Board of Health did was to advise the Board of Education to exclude from the public schools of the city any teacher or pupil now suffering from tubercular consumption, and in the future to prevent the admission of such sufferers by stringent regulations. One section of the resolution, which was unanimously adopted, reads: "Any employe in the service of, or pupil in attendance upon, any public school of said city, suspected of being affected with pulmonary tuberculosis, shall, within one week after having been notified by the City Superintendent of Schools, either withdraw from the service of the school department or attendance upon school, or submit to a bacteriological examination by the city bacteriologist, who shall, upon the completion of such examination, file with the City Superintendent of Schools a certificate setting forth the result of such examination." The examination is to be at the expense of the city, and the Board of Education is to base final action on their bacteriologist's report alone. It is probable, or rather sure, that this plan will excite strenuous opposition, but unquestionably there is much to be said in its favor, and it is apparently in line with the tendency of the times. The decision reached in the matter by the Oakland educators will be awaited with general interest.

NUGGETS.

Poverty's Straits.

"We can't afford to have any new differences!" urged the husband.

"I suppose we'll have to patch up our old differences!" sighed the wife, wearily.—Detroit Journal.

To Exercise His Talent.

"So he is going abroad?"

"Yes. He got so in the habit of kicking about the way things were done during the Spanish war that he is going to England now to help out the stay-at-homes there."—Chicago Post.

Why He Resigned.

"Why did the young minister leave so suddenly?"

"The Maiden Ladies' Home Missionary Society took up the task of finding him a suitable wife."—Philadelphia North American.

No Vulgar Haste.

Mistress—Delia, I don't like to speak to you about it, but you're too fond of sleep. You don't get up early.

Cook—Shure, ma'am, I'm no fonder av it than the next wan. It's only thot I do slape slower than mosht.—Philadelphia Press.

Renown.

"Still," said the old friend who had called to converse with the venerable sage, "in your advancing age it must be a great comfort to know your fame is secure."

"Yes," replied the aged scientist, "I am told there is a new disease and a five-cent cigar named for me."—Chicago Tribune.

IN THE STORM.

From The Chicago Record.

My child, your hero may not be,
In truth, a hero all the time;
Remember, it must chance that he
Shall still have rugged steeps to climb.
Don't place him on too high a plane,
In fancy; then he will not fail
In your esteem and may attain
To something noble after all.

My boy, don't think your sweetheart bears
A halo on her golden hair;
A crown of purity she wears,
And you must help to keep it there.
But she will have her trying moods,
And be not always kind and sweet;
These are life's nerving interludes—
Sad pitfalls for unwary feet.

You both are far from perfect yet,
And quarrels will, unhaply, come—
Both may be wrong; so don't forget,
In anger's blind delirium,
That sweet concessions each must make,
And tender promises renew;
Or else a loving heart may break

RELIEF FOR PUERTO RICO

Bill Providing for Free Trade with This Country Is Offered.

INTRODUCED BY MR. PAYNE

Measure Calls for the Extension of Tariff and Internal Revenue Laws to the Island.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Ways and Means Committee has decided to ride down all opposition to the recommendation of the President that free trade relations with Puerto Rico shall be established. Representative Payne of New York to-day introduced a bill providing that the customs laws of the United States shall be extended to Puerto Rico and that no dues shall be collected on goods shipped out of Puerto Rico into this country or vice versa. Mr. Payne was very much delighted with the feat he had accomplished. After he had introduced the bill he talked about it, about the discussions that had led to it, and of the advantage it would be both to Puerto Rico and the United States. "Not only has it been introduced with the assent of the Ways and Means Committee and of the Insular Committee," he said, "but it will be passed.

"It turns out that the reported opposition to the extension of United States law to Puerto Rico in the matter of customs has been chiefly outside talk, encouraged by a few men who had not submitted any remonstrance in writing. The only formal protest to the free trade proposition came from the Connecticut tobacco growers. While there was no desire to injure that interest, it is believed that the possible injury to the domestic tobacco growers will be very small as compared with the benefits to be conferred upon the population of Puerto Rico. To them free trade with the United States is necessary to prosperity, and without it, it was plain to the Ways and Means Committee that they would suffer all sorts of distress as the direct result of being acquired by the United States.

"It is admitted that the President and Secretary Root have devoted themselves unremittingly to the accomplishment of this action. Almost every member of the Senate and the House who has called at the White House or War Department since the opening of Congress has been admonished of the importance of extending some assurance of the chance to earn a livelihood to the people of Puerto Rico, at the same time that the hint has been thrown out that if this was not done the people of this country would have to bear a great responsibility for unrest and perhaps turbulence in the island."

Section 1 of the bill is as follows:

"That the laws of the United States relating to customs and internal revenue, including those relating to the punishment of crimes in connection with the enforcement of said laws, are hereby extended to and over the Island of Puerto Rico and all adjacent islands and waters of the islands ceded to the United States by the Government of Spain by treaty concluded April 11, 1899, so far as such laws may be applicable."

Section 2 makes San Juan the customs port of entry for the island and Ponce, Managuez, Arecibo, Aguadilla, Arroya, and Ilumacas sub-ports of entry. Section 3 provides for the creation of an internal revenue collection district.

Mr. Payne expects to call up this bill at the earliest possible moment, with the determination to add it to the laws of the land before many weeks. It is considered to be the most important legislation proposition made in this Congress.

The Puerto Rican delegates, who were heard by the Insular Committee to-day, asked that this piece of legislation be the first granted to the island. Dr. Henna said:

"Our commission is to secure the implanting in Puerto Rico of all the economic advantages Congress can give, but first and above all is free trade with the United States."

Mr. Finlay, another of the delegates, said: "The only commission that we received from our Chamber of Commerce was to endeavor to obtain from the American Government an application of the American tariff to the island. That was the first and foremost item in the programme."

Mr. Payne's bill was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

PUERTO RICANS GET TIME.

Secretary Root Extends Mortgage Foreclosure Order Six Months.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Secretary Root issued an order to-day extending the time for the foreclosure of mortgages on property in Puerto Rico six months, on the condition, however, that such extension shall not apply if contrary to legislation enacted by Congress in the interval. The time for the payment of mortgages under the previous orders of the War Department expired to-day.

The Secretary's action is the result of conferences with residents of Puerto Rico, representing all the material interests of the island, and is intended merely to tide over present financial straits until Congress shall have had an opportunity to legislate for the islands.

Many Cuban Prisoners Released.

HAVANA, Jan. 19.—This morning 150 persons who had been imprisoned on excessive sentences or been held for an unreasonable time, awaiting trial, were released. On emerging from prison they were greeted by many friends, and an affecting scene ensued.

THOMAS FRERE IS DEAD.

Was One of the Foremost Promoters of Chess in America.

Thomas Frere, for more than thirty years a resident of Bay Ridge, a suburb of Brooklyn, died yesterday. He was in his eightieth year. Mr. Frere was especially prominent in the game of chess, having taken a prominent part in the organization of chess clubs and chess congresses in this country for fifty years, and was the oldest of the veterans in the game. He was one of the most active promoters of the First American Chess Congress, which was played in New York in 1857, through which Paul Morphy was introduced to the world. Mr. Frere was a player in the minor tournament of that congress. He was one of the organizers of the first Brooklyn chess club, in the early fifties, and was Secretary for several years, entertaining Mr. Morphy on his visit to Brooklyn in 1858. He was the organizer of the Manhattan Chess Club of New York, and made the official presentation to that club of the portrait of Mr. Morphy, which was purchased by subscription. In the Fifth American Chess Congress of 1880 Mr. Frere was a member of the Executive Committee, and took an active part in the Sixth Congress, played in New York in 1889. In the famous match between William Steinitz and Dr. Zukertort, in 1886, Mr. Frere was the representative of Steinitz. He was an honorary member of the Manhattan and Brooklyn Chess Clubs.

Mr. Frere was a veteran of the Thirteenth Regiment, N. G. N. Y., his membership in the organization being said to date back to 1845, and he was believed to be the oldest member of that organization. For more than thirty-five years Mr. Frere was a clerk in one of the departments of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York. He was retired by the company on a pension when he was seventy-five years old.

Bequests of Mrs. Skeel.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Mrs. Ann Augusta Skeel of Tarrytown during her lifetime was a liberal contributor to the support of the Westchester Temporary Home for Indigent Children here. She died recently, leaving an estate of $68,000 in real estate and $25,000 personal property, which she disposed of by will. From her personal estate she gives the Temporary Home $10,000, the American Unitarian Association of Boston $10,000, and the Church of the Messiah in New York $5,000. The will is admitted to probate, with Roswell Skeel, Jr., executor.

Express Agent's Alleged Shortage.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 19.—Walter Pierce, the local agent of the United States Express Company at this place, left here on Wednesday. He has not returned yet, and it is alleged now that he went away because his accounts were involved. Examiners for the company are going over them. He is alleged to be short about $800. He has a wife and child here.

DEFEATS FOR THE FILIPINOS.

Insurgents Lose Arms, Stores, and Men in Several Engagements—American Loss Is Small.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Gen. Otis to-day cables the War Department of the movements of troops throughout the islands. He says the losses of the enemy have been large, while the American loss is small, mainly in slightly wounded. Large quantities of rebel arms and ammunition have been captured, together with numbers of Filipinos.

At Santa Cruz the Seventeenth Infantry struck the insurgents and killed seventeen. In the north Gen. Young reports several successful skirmishes with slight casualties. Gen. Otis's dispatches follow:

"Hughes reports from San Jose de Buena Vista, western coast Panay, that crossed mountains northwesterly direction from San Joaquin, Southern Panay, 17th, struck enemy crossing Antique River, capturing rifled cannon and Nordenfeldt, pursued insurgents through Antique, Egana, and Sibalom, their capital, and marched to San Jose; casualties, one wounded; enemy loss considerable; entire population fled to mountains. Heat oppressive.

"MacArthur reports 17th inst. that thirty-five rifles surrendered at Flora Blanca; that at Kanibaug, McRae, Third Infantry, captured three insurgent officers, wife of Gen. Mescardo, considerable insurgent property, and liberated three Spanish prisoners; that at Calang, captured ten insurgents, burned seven tons of rice, and insurgent barracks; that Sullivan, Thirty-fourth Infantry, near San Jose, surprised insurgent force, captured six rifles and considerable live stock; that Lieut. Houle, Third Infantry, captured near Malolos one officer, twenty-five men, and six rifles; that Van Horn, Seventeenth Infantry, struck Ladrones at Santa Cruz, killed seventeen, wounded five, captured thirteen, and nine rifles.

"MacArthur reports 18th inst. strong mounted position west Mabalacat, occupied by Gen. Hizon and fifty men, captured yesterday by McRae, Third Infantry; enemy left Lieutenant and four dead men in trenches; McRae captured Captain, one man, 130 rifles, several thousand rounds of ammunition, destroyed arsenal, quantity of rice; casualty, one man wounded.

"Bates reports that Schwan's column cavalry refitting at Batangas to move eastward on 19th; infantry now moving that direction; enemy retiring, suffering loss in men and property; our casualties few, mostly slight wounds; that portion Wheaton's troops will enter Lemery and Taal to-morrow now meeting opposition in mountains which impedes march. Six officers, fifty-four enlisted men, four civil employes, eleven friars, all Spanish prisoners, released by Schwan, arrived from Batangas last evening; nearly 200 arrived in Manila day before, via Calamba.

"Young at Vigan reports number successful skirmishes in mountains with remnants insurgent organization and robber bands, with slight casualties among his troops; Kobbé expedition, Randolph Light Battery, Forty-third and Forty-seventh Infantry, convoyed by naval vessels Helena and Nashville, sailed for Albany Province and Catar and Yeyte Islands yesterday."

CHANCES IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Ex-Consul Williams Says Opportunities for Americans Are Few.

The Hon. Oscar F. Williams, late United States Consul at Manila, who stood on the bridge of the Olympia beside Admiral Dewey during the destruction of the Spanish fleet, related his experiences yesterday morning before the students of the Packard Commercial School, Twenty-third Street and Fourth Avenue. Mr. Williams, after describing in detail the thrilling events of which he was a keenly observant witness, dwelt at length on the mercantile problems and possibilities in the Philippines. He said the islands would prove highly important to this country as the key to the commercial open door of the Orient, and that that door can now never be closed to American enterprise. "But," said he, "American energy and capital will certainly encounter strong competition in any attempts which may be made to extend or develop our trade in the Philippine Islands. In fact, I believe that for a decade or longer to come the principal development along commercial lines in the islands will be made by European capital and energy.

"As to young men seeking fortunes in the Philippines, this European domination also applies. The seething population of Europe may be said to swarm every year, and thousands of young men, finding every nook and crevice of their country's financial structure already filled, are forced to look abroad for a foothold, and literally swarm into the Orient. Such conditions do not exist here, where promising commercial students are being watched by business men, even before they leave school, with a view to securing their services. Of course, many of our young men from a love of adventure or other causes will go into the Philippines, but the prospects for the really capable youth in those islands will not for many years to come be as promising as are to be found right here at home. The European clerk will work for less money than his American brother of like capabilities. While many of our young men will go to the Philippines within the next few years, it is more than likely that they will be those who have not been marked here as 'par excellence.'"

Ethnologist to Study Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Col. F. F. Hilder, attached to the United States Bureau of Ethnology, has been selected by that bureau, in conjunction with the National Museum and the Smithsonian Institution, to proceed to the Philippines and make a thorough investigation of the anthropological, ethnological, and general scientific conditions in the archipelago. His researches, it is understood, will include the little-known Jolo group.

Postal Service in the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Beginning April 1, the Philippine postal service will be placed upon an independent footing, as in Cuba and Puerto Rico. Heretofore the Philippine service has been under the supervision of the Postmaster at San Francisco. When the new order goes into effect money orders can be drawn upon points in the islands and registered letters sent between Post Offices there. Instead of making returns through the San Francisco office, Auditors at Manila will be in charge and returns made directly to the Post Office Department.

INFANTRY RECRUIT DROWNED.

Lost His Life After Leaving Fort Slocum Without Permission.

NEW ROCHELLE, Jan. 19.—William Sheridan, an infantry recruit who was being drilled at Fort Slocum for duty in the Philippines, was drowned last night near the fort after leaving his quarters without permission. He lived at Northampton, Mass.

The men at the fort were paid on Wednesday and nearly all of them applied for leaves of absence. As many as could be spared were allowed to go. Sheridan did not get away either Wednesday or yesterday. Last night, with four others who failed to get leave on either day, he obtained a rowboat and at 9:30 o'clock set out. The men lost their way, but finally got back near the fort. Before they could reach the shore the boat, which was leaking, sank beneath them, but remained awash after the men were out of it.

The cries of the men were heard by a sentry and relief was sent to them. Sheridan could not swim and his companions left him clinging to the boat, which would not hold more than one. They reached the fort in safety and are now in the guardhouse. Sheridan hung on until the relief boat was in sight and then let go and sank.

Gold in a Turkey's Craw.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Jan. 19.—It is probable a new and rich placer district may be discovered soon in Colorado through the operations of a small turkey gobbler. In the craw of the turkey, which Alexander Bjorklund recently purchased for $1.15, his wife found a gold nugget valued at $1.18. Now Bjorklund has the mining fever and is making every effort to find where the turkey came from, judging that if the place can be located it may prove to be rich placer ground.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

"AIDA" AT THE OPERA.

Verdi's Opera Given Again, with Mme. Eames in the Title Role.

At the Metropolitan Opera House last night, Verdi's "Aida" was sung for the second time this season. The cast was the same as at the first performance, but the results were much better. Mme. Emma Eames was once more the Aïda, and it is a pleasure to say that her work showed great strides forward. It was surmised here after the first performance that she was nervous and not quite sure of her memory. Last night there were no evidences of anything of this kind. She sang with great freedom; indeed, at times with abandon, and her voice, being in good condition, responded to all her demands upon it. Better still, she threw herself into the part with a dramatic spirit which has at times been absent from her interpretations. She may now be credited with a successful addition to her répertoire. Her triumph will gratify not only her immediate friends, but her countrymen.

The other members of the cast were the same as at the previous performance. M. Alvarez was again the Rhadames, and it seems that we must accept this as his best part. He finds his happiest opportunities in the concluding passages of the Nile scene, and last night he assisted Mme. Eames and Signor Scotti to arouse great enthusiasm at this point. Signor Scotti must once more be praised for a consistent and vigorous performance of the barbaric Amonastro, while M. Plançon repeated his dignified version of the priest. Mme. Mantelli was again admirable as Amneris. The pageantry of the grand entry was well managed and improved by the use of new costumes. The orchestra did its important share of the work well, and Signor Mancinelli conducted with enthusiasm.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE MUSICIANS.

The Philharmonic Society and Chorus Heard at Mendelssohn Hall.

The Columbia University Philharmonic Society gave its first concert last night in Mendelssohn Hall. The orchestra and chorus are composed almost wholly of students in the university. Two or three professional instrumentalists have been called in to fill such places as first oboe, first bassoon, and first horn. Amateurs are not addicted to these instruments. The orchestra, however, is an institution which deserves to be encouraged. The concert last night was enjoyed by the audience, and its merits are not a subject which call for comment beyond the statement that the orchestra played with some spirit and deserved well of its fellow-students.

The customary attitude of the university undergraduate toward music does not encourage the formation of orchestras, but leads rather to the practice of more or less inchoate glee singing, nocturnal indulgence in "rag-time," and the plucking of banjos and mandolins. When there are sufficient undergraduates to be found to make possible a performance of Schubert's "Rosamunde" overture and similar music, only kind words can be written. Gustave Hinrichs has evidently worked hard as conductor and instructor of the young men, and to him and Prof. McDowell, the head of the Department of Music, credit is due for the improvement in the work of this organization, founded in 1896. It is to be hoped that the young men may be encouraged in their work, and that Columbia may prove to be a place where an appreciation of good music is not regarded as incompatible with a belief in value of coefficients and a respect for terminations in "o" and "mi."

The Nibelung Tetralogy Again.

The undoubted success of the Wagner Nibelung tetralogy given last year at the Metropolitan Opera House has prompted Maurice Grau to repeat these performances this year. The dates selected are as follows: Evening cycles, Tuesday, Feb. 20; Thursday, Feb. 22; Tuesday, Feb. 27; and Thursday, March 1. Afternoon cycles, Thursday, March 15; Tuesday, March 20; Thursday, March 22, and Tuesday, March 27.

Fanciulli to Take Sousa's Place.

Contracts were signed yesterday between Prof. F. Fanciulli and the Manhattan Beach Company for the furnishing of music by the Seventy-first Regiment Band, of which the professor is bandmaster, during the coming Summer season at Manhattan Beach. The Seventy-first Regiment Band will take the place filled last Summer by Sousa's Band, which will go to the Paris Exposition and for a Continental tour.

Theatre Managers in Court.

The recent orders issued by Chief of Police Devery regarding the observance of the Sunday law at theaters resulted yesterday in the appearance of Managers John Ayres of Proctor's Palace, and Heinrich Conried of the Irving Place Theatre in the Yorkville Police Court. Magistrate Brann, after hearing the managers, said he saw no evidence of a violation of the law and dismissed both cases.

THE CASTELLANE RUMORS.

Gould Family Believes Politics Inspired Them—Edwin Gould's Statement.

It was said yesterday on authority that the members of the Gould family in this city regard the recent publications in Paris concerning the affairs of the Castellanes and the reported losses of Count Castellane in stock speculations as having been inspired largely by politics. It is well known, it is pointed out, that the Count and other members of his family have been in sympathy with plans to place the Duke of Orleans on a new French throne, but the relatives of the Countess Castellane, formerly Miss Anna Gould, have received assurances that the activity of the Castellanes in this direction has been the subject of great exaggeration both in the French press and in dispatches to the American papers.

There will be no lack of warmth in the reception by the members of the Gould family of the Count and Countess Castellane, who are now on the way to visit New York for the first time since their marriage. They are on board the French liner La Bretagne, which may arrive to-day, but is more likely not to get in until to-morrow. Edwin Gould, speaking yesterday of his sister's expected visit and of the reports respecting Count Castellane's affairs, said:

"It is needless to say that we shall be more than delighted to see our sister again. We have heard nothing about any material financial embarrassment of Count Castellane, and, not knowing whether the French paper, Le Matin, is responsible or not, we cannot tell how much truth there is in the story that he has lost heavily in speculation."

A PILGRIMAGE TO ROME.

American Party to Leave This City July 7—To Return Sept. 4.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—An American pilgrimage to Rome and Lourdes will be made this year, in observance of the Pontifical decree proclaiming a universal jubilee for 1900. It will be under the spiritual direction and management of the Very Rev. E. H. Porcile, Assistant General of the Fathers of Mercy and rector of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes in Brooklyn. Bishop McDonnell has sanctioned the pilgrimage, which is undertaken under the patronage of Mgr. Martinelli, the Apostolic Delegate.

Father Porcile organized the Brooklyn pilgrimage of 1894. The jubilee pilgrimage now proposed is to be National in scope, and will leave New York on Saturday, July 7, on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., the itinerary covering sixty days. Mass will be celebrated daily on board by Father Porcile or other priests of the party.

The itinerary is as follows: July 15, Gibraltar; July 18, Naples; July 19-30, Rome; July 31, Florence; Aug. 1, Venice; Aug. 2, Padua, and return to Venice; Aug. 3, Innsbrück; Aug. 4, Munich; Aug. 5, Ober-Ammergau; Aug. 6, Zürich; Aug. 7, Lucerne, Aug. 9, Interlaken; Aug. 11, Berne and Lausanne; Aug. 21 to 26, Paris. The pilgrims will return to New York Sept. 4.

Arrangements will be made for an audience with the Pope while the party is at Rome. The traveling arrangements will be under the supervision of Francis H. Throop of New York. M

SENATOR PLATT A WITNESS

Testifies in Washington in a Case Against The World.

SUIT BROUGHT FOR LIBEL

The Senator Refuses to Answer Questions He Calls Impertinent and Insulting.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Senator Platt was a witness to-day before United States Commissioner Thom of the District of Columbia, in a libel suit brought by Gen. Charles H. T. Collis against The New York World. Collis was Commissioner of Public Works in 1897 when the article complained of was published under the heading "Collis and Platt Work a Huge Grab." The accusation was made that in making contracts for public work, contractors were compelled to employ the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, in which Mr. Platt's two sons are officers, as surety.

For some reason it was found to be necessary to send over here to get at Mr. Platt, and he permitted himself to be examined in his own rooms at the Arlington this morning. J. W. Gerard, Jr., represented the defendant, and Henry Wise appeared for Gen. Collis. Mr. Platt gave some information about his birthplace and history, and his business. When interrogated about the article in The World, he said he had never read it, and thereupon Mr. Wise did so.

The Senator said he had never had any relations whatever with Gen. Collis. Asked whether he had any interests in the Fidelity and Deposit Company, he replied:

"I have never had and have not now any interests directly or indirectly in that company, except the indirect interest I must naturally have on account of my sons' connection with it."

He was asked whether he had any interest in the contracts mentioned in The World article, which referred to him as "the boss."

"The boss is presumably yourself," remarked Mr. Wise, "and the article also declares that the Fidelity and Deposit Company is merely another name for Thomas C. Platt, because his two sons are in it. How about those contracts?"

"I have no interest, direct or remote, in those contracts, never knew of them, and never heard of them until now."

"Did you ever directly or indirectly have any correspondence with Charles H. T. Collis regarding these contracts or the sureties on the contracts?" asked Mr. Wise.

"Never," responded Senator Platt, promptly.

This closed the direct examination, and Mr. Gerard began the cross-examination. Mr. Wise objected to his first question, which was: "Senator, what position do you occupy in New York politics?" Mr. Gerard made the point that only the court in New York could rule on objections and that Commissioner Thom could not do so. Mr. Gerard continued his course until Commissioner Thom declared the hearing at an end. The answer of Senator Platt to the opening interrogatory was:

"I am charged to some extent with the leadership of the Republican Party in New York State."

"Did you know ex-Mayor Strong?"

"Slightly."

"After he took office did you ever see him regarding appointments?" "Yes."

"About the appointment of a Commissioner of Public Works?" "Yes."

"Didn't you have a dispute with Mayor Strong about the appointment of one Brookfield?"

"I protested against Brookfield's appointment."

"But you didn't protest against the appointment of Collis?"

"Yes, I did, most emphatically."

Mr. Gerard then changed his tactics and proceeded to ask the witness what corporations he was connected with. The Senator enumerated his connections of this sort, and was then asked if he was not connected with the Cataract Transportation Company and the Erie Transportation Company, (the Erie Canal,) and if they did not possess valuable franchises from the State. At this point Senator Platt answered, very firmly and pointedly.

"You know your questions are neither pertinent nor proper, but that they are impudent and insulting."

Mr. Gerard appeared to enjoy the situation, because he began to direct all sorts of questions to the Senator. Did he ever send any aid or contribution to men who were candidates for the Legislature that elected him to the Senate? Had any check or contribution ever been returned to him? To all these questions Senator Platt made no reply, declining to answer them.

"I know your object in asking me these questions," he remarked, placidly. "I know it as well as you do. It is to put me in the position of having been asked them and refusing to answer."

"Has not the United States Express Company the exclusive privilege of carrying Government packages?" inquired Mr. Gerard, jumping from State to National affairs.

"It has not," replied the witness.

"Were you interested in the Ramapo Company?" was the next question, as the jump back was made.

"I shall not answer any questions regarding the Ramapo Company, as they are impertinent, as well as irrelevent."

"Did you ever receive any contributions to any campaign funds under your charge from any corporation?" continued Mr. Gerard, blandly.

"What has that got to do with Gen. Collis?" counter-questioned the Senator.

The witness was asked if he was a stockholder in the Barber Asphalt Company and several other similar concerns.

"I never was. I heartily wish I had been," was his reply.

Then came a query that made every one, including the Senator, smile. "Do you know Mr. Lou Payn of Albany?"

"Of course I know him," replied the witness. "Everybody knows him." The emphasis on the words was indescribable.

In response to a question if Senator Platt had used his influence at Washington in favor of a certain envelope contract in which Mr. Payn was interested, he said that it was his custom to represent the interests of his people at the National Capitol.

Mr. Gerard having shown no tendency to interrogate the Senator upon any subject material to the case of Collis vs. The World, the witness said: "If you have any questions to ask me in regard to the case I will answer them."

At this point Mr. Wise made an objection to Mr. Gerard's course of procedure, and Commissioner Thom taking a similar view of the conditions, declared the hearing closed."

KILLS HIS ENTIRE FAMILY.

Martin Bergen, Boston's Catcher, a Murderer and Suicide.

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass., Jan. 19.—Martin Bergen, one of the best-known ball players in the country and one of the Boston Club's catchers last season, killed his wife and two children with an axe and then cut his own throat with a razor, at his home, in the eastern portion of North Brookfield, this morning.

When the father of the murderer and suicide entered the house to-day, Martin Bergen's body and that of the little girl, Florence, six and one-half years old, were lying on the kitchen floor, while in the adjoining bedroom were the bodies of Mrs. Bergen and her three-year-old son, Joseph. Mrs. Bergen was lying on the bed, with her hands raised as if in supplication or trying to ward off a blow. The little boy was lying on the floor with a large wound in the head. Mrs. Bergen's skull was terribly crushed, having evidently been struck more than one blow by the infuriated husband. The appearance of the little girl also showed that a number of savage blows had been rained upon the top and side of her head. Bergen's throat had been cut with a razor, and the head was nearly severed from the body.

He caught for the Boston Club last year, playing with the nine up to the close of the season. At times during the Summer his action in disappearing from the team without notifying Manager Selee or the other players resulted in considerable friction. Once he went to his home in North Brookfield and refused to play, alleging that he had not been treated well by some of his fellow-players and his manager. After much persuasion Bergen was induced to return and join his club. He was 5 feet 10 inches in height, and weighed 170 pounds.

Bergen at times had been subject to fits of melancholy and had been the subject of comment among his friends. This was noticeably the case last October, when he showed signs of insanity.

BANK ROBBERY IN INDIANA.

Special to The New York Times.

PERU, Ind., Jan. 19.—The Commercial Bank of the town of Silver Lake, about twenty-five miles northeast of this city, was gutted early this morning by masked men blowing up the vault and safe with nitro-glycerine. As near as can be ascertained, about $4,000 in paper money was taken away by the burglars. Numerous sacks of silver had been placed outside when the fight began which drove them away.

The town night watchman, who was eating lunch, returned and was within two blocks when he saw the first of the explosions, and with the restaurant keeper started out to investigate. They had hardly gotten outside of the doorway when the second explosion occurred, followed by the third, and in rapid succession the fourth and fifth. When they arrived at the bank five powerfully built masked men forced them back with drawn revolvers.

The watchman commenced operations by emptying his revolver at the men. They returned the fire, and, leaving the silver, commenced backing down toward the railway tracks, where a handcar was concealed. For three blocks the opposing parties continued the fight, and about that time the noise brought forth other citizens who joined in. The burglars made a dash for the handcar, and by rapid shooting forced the crowd of citizens back, and they made their escape.

The force of the five explosions was terrific, the vault and safe being a mass of wreckage.

The only man of the citizens hurt by the flying bullets was W. W. Price, who was shot in the right arm, but not dangerously injured.

That some of the burglars were badly hurt was apparent in the traces of blood around the starting point of the handcar and an exclamation made by one of them, "My God, Jim, I'm shot!"

That the robbery was the work of professionals is apparent from the rapidity of the explosions, showing that they understood the work. The handcar was stolen at North Manchester, and it was to this place the men were tracked. Persons answering their description took the early east-bound Erie train. About $15,000 in currency was overlooked by the robbers in their hurry to escape.

WARNING TO THE CHINESE.

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 3.—A lively interest has been aroused by the publication of the secret decree of the Empress Dowager of China, in which she speaks of the danger which threatens the empire from foreign aggression and holds the Provincial Governors to strict responsibility for the immediate defense of their respective provinces, should any attack be made upon them.

"The various powers," she says, "are casting upon us looks of tiger-like voracity, hustling each other in their endeavors to be the first to seize on our innermost territory. They think that China, having neither money nor troops, would never venture to go to war with them."

Speculation is, of course, rife as to what happened to bring out this decree, eminently suggestive as it is of the stiffening of China's backbone. Some attribute it to an understanding with Japan, it being reported anew that ex-Minister Yano is to return as Japanese adviser to the Chinese Government.

STARVATION IN INDIA.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 19.—The Council to-day considered the famine situation. The official estimates show the cost to the Government of the relief works, &c., to the end of March will be four crores (40,000,000) of rupees. About 22,000,000 persons are now affected in British territory and about 27,000,000 in the native States. The Viceroy, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, said the famine area had expanded, surpassing the worst fears, and they were now facing a cattle, water, and food scarcity of a terrible character. About 3,250,000 persons, he continued, were already receiving relief.

While in 1897 the world shared India's sorrow and contributed hundreds of thousands of pounds toward the relief fund, the Viceroy pointed out, India now would have to struggle alone, for the thoughts of every Englishman in the world were centred on South Africa. It would be the duty of the Government to pursue the task of saving millions of lives, and it would spend its last rupee, if necessary, to do so.

TREATY DISPLEASES GERMANS.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The annual meeting of the Bureau for the Preparation of Commercial Treaties began to-day, and will continue to-morrow. The commercial bodies of the empire are well represented. At to-day's session the Franco-American reciprocity treaty was thoroughly discussed. A resolution was adopted describing the treaty as "highly injurious to Germany's exports, and irreconcilable with the treaty of 1828," and expressing the hope that Germany would soon be able to carry out negotiations on the subject to a successful issue.

To-morrow the creation in Germany of an institution analogous to the Philadelphia Museum will be under consideration.

The German shoe industry has begun an agitation in favor of a higher duty on American footwear.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL BILL.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Daily Chronicle says editorially to-day:

"According to advices we have received from Washington, a canvass of the Senate and House of Representatives has placed it beyond dispute that Congress will not only pass the Nicaragua Canal bill, but will pass it in a form directly at variance with the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

"This is a statement of decidedly serious importance, and we hesitate to believe that the United States Government will commit itself to a course which this country would have to regard as unfriendly."

NEW MINISTRY FOR AUSTRIA.

VIENNA, Jan. 19.—Emperor Francis Joseph to-day accepted the resignation of the Ministry of Dr. H. von Wittek, which succeeded the Cabinet of Count Manfred Clary last month, and has intrusted to Dr. von Koerber, who was Minister of the Interior in the Clary administration, the task of forming a new Ministry.

The following assignment of portfolios was made by the Premier:

Minister of the Interior Ad Interim—Dr. VON KOERBER.
Minister of Railways—Dr. VON WITTEK.
Minister of Finance—Herr BAWERI.
Minister of Justice—Herr BOODEN.
Minister of National Defense—Count WELSERSHEIMB.

Fezot, a Czech, and Piotak, a Pole, are appointed Ministers without portfolios.

Switzerland Open to American Fruit.

BERNE, Jan. 19.—The Bundesrath to-day, abrogating the previous regulations, granted permission for the importation of dried American fruits, and also fresh fruits, on condition of their examination at the Basel Custom House.

Prominent Germans Ill with Grip.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Prince Max of Saxony is seriously ill with the grip, and Dr. von Miquel is confined to his bed with the same malady. Baron von Stumm, who is recovering from a severe attack, has gone to Italy.

The Kaiserin Back in Berlin.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The Empress returned to Berlin from Dresden to-day, the condition of her mother, the Dowager Duchess of Schleswig-Holstein, being much improved.

British Hymn Writer Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Canon Henry Twells, a well-known writer of hymns, is dead.

NEW COMPANY FOR ROCHESTER.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 19.—Local commercial circles are stirred to-day by the announcement of the formation of a new combination of large business interests which are to be centered in Rochester. The new company will be known as the New York and Kentucky Company, capitalized at $2,000,000, $1,000,000 of which is to be issued in 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock and $1,000,000 in common stock. It is formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of manufacturing cologne spirits, alcohol, whisky, medicinal preparations, &c., and distributing the same, and a general distilling and importing business.

The officers of the company are: Walter B. Duffy, Rochester, President; Frederick Cook, Rochester, First Vice President; Charles Tracey, Albany, Second Vice President; W. F. Balkam, Rochester, Secretary, and Frank S. Upton, Rochester, Treasurer. The Directors include the above and Eugene H. Satterlee, Rochester; George H. Watson, Frankfort, Ky.; Henry Naylon, Buffalo, and Benjamin E. Chase, Rochester.

SOUTHERN VETERANS DINE

Revive with Rhetoric and Song Memories of Dixie's Land.

Ovation for Mrs. Davis—Thomas Nelson Page and John Temple Graves Talk —The President's Letter.

Members of the Confederate Veteran Camp of New York held their tenth annual banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria last night in honor and memory of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the leader of "the Lost Cause." Nearly 300 sons and daughters of the old South and the new were gathered with their guests at the flower-covered tables in the large dining hall, and revived again with rhetoric and song memories of "Dixie's Land."

There was a great demonstration when Mrs. Jefferson Davis arrived and was escorted to a centre box in the balcony overlooking the banquet room while the dinner was in progress. She had no sooner appeared than she was recognized, and received a great ovation. Round upon round of cheers went up. Fans and napkins were in the air, and many flowers were tossed into the box from the tables below. Mrs. Davis was visibly affected as she bowed her acknowledgments.

The banquet began at 7:30 o'clock with Edward Owen, Commander of the camp, in the presiding chair. On his right sat Thomas Nelson Page, and on the seat to the left was John Temple Graves of Atlanta. Others at the guest table were Past Commander A. R. Chisholm, John C. Hertle, Past Commander J. H. Parker, John W. Keller, Lieut. Commander Clarence Cary, William M. Polk, President Southern Society; Past Commander G. T. Harrison, Chaplain George S. Baker, and Past Chaplain S. H. Granberry. Others present were Hugh S. Thompson, Col. John C. Calhoun and family, Thomas P. Ochiltree, Charles Broadway Rouss, Col. S. B. Paul, Col. Peter Mallett, Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Day, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Black, and Richard Henry Savage.

After the dinner had been served amid the strains of Southern airs Commander Owen welcomed the guests and proposed a toast to "The President of the United States and the Army and Navy." It was drunk standing, while the orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner." Thomas Nelson Page was then introduced and responded to the toast "The South Beyond Her Borders."

In speaking of the South Mr. Page said: "I know there are those who use the term New South to signify a new regeneration of a former unregenerate condition, and there are others who use it merely to indicate the appearance and growth of a new year's mushspringing of material prosperity. When the term was first coined it had only the latter meaning, but there were those who were glad to infuse into it a significance that implied censure of the old South.

"It simply proves their ignorance of what the old South was. They behold a picture taken by an enemy or an ignoramus, distorted through the lens of hostility or ignorance, and say, 'is this the idea you worship? Are these the features which you have told us are the ideal of beauty and virtue?' No, these are not the features of which we have told you. These faults to which you point are but blemishes on the fair countenance of our mother, which was radiant in her prime, and, though marred by the marks of the reviler, still beams for us who love her with an unquenchable and ineffable light."

The speaker then referred to Stonewall Jackson and paid that Southern hero a stirring tribute. He then spoke of the life of Gen Lee as a civilian and as President of an educational institution, and said that his motto was, "Duty is the sublimest word in the language."

At the close of Mr. Page's address Commander Owen read letters of regret from President McKinley, Gov. Roosevelt, Mayor Van Wyck, and Gen. Longstreet. The President's letter was as follows:

Executive Mansion.
Washington, Jan. 13, 1900.

My Dear Sir: I have received your kind letter inviting me to be present and reply to a toast at the tenth annual banquet of your camp on the 19th inst., and I regret very much that engagements already made prevent me from sending an acceptance.

The cordial feeling of mutual respect and good will existing between the sections of our now reunited country and among all the people is most gratifying to me. It would afford me peculiar pleasure to be with you on this occasion and give renewed expression to my grateful appreciation of the promptness and patriotism with which the citizens of the South, as well as of the North, respond to the call of country, and of the ever-increasing help they are giving to those things which contribute to its prosperity and advancement, its permanence and influence.

Thanking you for the courtesy extended, and with best wishes for the success of the reunion, believe me, very sincerely yours,

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

The toasts, "The City of New York" and "The Man in the Monument and the Memory of Robert E. Lee," were responded to by John W. Keller and John Temple Graves, respectively. The toasts were interspersed with songs and recitations by prominent musicians and elocutionists.

Mr. Graves eulogized the memory of Lee, dwelling at length on his life and character. He painted a picture of the unification of the whole country. The South still fighting, but now engaged in a friendly contest with the abolitionist States of the East for the supremacy in the manufacture of cotton goods. He spoke of Gen. Joseph Wheeler, a Confederate rider, battling for the United States, and two grandsons of Union chiefs serving on the staff of Gen. Lee, an ex-Confederate General. "When the roll call of history is finally made," said the speaker, "we will remember the men who came from all sections of our country."

SOUTHERN ALUMNI DINE.

Gov. Roosevelt the Guest of Honor—Attacks Those Who Make Impossible Political Promises.

Gov. Roosevelt was the guest of honor last night at the sixth annual dinner of the New York Association of Alumni of the University of the South held at Sherry's. Fifty members and their guests attended the dinner. Bishop T. U. Dudley of Kentucky, Chancellor of the University, presided.

The Governor arrived just as the coffee and cigars were being served. He was accompanied by J. H. P. Hodgson, Secretary of the Alumni Association, who escorted him to the chair reserved for him.

Seated at the table of honor were Vice Chancellor B. L. Wiggins of Sewanee, Dean W. K. Polk of Cornell, Prof. Brander Matthews, Dr. Silas McBee, George Quintard, Charles Hoffman, Frederick Hoffman, Prof. W. P. Trent, Prof. Starr, and Prof. Wells of the University of the South faculty.

Gov. Roosevelt's entrance was hailed by continued cheering. The Governor responded to the toast, "The Practical and the Ideal." He said in part:

"I have a certain right to appear before you to-night because I am half a Southerner and all an American. My mother's people fought on the same side as Gen. Leonidas Polk, in that contest which all Americans look back upon with a glow of pride for the valor and courage displayed both by those who wore the Blue and those who wore the Gray."

The Governor paid a tribute to the quarterly publication of the University of the South, The Sewanee Review, and continued:

"It is very unfortunate for our country if the universities teach that the measure of usefulness of university men is to be estimated by the pecuniary reward received. The greatest damage which can be done to our youth is to teach them that there must be a divorce between the ideal and the practical. The inevitable effect is that species of morality which teaches being good on one day in the week to offset for baseness during the other six.

"No man is to be excused if he construes practicality in politics to mean what is vile, underhanded, unworthy of upright and honorable men, and on the other hand, no man is to be excused if he preaches with the purpose of having applied a system which he knows can not be applied.

"It is infamy for any man not to perform what he has promised, whether off or on the stump, and it is almost an equal offense for one to deliberately demand a promise for political support or otherwise which he knows cannot be kept."

Will of John D. Brez.

The will of John D. Brez, who lived at 22 Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, was filed for probate yesterday with the Surrogate of Kings County. The estate is estimated to be worth $500,000. The testator's sister, Elizabeth O. Gillet, is the principal beneficiary. In addition to several bequests to other relatives, friends, and to charitable and educational institutions in Switzerland and Northern Italy, the will provides for distribution among the poor of New York $1,000, for the Swiss Benevolent Society of New York $1,060, and for the Huguenot Society of America $1,000.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Friday is generally an off day, even in the middle of the season, and yesterday was no exception to the rule. There were a few "at homes" and receptions, including one given by Mrs. M. Allen Starr of 5 West Fifty-fourth Street, and some luncheons, but nothing of importance until evening, which brought the opera, where "Aida" was sung to a crowded house; a small dinner dance, given by Mrs. Joseph Stickney for Miss Frances Coster Jones, and the second meeting of the dancing organization known as the Five Cotillions, which was a bal poudre, and a dance given by Mrs. Joshua W. Davis, at 26 West Fifty-first Street, at which the Lenox Summer colony was well represented. Mr. Ernest Rudolph Gunther also gave an enjoyable afternoon tea, with music, at his apartment, 1 West Forty-first Street.

***

To-day will be fairly gay, with a number of receptions, including those of Mrs. Edward Victor Loew, where Miss Loew will make her début, at 25 West Fifty-seventh Street; Mrs. William S. Fanshawe and the Misses Fanshawe of 13 East Forty-fifth Street. Among the "at homes" will be those of Mrs. Edward Robbins Musgrave and the Misses Lefferts of 156 West Forty-seventh Street, and of Mrs. Philip Livingston of 674 Madison Avenue. The Opera House will be thronged, as "Lohengrin" is to be sung at the matinée. Mrs. George Burroughs Torrey will give a luncheon to twenty women in Mr. Torrey's studio to-day, and the evening will bring the fourth meeting of Mrs. Philip Sands's dancing class, at Delmonico's; a dance to be given by Mrs. Bradish Johnson, in the Metropolitan Club Annex, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's second "Saturday night," at which there is to be a vaudeville entertainment. Mrs. James Hude Beekman will also give a large dinner to-night at her residence, 25 East Forty-seventh Street.

***

There will be no Cunard boat sailing to-day, as the Etruria has been withdrawn, owing to some defect in her tail shaft. The White Star Line will, in consequence of interrupted sailings and to accommodate mails and passengers, hold the Teutonic from Jan. 31, for which date she had been announced to sail, until Saturday, Feb. 3. The Ems, which sails to-day for Genoa, Gibraltar, and Naples, has booked among other passengers Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richards Dodge of Washington, the Rev. John S. Lord and Mrs. Lord, Dr. Medwin Leale and Mrs. Leale, who were married on Thursday; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton L. Rigge of Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Whitney and daughters of Boston, and Miss Ruth Schuyler of Ithaca. The Pennsylvania, which sails to-day for Hamburg via Plymouth, has booked, among other passengers, James G. Brown, Dr. E. W. Lee and Mrs. Lee, and Mrs. Harriet Woolsey, son, and daughter.

***

Col. John Jacob Astor is not going to put his steam yacht Nourmahal into commission this Winter, as he at one time purposed. The yacht has gone into Winter quarters, and her sailing master is authority for the statement that she will not be sent abroad, and will not go into commission until next Summer. This would seem to dispose of the oft-repeated tale that Col. Astor and Mrs. Astor with a party of friends will spend the Winter in cruising in the Mediterranean.

***

Messrs. Patrick Grant, the younger brother of Judge Robert Grant; Hollis Hunnewell, Jr., and Herbert Leeds of Boston have arrived at Aiken, and are daily on the golf links there of the Palmetto Club. The officers of the Jekyl Island Club this year are Charles Lanier, President; N. K. Fairbank of Chicago, Vice President; Frederic Baker, Treasurer, and Henry E. Howland, Secretary. The Directors, in addition to these officers, are Cornelius N. Bliss, John Claflin, R. W. De Forest, M. K. Jesup, E. A. Hoffman, Joseph Stickney, William Rockefeller, J. A. Scrymser, and George McKay. Joseph Stickney, M. K. Jesup, Cornelius N. Bliss, Frederic Baker, and Charles Lanier form the Executive Committee. Edwin Gould and Hugo R. Johnson are new members elected to the club this Winter. A. B. Claflin, John Magee, W. Maculke, and Edmund Hays are the Committee on Golf and Sports, and William Struthers, J. Hopkins Smith, John Claflin, and E. A. Hoffman are the Committee on Game. The Jekyl Island Club is the most successful and prosperous of all the Southern country clubs formed during the last few years by Northerners.

***

Miss Furman of Cleveland, Ohio, gave a tea at the golf club house at Asheville, N. C., yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. George Winthrop Folsom and family, Irving Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Whistler are the latest New York arrivals at Asheville.

***

Mrs. William Allen Butler, Jr., gave a reception yesterday afternoon at the new and beautiful house which Mr. Butler has built at 30 East Seventy-second Street. This reception was really a housewarming, as it is the first large affair that Mr. and Mrs. Butler have given since they moved into the house. Mrs. Butler was Miss Louise Collins, a sister of Mr. Clarence Collins.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Schell are still in Paris, where they have been since October last. Mr. and Mrs. Schell have closed their New York house, 21 East Sixty-second Street, and expect to remain abroad all Winter. Later on they will go to Nice and Rome, and will return to Paris for the opening of the exposition. Count da Conturbia and Countess da Conturbia, (Miss Patterson Stewart of Baltimore,) who were married last Autumn in Baltimore, are now at the Hotel des Anglais, in Nice. Mrs. David Stewart, mother of the Countess, and who is now in Rome, will join the couple later in the month.

***

Mrs. Joseph Stickney gave last evening, and not Thursday evening, as was published in a morning paper yesterday, at her residence, 874 Fifth Avenue, a dinner of twenty covers in honor of Miss Frances Coster Jones, daughter of Mrs. Louis Q. Jones, who will make her début next year. The guests at this dinner were Miss Anna Dodge, Miss Nathalie Wells, Miss Helen Kountze, Miss Lena Fanshawe, Miss Eleanor Swayne, Miss Nathalie Henderson, Miss Eleanor Morris, and Miss Katherine B. Pratt, and the Messrs. Thomas Manson, Gordon Douglass, Clarke Fosdick, Chesley Richardson, Kiliaen Van Rensselaer, Paulding Fosdick, Le Grand Griswold, Charles Dana, and Theodore Fell. Later in the evening a few other young people, to the number of fifteen or twenty, came in, and there was informal dancing.

***

Mrs. Edward Victor Loew will give to-day at her residence, 25 West Fifty-seventh Street, a coming-out reception for her daughter, Miss Edna Loew. Among the débutante's friends who will assists her in receiving are Miss Bonner, Miss Lena Fanshawe, Miss Eleanor Swayne, Miss Ethel Hollins, Miss Eleanor Thomas, Miss May Riker, Miss Cassie Dodge, and Miss Edith Talcott.

***

The second of the dances known as the Five Cotillions was held at Sherry's last evening. Mrs. Charles Finney Cox and Mrs. Walter Cook received the members and guests. The affair was a bal poudre, and nearly all of the young women present had powdered hair or wore wigs. Mr. Allan Wardman and Mr. Wilson Powell led the cotillion from opposite ends of the ballroom. The cotillion, which was a short one, was danced before supper, and after supper there was general dancing.

***

Mrs. Schuyler Quackenbush gave last evening at her residence, 142 West Fifty-seventh Street, a dinner of fourteen covers for her daughters, the Misses Quackenbush, and some of their young friends.

***

Mrs. Titus E. Eddy will give at her residence, 13 East Forty-seventh Street, on Thursday, Jan. 25, a dinner of eighteen covers. Another dinner on the same date will be that of Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest of 31 West Thirty-seventh Street, who will give a dinner, also of eighteen covers.

***

On Monday evening Mrs. George S. Scott of 15 Washington Square North will give a small dinner and will afterward take her guests to the theatre, the play selected being "Love's Surprises," in which Miss Elsie de Wolfe is to appear.

***

A story is in circulation to the effect that Mrs. Walter Kane, who was a Miss Hunter of Newport, and whose daughter, Miss Charlotte Kane, is engaged to Mr. Phelps of New Rochelle, is about to marry an Englishman well known in New York.

***

Mr. Max Agassiz, who has been spending the Winter in the South Sea Islands, arrived last week in San Francisco on the mail steamer from Samoa. Mr. Agassiz is credited with being the hero of a most romantic adventure. He is said to have rescued a San Francisco belle at Tahiti from a yacht on which she had been voyaging with a party and to have sent her home on a schooner to San Francisco. The tale is a wild and weird one and Mr. Agassiz will be the centre of interest when he returns to Boston and visits his clubs.

***

Mr. Hugh M. Inman was to have left Sandy Hook with a party of three men friends on his schooner yacht Fleur de Lys last evening bound on an extended cruise through the West India Islands and to South America. Mr. Inman is the son of the late John H. Inman, and was graduated from Yale in the class of '96. He recently purchased the Fleur de Lys from her former owner, Mr. George Trotter, who married Miss Florence Westervelt, and who is now residing in England.

***

Mr. Rudolph Ernest Gunther gave a musical tea yesterday afternoon. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Duane Pell, Mrs. John Roosevelt, the Misses de Peyster, Mrs. Clarkson, Mrs. William Edgar Le Roy, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. Walden Pell Anderson, Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, Miss Livingston, Mrs. Livingston, Mr. Carroll, and Mr. C. Stacy Clark.

FOG CAUSES COLLISIONS.

Elevated Trains in Brooklyn Crash and Eight Persons Are Hurt—Ferryboat Hits a Tug.

There were two collisions on elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system yesterday morning as a result of the fog. The ordinary signals were not considered sufficient, and such extra precautions as posting men along the tracks were taken, but nevertheless a collision occurred about 7 o'clock on the Fifth Avenue line at the Twentieth Street station, in which eight persons were slightly hurt, and another at 7:30 o'clock on the Kings County line on Fulton Street, near Spencer Place.

In the Fifth Avenue accident a train of four cars, which had been delayed in the Twentieth Street station, was bumped into by another one of the same size. Both were motor-car trains. Motorman Joseph Desmond of the first train was five minutes behind scheduled time, according to the men in charge of the second train, Motorman August Wiedekind and Conductor Frederick Schroeder. The fog was so dense the motorman of the second train could see only two car lengths in front of him. Wiedekind had his train under some control as he approached the station, but it was impossible to avoid a crash.

The collision made a tremendous noise and sent a shower of wreckage to the street, but none of the eight men was seriously hurt. A policeman sent in an ambulance call to the Seney Hospital, and the surgeon who responded established a temporary relief bureau at the Fifth Avenue Police Station nearby and treated the injured. The collision caused over an hour's delay on the road.

The other accident was also a rear-end collision. It is the habit to halt trains on the Kings County line for signal before reaching the Franklin Avenue Station. A train was waiting near Spencer Place for the signal, on the way down town, when another struck it from behind. The trains were going slowly and little damage was done. The passengers were much frightened, but no one was injured. One man had to be prevented from jumping out of the window, and two women fainted. This accident also caused considerable delay and blocking of cars.

The Narrows were practically fog-bound all day, as no steamers or sailing vessels that were due, except one, ventured in. Only one of the steamers that left their piers on their outward voyages was reported as having passed out. They carefully felt their way down the bay and dropped anchor about Quarantine. The fog lay like a heavy pall over the water, and hardly anything could be seen a dozen yards distant.

The Sound steamers all came in several hours behind time, and by 7:30 o'clock in the evening only three of them had left their docks on their outward trips—the Richard Peck of the New Haven Line, the City of Worcester of the Norwich Line, and the Allen of the Bridgeport Line. The tooting of whistles and ringing of the ferry bells were heard all day along the water front. The ferryboats could not run on schedule, and in most instances the companies sent out only one boat at a time.

The passengers on the Staten Island ferryboat Southfield on her 8:30 trip from Manhattan last night had a scare. The boat crawled down through the dense fog, feeling her way, and when off Robbin's Reef the gong sounded stop, and then immediately afterward full speed astern. There was a crash on the port bow, and some of the passengers saw the outlines of the tug Annie Bauer. The tug scraped along the side of the Southfield for a moment, and then slid off in the mist and was lost to sight. There were but few women aboard the Southfield, and the panic was of short duration. A hasty examination showed that the ferryboat had not been hurt, but the upper works of the tug were considerably damaged.

RICHMOND IN A PLIGHT.

Richmond Borough for a time was in a bad plight last night. The electric lights were out, the electric cars were not running, and there was a fog so dense that one could not see five feet ahead of him.

It was foggy in the morning and it was more or less foggy all day. As night came on, however, the fog settled down thick. It was then that things went wrong at the electric power house at Livingston. The arc lamps with which the streets are lighted were about to be turned on when a break occurred and there was no power. The power for the Staten Island Electric Railroad had also been shut off, and from 5 o'clock until 6:45, during which time the bulk of the travel on the island is done, there were no trolley cars and no lights.

Those living along the shore were able to take to the trains, but those in the interior had to walk. At 6:45 the trolley cars began to creep along in an uncertain manner and after a time gathered confidence enough to begin running as regularly as might be in the dense fog. The scattered lights were lighted about 9 o'clock, but they are so few and far between that they gave little relief.

Fog Hid Approaching Train.

Edward Griffith, employed by the Long Island Railroad, died on the way to St. John's Hospital, in Long Island City, yesterday from injuries received by being struck by a train. He was on a ladder repairing a bridge over the tracks at Woodside Station, and the heavy fog prevented him from seeing the fast Port Washington express approaching. The train struck the ladder, knocking Griffith upon the platform. His skull was fractured.

THEATRE TICKETS FOR THREE.

Two well-known clubmen of Brooklyn are involved in a suit for the alienation of a wife's affections, which was tried yesterday before Justice Gaynor in the Supreme Court, that borough.

The plaintiff is William S. Lewis, a lawyer, with offices at 145 Nassau Street, Manhattan. The defendant is Charles Hoffman, Jr., a dealer in plumbers' supplies at 242 Water Street, Manhattan. Hoffman lives at 8 South Elliott Place, Brooklyn. Lewis asks for $50,000 damages for the alienation of the affections of his wife, Flora A. Lewis. Both men are prominent Masons and members of the Aurora Grata Club. Hoffman is also a member of the Crescent Athletic Club.

The Lewises were married in 1870, and have two children. They lived at 93 Monroe Place. Lewis alleges that on May 1, 1898, at the solicitation of his friend, Hoffman, he moved with his family into the house in South Elliott Place. As soon as they began to live in the same house together, he says, Hoffman became particularly attentive to Mrs. Lewis, and she soon began to prefer to go out with Hoffman to going out with her husband. Finally, he alleges, she refused to go out with him at all unless Hoffman accompanied them. On two or three occasions, when he took his wife to the theatre, he declares, he had to buy a ticket for Hoffman as well.

The case was given to the jury with instructions to hand in a sealed verdict on Monday morning.

Mr. Guggenheimer to Go West.

President Guggenheimer of the Council will start on a four weeks' vacation on Monday for the West, during which he will visit Colorado and California. He will visit his son in Colorado.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Charles A. Davison.

Charles A. Davison of this city died at Bon Air, Augusta, Ga., yesterday morning after a long illness. Mr. Davison was born May 21, 1824, at Saratoga Springs, and was educated at Williams College, from which he was graduated in 1845, and in which he retained a great interest, being a member of its Board of Trustees from 1878 until his death. He studied law with Chesse Iden Ellis, and after his admission to the bar he formed a partnership with Mr. Ellis and John E. Burrill, which lasted until 1881, when Mr. Davison retired from the active practice of his profession. He was an Elder of the University Place Presbyterian Church for more than forty years, having been ordained in 1858. He was a Trustee of the Greenwich Savings Bank and a member of the Century Club, the Bar Association, the Reform Club, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the American Museum of Natural History, the Williams College Alumni Association, and the New York Historical, the American Geographical, and the Phi Beta Kappa Societies. In 1850 Mr. Davison was married to Miss Mary A. Vermilye, daughter of the late William H. Vermylie, who, with two children, a son and a daughter, survives him.

Perry McDonough Collins.

Perry McDonough Collins, who for a quarter of a century lived at the St. Denis Hotel, died there Thursday. He was eighty-seven years old. Mr. Collins was born in Hyde Park, N. Y. In early life he was interested in a line of Mississippi River steamers. In 1849 he went to California, where, with the father-in-law of Gen. Grant, he organized the firm of Collins & Dent, bankers and dealers in gold dust. Before the days of long ocean cables Mr. Collins became a member of a company, organized as a branch of the Western Union, proposing to build an intercontinental telegraph line. The designed route lay up through the Western States, the Pacific Coast, the British possessions, and Alaska to Bering Strait. After securing the desired concessions from the Russian Government and the United States Government had sanctioned the project, the building of the first ocean cable made it impracticable.

Minot M. Silliman.

Police Justice Minot M. Silliman of White Plains died yesterday afternoon from the effects of an operation. He was seventy years old. Fifteen years ago Mr. Silliman attempted to board a moving train and fell under the wheels. His legs were crushed so badly that both had to be amputated. Recently the remaining portions of the limbs gave him considerable trouble, and an operation was resorted to. Mr. Silliman was a cousin of Senator Depew. He was a Justice of Sessions when there were Associate Justices on the County Court bench. He had been a Police Justice in White Plains for a number of years. He was never married.

Obituary Notes.

CORNELIA LEWIS LUCE died at her home in Hartwick, Oswego County, yesterday. She was born in Brookfield, N. Y., Jan. 25, 1828, and was the daughter of Col. Jeremiah and Mary Proctor Lewis. In 1885 she was married to Rufus P

FINANCIAL DIRECTORY.

Chemical National Bank
270 Broadway.

National Bank of Commerce
CAP. AND SUR. $4,500,000.
31 Nassau St.

Hanover National Bank
Capital $1,000,000. Surplus and profits, $2,500,000
9 and 11 Nassau St.

The Nassau Bank
Corner Beekman and Nassau Streets.

Central National Bank
320 Broadway.

Continental Trust Company
30 Broad St.

Colonial Trust Company
CAPITAL & SURPLUS, $1,500,000.
ST. PAUL B'LD'G.
222 B'way.

Washington Trust Company
Stewart Building, 280 Broadway.

PHILADELPHIA.
Fourth Street National Bank
Capital, $1,500,000. Surplus, $1,500,000.

BANKERS' CARDS.

Spencer Trask & Co.
BANKERS
27 & 29 Pine Street, New York.
Transact a general banking business; act as Fiscal Agents for corporations, and negotiate security issues of railroads and other companies. Execute commission orders and deal in
INVESTMENT SECURITIES.
Members New York Stock Exchange.
Branch Office: 65 State St., Albany.

Hurlbutt, Hatch & Co.,
BANKERS.
MEMBERS NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE,
71 Broadway, N. Y. City.
STOCKS and BONDS bought and sold for cash or on margin.
Interest allowed on deposits subject to check.
Telephone No. 1239 Cortlandt.

N. Y. & N. J. TELEPHONE "RIGHTS"
BOUGHT AND SOLD.
Geo. H. PRENTISS & Co.
37 William St., New York. 298 Montague St., Brooklyn.

TUNSTALL & CO.,
MEMBERS NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE
52 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Branch Office at Hoffman House.
Stocks and Bonds bought and sold for cash or carried on margin.
Market Letter on Application.
Telephones No. 1492 and No. 830 Broad.

P. J. Goodhart & Co.,
Dealers in
Bank & Trust Co. Stocks.
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
38 WALL STREET.

LEHMAN BROS.
NOS. 16-22 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK.
Deal in investment securities, and execute orders on New York Stock Exchange.
Members of the Stock, Cotton, Coffee, and Produce Exchanges, New York.

FINANCIAL.

LOUIS MESIER, Auctioneer.
REGULAR AUCTION SALE OF
STOCKS AND BONDS
By ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON,
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 24th, 1900
At 12½ o'clock, at the N. Y. Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway.
By Order of Executors.

100 shs. Gansevoort Bank.
5 shs. 12th Ward Bank.
For Account of Whom it may Concern:
16 shs. Woodcliff Land Improvement Co.
60 shs. City Trust Co.
150 shs. North American Trust Co.
6 shs. Importers and Traders' Nat'l Bank.
5 shs. National Park Bank.
25 shs. Bank of Manhattan Co.
15 shs. State Trust Co.
5 shs. National Union Bank.
34 shs. American Exchange Nat'l Bank.
58 shs. Phenix National Bank.
32 shs. Yellow Pine Pref'd.
$200 New York Athletic Club 6% bonds, 1903.
$200 New York Athletic Club 2d mtge. 5% bonds, 1910.
15 shs. Metropolitan Plate Glass Ins. Co.
100 shs. Troy Steel Co. (hyp'd).
12 shs. Bank of Metropolis.
14 shs. Merchants' Nat'l Bank.
7 shs. Bank of America.
60 shs. North American Trust Co.
2 shs. New York Life Ins. and Trust Co.
10 shs. Lawyers' Title Ins. Co.
10 shs. State Trust Co.
40 shs. Merchants' Nat'l Bank.
50 shs. Westchester Trust Co.
$18,000 Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific R. R. 1st mtge. assenting 6% bonds, 1920.
$2,000 Peo., Dec. & Evansville R. R. 2d mtge. 5% bonds, 1926.
$20,000 Savannah, Fla. & West. R. R. 1st mtge. 6% bonds, 1934.
$7,500 Brooklyn City R. R. 1st consld. mtge. 5% bonds, 1941.
50 shs. Mechanics' Bank of B'klyn.
5 shs. Lawyers' Surety Co.
25 shs. Importers and Traders' Nat'l Bank.
25 shs. National Park Bank.
40 shs. Bank of America.
63 shs. American Surety Co.
10 shs. Nat'l Union Bank.
25 shs. North American Trust Co.
50 shs. Standard Coal & Iron Co.
20 shs. Morning Star Consld. Mining Co.
200 shs. Armstrong Real Estate & Impt. Co.
97½ shs. Empire State Phosphate Co.
300 shs. San Diego Land & Town Co., pfd.
500 shs. San Diego Land & Town Co. common.
500 shs. Denver Union Water Co., pfd.
50 shs. Forest Hotel Co., Lakewood, N. J.
81 shs. International Express Co.
25 shs. State Trust Co.
10 shs. Hanover Nat'l Bank.
32 shs. Nat'l Park Bank.
100 shs. North American Trust Co.
25 shs. Nat'l Bank of Commerce.
3 shs. American Exchange Nat'l Bank.

CITY TRUST CO
OF NEW YORK.
36 WALL STREET.
OFFICERS:
JAS. ROSS CURRAN, President.
JOHN D. CRIMMINS, Vice-President.
GEORGE R. SHELDON, 2d Vice-Pres't.
ARTHUR TERRY, Secretary.
WALTER W. LEE, Asst. Secretary.
STATEMENT DECEMBER 30TH, 1899.
RESOURCES.

N. Y. City Bonds	$1,095,000 00
Other Bonds and Securities	264,505 00
Bonds and Mortgages	36,000 00
Loans on Collaterals	3,340,796 87
Bills Purchased	328,917 17
Cash in Vault and Banks	1,965,853 44
Overdrafts	30 68
Furniture and Fixtures	14,086 66
Interest, Commissions, etc., Receivable	78,531 23
	$12,123,721 05

LIABILITIES.

Capital	$1,000,000 00
Surplus	1,000,000 00
Undivided Profits	181,277 23
Deposits:
General $9,647,818 86
In Trust 227,150 72
	9,874,969 58
Interest, Taxes, etc., Payable	67,474 24
	$12,123,721 05

Began Business March 1, 1899.

FINANCIAL.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE

CONSOLIDATED GAS CO.

In January, 1899, at the time of your last Annual Meeting, the Consolidated Gas Company was profitably engaged in the business of manufacturing gas and retailing the same at the price of $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The stockholders were receiving dividends upon their investment at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and the stock, by reason of these satisfactory and prosperous conditions, enjoyed universal favor and confidence on the part of the investing public.

On the first day of May, 1899, your directors saw fit to reduce the price charged to consumers for gas to 65c. per thousand cubic feet, its rivals and competitors perforce meeting this act by similar reductions in price. A ruinous rate war, thus entered upon, has resulted in serious loss to the stockholders of the Company, and in a reduction of their dividends to one-half of the amount previously paid.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company, to be held on the 22nd day of January, 1900, finds a demoralized condition of its affairs prevailing. Dividends have been gradually reduced until they are now one-half of those formerly received, and the stockholders are confronted with the possibility that if the Company continues its present policy respecting the price of gas to the consumer for any period of time, the restoration of more favorable conditions may be prevented by the enactment of hostile legislation on behalf of a public that, having become accustomed to the present price, will tolerate no change.

A matter fraught with so much of vital consequence to those whose capital is invested in the securities of the Company is one that merits the serious and thoughtful consideration of every stockholder, especially in view of the fact that a continuance of the present disastrous policy of the directors may produce further reductions in dividends and even place the Company in a position where it cannot continue to earn its fixed charges. The stockholders are copartners with each other in the business of manufacturing and selling gas, and they owe a duty to themselves to demand and obtain at the annual meeting of the stockholders full information concerning the business policy of the Company, and before re-electing any of the directors to know whether a continuance of the course adopted by the present directors is warranted by existing conditions, or is to the best interests of the Company.

One competitor of your Company has already restored the price of the gas sold by it to $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The other competitors of the Consolidated Gas Company, not being charitable institutions, would doubtless be exceedingly glad to co-operate with the Consolidated Gas Company in restoring the price of gas to a normal and proper level.

In the absence of very positive information to the contrary, this course would seem to be to the best interests of the Company, and no selfish aims or private purpose of any officer of the Company should prevail at the expense of the stockholders.

Your directors have recently purchased, by a certain private arrangement, a large number of shares of the capital stock of the New York Mutual Gas Light Company. It is believed by many that the price paid for this stock was enormously in excess of its actual or prospective value.

This transaction may have been a profitable one for the Company, but the surface facts disclosed warrant a close investigation into its details, and satisfactory assurance that it was not dominated by the individual interests of any person in a position to shape the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company to the accomplishment of his own ends.

It appears by a publication contained in The New York Herald of Jan. 4th, the correctness of which is admitted by the President of your Company, that on or about that date your Directors acquired control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company. This transaction is one of great magnitude, and the details of it should be scrutinized with great care by the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company before ratification by them. The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company is a consolidated or parent company of a number of electric light companies, most of them absorbed on a most extravagant basis of valuation. As an instance of this: $21,000,000 purchase money bonds of the present Company were issued to acquire $9,200,000 of the Common Stock of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. The assumption by the Consolidated Gas Company of the control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, with its enormous bonded indebtedness, and its $36,000,000 of Capital Stock, marks a radical step in the history of the Consolidated Gas Company, and the stockholders can certainly ask in all fairness that they be given a most thorough opportunity to consider this momentous financial operation after a submission to them of the full details thereof, before being called upon to ratify it.

It is understood that your Company has also purchased control of another great electrical company, but the persons directly interested are emphatic in their refusal to state anything concerning the price paid.

The belief is beginning to be held by many stockholders that they would receive much larger returns upon their investment, and their stock would have a much greater market value, were the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company divorced from the control of men having vast personal ambitions to serve. The stock of the Company is selling for much less than its actual worth, because its affairs have not been in the hands of men who have administered their trust with a sole view to the earning of as much money as possible by the manufacture and sale of gas, and the resulting payment of large dividends to the stockholders.

It is beginning to be felt that the stock of the Company is being used as a mere factor in vast and involved financial intrigues and in attempts at the accomplishment of far-reaching personal ambitions by men who, in their lust for financial power or the gratification of personal desires, have become indifferent to the interests of the stockholders of this gas company.

The stock of the Consolidated Gas Company is held very generally by legitimate investors, who have purchased the stock of the Company with the intention of permanently holding it for the dividends to be earned from the manufacture and sale of gas in New York. It is not fair that their interests should be subservient to those of men who, having many diverse and complicated interests, serve them at the expense of the stockholders. There are on the board of your Company many men of uprightness and integrity who are conscious of their responsibility as trustees for the stockholders, and who, it is believed, will respond at once to the just demand of an expressed public opinion that they conduct the business of the Company in the sole and exclusive interests of their stockholders.

The stockholders have it within their power, by an insistence upon conservatism and of their rights to be fully informed concerning the business of the Company, to greatly enhance the market value of their stock and to obtain much larger returns upon their investment, by way of dividends.

The attention of guardians, trustees, executors, administrators and those acting in a fiduciary capacity for stockholders of the company is especially called to this communication. A duty is imposed upon them of seeking full information concerning these matters which may affect the value of the securities held by them, and of asserting and enforcing the full rights of stockholders in the management of the Company.

It is desirable that as many stockholders as possible shall attend the annual meeting in person. Those who cannot do so, and believe that the directors should be called upon to furnish information concerning the affairs of the Company, are requested to sign the proxy which has been sent to them, and to mail the same to

GEORGE ALFRED LAMB,
c/o LAMB & VOSS,
Attorneys & Counselors at Law,
32 Nassau Street, N. Y. City.

PREPAYMENT OF DEBENTURES.

The Middlesex Banking Co.,
OF MIDDLETOWN, CONN.,

will pay, with interest to date of payment, on and after Jan. 11, 1900, the Debentures of Series A 12 and A 13, due Feb. 1, 1900.
Series A 14 and 84, due Mar. 1, 1900.
Series A 15, A 16, A 19, and 85, due April, 1, 1900.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Oregon Short Line Railway Company

First Mortgage 6% Bonds.

Coupons due February 1, 1900, from the abovementioned bonds will be paid at maturity on presentation at the office of the Treasurer of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, No. 120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Temporary receipts will be issued for packages of coupons left for verification on and after Thursday, January 25, 1900.

Oregon Short Line Railroad Company,
FREDERIC V. S. CROSBY, Treasurer.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS FOR
$5,568,483.90
OF 3½% Corporate Stock
OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

Exempt from all Taxation in the State of New York, except for State Purposes.

Principal and Interest Payable in Gold.

EXECUTORS, ADMINISTRATORS, GUARDIANS, AND OTHERS HOLDING TRUST FUNDS ARE AUTHORIZED, BY CHAPTER 65 OF THE LAWS OF 1889, TO INVEST IN THIS STOCK.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED BY THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, at his office, No. 280 Broadway, in the City of New York, until

Tuesday, the 23d Day of January, 1900,

at 2 o'clock P. M., for the whole or a part of the following-described Registered Stock of the City of New York, bearing interest at the rate of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. per annum, to wit:

$2,000,000 00 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR THE NEW EAST RIVER BRIDGE. Principal payable November 1, 1940.	368,483 90 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR HIGH SCHOOLS AND SITES THEREFOR. Principal payable November 1, 1940.
[illegible] 00 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR A NEW HALL OF RECORDS. Principal payable November 1, 1940.	800,000 00 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR CONSTRUCTING A PUBLIC DRIVEWAY ALONG THE HARLEM RIVER. Principal payable November 1, 1940.
300,000 00 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR SCHOOL-HOUSES AND SITES THEREFOR. Principal payable November 1, 1940.	1,650,000 00 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR THE NEW AQUEDUCT. Principal payable October 1, 1919.
500,000 00 CORPORATE STOCK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR SCHOOL-HOUSES AND SITES THEREFOR IN THE BOROUGH OF BROOKLYN. Principal payable November 1, 1940.

A Deposit of TWO PER CENT. (in money or certified check on a National or State Bank in the City of New York) required.
For fuller information, see CITY RECORD. Copies to be procured at No. 2 City Hall.

BIRD S. COLER, Comptroller,
THE CITY OF NEW YORK,
DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
JANUARY 9, 1900.

FINANCIAL.

January 15th, 1900.

TO HOLDERS OF FIRST MORTGAGE SIX PER CENT. BONDS OF

The Mechanical Rubber Co.

The undersigned Trustees, under the mortgage above referred to, desire, under authority of said mortgage, to expend the sum of Forty thousand four hundred and two dollars and ninety-nine cents ($40,402.99) in the purchase of bonds of said issue, provided such issue can, in their opinion, be now made advantageously.

Sealed offers of said bonds may be sent to the KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY, 66 Broadway, New York, addressed to the undersigned, on or before February 1, 1900. The Trustees reserve the right to reject any and all bids not in accordance with the above announcement.

CHAS. T. BARNEY,
JOHN McANERNEY,
Trustees.

New York, Jan. 18, 1900.

DIVIDENDS.

Louisiana & Missouri River Railroad Co.
First Mortgage 7% Bonds.

Coupons due February 1, 1900, from the abovementioned bonds will be paid at maturity on presentation at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of The Chicago & Alton Railroad Co., No. 120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Temporary receipts will be issued for packages of coupons left for verification on and after Thursday, January 25, 1900.

The Chicago & Alton Railroad Co.
FREDERIC V. S. CROSBY, Ass't Treasurer.

Office of the Consolidation Coal Company,
44 South Street, Baltimore, Maryland,
January 16th, 1900.

The Board of Directors of this Company have this day declared a dividend of Two Dollars per share on the Capital Stock, payable at the office of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, No. 65 Cedar Street, New York, on and after February 1st, 1900. Dividend checks will be mailed to stockholders.

The transfer books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. January 25th, 1900, and reopen at 10 A. M. February 2d, 1900.

T. K. STUART, Secretary.

The Pacific Coast Company,
10 Wall Street, New York, January 3d, 1900.

The following dividends have this day been declared upon the stock of The Pacific Coast Company, payable on and after February 1st, 1900, to stockholders of record at the close of business on January 10th, 1900: A dividend of 1¼ per cent. upon the first preferred stock, a dividend of 1 per cent. upon the second preferred stock, and a dividend of 1 per cent. upon the common stock.

Transfer books will close at three o'clock P. M. on the 10th day of January, 1900, and will reopen at ten o'clock A. M. on February 1st, 1900.

JOHN KEAN, Treasurer.

Office of American Ice Company,
133 E. 23d Street.
New York, Jan. 18th, 1900.

A dividend of ONE PER CENT. on the Common Stock of this Company has this day been declared, and will be payable Feb. 15th, 1900, to Stockholders of Record at the close of business Feb. 1st, 1900.

The transfer books of the Common Stock will be closed from 3 o'clock P. M., Feb. 1st, 1900, until Feb. 16th, 1900.

Dividend checks will be mailed to Stockholders of Record unless otherwise instructed.

J. T. SPROULL, Treasurer.

SEMI-ANNUAL CASH DIVIDEND.
Illinois Central Railroad Co.

The Board of Directors has this day declared a dividend of 2½ Per Cent. in cash, payable March 1st, 1900, to the holders of the Capital Stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company as registered at the close of business January 31st, 1900.

The stock transfer books will be closed for the purpose of the above dividend from January 31st until February 23d, 1900.

A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.

New York, January 17th, 1900.

The Lawyers' Title Insurance Company of New York,
37 & 39 Liberty St. and 44½ & 46 Maiden Lane.
NEW YORK, Jan. 10, 1900.

The Board of Directors of this company has this day declared a dividend of 2½ Per Cent., and an extra dividend of One-Half Per Cent, payable at the company's offices on Feb. 1, 1900. The transfer books will be closed Saturday, Jan. 13, and reopened Friday, Feb. 2.

JOHN DUER, Treasurer.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 4 per cent. Registered Bonds of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago Ry. Co. will close at the office of the Central Trust Co. of N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the quarterly interest thereon, due Feb. 1, 1900, and will reopen Feb. 1, at 10 A. M.

E. F. OSBORN, Secretary.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1900.

THE ALABAMA CONSOLIDATED COAL & Iron Company, 27 William Street, New York, January 12th, 1900.—The Board of Directors have this day declared a quarterly dividend of One and Three-Quarters Per Cent. on the Preferred Stock of the Company to Stockholders of Record January 20th, 1900, payable February 1st, 1900. The Transfer books will close January 20th, 1900, at three o'clock P. M., and will reopen February 1st, 1900.

JNO E. SEARLES, Treasurer.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 7 per cent. registered bonds of the Columbus & Toledo R. R. Co. will close at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the semi-annual interest thereon due Feb. 1, 1900, and will open Feb. 1st at 10 A. M.

WILLIAM N. COTT, Treasurer.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1900.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

Hamilton Bank of New York City.
New York, January 17, 1900.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of this Bank, held January 10th, 1900, the following-named gentlemen were unanimously elected Directors for the ensuing year:

Wm. H. Caldwell,	Bernard Loth,
Cyrus Clark,	Wm. A. Martin,
Martin D. Fink,	James Rogers,
Wm. S. Gray,	Edwin S. Schenck,
Robert J. Hoguet,	Fred. B. Schenck,
John J. Lapham,	John J. Sperry,
Emanuel Lauer,	Julius W. Tiemann,
	Lucien C. Warner.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors, held this day, MR. EDWIN S. SCHENCK was unanimously re-elected President, and MR. FREDERICK B. SCHENCK was unanimously re-elected Vice President. J. C. JOY, Cashier.

MOBILE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.—The Annual Meetings of the registered holders of the General Mortgage Bonds of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, pursuant to the General Mortgage of May 15, 1858, and of the holders of the Preferred Income and Sinking Fund Debentures of said Company, pursuant to the Deed of Trust of May 1, 1879, will be held at the office of the Company, No. 11 Pine Street, in the City of New York, on Wednesday, February 7, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon, and 2 o'clock P. M., respectively. The Voting Register of the said General Mortgage Bonds and the Transfer Books of the said Debentures will close at 3 o'clock P. M., on Wednesday, January 31, 1900, and reopen on Friday, February 23, 1900.

HY. TACON, Secretary.

Mobile, Ala., January 20, 1900.

Election Notice.
St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co.,
New York, January 13, 1900.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company will be held in the Company's office, in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, on Tuesday, March 13, 1900, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before said meeting. The annual meeting of the Directors will be held in the same office on the same day, at 12:00 o'clock noon. The transfer books will be closed on Tuesday, January 30, 1900, at 3:00 o'clock P. M., and reopened on Wednesday, March 14, 1900, at 10:00 o'clock A. M.

GEO. J. GOULD, President.

A. H. CALEF, Secretary.

Election Notice.
The Missouri Pacific Railway Co.,
New York, January 13, 1900.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of The Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held in the Company's office, in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, on Tuesday, March 13, 1900, at 9:30 o'clock A. M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before said meeting. The annual meeting of the Directors will be held in the same office on the same day, at 12:00 o'clock noon. The transfer books will be closed on Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1900, at 3:00 o'clock P. M., and reopened on Wednesday, March 14, 1900, at 10:00 o'clock A. M.

GEO. J. GOULD, President.

A. H. CALEF, Secretary.

THE PEOPLES GAS LIGHT & COKE CO.
(of Chicago).

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of The Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company will be held at the office of the Company in Chicago, Adams Street and Michigan Avenue, on Saturday, February 10, 1900, at 11 o'clock A. M. The transfer books will close, in New York, in accordance with the by-laws, at 3 o'clock P. M. on Friday, January 19th, and will reopen at 10 o'clock A. M. Tuesday, February 13th, 1900.

C. K. G. BILLINGS, President.

New York, January 12th, 1900.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Universal Preservative Company for the election of five Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting, will be held at the office of the Company, No. 80 Greenwich St., New York, on January 29th, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon. Transfer books will close on January 17th, 1900, and open on January 30th, 1900.

J. V. S. ODDIE, Secretary.

The Colonial Bank of the City of New York,
Jan'y 19th, 1900.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of this bank for the election of Directors for the ensuing year and for the transaction of any other business that may come before it will be held at the Banking Rooms, 480 Columbus Avenue, on MONDAY, February 5th, 1900, from 4 to 5 P. M.

WM. C. DUNCAN, Cashier.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks firm.

STOCK TRANSACTIONS.

	Shares.
Jan. 19	344,668
To date this year	6,040,490
Corresponding date last year	14,374,078

BOND TRANSACTIONS.

Jan. 19	$3,267,700
To date this year	$28,703,500
Corresponding date last year	$90,462,040

Money rate: Collateral loans on call, 3@4 per cent.; at three months, 5 per cent.; at six months, 5½ per cent. Commercial paper, sixty to ninety days, 5 per cent.

***

Net changes in stocks of one-half of 1 per cent. or more were:

Stocks Advanced.

Am. Ice	1⅜	Manhattan	1⅜
Am. Smelt. & R.	1⅜	Met. St. Ry.	⅝
Am. Steel & W. pf.	½	Mex. Central	½
Am. Sugar Ref.	1⅜	M., St. P. & S. S. M.	½
Am. Tin Plate pf.	2½	Mo., K. & T. pf.	⅞
Am. Tobacco	1½	Missouri Pacific	3½
Ann Arbor pf.	1½	National Steel	1¼
Anaconda Copper	¾	N. J. Central	1¼
At., T. & S. F. pf.	⅞	N. Y. Central	⅝
B'klyn Rapid Trans.	1½	N. Y., N. H. & H.	1
B'klyn Union Gas	1	North. Amer.	⅝
Canadian Pacific	1¼	Pacific Mail	½
Chi., B. & Q.	⅞	Penn. R. R.	1¼
Chi., M. & St. P.	¾	People's Gas, Chi.	1
C., M. & St. P. pf.	½	Pullman Co.	⅝
Chi., R. I. & Pac.	⅝	Reading 2d pf.	¾
C., C., C. & St. L.	⅝	Rep. Steel	½
Col. So. 1st pf.	½	St. L. & S. F. 2d pf.	½
Col. So. 2d pf.	1	St. L. S. W.	¾
Cont. Tob. pf.	1¼	St. L. S. W. pf.	1
Den. & R. G. pf.	⅝	Southern Ry. pf.	⅞
Des M. & Ft. D.	1¼	Tenn. Coal & Iron	1½
Federal Steel	1½	Texas & Pacific	⅞
Federal Steel pf.	⅝	Union Pacific pf.	⅝
Illinois Central	½	U. S. Leather pf.	¾
Iowa Cent. pf.	½	Wabash pf.	⅞
Louis. & Nash.	½

Stocks Declined.

Am. Linseed	½	Minn. & St. L.	⅞
Am. Linseed pf.	¾	Nat. Lead	½
Brunswick	1¾	N. Y. Air Brake	3
Col. Fuel & Iron pf.	1½	Pressed Steel Car pf.	½
Consol. Gas	½	Third Avenue	2¾
Dul., S. S. & A. pf.	1	U. S. Rubber	½
Erie Tel. & Tel.	½	U. S. Rubber pf.	1
Great North. pf.	2½	W. & L. E. 1st pf.	¾
Lake Erie & West.	1¼	Wis. Central	½

***

Net changes in bonds of 1 per cent. or more were:

Bonds Advanced.

C., B. & Q. deb. 5s.	1⅛	L., Ev. & St. L. con. 6s	2
C., St. P., M. & O. 6s	1¼	M., St. P. & S. S. M. con. 5s, r.	2
Cleve. & Mah. V. 5s.	1	Mex. Cent. 2d inc.	1
Evans. & T. H. gen.	1	Mo., K. & T. 2d	1
Green Bay, deb. A.	2½	St. L. S. W. 2d	1
Lake Erie & W. 2d.	3⅛	San A. & A. P. 4s	1¼
L., Ev. & St. L. gen. 4s	1½	Wabash deb. B.	1
		W. N. Y. & P. 1st	1

Bonds Declined.

Am. Dock & Imp. 5s	1	B., C. R. & N. coll. tr. 5s	1

MARKET CONDITIONS.

To some extent, but not largely, yesterday's stock market was better than such as have recently ruled. Transactions were bigger, quotations somewhat improved. Yet a fact clear to every observer was that the character of all the trading was professional. The public was nowhere discernible. Commission houses were idle—and representations that suggest renewal of "outside" activity are fables.

***

All the news of the day had an encouraging front. Boer war reports were cheerful—from the Wall Street standpoint—to the extent of forecasting the immediate collapse of all South African opposition to British arms. Some curious "special dispatches" fabricated in Wall Street were given out with London date lines.

Wall Street agitation over Transvaal hostilities is one of the humors of current history. It is agreed by both bulls and bears that British success means good things for American stocks—and, hence, when tales of Ladysmith relief were uttered yesterday there was forthwith a rally in Tobacco Trust, Sugar Trust jumped up, and Hocking Coal and Republic Steel acted almost as if somebody had really made a genuine bid for them. Of nonsense capitalized we have seldom had queerer examples.

***

The sensation of the day's trading was in Third Avenue Street Railway stock. At the opening of business it broke ten points. Later (on account of Ladysmith bulletins) it jumped back again six or seven. Disclosure of a seventeen-million-dollar floating debt with bankers ready to provide relief on commission stunned Wall Street, for this record was materially different from what had been the general estimate; and (whether quotations immediately go up or go down) the exhibit disturbs. Stockholders later are to have the "privilege" of subscribing for new stock at par. And, incidentally, there are reports of a similar "right" soon to be announced on Metropolitan Street Railway—as not long ago it was in Manhattan.

***

Money market conditions are working as prophets of easy money forecast.

The improving bond market—the current demand growing continually larger—encourages confidence among conservatives who hope for a consequently better market for stocks.

SUGAR WAR DEVELOPMENTS.

Sugar Trust stocks were again active yesterday, with the opening rather weak and the close strong at a net advance of 1⅝ points in dealings of about 50,000 shares. There seemed to be a better feeling among buyers.

During the day the announcement was made that the trust had made a further advance of 10 points in its price and that the independent companies had followed suit. In addition, all concessions and guarantees were withdrawn.

But though apparently this indicates a better understanding among the companies, the Street hears that the seming friendliness is but a cloak to cover some certain contemplated designs on the part of the independent companies. It is now said, in fact, that the plans which for some time have been quietly forming looking to a consolidation of the independent sugar refining companies against the trust are practically completed and that in a very short time a definite and authoritative announcement to that effect may be expected.

While nothing official on the subject can be learned, it is a fact that recently the officers of the various independent companies have been in conference; that, indeed, it is understood such a conference was held yesterday afternoon, at which the details of the organization and working of the projected consolidated company were presented and discussed. Officers of the companies concerned refuse, however, to talk of the matter.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

General Chemical Company.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the GENERAL CHEMICAL COMPANY, for the purpose of electing Directors for the ensuing year and of transacting such other business as may properly come before the meeting, will be held at the Company's office at Phillippstown, Putnam County, in the State of New York, on Wednesday, the 31st of January, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

The stock and transfer books will be closed against the transfer of stock on Saturday, January 20, at 12 o'clock noon, and will be reopened on February 1st, at 10 A. M.

New York, January 12, 1900.

CHAS. ROBINSON SMITH, Secretary.

PROPOSALS.

OFFICE OF THE ALABAMA AND VICKSBURG RY. CO., 833-835 Gravier St., New Orleans, La., Jan. 1, 1900.

Sealed proposals for the sale to this company of its Second Mortgage Bonds, with all unpaid coupons attached, under Article 9 of said Mortgage, to the extent of Ten Thousand Dollars, will be received at this office until Feb. 15, 1900.

C. C. HARVEY, President.

MAY LEASE UNION PACIFIC.

In connection with the buying of Union Pacific, which is said to be for strong interests, the Street yesterday had a story to the effect that at a meeting in Chicago between Union Pacific and Chicago and Northwestern officials arrangements would be perfected whereby the Northwestern would lease the Union Pacific for a term of years, and that the arrangement would be of decided advantage to all the stockholders of the road to be leased.

Houses with London connections were reported to have purchased large options to call Union Pacific common at about the present prices, the options to run until the end of February.

It was not possible, however, to obtain any official verification here of these numerous reports.

NOT TO SELL TO THE TRUST.

American Tobacco was strong yesterday in the face of the announcement from Raleigh, N. C., that the tobacco growers of that State will hereafter sell their output to a syndicate, to the exclusion of the American Company. Other Southern States are expected to join in the movement, which, it is said, may be disastrous to the American Company. The syndicate to which hereafter the tobacco will be sold is understood to be a part of the new opposition to the Tobacco Trust, of which lately there has been more or less talk.

STEEL STOCKS STRONG.

Most of the steel stocks shared in the general strength of the market yesterday, and some substantial advances were made, notably in Federal Steel, which gained 1¼ points; Tennessee Coal and Iron, which advanced 1¾ points, and American Steel and Wire, the appreciation in which was 1⅝ points. The announcement that the strike in the establishments of the Steel and Wire Company was to be declared off helped the stock.

EVIDENCES OF PROSPERITY.

Striking evidence of the continuing prosperity of the South, reflected in the great demands upon the Southern roads, was presented yesterday when the Louisville and Nashville and the Southern put out their earnings statements. In the case of Louisville and Nashville the earnings in the second week in January increased $80,000, as compared with a year ago—a gain of more than $12,000 a day. The earnings of the Southern in the same week totaled $560,570, an increase of $90,000.

LOCAL TRACTION STOCKS.

With the exception of Third Avenue the local traction stocks all showed gains yesterday, though the movement in Metropolitan was so variable that it was a difficult matter to say what the close would show. At one time the low figure of 161 was touched, while at another the quotation was 166. The close was at 165, a net gain of ⅝. The temporary weakness of the stock was ascribed to selling at the time the Third Avenue stock broke, on the belief that Metropolitan would suffer in the decline.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit was strong throughout the day on talk of favorable developments at the coming annual meeting, and closed with a net gain of 1⅛ points. Manhattan's gain was 1⅜, on sales of 6,900 shares.

MISSOURI PACIFIC STRONG.

Missouri Pacific showed much strength yesterday on what was reported to be inside buying, resulting from a bull pool formed to raise the quotation of the stock. Other Gould stocks were strong, in sympathy with Missouri Pacific's upward movement.

LONDON AGAIN A BUYER.

London was yesterday again a buyer of Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Louisville and Nashville, and Norfolk and Western, and the strength displayed by all of these stocks caused not a little short covering. The 20 cents advance in the rate for carrying bituminous coal will, officials say, add appreciably to the earnings of Norfolk and Western.

ONE EVIDENCE OF DULLNESS.

As an evidence of the dullness of yesterday's market, it is worth noting that for the first half hour or so of trading not a single quotation of the Granger shares, Atchison preferred excepted, was made. Generally, because of their international relations, the Granger stocks are among the first on the tape.

ANTICIPATING A STATEMENT.

From present indications the bank statement to-day should be even more favorable than that of last week. During the week the banks have gained from the Sub-Treasury something over $4,000,000, while the gain from the interior, by express and mail, has been more than $5,000,000. There have been no gold shipments to offset this gain, as there had been in the previous week, while bankers say that loans have increased little, if any. The expectation among bankers is that the surplus reserve will show practically as the known figures indicate.

EARNINGS STILL GROW.

The earnings of the railroads of the country continue steadily to increase, as evidenced by the following figures which The Commercial and Financial Chronicle will to-day present:

| 2d Week of January.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Dullness continued in the market for outside securities yesterday, the number of issues traded in was relatively small, and total transactions for the day were considerably below what was the average last month. Prices did not fluctuate very much, and most of the day's changes were unimportant. As on the previous day, the market became somewhat firmer at the close, and in a few stocks final bids showed advances over Thursday's last prices. A feature of the market was the activity of Standard Oil, which was more largely traded in than on any day for many weeks past, which was the more notable on account of the relative dullness of most other issues.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA opened weak and sold off a point in the preferred stock, and fractionally in the common. It became stronger at the end of the day, and the preferred stock recovered its early loss and ended the day with a slight net gain. The weakness of these stocks during the past few days seems more than to any other reason attributable to various unfavorable rumors that have been circulated in regard to the company's position, all of which, however, have lacked confirmation. Trading in the stock was limited to a few hundred shares in each issue.

ST. LOUIS STREET RAILWAYS subscriptions were inactive, but very firm, and there was also better demand for the common and preferred stocks of the United Railways Company of St. Louis. It was announced by Brown Brothers & Co. that out of the profits on advance sales of the bonds of the company the final installment of 15 per cent, due on the subscriptions had been paid, and that, further, the eleven-dollar assessment on the common stock of the United Railways Company of St. Louis had been paid with moneys from the same source. This assessment was called for by the plan of purchase framed in July last under which this common stock is to be exchanged on payment of $11 per share for stock of the St. Louis Transit Company.

STANDARD OIL was traded in to the extent of 700 shares, an unusually large amount in that stock. It sold from 494 up to 496, and closed at 495¼ bid, showing a net gain of 2½ points. Buying appeared to be principally for the account of insiders, but no special reason appeared for the large demand for the stock. It seems to be generally believed among those trading in the stock that it is likely to reach very much higher prices in the near future, and the apparent inside buying is offered as proof of the correctness of these surmises.

GENERAL CARRIAGE was offered down to 5½, with little opposition, as there was no broad demand for the stock. It recovered part of the loss later, and closed at 5¾ bid, showing a net loss of an eighth of a point. It was traded in to the extent of only a few hundred shares.

ELECTRIC AXLE recovered fractionally from the previous day's closing, the price advancing to 4¼ on light transactions.

ELECTRIC VEHICLE sold in half lots at 47, and for some time was offered at that figure. Just before the close it jumped from 44 bid to 48 bid, ending the day at 48 bid and showing a net gain of 3 points. The preferred stock was offered at 85.

HORSE COLLAR was fairly active, and, after selling at ⅝, closed at ½ bid, an eighth advance.

RUBBER GOODS preferred was in good demand. Sales of 200 shares were made at 80, and the issue closed at 70 bid. No change occurred in the common stock, which was traded in only in odd lots.

BAY STATE GAS sold at 1⅜, and closed with an advance of an eighth of a point, at 1⅝ bid.

CRAMPS' SHIPYARD sold at 79¾.

ACTIVE SECURITIES.

Gas Companies.

	Bid.	Asked.
Bay State Gas	1⅝	1¾
New Amsterdam	22	23
New Amsterdam pf	47	50
New Amsterdam 5s, with interest	94½	95½

Industrials.

American Agricultural Chemical	31	33
American Agricultural Chemical pf.	76¾	78
American Bicycle	14	17
American Bicycle pf	43	48
American Bicycle bonds	92	93
American Woolen Goods	23¾	24
American Woolen Goods pf., ex div.	78½	79
Cast-Iron Pipe	8	9
Cast-Iron Pipe pf	40	44
Distilling Company of America	5⅝	6¾
Distilling Company of America pf.	20½	21½
Electric Axle Light & Power	4¼	4½
Electric Boat	18	20
Electric Boat pf	60	70
Havana Commercial	19	21
Havana Commercial pf	59	..
International Pump	15½	17
International Pump pf, ex div.	62½	63½
National Gramaphone	56	60
National Salt	46	48
National Salt pf, ex div.	78	80
National Tube	43	44
National Tube pf	92	93
Otis Elevator	20	25
Otis Elevator pf	86	88
Royal Baking Powder pf	94	95
Rubber Goods Mfg.	27	29
Rubber Goods Mfg. pf	79	80
Sloss-Sheffield	28	30
Sloss-Sheffield pf	67	69
Standard Oil of New Jersey	495¼	497
U. S. Pneumatic Horse Collar	½	⅝

Miscellaneous.

Amalgamated Copper	82¾	83¼
American Air Power	35	50
American Cotton	..	50
Arizona Lead	10⅛	10½
Asphalt Company of America	12	13
British Columbia Copper	10¼	11
California Copper	..	3⅝
Chicago & Alton sub	105	106
Chicago & Alton 3s, (new)	93	96
Electric Vehicle	46	50
Electric Vehicle pf	..	85
*Electro-Pneumatic, assessment paid	1	1¼
Flemington Coal & Coke	20	22
General Carriage	5⅞	6
Illinois Transportation	2⅛	3
*Markeen Copper	5	7
Mexican 5s	97	98
New York Transportation	10	11
New England Transportation	7	9½
Pittsburg, Bessemer & Lake Erie	19	21
St. Louis subs	128¾	130
Retsof	25	30
Retsof bonds	80	84
Storage Power	13	14
Superior and Boston Copper	1-16	1-8
Tennessee Copper	13¾	15
Trust Company of America	197	199
Virginia Coal, Iron & Coke	24	25½
Virginia Coal, Iron & Coke bonds	61	62

*Selling dollars per share. Par value, $10.

LESS ACTIVE SECURITIES.

Street Railways.

	Bid.	Asked.
Broadway & Seventh Avenue	230	240
Broadway & Seventh Avenue 1st	104	105
Broadway & Seventh Avenue 2d	110	112
Broadway Surface 1st 5s	117	118
Broadway Surface 2d	104	105
Brooklyn City Railroad	235	237
Brooklyn, Bath & West End 5s	100	102
Central Park, N. & E. River	198	..
Central Park, N. & E. River 7s	106	108
Columbus Railway	20	24
Columbus Railway pf	80	86
Con. Traction of N J	58	60
Con. Traction of N J 5s	100	103
Eighth Avenue Railroad	375	400
Kings County Elevated 4s, (new)	84	86
42d St., Man. & St. Nicholas Av	68	73
42d St., Man. & St. Nicholas Av. 1st	115	117
42d St., Man. & St. Nicholas Av. 2d	88	92
Nassau Electric 4s	88	92
Nassau Electric 5s	108	112
New Orleans Traction	27	28
New Orleans Traction pf	100	102
Ninth Avenue Railroad	190	205
North Jersey Street Railway	30	32
North Jersey Street Railway 4s	86	89
Orange & Passaic Valley bonds	103	104
Steinway Railway Co. 6 p. c. 1st	117	118
Second Avenue Railroad consols	115½	117
Sixth Avenue Railroad	200	210
Syracuse Rapid Transit	13	16
Syracuse Rapid Transit pf	25	35
Union Railway 1st 5s	115	117
Union Railway stock	190	200
United Traction, Providence	104	111
Worcester (Mass.) Traction	30	31
Worcester (Mass.) Traction pf	105	106½

Gas Companies.

Buffalo (N. Y.) stock	4	7
Buffalo (N. Y.) 1st, with interest	72	75
Central Union 5s, guaranteed	100	103
Consolidated Gas of Newark	..	95
Consolidated Gas of Newark bonds	103	105
Consolidated Gas bonds of N. J.	87½	89½
Consolidated Gas of N. J.	21¾	23½
Consumers' Gas (Jersey City) bonds	102	105
Denver Gas	38	40½
Denver Gas 5s	..	82
Essex & Hudson Gas	35	40
Fort Wayne Gas	38	45
Fort Wayne Gas 6s	60	64
Indianapolis Gas	100	105
Indianapolis Gas bonds	101	103
Lafayette Gas Co	40	45
Lafayette Gas Co. 1st 6s	60	65
Logansport & Wabash Valley Gas	38	43
Logansport & Wabash Valley Gas 6s	48	50
Mutual Gas of New York	300	305
Madison (Wis.) stock	81	83
New England Gas & Coke	20	22
New England Gas & Coke bonds	72	74
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. 1st	103	112
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. con	106	108
N. Y. Suburban Gas Co. con	103½	103½
North Hudson L., H. & P. Co.	53	58
North Hud. L., H. & P. Co. bonds	107	109
Ohio & Indiana	38	45
Ohio & Indiana 6s	60	65
St. Joseph, (Mo.)	40	46
St. Joseph (Mo.) 6s	96	98
St. Paul Gas stock	54	58
St. Paul Gas bonds	88	90
Standard Gas, New York	100	..
Standard Gas, New York, pf	125	..
Standard Gas 1st	115	117
Syracuse Gas stock	13	15
Syracuse Gas 1st 6 per cent. bonds	85	90
Western Gas	99	101
Western Gas 1st 5s, with interest	102	105

Ferry Companies.

Brooklyn Ferry	24	26
Brooklyn Ferry 5s	90	93
Hoboken Ferry, (new)	85	88
Hoboken Ferry con. 5s	93	94

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

Complete Transactions in Stocks—Friday, Jan. 19, 1900.

	—Closing.— Bid.	Asked.	Sales.		First.	High.	Low.	Last.	Net Change.
114	117	10		Adams Express	113½	112½	118½	118½	.....
12⅜	13¼	370		Am. Car & Foundry	13	13	13	13	.....
85⅞	36⅛	800		American Ice	35⅝	35⅞	35½	35⅞	+1⅛
73	75	103		American Ice pf	72½	73	72½	73	+ ⅛
33½	34	400		American Cotton Oil	33⅝	33⅝	33⅜	33⅜	+ ⅛
14⅜	14⅝	340		American Linseed	14⅜	14⅝	14⅜	14⅜	— ⅛
54½	55	230		Am. Linseed pf	54½	54¾	54	54	— ⅛
38¾	39¼	2,375		Am. Smelt. & Ref	38	39	38	39	+1⅛
88⅜	89	545		Am. Smelt. & Ref. pf	89⅜	89	88½	89	+ ⅛
6	7	300		American Malting Co	5½	5¾	5½	5½	.....
27	28	500		Am. Malting Co. pf	26⅝	27	26½	27	.....
2	4	20		American Spirits Mfg.	4¼	4¼	4¼	4¼	.....
80	81	20		Am. S. H. pf., ex div.	82	82	82	82	.....
48	48⅜	7,670		American Steel & Wire	46⅞	48⅛	46⅞	48¼	— ⅜
90	91	710		Am. Steel & Wire pf	90	90	90	90	+ ⅛
117⅜	117½	49,555		Am. Sugar Ref. Co	115⅝	118	116½	117⅝	+1⅛
113	117	90		Am. Sugar Ref. Co. pf	113	113	112⅜	112⅜	.....
28	29⅜	200		American Tin Plate	29	29⅜	29	29¼	— ⅛
70¼	82	110		Am. Tin Plate pf., ex d	81¼	81¼	81¼	81½	+2¼
100⅜	100⅞	14,085		American Tobacco	99¾	100⅞	99¾	100⅞	+1⅛
16	19	40		Ann Arbor	15	15	15	15	.....
44	46	100		Ann Arbor pf	44	44	44	44	+1½
20⅛	20¼	550		At., T. & S. F.	20	20¼	20	20¼	+ ⅛
61¾	61¾	12,335		At., T. & S. F. pf	60⅝	61¼	60⅝	61½	+ ⅞
40¾	40⅝	135		Anaconda Copper	40¼	40⅝	40¼	40⅝	+ ⅜
58⅝	58⅞	2,900		Baltimore & Ohio	58¼	58⅝	58¼	58⅝	.....
75¼	75½	1,113		Baltimore & Ohio pf	75¼	75¼	75	75¼	+ ⅜
70¾	71	32,378		Brooklyn Rapid Tran	68⅝	71⅛	68⅜	70⅝	+1½
146	147	751		Brooklyn Union Gas	145	146	145	146	+1
13¼	14	795		Brunswick City	14¼	14¼	13¼	13¼	—1⅛
93¾	94	400		Canadian Pacific	93¾	93¾	93¾	93¾	+1½
30½	30⅝	520		Chesapeake & Ohio	30¼	30¼	30	30¼	+ ⅛
122¼	122¼	5,510		Chi., Bur. & Quincy	121¼	122¼	121½	122⅛	+ ⅞
12⅞	13	1,930		Chi. Gr. Western	12¾	13	12¾	13	+ ⅛
16	16¼	300		Chi., Ind. & Louis	16	16	16	16	.....
46	48	50		Chi., Ind. & Louis. pf	45	45	45	45	.....
118⅜	118½	5,615		Chi., Mil. & St. Paul	118	118½	118	118½	+ ⅜
170	171	200		Chi., Mil. & St. Paul pf	168⅜	170	168⅜	170	+ ⅜
162¼	163	700		Chicago & Northw	162	162¼	162	162¾	+ ⅛
106½	106⅜	1,083		Chi., R. I. & Pac	106¼	106⅝	106	106⅝	+ ⅜
10⅜	11	725		Chicago Term. Trans	10	10⅜	10	10⅜	+ ⅛
61½	61¾	300		C., C., C. & St. L	61	61½	61	61½	+ ⅞
17	17½	67		Cleve., Lor. & Wheel	16½	16⅝	16½	16⅝	.....
43⅞	43⅝	1,700		Colorado Fuel & Iron	43	44	43	43½	.....
120½	135	210		Col. Fuel & Iron pf	130	130	130	130	—1½
23	23¼	100		Colorado Midland pf	23¼	23¼	23¼	23¼	+ ⅛
5¼	5⅝	600		Colorado Southern	5½	5⅝	5½	5½	.....
43	43½	200		Col. Southern 1st pf	43½	43½	43½	43½	— ½
15	15½	300		Col. Southern 2d pf	15½	15½	15½	15½	+1
187	188	110		Consolidated Gas	187	187	187	187	—2½
33	33¼	1,910		Continental Tobacco	33	33½	32⅞	33¼	+ ⅛
85¼	86¼	395		Continental Tobac. pf	85½	86¼	85½	86¼	+1½
115	116	50		Delaware & Hudson	115	115	115	115	.....
17⅜	18¼	50		Denver & Rio Grande	17½	17¾	17½	17½	.....
69¾	70	550		Denver & R. G. pf	69	69½	69	69⅞	+ ⅜
14⅞	16	500		D., M. & Ft. Dodge	14½	14½	14½	14¾	+1⅛
12⅜	13⅜	325		Dul., S. S. & At. pf	13	13	13	13	—1
32½	33¾	100		Erie, 1st pf	32¾	32¾	32¾	32¾	.....
104¾	105¼	650		Erie 1st pf. ex d	103½	105	103½	105	+2¼
51⅝	51¾	3,550		Federal Steel	50⅝	51⅝	50½	51⅝	+1½
73½	74	982		Federal Steel pf	73¼	74	73	73⅝	+ ⅝
50	50½	380		Glucose Sugar Ref	50	50	50	50	.....
167	167½	500		Great Northern pf	167⅜	167½	167	167	—2½
31¼	34	120		Hocking Valley	31⅜	31½	31⅜	31¾	+ ⅛
113¼	114	159		Illinois Central	114	114	114	114	+ ⅛
67	67¼	200		International Paper pf	66¾	67¼	66¾	67¼	+ ⅛
50	51	100		Iowa Central pf	50¼	50½	50¼	50½	+ ⅛
11	12	100		Kanawha & Michigan	12⅜	12⅜	12⅜	12⅜	+ ⅛
21	23	100		Lake Erie & West	21½	21¼	21¼	21¼	—1¼
80¾	81	1,810		Louisville & Nashville	80¼	81	80¼	81	+ ⅛
93	93¼	6,665		Manhattan Con	92	92¾	91¼	93½	+1⅜
165	165¼	5,375		Met. Street Railway	163¼	166	161	165	+ ⅝
		1,100		Mexican Central	11	11½	11	11½	+ ½
4	4¼	210		Mexican National ctfs.	3¾	3¾	3¾	3¾	.....
58½	60	360		Minn. & St. Louis	58	58¾	58	58¾	— ⅛
16	17	500		Minn., St. P. & S. M.	16	16	16	16	+ ⅛
33	33¾	1,335		Mo., Kan. & Texas pf.	32½	33⅜	32½	33⅜	+ ⅛
43⅛	43¼	44,880		Missouri Pacific	40	43¼	40	43¼	+3⅛
183½	185	80		Morris & Essex	183½	183½	183½	183½	.....
27¼	27	420		National Lead Co	27¼	27½	26½	26½	— ½
42	43	700		National Steel	42	42⅝	42	42⅝	+1¼
92½	92¾	320		National Steel pf	92½	92½	92½	92½	+ ⅛
116	117	400		New Jersey Central	116	117	116	117	+1¼
130	135	151		New York Air Brake	130	130	130	130	—3
134¼	134⅝	4,240		New York Central	134¼	134¾	134¼	134½	+ ⅝
212	217	176		N. Y., N. H. & H	214	214	214	214	+1
22½	22¼	1,525		N. Y. Ont. & West	21⅞	22½	21⅝	22½	+ ⅝
25½	25⅝	6,360		Norfolk & Western	25⅜	25⅝	25⅜	25½	+ ⅛
70	70¼	632		Norfolk & West. pf	70¼	70⅜	70	70⅜	+ ⅛
14⅝	14½	1,800		North American	14	14½	14	14½	+ ⅛
52½	52¼	4,132		Northern Pacific	51⅞	52¼	51⅝	52¼	+ ⅛
74½	74½	1,100		Northern Pacific pf	74¼	74½	74¼	74⅝	+ ⅛
51⅝	51⅝	25		Pacific Coast	51⅜	51⅝	51⅜	51⅝	— ⅛
64⅞	66	100		Pacific Coast 2d pf	64¾	64¾	64¾	64¾	— ⅛
43⅝	44	650		Pacific Mail	43¼	43¾	43¼	43¾	+1¼
130½	130¼	3,040		Pennsylvania R. R.	129	130¼	129	130¼	+ ⅛
2	2⅛	2,780		Penn. R. R., rights	2⅛	2⅛	2⅛	2⅛	+ ⅛
104	104¼	2,430		People's Gas, Chicago	103¾	104¼	103¾	104¼	+1
2⅝	2⅞	100		Peo., Dec. & Evans	2⅝	2⅝	2⅝	2⅝	.....
		100		Philadelphia Co	74	74	74	74	.....
57	57¼	755		Pressed Steel Car, ex d.	56½	57¼	56½	57¼	.....
88	88¼	315		Pressed Steel Car pf	88¼	88¼	88	88	— ⅛
189	190	150		Pullman Company	189⅞	189⅞	189⅞	189⅞	+ ⅛
17⅜	18	630		Reading	17½	17¾	17½	17⅝	— ⅛
50⅝	50⅞	2,400		Reading 1st pf	50	50¾	50	50⅝	+ ⅛
27	27¾	700		Reading 2d pf	27	27¾	27	27¾	+ ⅛
20⅜	20⅝	1,100		Rep. Iron & Steel	20¼	20⅝	20¼	20⅝	+ ⅛
33½	36			R., W. & O.
75½	77⅝			St. J. & G. I.	6	6	6	6	.....
108				St. L. & San Fran	9¼	9⅝	9¼	9⅝	+ ⅛
				St. L. & S. F. 2d pf	33¼	33¼	33¼	33¼	+ ½
53				St. Louis Southw	11	11¼	11	11¼	+ ¼
				St. Louis Southw. pf	26¼	27	26¼	27	+1
				Southern Pacific	38	38½	38	38⅝	+ ⅜
				Southern Railway	11⅜	12	11⅜	12	+ ⅛
				Southern Railway pf	54½	55	54½	55	+ ⅞
				Tenn. Coal & Iron	84⅝	86¼	84⅝	86	+1½
				Texas Pacific	15¼	16⅜	15¼	16¼	+ ⅛
				Texas Pacific Land Tr.	11½	11½	11½	11¼	.....
114	114¼	17,485		Third Avenue	117	117½	107	113⅜	—2⅝
21¾	22¼	550		Union Bag & Paper	22	22½	21¾	22¼	— ¼
73¾	74	66		Union Bag & Paper pf	73⅜	74½	73⅜	74½	.....
47⅝	47¾	20,960		Union Pacific	47¼	47⅞	47¼	47⅝	+ ⅛
75⅞	75⅝	2,641		Union Pacific pf	75¼	75⅝	75¼	75⅝	+ ⅛
47	49	225		United States Express	47¼	47¼	47¼	47¼	.....
17¼	17½	7,680		United States Leather	17¼	17⅞	17¼	17⅝	+ ⅛
76¼	76½	895		U. S. Leather pf	76	76¼	76	76¼	+ ⅛
41½	42	200		United States Rubber	41	41	41	41	— ½
101	102¼	308		U. S. Rubber pf	101	101	101	101	—1
7⅝	7½	300		Wabash	7⅜	7⅜	7⅜	7⅜	.....
21¼	21¼	1,550		Wabash pf	20¼	21⅞	20¼	21¼	+ ⅜
86¾	87½	62		Western Union Tel	86⅝	86½	86½	86½	+ ⅛
10	10⅞	910		Wheeling & Lake Erie	9⅞	10¼	9⅞	10	+ ⅛
52½	53½	100		Wheel. & L. E. 1st pf	53	53	53	53	— ½
23	28¼	250		Wheel. & L. E. 2d pf	27¾	28¼	27¾	28¼	— ½
18¼	18¾	100		Wisconsin Central	18	18	18	18	— ½
Sales		344,668

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES.

Coffee suffered yesterday a natural reaction from over a week's high figures, in a market the comparative dullness of which, after a period of exceptional activity, seemed of itself an inclination of weakness. The market opened about 15 points lower, and declined pretty steadily, under the effects of liquidation, and closed with a net loss of some 5 points. The trading aggregated 27,000 bags.

The Cotton Exchange market was fairly active, the transactions amounting to about 300,000 bales, and cotton make a slight net advance, after an irregular day. Cotton opened 5 points up, on good Liverpool advices. The early part of the day's trading consisted mainly of Liverpool buying, with a view to covering shorts, which proved effectual in sustaining the market. This movement having run itself out, the South began freely to sell, and the result was a steady decline. March alone resisted the tendency, its net gain being about 4 points. The course of the market seemed to indorse the theory that cotton really is being held back secretly in Southern towns. The receipts were a trifle better than a week previous.

Trading in wheat on the Produce Exchange was dull yesterday. The product gained one-fourth of a cent. It is said that the lack of good buying, after so long a decline, is an unmistakable indication of the practical wiping out of short interests. Export sales were not large. Corn declined moderately, under selling laid to reports about a larger crop than was expected. Oats went off fractionally in a steady market.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call was 3@4 per cent., closing at 3 per cent.

Time money, 5 per cent. for sixty days to four months, and 5@5½ per cent. for longer periods. Mercantile paper, 5 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 5½@6 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 6½@7½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $157,844,482; balances, $10,561,883; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,637,897.

Money on call in London, 1½ per cent. Rate of discount in open market, 3@3¼ per cent. for short and 3⅜@3½ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange dull. Nominal rates were $4.85 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.83⅞; demand, $4.86⅞@$4.87; cables, $4.87⅝; commercial bills, $4.82¾@$4.83¼.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.19⅜ less 1-16@5.20 and 5.16¾; reichsmarks, 94⅝ and 95 1-16; guilders, 40 1-16 and 40⅝.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Boston—Par @5c premium. Chicago—30c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, par; bank, $1 premium. San Francisco—Sight, 15c premium; telegraphic, 17½c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, ⅛c premium. Savannah—Buying, $1 premium per $1,000; selling, par. St. Louis—10c premium. Cincinnati—Between banks, 30c premium; over counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The market for American securities opened better and improved somewhat, but later eased off and closed quiet but steady.

Consols for both money and the account, 101⅜; Canadian, 95⅞; Erie, 12; Erie first preferred, 34; Illinois Central, 116½; Union Pacific preferred, 77¼; St. Paul, 120⅜; New York Central, 137⅜; Pennsylvania, 66; Reading, 9½; Northern Pacific preferred, 76; Atchison, 20¼; Louisville, 82¾; Grand Trunk, 7⅝; Anaconda, 8¼.

Bar silver closed strong at 27½d per ounce.

Money, 1½ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3@3¼ per cent., and for three months' bills, 3⅝@3½ per cent.

Spanish 4s, 66½.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £75,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 129.10; Madrid, 27.95; Lisbon, 44; Rome, 7.13. Bar gold, 77s 9½d.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Prices opened firm on the Bourse to-day, but subsequently reacted on realizations. Spanish 4s were particularly weak on the report that the coupons were to be taxed 12 per cent. Rio Tintos were steady. Kafirs were in good demand at the beginning, afterward became easier owing to the absence of transactions, but before the close recovered sharply on London advices. Three per cent. rentes, 100f 10c for the account; exchange on London, 25f 19c for checks. Spanish 4s, 67.65.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Prices on the Boerse opened weak, owing to a dispatch to The London Times from Teheran regarding the movement of 30,000 Russian troops to Kursk, Russia. Later there was a general recovery on the London firmness. Spanish 4s were easier on the contemplated taxation of coupons. Italian securities were harder. At the close there was a reaction, in apprehension that the Austrian miners' strike might spread to Upper Silesia. Exchange on London, 20 marks 49½ pfennigs for checks. Private rate of discount, 4 per cent.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 19.—On the Boerse to-day prices were active and fluctuated. Business opened hesitatingly, but rallied on Western advices and closed fairly steady. Spanish 4s relapsed.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—In the general list to-day, a decline of 3¼ points in Bell Telephone, to 325½, due to selling of collateral held on overdue loans attracted some attention for a time. About 290 shares came upon the market, and late in the day the price recovered to 329. Chicago Junction was up over 2 points, to 13½; Gas and Coke rallied a fraction, to 19¾, and Erie Telephone rights sold freely at $1. The trading in Sugar reached good proportions. The closing came quiet but firm.

Although the nominal loaning rate at the Clearing House remains at 6 per cent., it is known that loans were made to-day quietly at 5 per cent., and it is now seemingly only a question of a few days when this figure will be openly quoted. New York funds sold at par and 5 cents premium.

Closing bid and asked:

Mining Stocks.

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Adventure	0	0⅛	Old Colony	4	5
Allouez	2½	3	Old Dominion	18	18¼
Arcadian	18⅝	19	Osceola	67½	69½
Arnold	6	7	Parrot	40	41
Ash Bed	.30	.50	Pioneer	1½	2½
Atlantic	2¼	2⅝	Quincy	140	145
Baltic	10	10¾	Rhode Island	4¼	5
B. & Cr. C.	.20	.35	Santa Fé	5½	5½
Bost. & Mon.	262	265	Santa Ysabel	7⅛	7⅜
Butte & B.	45	55	Shoe	.30	.32
Cal. & Hec.	730	740	Tamarack	175	177
Centennial	16½	17	Utah Cons.	27½	27½
Franklin	14	14½	Washington	1⅛	1½
Humboldt	1	2	White Knob	14	16
Isle Royale	23¼	..	Winona	4	5
Mohawk	15	16	Wolverine	39	40

Railroad Stocks.

Bost. & Alb.	239	240	Cent. M. pf.	60	..
Bost. & Low.	242	..	Fitchburg pf.	..	119
Bost. & Me.	..	200	N. Y. & N. E.	6s	110½	..
Bost. & Prov.	..	300	N. Y. & N. E.	7s	..	..
Bost. Elev.	95	..	N. Y. & N. E.	7s	114½	..
Bost. & Me.	90	..	W. End	92½	93
Cent. Mass.	11	..

Miscellaneous Stocks.

Am. B. Tel.	326½	329	N. Eng. Tel.	135	140
Chi. S. Yds.	134	136	U. S. Oil	19	19½
Dom. Coal	42	43	Westinghouse Elec.	..	..
Dom. C. pf.	115	116	Westinghouse Elec. pf.	..	65
Erie Tel.	103½	104½
Mex. Tele.	3	3½

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call was 3@4 per cent., closing at 3 per cent.

Time money, 5 per cent. for sixty days to four months, and 5@5½ per cent. for longer periods. Mercantile paper, 5 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 5½@6 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 6½@7½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $157,844,482; balances, $10,561,883; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,637,897.

Money on call in London, 1½ per cent. Rate of discount in open market, 3@3¼ per cent. for short and 3⅜@3½ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange dull. Nominal

STATE TRUST COMPANIES

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—Reports of trust companies made to the State Superintendent of Banking as of Jan. 1, and for the year 1899, show excellent conditions of the companies. From reports passed upon by the Superintendent are taken these abstracts:

NEW YORK.

American Deposit and Loan Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$220,085.00
Stock investments (market value)	475,386.25
Amount loaned on collaterals	4,074,895.34
Amount loaned on personal securities	375,976.80
Real estate (estimated value)	123,159.69
Cash on hand	83,250.28
Cash on deposit	236,189.39
Other assets	7,589.22
Total	$6,176,540.97

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000.00
Undivided profits	61,027.90
General deposits payable on demand	5,518,972.07
Other liabilities	95,540.00
Total	$6,176,540.97

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$397,390.15
Interest credited depositors	126,413.81
Expenses of institution	38,343.10
Dividends declared	740,000.00
Deposits on which interest is allowed	5,516,972.97
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 4

Atlantic Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$323,470.00
Stock investments (market value)	1,479,337.11
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,644,703.63
Amount loaned on personal securities	142,771.06
Real estate (estimated value)	69,798.16
Cash on hand	2,581.44
Cash on deposit	689,582.76
Other assets	235,546.28
Total	$5,607,770.44

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	396,045.04
Contingent fund, as set aside by the Board of Trustees	100,000.00
Deposits in trust	100,417.66
General deposits payable on demand	3,960,568.24
Other liabilities	20,741.50
Total	$5,607,770.44

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$254,721.75
Interest credited depositors during same period	37,343.87
Expenses of institution, same period	54,943.87
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	$,600,000.00
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 4

Central Realty Bond & Trust Company

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$656,435.00
Stock investments, (market value)	232,796.00
Amount loaned on collaterals	1,738,939.25
Real estate, (estimated value)	1,096,539.00
Cash on hand	11,752.41
Cash on deposit	290,807.92
Other assets	29,852.62
Total	$4,056,922.77

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	500,000.00
Undivided profits	81,207.80
Deposit in trust	11,500.00
General deposit, payable on demand	2,059,698.92
Other liabilities	404,516.05
Total	$4,056,922.77

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$122,107.49
Interest credited depositors during same period	14,049.26
Expenses of institution, same period	40,187.64
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	2,471,198.92
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 4

Central Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$158,688.11
Stock investments, (market value)	13,721,624.89
Amount loaned on collaterals	34,422,088.70
Amount loaned on personal securities	408,000.00
Real estate, (estimated value)	984,696.01
Cash on hand	28,879.75
Cash on deposit	44,408,857.44
Other assets	542,119.26
Total	$54,674,954.16

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	10,257,566.50
Deposits in trust	1,879,148.14
General deposits, payable on demand	41,298,460.44
Other liabilities	239,779.08
Total	$54,674,954.16

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$4,182,232.37
Interest credited depositors during same period	1,067,375.79
Expenses of institution, same period	205,567.50
Amount of dividends declared, same period	500,000.00
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	39,206,816.75
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 3

Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$338,575.00
Stock investments, (market value)	6,651,900.00
Amount loaned on collaterals	32,872,845.35
Real estate, (estimated value)	1,000,000.00
Cash on hand	2,045.94
Cash on deposit	6,071,215.65
Other assets	1,301,820.74
Total	$48,238,402.68

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	5,625,124.56
Deposits in trust	41,519,351.25
Other liabilities	193,426.87
Total	$48,238,402.68

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$1,909,908.58
Interest credited depositors during same period	1,046,456.29
Expenses of institution, same period	184,412.83
Amount of dividends declared, same period	$00,000.00
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	$7,677,684.40
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4½

City Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$36,000.00
Stock investments, (market value)	1,358,180.41
Amount loaned on collaterals	8,840,796.87
Amount loaned on personal securities	328,917.17
Cash on hand	12,952.70
Cash on deposit	1,962,900.74
Overdraft	30.00
Other assets	93,923.00
Total	$12,123,721.05

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	1,000,000.00
Undivided profits	181,277.28
Deposits in trust	227,150.72
General deposits payable on demand	9,647,818.86
Other liabilities	67,474.24
Total	$12,123,721.05

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during 10 months	$352,388.94
Interest credited depositors during same period	106,179.10
Expenses of institution, same period	55,060.19
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	9,155,122.00
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 4

Fifth Avenue Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$107,000.00
Stock investments, (market value)	2,685,559.73
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,916,459.24
Amount loaned on personal securities	684,898.56
Cash on hand	52,835.66
Cash on deposit	542,853.97
Other assets	40,273.40
Total	$7,029,880.56

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000.00
Surplus fund	500,000.00
Undivided profits	208,133.42
General deposits payable on demand	5,770,033.22
Other liabilities	51,713.00
Total	$7,029,880.56

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$336,218.56
Interest credited depositors during same period	137,458.50
Expenses of institution, same period	41,928.78
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	5,707,033.22
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 3

Manhattan Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$3,000.00
Stock investments, (market value)	3,211,165.49
Amount loaned on collaterals	4,628,715.74
Cash on hand	500.00
Cash on deposit	3,182,921.08
Other assets	628,867.94
Total	$11,655,170.25

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	200,000.00
Undivided profits	994,476.85
Deposits in trust	872,768.76
General deposits payable on demand	8,578,924.64
Other liabilities	9,000.00
Total	$11,655,170.25

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$794,323.40
Interest credited depositors during same period	206,811.16
Expenses of institution, same period	111,466.71
Amount of dividends declared same period	55,000.00
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	7,029,776.45
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Metropolitan Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$1,885,924.27
Amount loaned on collaterals	15,218,400.00
Real estate, (estimated value)	481,800.00
Cash on hand	5,904.18
Cash on deposit	1,287,228.02
Other assets	190,422.91
Total	$17,064,679.38

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	1,000,000.00
Undivided profits	425,285.48
General deposits payable on demand	14,545,841.74
Other liabilities	93,572.16
Total	$17,064,679.38

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$826,798.23
Interest credited depositors during same period	407,145.35
Expenses of institution, same period	76,016.85
Amount of dividends declared, same period	100,000.00
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	13,450,967.89
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Morton Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$2,754,566.84
Amount loaned on collaterals	3,127,010.09
Amount loaned on personal securities	200,000.00
Cash on hand	3,000.00
Cash on deposit	1,220,876.96
Other assets	85,241.13
Total	$7,340,695.02

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	1,500,000.00
Undivided profits	49,538.14
General deposits payable on demand	4,791,156.88
Total	$7,340,695.02

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$98,859.13
Interest credited depositors during same period	25,848.58
Expenses of institution, same period	23,972.41
Amount of dividends declared, same period	4,778,988.77
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 3½

New York Security & Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$862,516.00
Stock investments (market value)	8,394,588.28
Amount loaned on collaterals	6,662,797.49
Amount loaned on personal securities	331,114.25
Cash on hand	21,808.07
Cash on deposit	1,945,993.78
Other assets	144,563.69
Total	$18,883,331.56

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	2,000,000.00
Undivided profits	145,471.72
Deposits in trust	15,690,302.72
Other liabilities	47,557.12
Total	$18,883,331.56

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$1,105,793.19
Interest credited depositors during same period	305,616.81
Expenses of institution, same period	89,216.93
Amount of dividends declared, same period	150,000.00
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	14,792,530.07
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 3

Real Estate Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$347,000.00
Stock investments (market value)	1,671,191.56
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,494,000.06
Amount loaned on personal securities	9,500.00
Cash on hand	123,495.70
Cash on deposit	739,071.29
Overdrafts	2,935.00
Other assets	27,838.36
Total	$5,415,032.81

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000.00
Surplus fund	250,000.00
Undivided profits	233,628.96
Deposits in trust	4,406,258.66
Other liabilities	25,145.17
Total	$5,415,032.81

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Interest credited depositors during the year	$283,975.19
Expenses of institution, same period	123,126.52
Amount of dividends declared, same period	44,288.23
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	8,775,012.00
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 4

Standard Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$2,001,135.62
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,289,374.70
Amount loaned on personal securities	106,685.38
Cash on hand	9,881.63
Cash on deposit	682,285.43
Other assets	19,654.63
Total	$5,109,017.39

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus fund	100,000.00
Undivided profits	151,180.08
Deposits in trust	819,897.30
General deposits payable on demand	2,972,740.04
Other liabilities	65,199.97
Total	$5,109,017.39

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$192,872.09
Interest credited depositors during same period	50,235.42
Expenses of institution, same period	32,001.28
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	3,443,633.25
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 5

Washington Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$103,100.00
Stock investments, (market value)	1,259,070.00
Amount loaned on collaterals	5,055,050.00
Amount loaned on personal securities	53,000.00
Cash on hand	2,602.40
Cash on deposit	666,622.24
Other assets	70,584.04
Total	$7,209,038.68

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000.00
Surplus fund	500,000.00
Undivided profits	188,253.84
Deposits in trust and general deposits payable on demand	5,977,489.69
Other liabilities	43,295.15
Total	$7,209,038.68

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Total amount of profits during the year	$310,473.18
Interest credited depositors during same period	143,989.35
Expenses of institution, same period	46,027.84
Amount of dividends declared, same period	50,000.00
Amount of deposits on which interest is allowed	5,927,257.59
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

OBJECT TO ENGINE HOUSE.

Plea for Quiet for St. Agnes's Chapel Moves Mayor.

Fifty men and women, members of the West End Association, and property owners in West Ninety-second Street, appeared before Mayor Van Wyck yesterday afternoon to protest against the erection of a fire engine house in West Ninety-second Street, between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues.

Walter L. Stabler, the spokesman of the delegation, said that the street was built up with private houses, and that if the engine house were built, each property owner would lose $3,000 or $4,000, and the taxable value of the property would be depreciated to the extent of at least $125,000.

"That objection will be made by the property owners adjoining any site we may select," said the Mayor. "The people of the west side have got a good many privileges that other parts of the city do not enjoy. You have no dumps in that vicinity, and the city is put to extra expense to cart the ashes, sometimes to the east side."

H. H. Cammann, representing Trinity Corporation, which owns St. Agnes's Chapel, which faces the site of the proposed engine house, told the Mayor that the noise would annoy worshippers and distract the pupils of the school which the chapel maintains.

"This is a serious objection," said the Mayor. "It will have more weight with me than the protests of property owners. If you will get the consents of property owners to the location of a fire house on two lots a couple of blocks further north, I'll see what we can do."

Mr. Stabler agreed to try to get a side, and the hearing closed.

Fifty-Cent Piece Cost Him His Life.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 19.—William O'Hearn, a gateman at the Washington Street crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad at this place, dropped a fifty-cent piece on the track to-day. In recovering the coin he got in the way of a train and was run over. He died a few hours later. O'Hearn leaves a wife and two children.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Hotel Bayard Property Sold—Dealings in Many Sections—Results in the Auction Room.

The four and five story buildings at the southwest corner of Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street, known as the Hotel Bayard, have been sold by Victor D. Depierris to C. S. Jaeger. The property has frontages of 75.10 feet on Broadway and 101.3 feet on Fifty-fourth Street. Nothing could be learned yesterday from those interested as to the price or regarding the future of the property.

Leopold Weil has sold for Mayer S. Auerbach to a client 11 West Twentieth Street. The purchaser will improve the property with a ten-story fire-proof building.

R. Leitner has sold to L. Gruning 2,642 Eighth Avenue, a five-story flat and stores, for Straus & Rothschild.

Foley & Sniffin have sold for the Welsh estate for $58,000 the two five-story double flats 124 and 126 East Eighty-sixth Street, each 26 by 88 by 100. The same firm has also sold for $25,000 the three-story dwelling 2,011 Madison Avenue, 20 by 85.

C. H. Batterman has sold for William T. Lahey and others to Watkins Brothers the plot, 75 by 100, on the north side of One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, 300 feet east of Broadway. The buyers will erect on the site a six or seven story apartment house.

Charles Griffith Moses & Brother were the brokers in the sale of the plot, 99.11 by 100, at the northeast corner of One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street and Broadway, for the estate of M. Siegman.

Miles & Helfer have sold for M. J. Newman to Max Hart the five-story single flat 278 West Nineteenth Street, 20 by 70. The buyer gives in part payment a lot on the west side of Broadway, 50 feet north of One Hundred and Seventy-ninth Street.

Daniel B. Freedman is the buyer of the five-story building 98 Duane Street, the sale of which, through Horace S. Ely & Co., has been reported.

J. Clarence Davies & Co. have sold for Ferdinand Hecht the four-story brick flat, with store, 2,916 Third Avenue; also, for Charles Hopper, two lots on the north side of Pelham Avenue, 50 feet west of Hoffman Street; also, for James Rice, eight houses on the east side of the Southern Boulevard, between Jennings and One Hundred and Seventy-second Streets; also, for John P. Petty, six lots on the south side of Sixteenth Street, 105 feet east of Fourth Avenue, Wakefield.

H. P. Goldschmidt has sold to Matthias Rock the four-story brownstone-front dwelling 48 East Fifty-eighth Street, 25 by 100.5.

The church property at 126-128 Forsyth Street, now controlled by the Fourteenth Street Presbyterian Church, has not been sold, as reported in this column, to be changed into tenements. Several good offers for the property have been considered, but none has as yet been finally accepted.

Results at Auction.

Yesterday's offerings in the Trinity Building Salesroom resulted as follows:

By William M. Ryan.

63 West Ninety-sixth Street, 21 by 100.11, four-story brick dwelling; foreclosure sale, to the plaintiff, Mary H. Meyer, as trustee $17,000

By William Kennelly.

Mosholu Parkway, south side, the block front between Decatur and Hull Avenues, being 246.9 feet on the Parkway, 50 feet on Decatur Avenue, and 122.7 feet on Hull Avenue, vacant; foreclosure sale, to the plaintiff, James Everard. 8,700

By Richard V. Harnett & Co.

50 Ridge Street, 25 by 100, five-story brick tenement, with a four-story brick tenement at the rear; partition sale, to Henry G. Wenzel 23,177

270 Hart Street, Brooklyn, 20 by 100, two-story brownstone-front dwelling; partition sale, to H. G. Gollmar. 5,436

By Peter F. Meyer & Co.

37 and 39 Attorney Street, 51.6 by 100 by 51.8 by 100, three-story front and five-story rear brick tenements on 37, five-story front and rear brick tenements on 39; foreclosure sale, to Julius Kirschbaum 51,900

THE BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

List of Plans Filed for New Structures and Alterations.

Eighty-fourth Street, north side, 100 feet west of West End Avenue, for six five-story brick dwellings, 17 by 58.8 and 16 by 55; Matthews & Eppenstein of 442 Columbus Avenue, owners; Ross & McNeil of 39 East Forty-second Street, architects; cost, $90,000.

Alterations.

Nos. 873 and 875 Broadway, to a five and eight story brick and stone store; Loeb & Schiff of 27 Pine Street, owners; G. E. Bisby, architect; cost, $200.

No. 2,907 Third Avenue, to a six-story brick store and flat; George Hart of 437 East Eighty-fourth Street, owner; T. A. Schneider, architect; cost, $100.

No. 114 to 120 Greene Street, to two six-story brick stores and lofts; Frederick Loeser, owner; Buchman & Fox of 11 East Fifty-ninth Street, architects; cost, $300.

No. 148 Orchard Street, to a five-story brick tenement; Bernard Kasner, premises owner; Sass & Smallheiser, architects; cost, $150.

No. 1,290 to 1,294 Broadway, to a three-story brick office building and store; D. H. McAlpin, owner; B. W. Berger, Bible House, architect; cost, $6,000.

Nos. 283 and 285 Sixth Avenue, to a five-story brick store; G. H. Meyer of 19 East Twelfth Street, owner; William Home Company of 245 West Twenty-sixth Street, architect; cost, $200.

La Fontaine Avenue, east side, 100 feet north of One Hundred and Seventy-ninth Street, to a one-story frame storage house and office; Michael O'Connell of 2,075 Arthur Avenue, owner; Higgs & Gavigan, architects; cost, $150.

Nos. 1 and 3 Sixty-first Street, northwest corner of Washington Avenue, to a three-story brick tenement and store; Mrs. E. A. Hayes of 25 Lexington Avenue, owner; M. J. Garvin of 3,307 Third Avenue, architect; cost, $3,000.

Infant Asylum Takes Title.

The New York Infant Asylum took title yesterday to the property 139 Second Avenue, formerly occupied by the Old Marion Street Maternity Hospital. The building stands on a plot 24 by 120, just south of Ninth Street. The price paid for the property was $25,000. The New York Infant Asylum already maintains a house of reception at Amsterdam Avenue and Sixty-first Street, and a country home and nursery at Mount Vernon.

Recorded Real Estate Transfers.

Friday, Jan. 19.

ARTHUR AV, w s, 219 ft n of King's Bridge and West Farms Road, 25x120; Maggie Gohl to Joseph Cademartori.... 2,600

AUDUBON AV, w s, 54 ft s of 185th St, 18x50; Henry E. Montgomery to Morits Ernst and another 1

AVENUE C, e s, 54 ft s of 13th St, 27x 105, Unionport; John W. Bartram, referee, to Moses Green 500

AVENUE C, s e corner of 13th St, 27x 105, Unionport; Avenue C, e s, 27 ft s of 13th St, 27x105, Unionport; John W. Bartram, referee, to Moses Green..... 1,250

ALL TITLE to property, franchises, rights, plant, &c., acquired from Herman Vogel, Jr., Charles W. Smith to the Pelham Electric Light and Power Company, quit claim 1

BAINBRIDGE AV, e s, 100 ft n of 197th St, 25x125; Henry W. Roe to Eugene G. and Elizabeth Shufeldt 1

BOSTON ROAD, s e s, 614.11 ft e from an angle in said road opposite Jefferson St, 75x90; Annie L. Stark to James McFerran and another 100

BROOME ST, 14 and 16, n e corner of Mangin St; Arthur Gorsch to Herman Wendt 1

COLUMBUS AV, n e corner of 60th St, 75.5x80; Isaac S. Isaacs, referee, to John C. Barth 1,000

GRAND ST, s w corner Chrystie St, 50.6x 75; Ferdinand Starbuck to William B. Davenport 7,500

EAST BROADWAY, 29, 25x87.6; East Broadway, 31, 23x75; East Broadway, 33, 25x75, ½ part; East Broadway, 97, 25x 100; East Broadway, 103, 25.3x75.3x74.4x 74.10; East Broadway, 212, 26.1x112.7 to Division St x29.1x112.5; Henry St, 31, 24.11x60.6x24.11x60.4; and Market St, 11, 25x90, all title, also to any share in any realty which Morris Alexander died seized; Esther Mayer to Joseph M. Alexander and others, quit claim 1

EDGECOMBE AV, e s, 51.6 ft n of 139th St, 16x79.8, with strip on e s; 139th St, n s, 151 ft w of 8th Av, 17x99.11; James H. Cubberly to Riverside Building Company 100

ELIZABETH ST, 63 and 65, s w corner of Hester St, 48.2x54.6; Mary A. McGuire to John J. McDonald 1

ELIZABETH ST, 59 and 61, 51.9x55x51.10x 54.6; Joseph Siegel to John J. McDonald. 23,000

ESSEX ST, 59 to 65, s w corner of Elizabeth St, 54.6x100x55x99.9; John J. McDonald to Mary A. McGuire..... 65,650

INTERIOR LOT, 200 ft e of 5th Av, and 120 ft s of 57th St, runs s 0.10 e 25x n 0.10 w 25; D. R. Hooker to William R. Willcox 1

LOT 198, map of 473 lots of Haight estate, Westchester; Maria Cooper to Jennie Irvine 100

LOT 205, Block E, map of Mapes estate; Prudence Irvine to Jennie Irvine..... 100

LOTS 160 and 161, second map of Neill estate; Jacob Keller to Caroline Keller, ½ part 100

MADISON ST, 174 and 176, 50x100; Annie Mendelson and others to Maurice Myers. 42,750

MADISON ST, 174 and 176, 50x100; Maurice Myers to Rachel Frank..... 1

MOTT ST, 12, e s, 12.6x26.4x16.6x30.6; William J. O'Sullivan, referee, to Morris Isaacs 5,150

PARK AV WEST, w s, 281.6 ft s of 162d St, 18x93.6x18x92.10; Northern Improvement Company to Victoria Pepe..... 100

RIDGE ST, 29 and 31, 40x75; Herbert S. Ogden, referee, to American Mortgage Company 22,800

RIVERSIDE DRIVE, 75, 25.4x irregular; the Riverside Building Company to Henry E. Niese 100

RIVERSIDE DRIVE, e s, 925 ft n of 122d St, 25x86; George E. McLaughlin to Walworth Ward..... 1

WEST END AV, s w corner of 86th St, 24.2x100; Charles V. Fornes to Eda Fornes 100

WILLOW LANE, s e corner street, 43 ft wide, map R. B. Taylor, runs n 150x w 25x s 150 to lane x e 25; Frederick Lohbauer to Augustus G. Miller..... 1

1ST AV, n e corner of 110th St, 50.11x93; Joseph Solomon and others to Samuel Langer 100

2D AV, e s, 13.3 ft s of 10th St, 13.3x41; also 10th St, s s, 63 ft e of 2d Av, 22x 26.7; William Stuart to Eliza Martin, 2-15 parts 1

2D AV, w s, 46.8 ft s of 9th St, 24x120; Old Marion Street Maternity Hospital to New York Infant Asylum..... 1

6TH AV, n e corner of 54th St, 200.10 to 55th St x 95; Mary M. Ostrander to Charles Remsen and another, executors, &c., 1-9 part 38,833

6TH AV, n e corner of 54th St, 200.10 to 55th St x 96; Laura J. Edwards, by attorney, to Charles Remsen and another, executors, &c., 1-9 part..... 38,833

6TH AV, n e corner of 54th St, 200.10 to 55th St x 95; Gerard M. Edwards, by attorney, to Charles Remsen and another, executors, &c., 1-9 part..... 38,833

11TH AV, w s, 25 ft n of 46th St, 25x 41.3x100; James N. Emlich, executor, to Philip Ryan..... 6,750

15TH ST, n s, middle portion Lot 939, map of village of Wakefield, 50x114; Sarah H. Chase to Sarah E. Emery.... Exch.

25TH ST, 112 West, 20x20x82.10; Andrew Blum to Henry Maillard, Jr..... 23,000

50TH ST, n e corner of 1st Av, 19.8x80; Alessandro Bolognesi and another to William Hartfield and another, ½ part.. 1

78TH ST, s s, 144 ft w of Avenue A, 25x 102.2; John Kelthauer to Jacob Heinrich, individually and as administrator.. 400

94TH ST, s s, 250 ft w of West End Av, 25x71.8x25x72.4; Thomas P. Hornsey to Francis M. Jencks, re-recorded..... 1

35TH ST, 29 West, 20x98.9; Susan F. Jackson to Henry R. Jackson and another.. 100

57TH ST, 111 West, 20x100.5; William Demuth to Irene M. Demuth 1

86TH ST, 68 East, 31.11x102.2; George A. St. John to Annie Aaron and another.... 5,000

106TH ST, s s, 420 ft e of 1st Av, 25x 100.11; Moritz Samisch to Ratje Bunke.. 1

110TH ST, 224 West, 25x103.7x26x111.6; Eugene C. Potter to Fabian Sachs and another 1

121ST ST, s w corner of Park Av, 20x 100.11; Charles Brogan to Adam Happel.. 1

137TH ST, n s, 300 ft e of Lenox Av, 100x 99.11; N. Taylor Phillips, referee, to Michael Hughes 5,600

152D ST, n s, 100.11 e w of St. Nicholas Av, 50x74.11; Jacob D. Butler to H. B. Thomas 1

185TH ST, s s, 200 ft e of 11th Av, 100x 79.11; Deane Realty Company to Anthony W. Miller..... 1

185TH ST, n e s, 200 ft e of 11th Av, 100x 79.11; Lillie T. Yoran and another, executors, &c., to Deane Realty Company. 12,300

Recorded Leases.

SIMON, Simon, agent, to Bartolo Moggio; 107th St, 233 East, 5 years..... $1,900

DAVIS, Edward, to Delbert I. Kendall; Amsterdam Av, 795, s e corner of 99th St, 5 years 1,200

OCHS, Charles, to Oswald Berls; Amsterdam Av, 668, store, &c., 3 years..... 1,500

DUNKAK, Frederick H., to August Schroeder; Columbus Av, 822, 5 years ..... $1,400 to 1,600

KAUFFELD, Theodore, to John H. Ziegler; 110th St, 141, n w corner of Lexington Av, 3 years, 4½ months, and 2 years' renewal ..... $900 to 1,020

KEMP, Abraham, to David Oher; Ridge St, 57, 2 years..... 2,400

LIFSHITZ, Rebecca, to Goldenberg & Cohen; Canal St, 112, 2 years..... $540 to 780

Recorded Mortgages.

BODEN, Annie A., to Elizabeth T. Morgan; plot begins at stake in lane from William's Bridge Road to N. P. Bailey's land, West Farms, 1 year..... 800

BROWN, David S, and Delaplaine, to the Bowery Savings Bank; 12th Av, n e corner of 51st St, 1 year..... 120,000

BROUWER-ANCHER, Gerard P., to Jacob C. Rosenblum; 528 West 149th St, ½ year 500

BROUWER-ANCHER, Gerard P., to Jacob C. Rosenblum; 522 West 149th St, ½ year 500

BROUWER-ANCHER, Agnes and Gerard P. to Jacob C. Rosenblum; 526 West 149th St, ½ year..... 500

CADEMARTORI, Joseph, and wife to Maggie and Christian Gohl; Arthur Av, w s, 240 ft n of King's Bridge and West Farms Road, 1 year..... 1,000

CALLAGHAN, William, to Dimock & Fink Company; 131st St, n s, 175 ft e of 5th Av, secures damages, &c..... 3,700

CASE, David K., to Andrew D. Parker; 933 4th Av, 1½ years..... 4,300

CLARK, Mary and John, to Thomas H. Purdy; Rogers Place, e s, 582.5 ft n of Westchester Av, 5 years $2,000

COLE, Mary E., to Immigrant Industrial Savings Bank; 170 and 172 West 10th St, 1 year 25,000

COSTELLO, Owen, to Emanuel Heilner and another; 11th St, s s, 206.10 ft e of University Place, demand..... 7,500

DELLA, Gherardesca, and others to United States Trust Company; 313 Church St, 1 year..... 12,000

DISBROW, Josephine L., to Title Guarantee and Trust Company; 332 West 108th St, 1 year 20,000

DISKEN, May, to Newman Cowen; 117th St, n s, 100 ft e of 8th Av, demand..... 1,000

FISCHEL, Harry, to Dry Dock Savings Institution; 394 and 396 Grand St, 5 years 40,000

GOLBERG, Harris, to Simon Adler and another; 610 to 616 East 11th St; also 57 Allen St, 2 months..... 3,000

GOODMAN, Aaron, to Levi P. Morton and another, trustees; East Broadway, s e corner of Montgomery St; also, Montgomery St, n e s, 14.9 ft s of East Broadway, 5 years 62,500

KRUMENAKER, Josephine and Peter, to the Bowery Savings Bank; 44 Elizabeth St, 5 years..... 8,500

KRUMENAKER, Josephine and Peter, to Elizabeth T. Clarke and another; 44 Elizabeth St, 1 year..... 1,000

LANGER, Samuel, to Joseph and Meyer Solomon and another; 48 Chrystie St, 3 months 4,000

LANGER, Samuel, to Joseph and Meyer Solomon and another; 1st Av, s e corner of 110th St, 9 months 7,000

LANGER, Samuel, to Joseph and Meyer Solomon and another; 1st Av, s e corner of 110th St, 9 months..... 24,000

LILLIENDAHL, John G. R., to Juliana Dill, administratrix; 131st St, s s, 150 ft w of Amsterdam Av; also all title to plot 20.6 ft s of 131st St and 193.4 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 3 years..... 15,000

LUMBYE, Hans, to Mary C. Ohle; 16th St, n s, 375 ft w of 8th Av, 3 years..... 5,000

MAILLARD, Henry, Jr., to Andrew Blum; 112 West 26th St, 5 years..... 14,000

MCDONALD, John J., to Julia G. Inness; 39 to 45 Hester St, 3 years..... 45,000

MCFERRAN, James, and Mary Ryan to Annie L. Stark; Boston Road, s e s, 614.11 ft e from an angle in said road opposite Jefferson St, ½ year..... 4,000

MEACLE, Joseph, to Title Guarantee and Trust Company; Madison Av, w s, 52.9 ft n of Samuel St, 3 years..... 2,500

MILLER, Anthony W., to Thekla Rohe; 185th St, s s, 200 ft e of 11th Av, 3 years. 4,000

MILLER, Anthony W., to Thekla Rohe; 185th St, s s, 250 ft e of 11th Av, 3 years. 4,000

MILLER, Annie, to Thomas M. Hall; 76th St, s s, 79 ft w of Madison Av, ½ year.. 2,000

MURRAY, Meradith J., and another to James H. Brewster, trustee, and others; Wales Av, w s, 262.7 ft s of Westchester Av, 5 years 11,000

MURRAY, Meradith J., to James B. Lord; Wales Av, w s, 287.7 ft s of Westchester Av, 5 years..... 11,000

MURRAY, Meradith J., and another to Austin B. Fletcher and another, trustees; Wales Av, w s, 237.7 ft s of Westchester Av, 3 years..... 11,000

MURRAY, Meradith J., and another to Edward F. Keating; Wales Av, w s, 237.7 ft s of Westchester Av, ½ year.. 3,500

MYERS, Maurice, to Max L. Frank; 174 Madison St, 1 year..... 5,000

MYERS, Maurice, to American Mortgage Company; 174 Madison St, 1 year..... 15,000

MYERS, Maurice, to John M. Bowers, trustee, &c.; 176 Madison St, 1 year.. 17,000

MYERS, Maurice, to Max L. Frank; 176 Madison St, 1 year..... 5,000

RATNER, Lottie, to Henry Meyer; 55 and 57 Pike St, demand..... 8,000

RATNER, Lottie, to Mattie C. Reynolds, guardian, &c.; 55 and 57 Pike St, 5 years 37,000

ROSENTHAL, Charles M., and others to the Equitable Life Assurance Society; 58th St, s s, 130 ft e of 3d Av, 2 years.. 7,500

ROTHMAN, Leopold M., to the Union Dime Savings Institution; Columbus Av, w s, 25.4 ft n of 97th St, 5 years..... 22,000

SHUFELDT, Eugene G. and Elizabeth, to Henry W. and Jennie L. Roe; Bainbridge Av, e s, 100 ft n of 197th St, installments 1,342

SCHNEIDORN, Julius, to Louis and John Deardt; Eagle Av, e s, 324.6 ft s of 156th St, demand..... 10,000

WEILL, Nannette, to George Will, Jr.; 233 East 75th St, 3 years..... 1,125

WEILL, Nannette, to Rachel L. and Rebecca L. Bartley; 233 East 75th St, 5 years 12,000

Assignments of Mortgages.

AMERICAN MORTGAGE COMPANY to trustees of Josephine Y. Birney.....

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

CASH PRICES FOR STAPLES.

Wheat, No. 2 red	.73⅝
Corn, No. 2 mixed	.40¾
Oats, No. 2 mixed	.29½
Flour, Minnesota patents	$3.80
Cotton, middling	.07 13-16
Coffee, No. 7 Rio	.06⅝
Sugar, granulated	5.15
Molasses, O. K. prime	.38
Beef, family	12.75
Beef hams	22.25
Tallow, prime	.05⅝
Pork, mess	10.75
Hogs, dressed, 160 lb.	.06¼
Lard, prime	6.20
Iron, Northern, No. 1 foundry	23.00

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—No. 3 Spring wheat, 58½@63½c; No. 2 red, 66½c; No. 2 corn, 31½c; No. 2 oats, 23@23¼c; No. 2 white, 25¾@25¾c; No. 3 white, 25@25½c; No. 2 rye, 52@54c; No. 2 barley, 39@40c; No. 1 flaxseed and Northwestern, $1.39; prime timothy seed, $3.60; mess pork, per bbl, $9.20@$10.00; lard, per 100 lb, $5.77½@$5.87½; short ribs, sides, (loose,) $5.50@$5.80; dry-salted shoulders, (boxed,) 5½@5¾c; short clear sides, (boxed,) $5.50@$5.80; whisky, distillers' finished goods, per gallon, $1.23½; sugars, cutloaf, $5.90; granulated, $5.28; clover, contract grade, $8.35@$8.40.

COTTON.—The general undercurrent of sentiment in local cotton circles was more decidedly bullish to-day than at any time of late. The outside public, however, exhibited more or less timidity, and purchased in a limited way only. Shorts were given a bad scare at the start by a sensational advance in the English market, the feature of the latter being a rise of 6 points in the January delivery. From other places as well news of a pronounced bullish type came to hand. The first sale of January on the New Exchange was at an advance of 12 points on last night's closing, and from this level the uplift tapered down to a rise of 2 points in October. Throughout the first hour trading was very heavy with Europe easily the leading buyer. Business for Southern account went almost exclusively to the bull side. Local shorts were excited and covered energetically. Several Wall Street commission houses purchased in March, and also sold outright positions in a moderate way, and sold the new crop deliveries. Toward midday operations fell off quite rapidly, but the market held generally firm and no serious setback in prices was reported. Early afternoon transactions were comparatively small, but later in the day business again picked up. As the weekly statistical summaries averaged up in very bullish form the late feeling was firm, and predictions were indicative of another uplift in Liverpool to-morrow. The market was finally quiet with prices 9@10 points higher, and next crop months unchanged to 3 points net lower. Southern spot markets, middling quoted, were officially reported by wire as follows: New Orleans, 7¾c; Mobile, 7¾c; Savannah, holiday; Wilmington, 7¼c; Norfolk, holiday; Augusta, 7 9-16c; Memphis, 7 7-16c.

Contract prices ranged as follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
January	7.55	7.55	7.48	7.49@7.50
February	7.42	7.45	7.41	7.42@7.43
March	7.46	7.48	7.43	7.43@7.44
April	7.47	7.47	7.44	7.43@7.44
May	7.49	7.49	7.45	7.45@7.46
June	7.49	7.50	7.45	7.45@7.46
July	7.50	7.52	7.46	7.46@7.47
August	7.48	7.49	7.48	7.48@7.49
September	6.92	6.93	6.87	6.86@6.87
October	6.75	6.75	6.70	6.70@6.71
November	6.72	6.72	6.72	6.67@6.69
December	6.70	6.70	6.70	6.68@6.70

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 19.—Spot cotton, fair business; sales, 12,000 bales; speculation and export, 1,500 bales; American, 9,000 bales; receipts, 15,000 bales; American, 14,000 bales; middling, upland, 4 19-32d; futures opened steady, 1@2 points higher on near months, partial 1 point higher on far months; closed quiet, but steady, 3½@3¾ points higher on near months, ½@3 points higher on far months. January-February, 4.22½@; February-March, 4.21½; March-April, 4.17½; April-May, 4.13½b; May-June, 4.10½@; June-July, 4.08; July-August, 4.05½b; August-September, 4ds; September-October, 3.53b; October-November, 3.46b; January, 4.80, nominal. Manchester—Yarns, quiet and firm; cloths, sellers can do business only at a concession.

FUTURES.

NEW YORK PRICES.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
May	71 11-16	71 15-16	71½	71⅞
July	71⅞	72⅛	71⅞	72⅛
Corn—
May	39⅝	39¾	39¼	39¼

CHICAGO PRICES.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
May	65¼	65⅞	65 5-16	65⅝
July	66 3-16	66¾	66 5-16	66⅜
Corn—
May	33⅜	33 7-16	33¼	33¼
July	34	34	33 13-16	33¾
Oats—
May	23⅞	23⅞	23½	23⅝
July	23	23	22⅞	22⅞

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT.—The market was in firm shape, with trading at first moderately active, shading rather in the afternoon in favor of Gratuity Fund discussion, which will probably absorb attention until after the vote is taken next Monday. As was the case on Thursday, short sellers did not appear to be at all active, and prices advanced rather easily on strong news from the French markets, where unfavorable weather conditions led to a further advance of 10@25 points. The Chicago market was also quite firm all day, and exerted some influence here. Foreign houses showed some interest on the buying side early in the day, but did little in export circles, their transactions amounting to about 25 loads. The Liverpool market advanced ½@¾d on futures, but lost ¼d on spot property. Argentine shipments amounted to 1,040,000 bushels, compared with 776,000 bushels last week, and Danubian exports aggregated 296,000 bushels, compared with none the previous week. Since Jan. 1 the Argentina has shipped 1,068,000 bushels, compared with 40,000 bushels a year ago. Northwest receipts footed up 327 cars, in comparison with 502 cars last year. Last prices in this market were very close to the top point of the day and ¼@ higher than Thursday night.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—Wheat—In store, No. 1 Northern, January, 62¼c; May, 63⅛c; July, 64⅝@64¾c. On track, No. 1 hard, 64½c; No. 1 Northern, 62⅜c; No. 2 Northern, 60⅝c.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 19.—Wheat—No. 1 Northern, 64@65c; No. 2 Northern, 61@62½c. Rye—No. 1, 55½@60c.

DULUTH, Jan. 19.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 64c; No. 1 Northern, cash, 62½c; May, 65c; July, 66¼c; No. 2 Northern, 60c; No. 3 Spring, 56½c.

CORN—No. 2 corn, 40¾c, for both elevator and delivered, and 40⅝c, free on board, afloat.

OATS—No. 2 oats, 29¼c; No. 3 oats, 29c; No. 2 white, 32c; No. 3 white, 31½c; track mixed, 29½@31c; track white, 31½@35c; No. 2 white, clips, 32½c.

RYE—No. 1 Western, 61c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 Western, 60½c, free on board, afloat; State rye, 55@56c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, car lots.

BARLEY—Feeding, 43¼@47¼c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York; malting, 50@53c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

FLOUR AND MEAL—Spring patents, $3.70@$3.90; Winter straights, $3.30@$3.40; Winter patents, $3.50@$3.75; Spring clears, $2.75@$3; extra No. 1 Winter, $2.70@$2.85; extra No. 2 Winter, $2.55@$2.65; no grade, $1.75@$18 per ton, to arrive. BUCKWHEAT FLOUR—$2@$2.15. RYE FLOUR—Fair to good, $3.15@$3.25; choice to fancy, $3.30@$3.45. CORN MEAL—Kiln dried, $2.15@$2.25, as to brand. BAGMEAL—Fine white and yellow, 85@90c; coarse, 79@82c. FEED—Spring bran, spot, $17; sacks, to arrive, 200 lb, $17.50@$17.75; coarse Winter bran, $17@$18.50, latter white; middlings, $16@$18.50; city feed, $17@$17.50; hominy chop, $15.75@$16; oil meal, $26.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—Flour and bran unchanged.

PROVISIONS.—PORK—Mess, $10.50@$11; family, $12.25@$12.75; short clear, $11.50@$12.50. BEEF—Mess, $10.50; family, $12.50@$13; packet, $11@$11.50; extra India mess, $21@$23; beef hams, $22@$22.50. DRESSED HOGS—Bacons, light, 160 lb, 6c; 180 lb, 6c; 200 lb, 5¾c; 220 lb, 5¾c. MEATS—Smoking bellies, 6¾@7c; 10 lb, 6¼@6½c; 12 lb, 6c; 14 lb, 5¾c; pickled shoulders, 5¾@6c; pickled hams, 9@9½c; Western greens, 8½@9c; city greens, 9¼@9½c. TALLOW—City, 5¾c bid; country, 5¼@5¾c. LARD—$6.20; city lard, $5.70; refined lard, South American, $6.15; continent, $6.40; Brazil, kegs, $7.80; compound, city, 5¾@6c; Western, 5¾@6c. STEARINE—Oleo, 7¼c; city lard stearine, 7¼c.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 19.—Closing: Beef—Extra India mess, 61s 3d; prime mess, 75s. Pork—Prime mess, Western, 56s 9d. Hams—Short cut, 14 to 16 lb, 45s. Bacon—Cumberland cut, 28 to 30 lb, 33s; short rib, 18 to 22 lb, 33s 6d; long clear middles, light, 30 to 35 lb, 34s 6d; long clear middles, heavy, 35 to 40 lb, 34s; short clear backs, 16 to 18 lb, 33s 6d; clear bellies, 14 to 16 lb, 38s. Shoulders—Square, 12 to 14 lb, 34s. Lard—Prime Western, in tierces, 30s 6d; American, refined, in pails, 32s. Butter—Finest United States and good domestic, nominal. Cheese—American, finest white, 57s 6d; American, finest colored, 59s. Tallow—Prime city, 27s 6d; Australian, in London, 27s 9d. Cottonseed Oil—Hull, refined, January-April, 21s 3d. Turpentine—Spirits, 39s 6d. Resin—Common, 4s 6d. Petroleum—Refined, 7⅝d. Linseed oil, 24s.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

PUBLIC HIGH SCHOOL NOTICE.

An examination for pupils not in the public schools, who are legal residents of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, and who may wish to enter one of the High Schools, will be held at the High School Buildings on the afternoon of Thursday, January 25th, 1900, beginning at 1:30 o'clock.

Applicants will be examined in arithmetic, geography, history of the United States, English grammar and composition, spelling, reading, and writing; and they will take their examinations at the school which they desire to attend.

The Boys' High School is at No. 69 West 13th Street; the Girls' High School at No. 30 East 12th Street, and the High School for both boys and girls is at 157th Street and Third Avenue.

JOHN JASPER,
Superintendent, Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx.

New York, January 17th, 1900.

AUCTION SALES.

BOOKS! BOOKS! BOOKS!

An auction sale of a lot of magnificently bound standard books will be held to-day at 12 o'clock sharp at 147 FULTON ST.

The stock comprises the Encyclopedia Britannica, in sheep binding, the works of Browning, Kipling, Dickens, Hugo, Eliot, Carlyle, Shakespeare, Byron, Tennyson, and others; also Oxford and Bagster teachers' Bibles, atlases, globes, art books, works on travel, &c., &c.

Sales at branch store, 23 UNION SQUARE, at 3 P. M., and at 8 to-night. Investigation of the stock is requested. Ladies invited.

JAMES WHAN, Auctioneer.

SITUATIONS WANTED—FEMALES.

Cooks.

COOK.—By a first-class cook in a private family; understands all kinds cooking and baking; soups and desserts; city references; last employer seen. 904 6th Av., third bell.

COOK.—By a respectable woman as first-class cook; understands English and American cooking. M. H., 233 West 19th St.

Governesses.

GOVERNESS, &c.—By young French lady, speaking English, as governess or lady's companion; no objection to traveling. Miss A. Mayor, 81 Adams St., Hoboken.

Housekeepers.

HOUSEKEEPER.—By a respectable, elderly woman as a working housekeeper for one or two gentlemen; excellent cook; good manager; useful in sickness; city or country; moderate; well recommended. Housekeeper, 109 East 61st St.

Seamstresses.

SEAMSTRESS.—By a thoroughly competent seamstress; does all kinds of family sewing, repairing dresses, finishing, alterations, and also curtains and cushions. Seamstress, 773 Amsterdam Av.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALES.

Miscellaneous.

JANITOR.—By a young man, married, as janitor; understands steam heat and repairs. Richard Cullen, 189 Greenwich St.

PUBLISHERS.—Experienced printer and expert proofreader would take charge manufacturing; $40. Box S., 1,513 3d Av.

HELP WANTED—MALES.

SOLICITORS WANTED FOR THE "MEMOIRS of Dwight L. Moody," written by his son and assisted by Ira D. Sankey. Published with the authority of Mrs. Moody and family; only book authorized or authentic. Demand enormous. Harvest-time for agents. Large profits; credit given; freight paid. Address The Dominion Company, Dept. L, Chicago.

SUMMONSES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—ELLEN J. SWAN, plaintiff, against MATILDA WILLIAMS and Thomas Williams, her husband; Judson S. Todd, William Saunderson and Calvin E. Wright, copartners composing the firm of Saunderson & Wright; Frank B. Hawkins, George H. Hawkins, Franklin A. Errington, Arthur J. Mace, Frederick S. Gwyer, and John L. Gwyer, as surviving partners of the firm of L. H. Mace & Co.; Barstow Stove Company, Watson D. Woodward, Cabinet Work and Parquette Flooring Company, Lincoln G. Berrus, Francis C. Cummings, Price W. Hasbrouck, Frank Hasbrouck, Frederick Hasbrouck, Mortimer Rothschild, Frederick Keppler, Henry H. Tyson, Henry Steers, John F. Menke, George B. Hurd, Frank B. Hurd, John W. Foster, Martha A. Constant, John D. Crimmins and Thomas E. Crimmins, Fred L. Stellwagen, Warner M. Westcott, James L. Jackson, J. William Jackson, Moses G. Wright, and Albert G. Hetherington, William S. Fearing and Francis Higgins, as Receivers of the Archer & Pancoast Company; Charles I. Seiter and Robert Wright, and Roberta Wright, his wife, and Clara Wright, wife of Calvin E. Wright, defendants.—Summons. New York is the county in which the plaintiff desires the trial of this action.

To the above-named defendants:

You are hereby summoned to answer the complaint in this action, and to serve a copy of your answer on the plaintiff's attorneys, within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service, and in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default, for the relief demanded in the complaint.—Dated New York, October 21st, 1899.

DUER, STRONG & WHITEHEAD,
Plaintiff's Attorneys,
Office and Post Office Address, No. 50 Wall Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

To the defendants, Matilda Williams, Thomas Williams, Francis C. Cummings, Robert Wright, and Roberta Wright, his wife, and Moses G. Wright:

The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of the Hon. Miles Beach, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, dated the 13th day of December, 1899, and filed with the complaint in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York, at the County Court House, in said County, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.—Dated New York, December 15th, 1899.

DUER, STRONG & WHITEHEAD,
Attorneys for Plaintiff,
Office and Post Office Address, No. 50 Wall Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York. d16-1aw6w8&ja27

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

NO. 1895.—U. S. DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—MARIA BERGMAN, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Maria Bergman, bankrupt, has filed her petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all her debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, U. S. District Judge, in the U. S. Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, February 21st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

JOHN J. TOWNSEND,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In the matter of CHARLES H. BLISS, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Charles H. Bliss, of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Charles H. Bliss was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, Referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1930, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting. PETER B. OLNEY,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—MARY BURGESS, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Mary Burgess, bankrupt, has filed her petition, dated Jan. 13, 1900, praying for a discharge from all her debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of RUSSEL DART, individually, and as partner in Clarke, Radcliff & Co., Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Russel Dart, Jr., of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 28th day of December, A. D. 1899, the said Russel Dart, Jr., was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 31st day of January, A. D. 1900, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

JOHN J. TOWNSEND,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In the matter of CHARLES H. BLISS, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Charles H. Bliss, of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Charles H. Bliss was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, Referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1930, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting. PETER B. OLNEY,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—MARY BURGESS, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Mary Burgess, bankrupt, has filed her petition, dated Jan. 13, 1900, praying for a discharge from all her debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of CHARLES FRED LANDENBERGER, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Charles Fred Landenberger, of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Charles Fred Landenberger was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1900, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

STANLEY W. DEXTER,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—EDWARD JUDSON, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Edward Judson, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated Jan. 13, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—EDWARD P. KENNARD, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Edward P. Kennard, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 12th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL A. PRENTISS,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—In the matter of JOSEPH JORDAN, Bankrupt.—No. 1,384.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Jordan, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—In the matter of ROSIE KORN, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Rosie Korn, bankrupt, has filed her petition, dated Jan. 17, 1900, praying for a discharge from all her debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of CHARLES FRED LANDENBERGER, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Charles Fred Landenberger, of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Charles Fred Landenberger was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1900, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

STANLEY W. DEXTER,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—EDWARD JUDSON, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Edward Judson, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated Jan. 13, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—HENRY J. LENZ, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Henry J. Lenz, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL S. SMITH,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—LOUIS LESSER, ISRAEL LESSER, and SIMON LESSER, composing firm of Lesser Bros.

Notice is hereby given that Tobias Lesser, Israel Lesser, and Simon Lesser, bankrupts, have filed their petition, dated January 12, 1900, praying for a discharge from all their debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of CHARLES H. BLISS, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Charles H. Bliss, of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Charles H. Bliss was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, Referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1930, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting. PETER B. OLNEY,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—CHARLES EDELSON, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Charles Edelson, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL A. PRENTISS,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

NO. 2,039.—IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.

In the matter of GUSTAV HACKAUFF, Bankrupt.

To the creditors of Gustav Hackauff of the City and County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Gustav Hackauff was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Theodor Aub, referee, No. 149 Broadway, in the City and County of New York, on the 22d day of February, A. D. 1900, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

THEODOR AUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, January 19th, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—In the matter of JOSEPH JORDAN, Bankrupt.—No. 1,384.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Jordan, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of CHARLES FRED LANDENBERGER, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of Charles Fred Landenberger, of New York, in the County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Charles Fred Landenberger was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Peter B. Olney, referee, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1900, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

STANLEY W. DEXTER,
Jan. 19, 1900. Referee in Bankruptcy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—EDWARD JUDSON, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Edward Judson, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated Jan. 13, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—HENRY J. LENZ, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Henry J. Lenz, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL S. SMITH,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, January 19th, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—JACOB B. MARKS, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Jacob B. Marks, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 16th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL S. SMITH,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—HENRY J. LENZ, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Henry J. Lenz, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL S. SMITH,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, January 19th, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—JACOB B. MARKS, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Jacob B. Marks, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 16th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL S. SMITH,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—CHARLES EDELSON, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that Charles Edelson, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, January 31st, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

NATHANIEL A. PRENTISS,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

NO. 2039.—IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.

In the matter of GUSTAV HACKAUFF, Bankrupt.

To the creditors of Gustav Hackauff of the City and County of New York, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of January, A. D. 1900, the said Gustav Hackauff was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of John J. Townsend, Referee, No. 45 Cedar Street, in New York City, on the 31st day of January, A. D. 1900, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

THEODOR AUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, January 19th, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—In the matter of JOSEPH JORDAN, Bankrupt.—No. 1,384.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Jordan, bankrupt, has filed his petition, dated January 18th, 1900, praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all creditors and other persons are ordered to attend at the hearing upon said petition before the Hon. Addison Brown, United States District Judge, in the United States Court House and Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 1900, at 10:30 A. M., and then and there show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and also attend the examination of the bankrupt thereon.

PETER B. OLNEY,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE Southern District of New York.—EDWARD P. KENNARD, Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby

DECLARES BARNET DID NOT DIE FROM POISON

Molineux Prosecution Cannot Shake Dr. Douglass's Opinion.

MR. HAGAN AGAIN A WITNESS

Will Make a Chemical Examination of Ink in One of the Exhibits—State May Close Monday.

Assistant District Attorney Osborne failed yesterday to bring to a close the case of the prosecution in the Molin[illegible] trial, as he had expected, and his statement that he would have three physicians on the stand Monday was not regarded as bearing out his further promise that he would certainly close his case on that day. The three physicians are Drs. Potter, Loomis, and Ferguson. Besides these, the handwriting expert, William E. Hagan, who was again on the stand yesterday, is to be recalled to testify as to the result of a chemical examination of ink which he was directed yesterday to make in the writing of one of the exhibits.

The case yesterday assumed again the appearance of a Barnet inquiry. Dr. H. Beaman Douglass, who attended Barnet and was originally called into the case by the prosecution as an expert in cyanide of mercury poisoning, was called again and examined at great length, and his testimony was admitted not because of its relevancy to the Adams case, but on the ground of determining his credibility as a witness.

The Recorder decided that all the evidence regarding the medical history of the Barnet case should be received on this ground. While, therefore, this line of testimony was accepted when Dr. Douglas had testified that Barnet had told of his having received a package of Kutnow powders, he was not permitted to say whether Barnet had expressed an opinion as to the sender or what he may have said, that not bearing on the medical aspect of the case.

The first part of the morning session was devoted again to expert testimony on the writing exhibits, Mr. Weeks resuming his cross-examination of Mr. Hagan. Mr. Weeks held the expert down to the poison package wrapper, the only disputed writing which can directly connect the defendant with the crime.

MR. HAGAN'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. Hagan repeated his assertion that the writer of the poison package address had the power of rolling his pen on the ball of the thumb so as to make shadings directed in different directions.

"That is what you imagine," said Mr. Weeks. "You have not seen the defendant write."

"I knew it," said the witness.

"Didn't you in one case make that very contention, and wasn't it subsequently shown that the writer had lost the thumb joint?" The witness didn't remember.

Mr. Weeks refreshed his memory. It was the case of Hopkins, at Great Barrington. The witness said that it had been shown that the woman in that case had a stiff thumb. "But," said he, "that didn't prevent her putting on her glove."

Mr. Weeks—What has this got to do with putting on her glove?

The Recorder interrupted here. "We will not enter into a discussion as to what a woman can do with her fingers," said he. "That is something beyond the power of a human tribunal."

Regarding this rolling of the pen, Mr. Weeks asked if it could be done with equal facility whether the pen was held with the thumb or between the fingers. The witness thought it could.

"And if held with the left hand?"

"Well, it might have been written with the left hand."

"Or, so you think it might have been written with the left hand?"

"Well, of course after using the microscope it was apparent that it was not."

"But you said it might have been written by the left hand?"

"Well, I meant that it could have been so written, but my examination showed that it was not."

The witness was next asked to show where "t's" were crossed in the defendant's admitted writing as they were in the poison package, but he found no places in which the cross was in similar position.

The Assistant District Attorney here interrupted, and Mr. Weeks objected, remarking, "You are not a writing expert. You are not drawing $50 a day here, unfortunately."

The "s" in "Cornish" in the poison package address was next the subject of the examination. Mr. Weeks got the witness to admit that the "s" was much higher compared with other letters in the poison package address than in the admitted writings.

THE DOT OVER THE "I."

"In any of your testimony in important trials have you ever attached any considerable importance to the dot over the "i"?

"No."

"You don't attach much importance to that particular character?"

"No."

"Not when it is placed to the right or to the left?"

"In connection with other characteristics I would consider that. Not alone."

"Haven't you found the way he dots his i an unvarying characteristic in the defendant's handwriting?"

"Yes, it is much in evidence."

"And it is not dotted so in the poison address?"

"No, but this might be intentional."

"But even in disguised handwriting, you would expect to find a number of unconscious characteristics of a person's usual writing repeated, would you not?"

"Yes, quite a number."

Mr. Weeks questioned the witness further on unconscious characteristics, finally asking: "When you examine a person's handwriting, do you first take those characters that you find different in the disputed writing and try to find similar characters in the genuine?"

"Yes."

"You think that a fair method?"

"Yes."

"Do you find anything typical of the defendant's writing in the poison package address?"

"I find nothing but what is typical."

In the following cross-examination, Mr. Weeks got the expert to admit that Molineux invariably wrote certain strokes and loops in the same way, and that they were not thus written in the poison package address. The witness generally had some excuse to offer for this difference, either in that it should be looked for in a disguised hand, or, as he said once:

"If the man was writing on smooth paper in one instance, and on this coarse Manila paper in the other, I should say that might account for the difference."

"You think that fair?"

"Yes."

CHARACTERISTICS NOT FOUND.

Mr. Weeks pointed out that Molineux's "t's" were looped in only four instances out of sixty. The witness said that persons often departed from the rule, and Mr. Weeks asked if he thought it fair to assume that the disputed writing on which so much depended was one of the exceptions.

"I do not ask you to explain," said he, "how a man might write on sandpaper or in a cyclone, but how he writes naturally. You are basing your judgment on the examples before you, are you not?"

Mr. Weeks then presented a large number of characteristics which do not appear in the poison package address, but the witness, though he admitted that he had not observed them in some instances, thought that most of them were trivial or could be explained.

Mr. Osborne, in redirect examination, handed to the witness the Barnet letter known as Exhibit F, written to G. B. Wright. The address given at the foot of the note had been changed from 259 to 257 West Forty-second Street by the drawing of a pen through the wrong figures and placing the right ones over them. The witness examined the writing, and in answer to a question said that he thought the correction had been made in different ink from that used in the original writing, and that it had been done at a different time.

The letter is believed by the prosecution to be one which Heckmann, the letter box man, said Molineux had corrected in his place when he rented the box there.

The foreman of the jury, Mr. Martin, asked the witness if a blotter had been used in one case and not in the other, if that would account for any difference in the appearance. The witness said he would prefer to make a chemical test before answering positively. Mr. Martin asked permission to show the witness some writing he had done, blotting a part of it and permitting some of it to dry naturally. The Recorder permitted this, but said he could not permit the statement to go in as evidence.

As to Exhibit F, the witness thought that the original letter had been written with ink into the composition of which there entered nutgall, but that erasure and corrections were in another kind of ink.

DR. DOUGLASS ON THE STAND.

Dr. Douglass was then called. He identified his report to the Board of Health on the death of H. C. Barnet, and the report was placed in evidence. This report was sent to the Board of Health on Nov. 15, and was sent after the doctor had learned that he was to be called upon by the board to explain his failure to report the case originally as diphtheria, an infectious disease.

The report stated that the doctor examined the patient first at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club on the evening of Oct. 30, 1898. It gave the temperature and pulse and otherwise described the history of the case. There had been indications of diphtheria, but so undefined that the consulting physician called in had not been certain. The treatment was then described. Cultures made from the membrane had disclosed the presence of streptococcus.

The patient was convalescent at the time when cardiac weakness due to overexertion had caused death. It was not till twenty-four hours before death and after the exudations in the throat had responded to anti-toxine treatment that the doctor knew that the patient had had diphtheria, but he was then recovering from that. He had, in fact, been free from the infection for three days when he died, on Nov. 10.

After Mr. Osborne had read the report to the jury he proceeded to examine the witness, and it soon appeared he would have made a better witness for the defense.

"Does the Health Board require the report of strepto-coccus diphtheria?" Mr. Osborne asked.

"Not as I understand it."

"Did you say in your report that you didn't believe the patient had diphtheria till twenty-four hours before his death?"

"I'll explain that—"

"No, you won't now. I won't let you."

"I did not know he had Klebs-Loeffler bacilli diphtheria, as I had only found strepto-cocci in the cultures. I would undoubtedly have found Klebs-Loeffler germs later, if I had made more cultures."

"I ask that the last part of that statement be stricken out," said Mr. Osborne, and it was so ordered.

The report of Dr. Smith, the consulting physician, and the death certificate were then handed in and placed in evidence, as was Dr. Douglass's own letter written on the night Barnet died, asking for permission to remove the body. In it he explained that the patient had been free from diphtheria for five days. The witness said this was a mistake and should have read three days.

THE BOX OF KUTNOW POWDER.

"Did you tell any member of the Health Board that Barnet received through the mails a package of Kutnow powder containing cyanide of mercury?"

"I did not."

"Did not Barnet tell you he had?"

This was objected to by Mr. Weeks, but was answered.

"Mr. Barnet told me he had received a box of Kutnow powder, and that he didn't know where it came from."

Again Mr. Weeks objected, and was sustained as to the latter portion of the answer of Dr. Douglass.

"And the circumstances and facts surrounding the box made you have its contents analyzed by Van Horn & Ellison?"

Mr. Weeks objected, and was overruled. But the question was put in another form.

"If it were not the fact that the box had been received in the mail, and the symptoms showed poison, why did you have the powder analyzed?"

"It was because I had found evidences of mercury in the mouth."

"Because you had found symptoms of mercuric poisoning?"

"Yes."

"Why then did you not order a search made for the wrapper in which the box came through the mails?"

"Simple evidences of mercury had been found. When the cyanide of mercury was found in the analysis I asked that a search for the wrapper be made."

"You knew that Barnet had mercurial stomatitis?"

"Yes."

"And you knew Barnet had received an anonymous package through the mail?"

"Yes."

"You knew that Van Horn & Ellison had made a report to you that there was cyanide of mercury in the box?"

"Yes."

"You knew that Barnet had a diarrhea due to mercury?"

"Partially."

"You knew the symptoms of diphtheria disappeared on Nov. 7?"

"Yes."

"You knew that cardiac failure set in twenty-four hours before death?"

"Yes."

"And yet you did not report to the Board of Health anything relative to cyanide of mercury?"

"That's not a fair question. It's a statement. Ask me why."

"No."

"But you didn't?"

"You believe that Barnet died of the real, genuine diphtheria?"

WHAT CAUSED BARNET'S DEATH.

While the witness was explaining Recorder Goff asked him to tell in plain English what he believed was the cause of Barnet's death.

"I believe," said he, "that Barnet died from cardiac failure following partial diphtheria, due to poisoning caused by germs on the left tonsil, these germs being the strepto-coccl."

A recess was then taken, after which Mr. Osborne resumed the questioning of Dr. Douglass. The examination touched upon all of the symptoms of diphtheria.

"Is vomiting a symptom of diphtheria?" asked Mr. Osborne. The doctor said it frequently attended the disease, as it did any acute infectious disease.

"Did you tell Barnet's brother that he was suffering from salivation?"

"I did not."

"Did you say that he had metallic poisoning?"

"I said he was suffering from mercurial stomatitis and diphtheria."

Asked if he had treated him for mercurial poisoning, the doctor said he had treated him for mercurial stomatitis, and he had given him medicine to eliminate the mercury from his system—not an antidote.

"You said he had taken an overdose?"

"I did not."

The witness said that mercury may remain in the system a long time, and that it must be eliminated.

"I want to know," said Mr. Osborne, "why you did not place in the death certificate the fact that there was evidence of mercurial poisoning."

"Because I did not think that mercury had anything to do with Barnet's death. I have followed the case from the sick room to the grave and to the exhumation; I have read the testimony of your expert chemists, and I have read the newspapers, and I am free to say that my opinion is unshaken that death was not caused by cyanide of mercury."

STANDS BY HIS DIAGNOSIS.

"And you would rather have the evidence of the whole world shaken than that your little death certificate should be proved to be wrong?"

"No, Sir; it was right."

Dr. Douglass explained regarding the streptococcus and Klebs-Loeffler bacilli that they both gave a similar appearance to the throat in causing white patches, but that the Klebs-Loeffler germ on attaining its full growth looked quite different under the microscope. "It is as if," said he, "an Irishman—"

"Why an Irishman?" interrupted the Recorder. The doctor persisted in his simile and continued:

"—and an Italian were both digging holes. The holes would be the same, though men of different kinds were making them."

"Except," joined in Mr. Osborne, "that the Irishman would dig the deeper hole."

Mr. Weeks in cross-examination brought out that the doctor was a member of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, but did not know the Molineuxs. The lawyer read extracts from various medical authorities showing that both forms of the bacilli are true diphtheria, and the doctor agreed with these authorities. One of the authors quoted was Dr. Thomson, who testified in the Buchanan case. His son, Herbert Gordon Thomson, is the third juror in the Molineux case.

The doctor said the appearance of Barnet's throat was different from mercurial sore throat cases, of which he had seen many. The exudations would have been more general, he said, instead of on one side only, as in this case, if it had been due to the poison.

He also said syncope could occur in the height of diphtheria or at some time during convalescence. He explained he had had so much trouble making Barnet keep quiet and in bed that he had threatened to give up the case. Barnet, he said, after promising to be quiet, had twenty-four hours before his death gone to the bath and attended to his toilet, and this exertion had resulted in his death.

It was brought out that Barnet had told the doctor that he had taken the powder because he had sore throat and was feeling bad. He was accustomed to taking Kutnow powders. This was brought out by Mr. Weeks to show that the diphtheritic symptoms had preceded the dose of the powder.

TWO HYPOTHETICAL QUESTIONS.

Dr. Andrew H. Smith was next called, and after his connection with the case was brought out by examination, Mr. Osborne put a long hypothetical question to him, as follows:

"Assuming that on the 21st of October a dose of cyanide of mercury is taken, that it is followed by vomiting, later by mercurial stomatitis, and assuming that you had attended the patient and that two cultures were made from the membrane of the throat and no evidence found of the Klebs-Loeffler bacilli; that on the 10th of November the patient died, and his body was later exhumed and evidence of mercurial poisoning found in the liver, kidneys, stomach, and brain, what would you say was the cause of the patient's death, or what would you state your opinion to be?"

"My opinion would be that the mercurial substance, whatever it was, produced death."

Mr. Weeks, on cross-examination, put this question to match that of Mr. Osborne:

"If a patient took a powder on the morning of the 28th or 29th of October, and two days later was around and about and applied to his physician for treatment for throat trouble; if the physician found an exudation, unilateral, and a culture from this showed streptococci; if the patient was treated with antitoxin and the exudation disappeared by the 7th of November; if the first evidence of mercuric stomatitis was visible on the 4th of November, and that also had disappeared on the 7th of November; if the patient persisted in leaving his bed, and an attack of heart failure followed upon his being fifteen minutes in the bathroom; if the patient had a sore throat before taking any of the drug; if death came on the 10th of November of heart failure; if there was no evidence of bloody vomit, of nose bleed, or a continuous bitter taste in the mouth, of a continued thirst or difficulty in swallowing, or of cyanosis; if in an autopsy occurring three or four months after there was found a trace of cyanogen in the liver, and some mercury in the brain and kidneys, and liver; what would the cause of death be, in your opinion?"

The doctor said that if the symptoms were all continuous, death would have resulted from mercurial poisoning, according to his understanding of the case; if, however, the symptoms were not continuous and if the throat exudations were of a certain character, then he would not be justified in saying that death ensued as a result of cyanide of mercury poisoning.

Court adjourned till Monday. Dr. Smith was the eighty-first witness for the prosecution.

CORNISH'S BROTHER ARRESTED.

Bridgeport Traction Company Makes a Charge of Theft.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., Jan. 19.—In Ridgefield, nine miles from here, William Cornish, a brother of Harry Cornish, made famous by his connection with the Molineux case, was arrested on a charge of theft, preferred by the Bridgeport Traction Company.

Cornish, who is an electrician, was formerly in the employ of the traction company, and is accused of stealing a large quantity of copper wire. He was arrested at Ridgefield by Sheriff Powers and brought to Danbury. He declares his innocence of the charge of theft, and expressed fears of the effect of the news of his arrest would have on his aged mother, who lives in Hartford, and who is already in very ill-health as the result of her other son's connection with the Molineux case.

FOR A PALISADES PARK.

The Preservation Committee Has Drawn Up a Bill—A Similar Measure in New Jersey.

The Palisades Preservation Committee has drawn up a bill to provide for the selection and management of certain lands along the Palisades of the Hudson for an inter-State park and to preserve the scenery of the Palisades. It will be introduced probably some time during next week at Albany. Senator Elsberg will have charge of it in the Senate, and Assemblyman Davis will look out for it in the Assembly. It is provided that it shall go into effect when a similar measure has been passed and approved by the Legislature and Governor of New Jersey.

The bill provides for the appointment by the Governor of five Commissioners, with the approval and consent of the Senate, within ten days after it goes into effect. These men shall all be citizens of the United States and residents of the State of New York, and shall constitute a Joint Board of Commissioners, with five men to be appointed in pursuance of a similar act by the Governor of the State of New Jersey. They shall hold office for one, two, three, four, and five years, respectively, as indicated and fixed in the order of appointment, and until others are appointed in their places. All Commissioners after the first appointment will hold office for the full term of five years. Vacancies caused by death, resignation, refusal to act, or otherwise will be filled by the Governor for the unexpired terms only. The members of the board will receive no compensation for services as Commissioners, but their actual disbursements for expenses in performing the duties of the office will be paid.

The commission shall have power to select lands along the Palisades from the road leading from the top of the hill at Fort Lee to the old Fort Lee dock in New Jersey on the south, to the Piermont Creek at Piermont, in this State, on the north, for use as a public park. For this purpose it will have power to take in fee or otherwise, by purchase, gift, devise, or eminent domain the said lands or any of them, and to receive by gift, contribution, or bequest moneys to be used in acquiring or improving the land.

The bill provides for the sum of $10,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions.

Hundreds have been cured of dangerous Lung and Throat troubles with JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. For names, residences, and dates, see Jayne's Medical Almanac. Free, at your druggist. —Adv.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

THE MUSIC ROOM.

"Music exalts each joy, allays each grief, Expels diseases, softens every pain."

So wrote Dr. Armstrong, the poet-physician, citing the ancients in their wonderful powers of physic, melody, and song. By no means are the rising generations neglecting the good doctor's advice, for the music room in many homes to-day is an important factor.

We suggest the most appropriate furnishings—first a pale green carpet with simple border and soft-toned draperies decorated with gold needlework; then the correct furniture; piano stools of which we make some artistic and comfortable as low priced as $3.50; music cabinets, the essence of daintiness, some as low as $6.00.

The true significance of the words "artistic" and "economy" can be fully realized only when you

"BUY OF THE MAKER"

GEO. C. FLINT CO.

43 45 AND 47 WEST 23RD ST NEAR BROADWAY.

FACTORY 154 AND 156 WEST 19TH STREET

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

No other aid so great to the housewife, no other agent so useful and certain in making delicious, pure and wholesome foods, has ever been devised.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

There are imitation baking powders, sold cheap, by many grocers. They are made from alum, a poisonous drug, which renders the food injurious to health.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 100 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK.

We don't usually shout over every little reduction; but it may interest our friends to know that in the face of rising prices, we've just gone over our fancy suit stock, cutting prices here and there.

It's buying-time for the man who wants a good suit, and good value at $15.

ROGERS, PEET & CO.

350 Broadway, cor. Leonard.
569 Broadway, cor. Prince.
Thirty-second and Broadway.

THE RELIABLE

SHOPPERS' LIST

A GUIDE FOR BUYERS.

OFFERINGS ONLY FOR THIS DAY

SATURDAY, JAN. 20th.

CORSETS.

Ladies, when you fail everywhere in getting fitted in CORSETS, go to

M. J. MURPHY, 126 West 23d St.

30 years' experience.

FURNITURE.

A COMBINATION BOOKCASE & DESK, Mahogany or Oak; Latest design.

$18.75.

Regular value, $25.

MUTUAL FURNITURE CO., 263 Sixth Ave.

GLOVES.

2-CLASP LADIES' GLACE, all Colors.

To-day at 69c.,

Regular value, $1.00.

TELLER'S, 357 6th Ave.

JEWELRY.

LADY'S SOLID GOLD BROOCH with full cut Diamond,

This day only, $5.00.

I. LEWKOWITZ, 6th Ave. & 17th St.

LADIES' SKIRTS.

ALL-WOOL HOMESPUN SKIRTS, Taffeta Appliqued Front, Scroll Design; Regular value, $4.98.

To-day, $2.98.

WILLGERODT & CO., 284-286 Sixth Ave.

LADIES' SUITS.

LADIES' TAILORED SUITS, Silk-lined

To-day, $40.00.

COLLE, 58 West 22d St.

LADIES' SHOES

LADIES' KID BUTTON SHOES,

Regularly $5.00,

To-day at $3.25.

CURRAN & DAVIES, 249 Sixth Ave.

LEATHER GOODS.

ALL-LEATHER DRESS SUIT CASES, Steel Frame. Regular price, $4.50.

To-day, $2.65.

TRAVELLERS' TRUNK AND SUPPLY CO., 252 Sixth Ave.

MACKINTOSHES.

LADIES' 2-CAPE CASHMERE MACKINTOSH, Blue. Regular price, $5.00.

This day, $3.49.

GOODYEAR RUBBER GOODS, 224 Sixth Ave.

MEN'S TAILORING.

Orders taken this day for MEN'S BUSINESS SUITS

at $18.00.

FRED. C. MARTIN, 155 West 23d St.

MEN'S NECKWEAR.

DE JOINVILLE SCARFS, Newest Designs and Colorings,

50c.,

Regularly sold at 75c.

JOHN L. WOOLF, Sixth Ave., cor. 22d St.

MEN'S HATS

DESIRABLE STYLES,

$2.00.

BANTA'S,

214 Sixth Ave.

OPTICAL

EYE GLASSES Fitted. No charge for examination.

M. H. HARRIS, 142 W. 23d.

Directly Opposite Proctor's.

PHOTOGRAPHS

CABINETS, Platino Finish,

Per dozen, $5.00.

Children's Photographs a Specialty.

EDDOWES BROTHERS, 26 West 23d St.

PICTURES.

The most desirable PICTURE and FRAME

To-day at 50c.

ALEXANDER HESS, 348 Sixth Ave.

Any misrepresentation of announcements should be reported to the undersigned, and parties desiring space in this column address or apply to

RELIABLE SHOPPERS' LIST

Box 121 N, Y. Times Office.

Men's Shirts.

In stock or made to measure.

Of the latest shirtings.
Novelty fabrics, weaves and shades.

This stock is now completed in preparation for Spring orders,—many of the materials and the greater proportion of designs are controlled by this firm.
They are distinguished by originality and artistic coloring.

James McCreery & Co.,
Twenty-third Street.

UMBRELLA SALE.

"Special for Saturday and Monday only."

About 700 Umbrellas for Men and Ladies reduced to half cost of production.

Umbrellas that were $2.00, for - - - - - - $1.00
Umbrellas that were $3.00, for - - - - - - $1.50
Umbrellas that were $4.00, for - - - - - - $2.00
Umbrellas that were $5.00 to $7.50 - - - - - $2.50

This Sale includes a great variety of Fancy as well as Fine Natural Handles

DANIELL'S, Broadway, 8 & 9 Sts.

Old Goods

don't suit old customers or make new ones.

That's why we put "a good-bye price" on goods before the season closes.

A dozen styles of Fine Overcoats—broken sizes, formerly priced $45, $42 & $40—get a

Good-bye Price of $25.

As many styles of Men's Suits, formerly $25, $22 & $20, also get a

Good-bye Price of $15.

Early picking will be the best.

500 Doz. Silk Suspenders, patent buckle & morocco ends, Special 50c.—value $1.00.

Stores open this evening.

Hackett, Carhart & Co

Three BROADWAY Stores. Cor. 13th St. Cor. Canal St. Near Chambers.

AMUSEMENTS.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.
GRAND OPERA SEASON 1899-1900.
Under the direction of Mr. MAURICE GRAU.
This afternoon at 2, LOHENGRIN. Mmes. Nordica, Schumann-Heink; MM. Van Dyck, Bertram, De Reszke. Conductor, Paur.
To-night, at 8, at Popular Prices, Grand Double Bill, I PAGLIACCI. Mme. Suzanne Adams, MM. Salignac and Scotti. To be followed by CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA. Mme. Calvé, MM. Dippel, Dufriche. Conductor, Bevignani.
Sun. Evg., Jan. 21, at 8:15, Grand Popular Concert. Soloists: Mmes. Gadski and Zelie de Lussan; MM. Salezs, Campanari, and Van Rooy, together with the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra. Conductor, Paur.
Mon. Ev'g, Jan. 22, at 8, LE PROPHETE. Mmes. Schumann-Heink and Suzanne Adams; MM. Alvarez, Plancon, and Ed. de Reszke. Conductor, Mancinelli.
Wed. Ev'g, Jan. 24th, at 7:30, DIE MEISTERSINGER. Mmes. Emma Eames and Schumann-Heink; MM. Van Rooy, Bertram, Friedrichs, (début,) Breuer, and Dippel. Conductor, Paur.
Fri. Ev'g, Jan. 26, at 7:45. Double Bill. DON PASQUALE. Mme. Sembrich; MM. Scotti, Pinkerton, and Salignac. Conductor, Mancinelli. Followed by CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA. Mmes. Calvé and Mantelli. MM. Campanari and Dippel. Conductor, Bevignani.
WEBER PIANOS USED.

THE NEW YORK.
BROADWAY, 44TH AND 45TH STS.
POSTPONEMENT Owing to the Extraordinary Magnitude of the Production of "BROADWAY TO TOKIO," and in order to perfect in every detail, the Management have decided to postpone the opening until TUESDAY EVE., JAN. 23.
Tickets purchased for Saturday evening, Jan. 20, are available for Tuesday evening.

PADEREWSKI
and
ADAMOWSKI QUARTET.
Only Recital at Sherry's.
TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 23, AT 4.
Mr. Paderewski will play Soli by Chopin, Schumann, Liszt, and Paderewski.
Tickets now on sale at SCHUBERTH'S, TYSON'S, all principal hotels, and at Sherry's.

MENDELSSOHN HALL, Jan. 23, at 3 P.M.
SONG RECITAL
BY
MR. PERRY AVERILL
With the assistance of
MISS ANNA OTTEN, Violinist.
MR. ORTEN BRADLEY, Pianist.
Res'd Seats, $1, at Schuberth's. L. M. Ruben, Mgr.

PROCTOR'S 23d ST. Ed. Harrigan & Co
Cont. Perf. Hilda Thomas & Co
15, 25, 50c. Ed. Latell.
O. K. Sato, Harding & Ah Sid, Mov'g Pict's, 30 Oths

PALACE 58th St. & 3d Av. MOULIERE SISTERS,
Cont. Perf. 15, 25, 50c. THE NAWNS.
Leo Dervalto, Pauline Moran & "Picks," 30 Oths.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.
OPENING TO-NIGHT AT 8 P. M.
5th National Exhibition of Cycles,
Automobiles and Accessories.
50c. ADMISSION 50c.

DALY'S B'way & 30th.....at 8:30
Matinées Wed. & Sat., 2:15.
Daniel Frohman's Company.
2D MONTH.
The Maneuvers of Jane
Comedy, 4 acts, by Henry Arthur Jones.

LYCEUM 4th Av. & 23d.....at 8:30.
Daniel Frohman, Manager
LAST MATINEE. LAST NIGHT.
CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS
ANNIE RUSSELL in MISS HOBBS
Next Monday, "The Surprises of Love."

Hammerstein's VICTORIA Evgs. 8:20.
42d St., B'way & 7th Av. Sat. Mat. 2:15
No Smoking or Drinking at Matinées.
Mat. To-day Jerome Sykes & Edna Wallace Hopper
Prices, 50, 75, $1.00 CHRIS AND THE WONDERFUL LAMP
50c. ADMISSION to PROMENADE 50c.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.
MR. RICHARD MANSFIELD.
Matinée To-day at 2. THE FIRST VIOLIN.
To-night—DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE.
Nxt Wk, Mr. John Drew in The Tyranny of Tears.

AMERICAN 42ND & 8TH AVE. CASTLE SQ. OR CO.
Evs., 8:15, 25c. to $1. MARTHA
MAT. TO-DAY.
1,100 Seats, 25c.
Jan. 22, Double Bill. 1st Time Here, at the 650th Time. Lower Harbour and the Magic Melody. SILVER VIOLET VASE SOUVENIRS.

ST. NICHOLAS
SKATING RINK
WEST 66TH ST., NEAR COLUMBUS AVE.
HOCKEY MATCH TO-NIGHT AT 8:15.
New York A. C. vs. Princeton University.
ADMISSION, 50 CENTS. SKATES FREE.

PADEREWSKI TO-DAY.
CARNEGIE HALL, THIS SAT'Y, 2:30 P. M.
Sat'y Aft., Jan'y 20, at 2:30.
GENERAL ADMISSION, ONE DOLLAR.
Steinway Piano used.

WALLACK'S Broadway & 30th St.
Evgs., 8:15. Mat. Sat., 2:15.
Last Matinee. Last Night.
FRANK DANIELS in THE AMEER.
MON., JAN. 22, OLGA NETHERSOLE IN SAPHO.

MENDELSSOHN HALL.
Third Concert Tuesday Evg., Jan. 23 at 8:15.
THE KNEISEL QUARTET OF BOSTON,
assisted by Mme. Szumowska, Piano.
Tickets, $1.50, at Schuberth's 23 Union Square.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN. 75TH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS at The Fine Arts Society, 215 West 57th St.
Jan. 1 to Jan. 27.
Open 10 A. M. to 6 P. M., and 8 P. M. to 10 P. M.
Admission ..... 25c.

Koster & Bial's
Jarbeau, Fred'k Hallen & Mollie Fuller, Solaret, Goldin, Tim Cronin, & others.
MAT. TO-DAY. Popular Prices, 50c.

BROADWAY Theatre, 41st St. & B'way.
Evs. at 8. Mats. Wed. & Sat. 2.
MATINEE TO-DAY AT 2.
THE GREAT SUCCESS, BEN-HUR

THE DEWEY East 14th St. MATINEE TO-DAY. Wine, Women & Song Co. Burke Bros. and Great Vaudeville

ACADEMY OF MUSIC. 14th St. & Irving Pl.
Grander Than Ever.
Prices, 25, 50, 75, $1. Mats. To-day & Wed. 2. Ev. 8:10.
"WAY DOWN EAST."

BIJOU. B'way & 30th St. Ev. 8:15. Mat. To-day.
Phone 622d Mad. Sq.
MAY IRWIN IN SISTER MARY
BEST ORCHESTRA SEATS ONLY $1.50.

Weber & Fields' MUSIC HALL. Matinées B'way & 30 St. Tues. & Sat.
Whirl-I-Gig & BARBARA FIDGETY

MANHATTAN Theatre, 33d & B'y. Ev. 8:15. Sat. Mat.
ANNA HELD in PAPA'S WIFE.

WORLD IN WAX. CINEMATOGRAPH.
EDEN MUSEE
NEW GROUPS. CHARMING MUSIC

14th St. Theatre, nr. 6th Av. Mats. Wed. & Sat.
LAST WEEK but one of the best of rural plays,
THE VILLAGE POSTMASTER.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE. 42d St. & Lex. Av.
Matinee Every Day, 25c.
THIS WEEK—AN ENEMY TO THE KING.

HERALD SQ. Thea. Evs. 8:20. Mats. Wed. & to-day
DAVID BELASCO presents his new triumph, Naughty Anthony

IRVING PLACE THEATRE. To-day Mat. red. pr.
LAST TIME. SCHWEIGHOFER in Gebildete Menschen, (Educated People.)

Grand OPERA HOUSE. The Gunner's Mate. Mat. To-day.
Next Week.—"A Stranger in a Strange Land."

KEITH'S Continuous Performance.
MINNIE SELIGMAN, GEORGE WILSON.
LOUISE CUNNING, THE DE FORESTS.
Matthews & Harris, Biograph, etc.

COMIQUE B'WAY & 29TH
MATINEE TODAY 25 & 50c. THE PEOPLE'S PLACE
TAMMANY TIGERS—2 Burlesques.
EXTRA—MLLE. PAULA.

KNICKERBOCKER. B'WAY & 38TH ST.
N. C. Goodwin Evs. 8:15. Mat. To-day, 2:15.
Maxine Elliott THE COWBOY AND THE LADY.

5th Ave THEATRE. B'way & 28th.
Evs. 8:15. Mats. Wed. & To-day.
The Latest Musical Comedy Success,
THREE LITTLE LAMBS

CASINO! Last 2 Times! To-day at 2:15. To-nght at 8:10.
LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD!
Nxt. Mon.—Famous London "Belle of N. Y." Co.

JAN
1900

The New York Times.

SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Copyright, 1900,
THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1900. SIXTEEN PAGES.

CONTENTS.

The City of Rome. Page.
Destruction of Its Buildings and Statues Due to the Italian People—Lanciani's Interesting Statements 36
Pre-Raphaelites.
A Memoir of Rossetti and Mr. Bate's Volume on the Brotherhood. Reviewed by RUSSELL STURGIS 33
Mr. Choate.
An Address at Acton on Books and Libraries.. 46
Thackeray in "Punch."
Mr. Spielmann's Volume on His Hitherto Unidentified Contributions 35
Clement Scott's Book.
The Veteran London Playgoer Discourses on the Victorian Theatre..... 38
London Literary Letter.
By WILLIAM L. ALDEN..... 38
Catholic Libraries.
Cathedral and Other Collections in New York—What They Are Doing..... 43
Paris.
History and Letters as Written in Stones..... 39
Brahms.
Recollections by One Who Knew Him Intimately 37
Kipling and an Old Assailant.
Robert Buchanan's Famous Onslaught of Many Years Ago and His Recent Kipling Article.. 40
Notes and News.
Books and Their Makers—Items of the Day—Among the Publishers—Philadelphia Topics.. 44
Ancient Irish Heroes.
A Letter from Seumas MacManus..... 46
Too Many Books.
Part of an Address Before the Booksellers' League by the Editor of THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW 47
Other Reviews of Books.
Skinner's "Myths and Legends of Our New Possessions" 48
Lanier's "Bob" 47
Finck's "Primitive Love and Love Stories".... 45
"Religion Under the Barons of Baltimore".... 46
Purrington's "Christian Science"..... 48
"George Selwyn" 48
Powell's "Personal Reminiscences"..... 48
Castle's "The Light of Scarthey"..... 48
Letters from Our Readers.
Not One of the Clique—Not at All..... 46
From a Man of Taste..... 40
A Way to Judge One's Friends..... 46
"Les Miserables" a Literary Education..... 46
Chief Among Them All..... 47
"Canot Help"..... 38
"La Giaconda" Explains..... 36
Kinship with George Eliot..... 34
Would Abolish Uncut Edges..... 46
Theodore Winthrop's Gentleman..... 43
Town or Country Again..... 41
"When Knighthood Was in Flower"..... 30
The Week in Art..... 41
Topics of the Week..... 33
Kipling's First Book Brings $260..... 34
Robert Clarke's Rare Books..... 47
Chaucer at the Grolier Club..... 47
Women Among Humorists..... 40
The Library of Congress..... 40
Queries and Answers..... 42
Books Received..... 42

The New York Times
Saturday Review.
$1 Per Year.

Topics of the Week.

Arthur Henry Savage Landor, author of "In the Forbidden Land," being an account of his experiences on the plateau of Tibet, is in this country, not only to lecture, but also to put the finishing touches to his new book, "Mountain Climbing in the Himalayas." It is not generally known that last Summer Mr. Landor revisited the scenes of his captivity and torture; this time, however, from the east and with a guard of trusty followers, so that, although his party had several fights with the natives, no serious misfortune befell it. While in India Mr. Landor climbed several of the Himalayan slopes, his most notable feat being the ascent of Lumpa to a height of 23,490 feet, which is said to be 500 feet above the elevation reached by E. A. FitzGerald, as described in the latter's "The Highest Andes."

Archdeacon Cyrus Townsend Brady, author of "For Love of Country" and "For the Freedom of the Sea," will write for the Appletons' Great Commander Series the volume on Paul Jones, which will be entitled "Commodore Paul Jones." First as an Annapolis man and then as a student of the history of the Navy, the choice of Mr. Brady is a particularly happy one. Beyond his knowledge of technique in naval affairs, he has preserved since boyhood a deep admiration for Jones's naval hero, which amounts now almost to veneration. There is every reason to believe that the Archdeacon will make of "Commodore Paul Jones" a book that will be at once graphic and authoritative.

A book which cannot fail to interest many, in view of the social and political evolution that is being wrought among womankind, will come from the press of the Macmillan Company next week. It is "How Women May Earn a Living," by Mrs. Helen C. Cander. The volume surveys the field of woman's labor, from which the author has selected only the employments which have been successfully tried by large numbers. Isolated cases of success are not presented as models for all to follow blindly. As a whole, the work is intended more particularly to reach the educated class of women, as it is assumed that their need is greater than that of the girls who go without thought from the public school to the factory. Besides the artistic and scientific professions, the topics selected for treatment include those which may appeal to women with business talent, to women with small country places, and to those with purely domestic inclinations.

In the same volume with Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's "The Autobiography of a Quack," which The Century Company will shortly produce, will be included "The Case of George Dedlow," which was first published anonymously in The Atlantic Monthly many years ago. The story was originally written as the result of a humorous discussion as to how the loss of physical members of the human body affected the mind. This was shortly after the civil war, and Dr. Mitchell, in making his reply, wrote out the supposititious case of one George Dedlow, who had suffered the amputation of both arms and both legs. Dr. Mitchell lent the manuscript to his friend the Rev. Dr. Furness, who, in turn, sent it to Edward Everett Hale. Dr. Hale, appreciating the literary quality of the paper, put it into The Atlantic Monthly, with which he was connected. The sketch was written in such a realistic fashion that soon after its appearance subscriptions were started all over the East and Middle West for the supposedly dismembered George Deolow. This was undoubtedly Dr. Mitchell's first and unsolicited contribution to the periodical press.

From the fact that palmistry has not only a certain growing vogue in society, but because it is at the present moment receiving unusual attention from scientists, G. P. Putnam's Sons have arranged with W. G. Benham for a work to be entitled "The Laws of Scientific Hand Reading." Mr. Benham has given many years to the study of his subject along the most undisputed scientific channels. His work will be elaborately illustrated with photographic reproductions of the hands of persons of various classes, including criminals and others. There will, too, be photographs of the hands of men and women who have achieved renown in the history of the world. There will, moreover, be demonstrated a new theory concerning the origin of formation of the lines of the hands. It is the intention of the publishers to make the book the most elaborate and authoritative work on the subject ever published.

Prof. W. P. Trent of the University of the South, author of the "Life of William Gilmore Simms" in the American Men of Letters Series, of a recent volume of critical essays, and of other works in his chosen field, has written the volume "American Literature" in the Appletons' Literatures of the World Series. Of course, American Colonial literature, save for a very few interesting specimens of biography and meditation, consists principally of religious and semi-political tracts. Not only in this ante-Revolution field, but particularly in the period following down to the present day, is Prof. Trent considered one of the authorities in this country. It is expected that his forthcoming volume will throw new light upon what have heretofore been considered the formative influences of the Graham, Cambridge, and the Boston groups in a way that will tend to destroy many dear and popular fallacies.

What is said to be the first collection of short stories written in the English language by a Japanese will shortly be published by the Doubleday & McClure Company under the title of "Jroka," being tales and folklore stories of old and new Japan. The author is Adachi Kinnosuké, who dwells in a little house made from a hollow tree near Glendale, Cal., where the author keeps a Japanese curio shop for the benefit of visitors. Mr. Kinnosuké's style, while grammatically correct, is not exactly idiomatic English, his expression retaining all the freshness and color of the art of his native land.

PRE-RAPHAELITES.

A Memoir of Rossetti and Mr. Bate's Volume on the Brotherhood and Their Successors.*

Reviewed for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW by Russell Sturgis.

Referring to a recent review in these columns (SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART for Dec. 23, 1899,) devoted to the two biographies of John Everett Millais, which have recently appeared, it may be mentioned that it appeared from those books that a tendency existed to deny to Rossetti the name of Pre-Raphaelite in its true and its full meaning. This denial, too, is set up by the representatives of the stanchest and most faithful side of the whole realistic and sentimental movement which we call Pre-Raphaelitism. It is urged that Rossetti was, indeed, the most imaginative of the men who made up the original movement in 1849; that he was the one who gave it the greatest glory at once of poetry and of graphic art, and that he long remained the most powerful imaginative designer of his time—but that he was in no true sense a Pre-Raphaelite, and this because he absolutely declined to be bound by the rules of the society to which he nominally belonged. Pre-Raphaelitism was based upon minute and careful study of the visible object. Every human figure was to be drawn and painted from a living human figure, so clothed, so posed, so surrounded, in such light, with such local color. Every scene, whether indoors or out, was to be painted from a set of actual surroundings exactly corresponding with that which the artist wished to put upon his canvas. Everything, in short, was to be a portrait executed with the minutest fidelity to the visible facts. But, notoriously, Rossetti was bound by no rules such as these; he never pretended to draw with minute accuracy from the quiescent model. Moreover, he was never a very skillful painter, and he was a skillful draughtsman only in the somewhat transcendental sense used by painters in speaking of their own and their brother artists' work; that is to say, he could not draw the nude with academic thoroughness, and, therefore, was not a draughtsman in the sense in which a great Italian of the sixteenth century was a draughtsman. But he could be counted on to put the right thing in the right place, to give it the right size and shape, to put his patch of color or his gradation of light where it was wanted, to express by his modeling the idea which he wished to convey. In that sense he was a draughtsman, but even in this there were shortcomings, for when a man is overwhelmed with mannerism from his early days until the end, and cannot draw a woman's head which is not of a certain special and peculiar type, nor a human body without twisting and contorting it into strange attitudes expressive of one human condition only, then he is, according to this refined meaning of draughtsmanship, an experimenter rather than a master. But, again, an exception must be made—again a half truth must be half-contradicted: Rossetti's choice of the long-jawed, pouting-lipped woman and his use of the reedy, swaying, overpliant type of body were rather of choice than of helplessness. There exist pictures of his, life-size paintings of the semi-nude, in which the shoulders, the supple hollows at the setting on of the neck, the modeling of the column itself of the long neck, and the setting of the head thereupon are as perfect as anything in modern painting. Also there exist many drawings in chalk, both black and white, and some in both, and among these one at least, a full-length female nude reproduced in the volume under consideration; and no one examining this would dream of saying that Rossetti was not a draughtsman in the ordinary sense in which that word is used by students. The truth is probably that he was by nature wonderfully gifted with the power of seeing truth of form as expressed by means of light and shade and color values on a flat surface, but he lacked even that small amount of early discipline—that devotion of years to study and constant drawing from the nude—which alone could make, either in Venice or in London, a consummate draughtsman. And so of color. Rossetti would have been a very great colorist had there been any contemporary color work of great subtlety to guide him at first and to encourage and stimulate him afterward. He was ever too artistically minded a man, and saw color with eyes too keen and a judgment too sound, to be much impressed by the somewhat too forcible and even violent coloring of his day in England and the comparative negation of color as a principal subject of the painter's art in all the Continental schools. He was not at all a traveler; he hardly knew by personal observation the paintings of former times; his art was based upon his own feelings and his own theories of what art ought to be, and he was all his life long a lover and a student of color rather than a colorist of the highest rank. In comparison with others of his time he was a colorist, indeed; in comparison with the immortals he was a student who, without going to the best school, worked his own path to great, if not the greatest, success.

*DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI: An Illustrated Memorial of His Art and Life. By H. C. Marillier. London: George Bell & Sons. New York: The Macmillan Company. 1899. 8vo, xxiii., 270. $20.

THE ENGLISH PRE-RAPHAELITE PAINTERS: Their Associates and Successors. By Percyll Bate. With twenty-one illustrations. London: George Bell & Sons. New York: The Macmillan Company. 8vo, xiv., 200. $2.

The English standard of criticism is not, however, that of students of painting elsewhere, and the English artists of any epoch are often compared with one another according to the stories they have to tell and the moralities which they have to preach, together with the success they show in such story telling or exhortation. It cannot be too much insisted on that the standard set up by the practice of the English painter and the talk of the English press is almost exclusively a literary standard; or, at least, a purely intellectual standard, without much reference to artistic insight or power of artistic expression. Watts is the solemn and profound thinker who deals with eternal verities and with those beliefs which underlie all differing and controversial creeds. Millais is the teller of stories of valor and of sentiment. Holman Hunt is the lover of Christian symbolism, who delights in reading into the Gospel narrative the thoughts which he has accumulated in the course of his minute realistic study of the external world. Rossetti is the ideal teller of old tales, the reciter of legends, the interpreter of dreams, the seer of those visions which have been belief and are now half-credited fragments of old doctrine. He was also the true poetical interpreter of those poetical truths; in verse and in graphic art a bard and a prophet. With such aims as these, Rossetti was not obliged to be faithful as a draughtsman of the human anatomy, nor a student in the Pre-Raphaelite sense, of the facts—of drapery, of flowers, of foreground and distance, of light and local color; but he was obliged to study the expression of the human face and to stand ready to discriminate between the deadly witch Lilith and the "Blessed Damozel" leaning over the bar of Heaven; and this by the expression alone upon faces which were drawn from the same model and had the same peculiar sensuous beauty. If, therefore, the student were to collect large photographs of Rossetti's pictures, he would find the most marked satisfaction in those in which the heads are in full light and have "come" well in the photographic print. Photographs are named because Rossetti's paintings are practically out of reach of the student, who must travel for months to get a sight of even a small percentage of them, and that by the favor of their owners.

The noble book which is named above and which Mr. Marillier has devoted to Rossetti is full of photographic illustrations from the artist's work, some of them in photogravure and others in half tone; and has in the form of an appendix a list of paintings, drawings, and studies which has been enlarged, as it is stated, from those previously published by Mr. Sharpe, Mr. Anderson, and the artist's brother, William M. Rossetti. There are two indices; one to the chronological list itself, and the other to the book in general; the latter being somewhat inadequate and leaving the great quarto volume somewhat hard to use as a book of reference. Concerning the list of Rossetti's works, there should be read Page 209 of the book, with its frank statement of the great difficulty which the author has found in establishing the number, the character, the titles, and the whereabouts of the paintings and studies. In the same connection there is given an interesting passage or two about Rossetti's personal character; and although there has been a somewhat frank expression of regret at those shortcomings in the man which could not be well left unnamed, it seems to be held that the biographer of so great a genius does right "to dwell upon his more amiable side (or sides) * * * because" his foibles "are so much less interesting than his virtues." One would hardly have said that the book taken altogether is unduly laudatory, or that there is too strong a disposition to glorify what is good or to shun mention of what is not so good in Rossetti, but it is difficult to subscribe to the doctrine that a biographer's business is to represent things as being on the whole better than they really were. Mr. Marillier expressly states that the foibles of such a man concern us much less than his virtues; but this is a doctrine which it would be hard to accept. What we wants to know about Carlyle are the facts, and not the most amiable and kindly version that can be made up of the facts. If the budding statesman could know exactly what Mr. Gladstone's habits of life were—how he worked, how he rested, and what mixture it was that he used to soften his throat during a four hours' speech, he would be helped indeed; but it would be of little use to him to read the friendly biography prepared by an admiring friend. So with Rossetti, or any great painter; if we could really know how he lived and behaved we should get more additional insight into the nature of artistic genius, and that is what the public is bound to ask for, whether the biographer feels that he has the right to give such actual fact stated with pre-Raphaelite plainness or not.

Mr. Bate's book is not so large as the splendid Rossetti folio, but it is a thoroughly well-made and handsome quarto, even more attractive in its printed page than is the Rossetti book, because the latter has been printed on calendered paper for the sake of the half-tone prints which are dispersed through the text, while the smaller book has its illustrations in inserted plates only. There are ninety-one of these full-page illustrations, and they afford a most useful and even admirable collection of works by men who either were Pre-Raphaelites or who were or still are followers of the original Pre-Raphaelites and faithful workers along the line which they laid down, or who, finally, may be thought to have been largely influenced by the work of that school. In this way forty-nine different artists are represented in worthy illustration and are critically treated in sufficiently clear and intelligible words. Of the different classes of artists cited in the last sentence but one, Holman Hunt, Millais, and Rossetti are of the first class; and to these should be added Ford Madox Brown, their forerunner in a sense, and a man to whose influence the younger workmen who founded the Brotherhood looked as to their prototype and model of good work. As representatives of the second class, Sir Edward Burne-Jones must be named as the most marked follower of Rossetti, with Arthur Hughes and J. M. Strudwick as followers, either of Rossetti himself or of his disciple just named; also as faithful students of minute facts without special poetical sentiment, first of all, John Brett, the landscapist, and then probably Charles Collins, W. S. Burton, Cayley Robinson, and Fairfax Murray; also, as a special imitator of Millais, Matthew J. Lawless should be named, a man who is known to Americans as a designer for wood illustration rather than as a painter. Of other artists here represented, such as J. F. Lewis and Gerald Moira, Simeon Solomon and George Wilson, it may be gravely questioned whether they felt very strongly the Pre-Raphaelite influence except perhaps in the early days of their artistic career, and these belong to our third class. It is not implied by these words that Mr. Bate's selection of names is improperly large; he has expressly set himself to gathering together all the evidences of Pre-Raphaelite influences upon modern men, going so far in this path that he speaks even of William Morris and Walter Crane as under that influence; and yet Morris shared in the movement only in so far as he was inspired by that love of mediaeval tradition, which also affected the more enthusiastic painters of the school, and Crane can hardly be thought to show more of the true spirit than is felt by any English artist whom you might name—they, indeed, being differentiated from Continental or American painters mainly by the fact that the Pre-Raphaelite movement has come and gone, and has not left the English school without a strong leaning toward a special view of nature and a special idea of the artist's mission. Even men not named in this book, even men far away in spirit from those who are named in this book—even Sir Frederick Leighton and Albert Moore are different painters from what they would have been had they lived in France; and it is, as was said in a former article, at once the influence of the Pre-Raphaelites and the profound instinct which first was seen strongly in the Pre-Raphaelite which have made the English school what it is.

The two admirable books which have formed our theme in this paper worthily complete a series of books on this general subject which have been coming out during the last ten years. Thanks to photography, and thanks to a manly and honest spirit in the writers of the text, to which is added in some cases an unusual degree of critical insight, the American public, which knows nothing whatever by its own experience of the modern English school of painting, is enabled to study that curious and very independent little world in its most characteristic form. The two painters named above, Leighton and Moore, are almost the only ones not included in Mr. Bate's book which it would seem very necessary to add if the whole English school were to be properly appraised in the way of its worthiest work. RUSSELL STURGIS.

Kipling's First Book Brings $260.

The first copy of Kipling's "Schoolboy Lyrics," his first book, printed in 1881, has been sold here at auction and fetched $260 at a sale held by Bangs & Co., Jan. 15 and 16. It was probably the copy that brought £90 on July 28, 1899, at Sotheby's, London. Other quotations are as follows: April, 1890, £125; July 9, 1890, £76, £100, and £100; Nov. 20, 1899, £20, £41, and £46. George D. Smith, who paid $260 for the copy sold Tuesday, also secured the following Kipling items: "Echoes," 1884, wrappers, $107; "Quartette," 1885, half calf, $30 (the copy that fetched £7 10s. in London Nov. 20, 1899); "Departmental Ditties," 1886, wrappers, $60; "The Week's News," Jan. 7 to Sept. 15, 1888, lacking three numbers, $90.75 (the copy that brought £20 Nov. 20, 1899); "Plain Tales from the Hills," 1888, cloth, $23; "Soldiers Three," 1888, wrappers, $40; "Under the Deodars," n. d., wrappers, $12.50; "In Black and White," n. d., wrappers, $15; "Wee Willie Winkie," n. d., wrappers, $14.50; "City of Dreadful Night," n. d., wrappers, $17.50, and "Letters of Marque," 1891, cloth, $27. All these, save the last, were first editions, and the prices realized compared favorably with the sums paid at present in London auction rooms. The "Echoes," which fetched $107, brought £17 10s. and £18 in London, Nov. 20, 1899, and "Departmental Ditties," which brought $60, sold for £6 and £7 15s. at the November sale.

Next to Kipling, interest in the sale of Monday and Tuesday centred in Dickens and Tennyson. For "Pickwick Papers," 1836-7, in parts, original green wrappers, with the "Addresses" in Parts 10 and 15, (but not with the "Addresses" also to Parts 2 and 3, as was the case with the Wright copy, which fetched £85 last June,) Charles Scribner's Sons paid $60, while "The Village Coquettes," 1836, original sheets, went to George D. Smith for $18.50, the same buyer securing, for Harry B. Smith, Dickens's own copy, with signature and notes, of Bulwer's comedy, "Not So Bad as We Seem," 1851, in the private performance of which Dickens played the part of Lord Wilmot. The price paid for this most interesting item was $150. George D. Smith also purchased for $280 Tennyson's "The Cup," 1881, privately printed edition, (the copy that had fetched £46 in London Nov. 20,) and for $138 Tennyson's "Carmine Saeculare," privately printed in 1887. The latter is the copy that fetched £31 in London Nov. 20. Other prices were as follows:

Aldrich's "Poems," 1882, the edition illustrated by the Paint and Clay Club, green morocco, by Stikeman, with autograph letter and manuscript poem, $20. Bought by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Andrews's "Prospect of the Colledges in Cambridge, in New England," 1707, $13. Bought by Charles Scribner's Sons.

Audubon's "Birds," New York and Philadelphia, 1844, seven volumes, fair copy, $170.75. Bought by Mr. Browning.

Boccaccio's "Decameron," Venice, 1542, new olive morocco, $70. Bought by Mr. Palmer.

Dante's "Divine Comedy," Venice, 1536, new olive morocco, $50. Bought by "City."

Goldsmith's "Good-Natured Man," 1786, red morocco, first edition, $24. Bought by Mr. Palmer; "Deserted Village, 1770, red morocco, first edition, quarto, (the first issue was in octavo,) $90. Bought by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Bury's "Philobiblon," Grolier Club, 1889, three volumes, $79.50. Bought by George D. Smith; Bradford's "Laws," Grolier Club, 1894, $30. Bought by "Statute."

Lyly's "Euphues," (1597,) olive morocco, $50. Bought by George D. Smith. Lyly's "Euphues and His England," 1597, title page in fac simile, olive morocco, $38. Bought by George D. Richmond & Son.

Meredith's "Poems," London, 1851, cloth, first edition, $69. Bought by "Duke."

Stevenson's "Black Canyon," Davos Platz, $20. Bought by "Edward." "A Marital Clergy," Davos Platz, $13.50. Bought by George D. Smith. "Travels With a Donkey," 1879, $17. Bought by George D. Smith. "Father Damien," Edinburgh, 1890, $17. Bought by "Edward." "A Familiar Epistle," 1890, $14.50. Bought by "Edward."

Symonds's "Renaissance of Modern Europe," 1872, unbound, $18. Bought by "Edward."

Virgil's "Works," London, 1640, translated by John Ogilby, calf, $48. Bought by "City."

Kinship with George Eliot.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Every week I wonder that the name of George Eliot is not mentioned oftener by some of the book loving, or hating, contributors to THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW. She occupies the first place in my affections. It is not only her stories, poems, and essays that one loves, but their maker. Clara Conway in THE REVIEW of Jan. 13 speaks of the "spiritual and intellectual kinship" her lovers have with her and her books. It was those words that touched a responsive chord. Will not Clara Conway, or others, write more of George Eliot?

MAGDA CANEL.

New York, Jan. 13, 1900.

Special Sale of American History

Smith's History of New Jersey	$2.00
Tuttle's History of Michigan	.75
Bolton's History of Westchester Co., 2 vols.	2.00
Ramsey's Annals of Tennessee	1.00
Holloway's History of Kansas	.50
Ketchum's History of Buffalo and the Holcomb Purchase, 2 vols.	1.50
Hayle's Providence Co., R. I., 2 vols.	2.50
Scharf's History of Phila., 3 vols.	3.75
Miller's Kings Co., 2 vols.	3.00
Bowditch's History of East Boston	1.25
Caley's Nebraska	.75

and hundreds of others at bargains.

LEGGAT BROS., 81 Chambers St., N.Y. City.

30,000 COPIES SOLD
In Advance of Publication.

Stranger Than Fiction
ALBERT ROSS' NEW NOVEL.

1,610,000 Copies of his Novels have been Sold.
Write for Catalogue of his other Books.
SOLD EVERYWHERE, or sent POSTPAID FREE, on receipt of price. Cloth bound, $1; paper covers, 50 cents.
G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY, Publishers, N.Y.

THE VEST POCKET OMAR.
FitzGerald's Translation with Preface and Vocabulary, By Nathan Haskell Dole.
The Most Exquisite Hand-Made Paper Edition Ever Issued.
OVER 15,000 COPIES SOLD TO DATE.

Blue paper wrapper, postpaid	.25 net
Limp cloth, postpaid	.40 net
Flexible leather, gilt top, postpaid	.75 net
Japan Vellum edition, postpaid	1.00 net

LIST OF BOOKS (64 PAGES) FREE ON REQUEST.
THOMAS B. MOSHER,
XLV Exchange St., PORTLAND, ME.

Authors' Agency Ninth Year. CRITICISM, REVISION, DISPOSAL. Thorough Preparation for the Press. All work between Author and Publisher. REFERENCES: Noah Brooks, Mrs. Burton Harrison, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, W. D. Howells, Thos. Nelson Page, Charles Dudley Warner, Mary E. Wilkins and others
For NEW BOOKLET send stamp to
WM. A. DRESSER, Director, 200 Pierce Bldg., Copley Sq., Boston, Mass.
Please mention the N. Y. Times.

"A style which can fairly be described as fascinating. . . . One of the most important books on music that have ever been published."—W. J. Henderson, Musical Critic of The N. Y. Times.
LAVIGNAC'S MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.
SECOND EDITION.
594 pp. 8vo, $3.00.
Henry Holt & Co., New York.

ALL LOVERS of VERSE
Should Read LLOYD MIFFLIN'S
ECHOES of GREEK IDYLS.
We doubt if any one since Shelley has done quite such good work.—CHURCH STANDARD. $1.25. All Booksellers.
HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., BOSTON.

Bangs & Co.,
91 and 93 Fifth Avenue,
will sell at auction MONDAY, January 22d, and four following afternoons at 3 o'clock each day, BOOKS
in all the various departments of Literature, including many SCARCE and DESIRABLE WORKS, Autograph Letters, Book Plates, and a collection of Engravings and Portraits.

When calling ask for Mr. Grant.
SAVE ON BOOKS. Whenever you need any book, or information about books, write for quotations. Catalogues and special slips sent for 10-cent stamp.
F. E. GRANT, Books,
23 West 42d Street, New York City.

THE NOVEL OF THE SEASON IS
F. MARION CRAWFORD'S VIA CRUCIS.
A ROMANCE OF THE SECOND CRUSADE.
8TH EDITION, 46TH THOUSAND.

CHAMBERS' ENCYCLOPAEDIA
Revised to 1899.
Send for circulars to
J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY,
Publishers, Philadelphia.

E. P. DUTTON & CO.,
31 West 23d Street.
FINE BOOKS. FINE STATIONERY.
An Elegant Retail Store.
All books are sold in our Retail Department at a discount from advertised prices.
NEW YORK.

IF YOU KNOW ANY ONE who is fond of Poetry, tell them to write for a free specimen copy of the monthly Magazine of Poetry, New York City.

THE FIRST EDITION OF THE TALMUD IN ENGLISH.
Eight volumes of "Festivals," and one, "Ethics of Judaism," on sale. "Jurisprudence" in press. $3.00 per volume. Particulars from NEW TALMUD PUB. CO., 1,332 5th Av., N. Y. City.

SIR SUPERIOR

WANTED—Copy Goodrich's British Eloquence; Harper publication. Address H. W. M., Box 180 Times.

CASH FOR BOOKS.—Libraries bought. BARTLETT, 33 East 22d St., New York.

1900

Few people realize that the most important contribution made

THE FUTURE OF WAR.

to the science of warfare during the last 100 years is M. Bloch's "The Future of War," issued but a few months ago. Here are some facts about the book:

I. It brought about the Peace Congress, being the work which led the Czar to study modern war conditions.

II. It is the "text book of war" studied and followed by General Joubert in the Transvaal, and every one of his "scores" have been made on lines laid down by Bloch.

III. It—or General Joubert's demonstrations of its lessons—has made a change in English opinion. Harmsworth of the London Mail says: "Our Generals were beaten because they had not read Bloch."

IV. It predicted exactly what happened in South Africa, notwithstanding the English opinion that the book is not "practical."

Here are prophecies from its pages; compare them with what happened in South Africa:

1. That the advantage would always be with the defensive, the moral superiority of attack being more than counterbalanced by the effect of magazine rifle fire from entrenchments.
2. That battles would seldom be decisive, the beaten side falling back on entrenched positions a little to the rear, these positions being prepared in advance.
3. That infantry having sustained all day modern fire would be incapable of following up victory.
4. That frontal attacks would be absolutely impossible without great superiority of numbers, and with immense losses.
5. That night marches and night attacks would have to be resorted to, with liability to blundering on unknown enemies, and with great danger of loss from one's own fire.
6. That entrenchments constructed on modern principles, to give the maximum of protection would be absolutely invisible, and that the first inkling of their existence would often be the fire of the defenders.
7. That surprise parties would often blunder upon counter-surprises.
8. That the future war would be a war of sieges and entrenched positions, both sides being equally impotent in attack.
9. That invisible sharpshooters would mow down hundreds.
10. That artillery would often be put out of action by rifle fire from concealed sharpshooters, owing to loss of men and horses.
11. That an abortive attack would lead to the attacker entrenching himself, and to an exchange of rôles.
12. That satisfactory reconnoissance would be almost impossible, in the face of sharpshooters firing smokeless powder which would not betray their position.
13. That effective advances could only take place along railway lines.
14. That with equal resolution and resources wars would last longer than in the past.
15. That turning movements with immense numerical superiority would be the chief means of gaining victories, thus putting to a large extent strategy in the place of tactics.
16. That the loss in officers would be abnormally large.
17. That the removal of the wounded from the battle field would be immensely hampered, owing to the great range of modern weapons, and that this long range would result in mutual accusations of abuse of Red Cross, it being impossible for ambulances to be kept out of range while engaged in removing the wounded.

350 Pages; 100 Illustrations. Price, $2.00.
Sent on approval.

Doubleday & McClure Co.
34 UNION SQUARE EAST, NEW YORK.

CHILDREN OF THE MIST

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS.
15th impression. 8vo, 556 pages, $1.50.

"A work of amazing power which plainly indicates a master hand."—Boston Herald.

M. F. MANSFIELD & A. WESSELS.

A KIPLING NOTE BOOK.

A MOST COMPLETE AND ACCURATE COLLECTION OF KIPLING'S FUGITIVE PIECES, AS WELL AS OTHER KIPLINGIANA, WITH BIBLIOGRAPHY. THE TWELFTH NUMBER OF THIS INTERESTING PERIODICAL IS NOW OUT, COMPLETING THE SET. UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE WE CAN SUPPLY THE ENTIRE SET IN ORIGINAL WRAPPERS AT THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50. BINDING CASES, FOR SIX NUMBERS EACH, 25c.

1135 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

THE OLD ANN STREET BOOK-STORE
BARGAIN NO. 50.

"THE GULISTAN OF SAADI."

"Or Rose Garden." By Muslc Huddeen Sheik Saadi. Translated from the original by Francis Gladwin. Preface by Ralph Waldo Emerson. 12mo, cloth. Boston. 1884. Postpaid $1.00. VERY SCARCE.

ISAAC MENDOZA,
17 Ann Street, New York.

The Beacon Biographies. ROBERT E. LEE, BY William P. Trent.

Likely to commend itself to the sober judgment of North and South.—THE CHURCHMAN.

SMALL, MAYNARD & CO., Boston.

THACKERAY IN PUNCH.

Mr. Spielmann's Volume on His Hitherto Unidentified Contributions to It.*

Mr. Spielmann, who is well known as the writer of a history of Punch, has long been preparing to present a volume which is based on undoubted and exclusive information. He had intended writing an essay on the subject, to be published in serial form, an idea which was pleasing both to the proprietors of Punch and to Mrs. Richmond Ritchie as well, but finding the subject constantly growing as he made further investigations, which, with a consequent desire for absolute accuracy, made his work assume such large proportions, Mr. Spielmann claims it has resulted in a volume which, "if only for the bibliography, makes some claim on the lover of Thackeray and on the collector of his works. From the first it seemed desirable that such a book should be given to the public. The fact that the matter has been trifled with in another quarter renders necessary the course which I have taken."

American readers will have no difficulty in understanding the above allusion, remembering the controversy which arose last year over another attempt at identifying Thackeray's contributions to Punch as other than those republished in the collected works. Mr. Spielmann's bibliography, twenty pages in extent, contains between 475 and 500 entries, while Mrs. Ritchie, in her introduction to "Contributions to Punch" in the biographical edition, says that such contributions are estimated at 380, so that the present list contains about a hundred of which she knew nothing. Mr. Spielmann's bibliography is based largely upon the "day book" kept by the editor of Punch, covering the period 11th February, 1843, to 30th September, 1848. Thackeray's contributions, however, are spread over a somewhat larger period, from 18th June, 1842, to 23d September, 1854. The bibliography is very carefully arranged, the numbers, page and date figures referring to the pages of Punch itself. The items never before identified, which are fully described in the present book, are printed in italics, while items for which there is no official authority but which Mr. Spielmann is sure may be ascribed to Thackeray, are placed within square brackets. The separate items are not only arranged chronologically, but in addition to the year, the exact day and month are given, as well as the number of the volume.

Mrs. Ritchie says "The Organ Boy's Appeal" was the last article her father sent to Punch, although she adds he was still writing for it in 1854, his notebook for that year mentioning four papers sent to Punch. But the present bibliography gives the date of the appearance of "The Organ Boy's Appeal" as 1st October, 1853, claiming nine articles to have been published subsequently in the pages of Punch during the year of 1854, the last of which, "A Second Letter to an Eminent Personage," appeared on the 23d of September of that year.

We all remember Thackeray's own tribute to Punch: "There never were before published in this world so many volumes which contained so much cause for laughing, so little for blushing. It is so easy to be witty and wicked, so hard to be witty and wise!"

And as this new bibliography and the body of the book are occupied with "pieces not so much suppressed or forgotten as unrecognized as the work of Thackeray—pieces which are often quite as worthy of preservation as many of his lighter sketches and verses, literary considerations apart, they are, in the aggregate, of real value and interest, for they show upon what topics of public concern Thackeray was writing during the years here dealt with, and what he thought about them—that is to say, his views on things in general, and on the major and minor events that occurred in his day; opinions, in short, which help to reveal the man, and which are as necessary to the biographer for the full understanding of his character as the books that he wrote or the letters wherein his own self is sometimes set down, and, sometimes, maybe, concealed. This essay, then, lays claim to a certain personal interest, and to possess something of the charm, it is hoped, that belongs to a genuine literary discovery."

Mr. Spielmann adds: "My information is absolute, for the items are all entered against the author's name in a long-forgotten editorial day book, and for these items he was duly paid." The hundred and fifty new contributions dealt with range from a short paragraph to a long article of a page or more, and from a couplet to a long poem, and include much that the publishers of Thackeray's works would certainly have included in their "Contributions to Punch" had they known of them. "For among his comments on events, political and social, as well as among the simpler ebullitions of pure fun, there are many sketches, essays, and verses more interesting and important than many which have hitherto been republished."

The introductory chapter will be found most interesting, Mr. Spielmann very justly claiming that an author is often most himself—most honest and free from self-consciousness, especially in political, social, and personal matters, when his contributions to periodicals are either unsigned or published over an assumed name. In all of Thackeray's writings for Punch we are struck

With the honesty, earnestness, and common sense of the critic, even though we may occasionally fail to recognize the big view of the statesman. * * * It was, moreover, greatly on a question of statesmanship that he left Punch—* * * for he did not choose to identify himself with the savageness of the colleague * * * whose political writings he believed to be against the interests of the country, as well as against the dignity of the paper. * * * He preferred irony as a foil for the evil-doer to burning wrath and hot indignation. Perhaps the famous old lady who considered Thackeray "an uncomfortable writer" was the first who discovered him to be a cynic. * * * Perhaps she was right, but in that case a cynic after Thackeray's own heart. "Ah, my worthy friends," he once wrote in "Philip," "you little know what soft-hearted people these cynics are! If you could have come on Diogenes by surprise, I dare say you might have found him reading sentimental novels, and whimpering in his tub."

Neither the bibliography nor the body of Mr. Spielmann's book includes description of certain articles and verses which can be readily recognized by competent authorities as by Thackeray, but which in the absence of unquestionable documentary evidence it has been thought best to ignore.

Mr. Spielmann also gives an accurate tabulation of Thackeray's contributions to Punch, extending over a period of nine years, which shows a total of 336 columns published during that period, or an average of one and one-half columns per week. Individual members of the staff were regularly given certain space which they were expected to fill, Thackeray's own writings being theoretically expected to fill nearly two columns of space weekly. But in reality not one of the Punch men ever came up to his proper average, which was the less strange in Thackeray because his work in Fraser and in other directions prevented him from ever regarding Punch, as did the others, "as the preponderant channel for his literary and artistic energy." Mr. Spielmann thinks Thackeray might have achieved greater success had he devoted himself seriously to political caricature.

It is a form of art in which good drawing is not absolutely essential; indeed, at the present date, we have seen at least one political humorist, whose pencil is not highly trained, deservedly command wide popularity, by reason of his ingenuity, humor, and concentrated power of good-tempered ridicule. Thackeray, moreover, had the faculty of reproducing likeness; witness his caricatures of Louis Philippe, which frequently contained the pictorial essentials of the full-dress cartoon, with an added sting, that should cause few to complain, as some have done, of the want of vehemence in attack.

Mr. Spielmann also thinks that the additional ballads and verses, about twenty of which—many of them being of considerable importance, and, half at least, worthy of a place in the collected works—are included in the present volume, reveal no new side to Thackeray's genius for humorous verse, yet with the other articles he describes and includes, they "add to the completeness of the picture which we already have of the great writer and kindly thinker."

To come to the contributions themselves, they are, as a rule, far too long for quotation, and do not lend themselves readily to extract, partly perhaps for the reason of the unusual interdependence of picture and text, so that in most cases it is only possible to recommend our readers to seek the pages of the book itself.

But a little poem may be given. "Kitchen Melodies, Curry," which Mr. Spielmann fancies may have been addressed to Mrs. Ritchie. The poem is headed by an illustration of a fat cook struggling with a monster gridiron; the only thing of the kind Thackeray ever published, although the title suggests a series. It is thoroughly charming, and has, Mr. Spielmann claims, a Horatian flavor:

Three pounds of veal my darling girl prepares,
And chops it nicely into little squares;
Five onions next procures the little minx,
(The biggest are the best, her Samivel thinks.)
And Epping butter nearly half a pound,
And stews them in a pan until they're brown'd.
What's next my dexterous little girl will do?
She pops the meat into the savory stew,
With curry powder tablespoonsful three,
And milk a pint, (the richest that may be.)
And when the dish has stewed for half an hour,
A lemon's ready juice she'll o'er it pour:
Then, bless her, then she gives the luscious pot
A very gentle boil—and serves quite hot.
P. S. Beef, mutton, rabbit if you wish;
Lobster or prawns or any kind of fish,
Are fit to make a curry. 'Tis, when done,
A dish for Emperors to feed upon.

But best of all is a verse of six lines called out by the following: "Ledru-Rollin, defending his conduct in the Chamber of Representatives, said: 'Je monte sur le Calvaire, pour sauver la République!' Thackeray, disgusted at the sentiment, wrote the following 'Simile,' as the verse is entitled:"

We read, Ledru, that there were three
Who perished upon Calvary.
The One—but, stay, that name Divine
Thou wouldst not couple, sure, with thine;
And convict-knaves the other two—
Blasphemer, which of these are you?

Mr. Spielmann concludes his book in the following words:

The articles and verses reprinted in this volume and here brought to an end comprise the cream of the novelist's unacknowledged work in Punch; for to the making of the selection has been brought such discretion as a profound admirer is capable of—an admirer, moreover, keenly sensitive to the odium properly reserved for the tactless and injudicious enthusiast.

The book contains about 350 pages, consisting of preface, introduction, text, and pictures, followed by a good bibliography and well-made index. It contains throughout the most valuable explanatory notes. Mr. Spielmann's work has been very thoroughly done, the whole making up a volume which will be found essential to all Thackeray collectors.

*"THE HITHERTO UNIDENTIFIED CONTRIBUTIONS OF W. M. THACKERAY TO PUNCH. With a Complete and Authoritative Bibliography from 1843 to 1848. By M. H. Spielmann, author of "The History of Punch," &c. With numerous illustrations and Explanatory Notes. New York and London: Harper & Brothers. 1900.

Recent Successful BOOKS
FROM THE PRESS OF HARPER & BROTHERS
NEW YORK.

Thackeray's
HITHERTO UNIDENTIFIED CONTRIBUTIONS TO PUNCH.
By M. H. SPIELMANN.
"Whatever Mr. Spielmann does is sure to be well done, and his latest work is of immense value."—LONDON TELEGRAPH.
WITH REPRODUCTIONS OF CARTOONS AND MANY DRAWINGS. UNIFORM WITH BIOGRAPHICAL THACKERAY. CROWN 8VO, CLOTH, $1.75.

The Haworth Brontë
WITH BIOGRAPHICAL INTRODUCTIONS BY Mrs. Humphry Ward.
Two new volumes,
Villette Shirley
(Uniform with JANE EYRE.)
The remaining four volumes in this set, including Mrs. Gaskell's Life of Charlotte Bronte, with notes by Clement K. Shorter, will be published at regular monthly intervals.
WITH MANY PHOTOGRAVURE ILLUSTRATIONS. CROWN 8VO, CLOTH, $1.75 PER VOLUME.

Recollections
1832-1886
By the
Rt. Hon. Sir Algernon West, K. C. B.
(Secretary to Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone.)
"These Recollections are full of good things well worth preserving and well worth reading."—LONDON CHRONICLE.
PORTRAITS, CROWN 8VO, CLOTH, $3.00.

Red Pottage
By MARY CHOLMONDELEY.
6th Edition.
"As the story is pursued the writer's powers of characterisation become more and more firmly established, and we are compelled to recognise the strength of the work."—THE DIAL.
POST 8VO, CLOTH, $1.50.

Briton and Boer
Both Sides of the Question.
Nine Papers by Eminent Writers, including Rt. Hon. James Bryce, M. P., Andrew Carnegie, Max Nordau and Francis Charmes.
WITH MAP AND MANY ILLUSTRATIONS.
POST 8VO, CLOTH, $1.25.

Kit Kennedy
By S. R. CROCKETT.
10th Thousand.
"One of the most charming things he has written. A strong, tender, humorous and exciting story."—CHICAGO TRIBUNE.
ILLUSTRATED. POST 8VO, CLOTH, $1.50.

These books may be purchased of any bookseller, or they will be sent, postage free, by the publishers on receipt of price.

THE CITY OF ROME.

Destruction of Its Buildings and Statues Not Due to the Italian People—Lanciani's Interesting Statements.*

Modern investigations into the causes which led to the destruction of the splendid monuments of architecture and statuary which adorned the ancient city of Rome have completely overturned beliefs long entertained on that subject. Men now living brought away from their early teachings in school and college no deeper impression concerning ancient Rome than that the destruction of her municipal splendor was due to the Goths, Huns and Vandals—an impression so deep that the word Vandal has passed into our common speech as a term for ruthless destruction of beautiful objects. Perhaps it was Gregorovius who first brought into connected form trustworthy statements to the contrary; but the work of Gregorovius is a very voluminous one, and the translation into English is of quite recent date.

Signor Lanciani long since had become so excellent an authority on Roman antiquities that his present volume, treating specifically of this subject, is sure of wide attention. That scholarship, based on knowledge at first hand, which pre-eminently distinguishes him, gives to the work its peculiar value. After reading the book, it seems superfluous to say that he has made his case clear: he has proved it beyond any question. His facts are indisputable and he has arrayed them with such order and convincing force that the reader finds himself in a state of wonder as to how any other conclusions could have been held.

What is most striking in the book is the fact that the men who actually destroyed these ancient monumepts were the Italian people themselves. Moreover, it is clearly shown that the habit did not have its origin in times subsequent to the period of imperial splendor. From the years when Augustus found Rome of brick and made it a city of marble, down to the time when the Papal authority had become well established, it had been the custom to destroy old buildings and erect new ones in their places, use being made of the old material. By permission of the publishers, we are printing to-day an extended series of extracts from Lanciani's book, giving the reader some hints as to the extraordinary interest which the book must have for all students of Roman life and history.

(Copyright, 1900, by The Macmillan Company.)

I was sitting not long ago at the southern extremity of the Palatine Hill, where the remains of the palace of Septimius Severus tower a hundred and sixty feet above the level of the modern streets, and I was trying to fathom the abyss which lay open at my feet and to reconstruct in imagination the former aspect of the place. By measurements on the spot, compared with descriptions and drawings left by those who saw the Palatine in a better state of preservation, I have been able to ascertain that a palace 490 feet long, 300 wide, and 160 high has so completely disappeared that only a few pieces of crumbling wall are left here and there against the cliff to tell the tale. Who broke up and removed, bit by bit, that mountain of masonry? Who overthrew the giant? Was it age, the elements, the hand of barbarians, or some other irresistible force the action of which has escaped observation?

We may grant that natural agencies have contributed their share to the demolition of ancient buildings—fires, floods, earthquakes, and the slow but resistless processes of disintegration due to rain, frost, and variations of temperature; but such prodigious changes, such wholesale destruction, could have been accomplished only by the hand of man.

Writers on the decline and fall of the Roman Empire have proposed several explanations, all of which are plausible, all contain elements of truth. But at the outset we may discard the current view that the disappearance of Roman monuments was due to the barbarians—as if these, in their meteoric inroads, could have amused themselves by pulverizing the 250,000 feet of stone and marble seats in the Circus, for example, or the massive structure of the villa of the Gordiani! The purpose of the barbarians was to carry off such articles of value as could easily be removed, and Rome long remained rich enough to satisfy their greed. Later, when this mine had become exhausted and the houses of the living were stripped of all their valuables, they may have attacked the abodes of the dead, the humble catacombs of the faithful as well as the imperial mausoleums, but the stanch buildings of the republic and of the empire were not essentially damaged.

The barbarians can be left in peace, their part in the destruction of Rome being hardly worth considering when compared with the guilt of others. By "others" I mean the Romans themselves, of the Imperial, Byzantine, Mediaeval, and Renaissance periods.

***

When the Emperor Nero conceived the idea of renewing and rebuilding the capital of the empire the streets were crowded with shrines, altars, and small temples which religious superstition made inviolable; his plans of improvement were opposed by the priests and by private owners of property, and any attempt to carry them out was clearly destined to lead to endless lawsuits, appraisals, and disputes among the experts. So he seems to have solved the difficulty by having the city set on fire, in the year 64 A. D. Nero was at Antium when the conflagration began, on June 19, the anniversary of the burning of Rome by the Gauls in 390 B. C. The fire started at the east end of the Circus Maximus, at the place now called La Moletta; it spread in a northeasterly direction and swept over three out of the fourteen regions of the city, partially destroying seven others. We do not possess satisfactory information in regard to all the historic monuments that perished in the flames, but we know that among them were the Temple of the Moon, the foundation of which was ascribed to Servius Tullius; the Ara Maxima, dedicated to Hercules, tradition said by Evander, the Arcadian, and the Temples of Jupiter Stator, of Vesta, and of the Penates, together with the Regia. As these monuments encircled the Palatine Hill, we may assume that the imperial residence on its summit was also gutted, but evidence on this point is wanting. Countless masterpieces of Greek art and many ancient relics disappeared, the loss of which the older citizens never ceased to lament, even amid the splendor of the new city which rose from the ashes.

The charge that Nero had willfully caused the fire is neither accepted nor rejected by Tacitus, from whom we learn that, after it had once been arrested, it burst out again in the Praedia Aemiliana, the gardens of Nero's minion, Tigellinus. Dyer suggests that the Emperor merely improved the occasion to have the fire already started spread more widely and efface certain parts of the city which he wished to rebuild. But whether the Emperor was wholly or partially responsible for the conflagration the opportunity thus afforded for rebuilding was at once improved; new plans were immediately drawn in accordance with the best engineering and architectural practice of the time. By glancing at the narrow and tortuous streets and lanes in the marble plan of the time of Septimius Severus, now in the Capitoline Museum, one may see that Nero's projects can hardly have been fully carried out; they must have left untouched the lower and more congested quarters of the city.

***

The third and last of the more important factors in the transformation and destruction of Rome under the empire was the building of the great public baths. The thermae of Caracalla cover an area of 118,255 square meters, those of Diocletian 130,000 square meters, and the areas of both these great structures were occupied, before 212 and 305-6 A. D. respectively, by rich and populous quarters, with houses and insulae, temples, shrines, colonnades, and gardens. The buildings which stood on a higher level than that adopted for one of these bathing establishments were destroyed to the foundations; the materials of construction taken from them were saved and were made use of again in the new structure. But the buildings placed on a lower level were left standing to a height corresponding with that of the foundation of the thermae and simply buried. This practice explains the reason why we find in some places structures of two, three, and even four different periods lying in archaeological strata one above the other.

The palace of the Flavian Emperors on the Palatine rests on the remains of private houses of the end of the republic; these, made accessible in 1721, are wrongly termed Baths of Livia. The thermae of Titus and of Trajan are built on remains of the Golden House of Nero, and this last was extended over the remains of houses built before the fire of 64 A. D.; the three strata can be easily recognized at the north entrance to the cryptoporticus of the Golden House.

The Baths of Caracalla were composed of a central building surrounded by a garden, with an outer inclosure lined with halls and rooms for bathing. Nothing is found under the built portion, because the foundations of the massive walls were of necessity carried down to the level of the virgin soil, but in the open spaces, at a depth of only a few inches below the surface, are found remains of extensive houses and other buildings which Caracalla purchased and covered up.

The destruction of marble statuary may well be illustrated by the fate of the "pretiosissima deorum simulacra," "most precious images of the gods," placed by Augustus in the compital shrines at the crossings of the main thoroughfares of the city, in the years 10-7 B. C. The number of these shrines—about 200 in the time of Augustus—had been increased to 265 in 73 A. D. and to 324 at the beginning of the fourth century. They offered an almost complete chronological series of works of Greek plastic art to the appreciation of the citizens of Rome. What has become of all these "most precious images"? If we consider that only one plinth and four pedestals of that incomparable series have come down to us, we cannot doubt that the 324 "most precious images" of Greek workmanship belonging to the compital shrines shared the same fate as those from the temples—they were broken to pieces and the pieces thrown into the lime kilns or built into the walls of new buildings, as if they were the cheapest rubble.

Were I to relate my personal experience in the way of similar finds, the entire volume would hardly suffice for the narrative. In all sorts of places, both within and without the walls of the city, I have come across fragments of statuary used as rubble, in the older strata as well as in those of later periods.

These facts show that before the burial of ancient Rome, many of the statues had been injured by knocking off their most prominent and easily broken parts. The loss of head and arms may in some cases have resulted from the overthrowing of the statue, the body remaining where it fell, the head rolling off to one side. Most of the loose heads are rounded and smooth, as if street idlers had used them to play the popular game of "bocce." Some of them have a hook or ring on the crown; and must have been used as weights for large scales. The five or six hundred heads discovered in my time were all, except a dozen or two, without noses. The fact that heads and arms of statues used as building materials are rarely missing, shows that the breaking up of statuary became common at a comparatively early period of the Roman decadence, when the works of art ornamenting palaces and gardens had as yet suffered but little injury.

***

Two years later, in 410, Alaric and his hordes entered the city, on the 24th day of August, in the dead of night by the Porta Salaria, and set fire to the houses near the gate, among which was the imperial mansion in the gardens of Sallust.

In these days of terror the Aventine, with its 130 palaces, the most aristocratic quarter of the city, suffered more than all the other regions. I have witnessed excavations made in the Vigna Torlonia, among the remains of the Thermae Decianae and of the house of Trajan; in the Vigna Maciocchi, among the ruins of the palace of Annia Cornificia Faustina, younger sister of Marcus Aurelius and wife of Ummidius Quadratus; in the garden of S. Anselmo, where the palace of the Pactumeii was discovered in 1892, and in the garden of S. Sabina, once occupied by the houses of Cosmus, Minister of Finance under Marcus Aurelius, and of Marcella and Principia, the friends of St. Jerome. In watching these excavations, I was struck by the fact that these beautiful palaces must have perished toward the beginning of the fifth century of our era, and all from the same cause. The signs of destruction are everywhere the same: traces of flames, which blackened the red ground of the frescoes and caused the roofs to fall on the mosaic or marble pavements of the ground floor; coins scattered among the ruins, belonging, with rare exceptions, to the fourth century; statues that had been restored over and over again; marbles stolen from pagan buildings, mostly from sepulchral monuments, and utilized for hurried restorations, and Christian symbols on lamps and domestic utensils. These indications fix the period and point to the same historical event—the capture and pillage of Rome by the Goths in August, 410. The Aventine paid dearly for the partiality shown for it by the noble and the wealthy. The treasures accumulated in its palaces roused the cupidity of the invaders, and led them to excesses of plunder and destruction such as were spared to more humble districts of the city.

It is but just to observe that the barbarians damaged the aqueducts only so far as was necessary to stop the flow of the water; we have no reason to suppose that they threw down great arches and pilasters simply for the pleasure of destruction—that would have been mere lost labor. These wonderful creations of Roman hydraulic skill, these triumphal arcades crossing the Campagna in every direction and distributing everywhere fertility and health, were destroyed, as were so many other monuments, by the Romans themselves in times much nearer to our own than is ordinarily supposed.

We have reason to believe that in 1585, when the construction of the Acquedotto Felice was decreed by Sixtus V., the series of arcades of the Marcia and of the Claudia, both seven miles long, were practically intact. Matteo da Castello, first, and, after his resignation, Domenico Fontana, laid hands on the noble structures, burning their travertine blocks into lime, splitting and hammering those of tufa and peperino for use in the new acqueduct. Whatever remains were left standing became the prey of local land owners, especially of the Trustees of the Hospital of S. Giovanni, in whose archives I have found documents concerning the sale at public auction of the stone arch over which the Claudia spanned the Via Latina, near the farmhouse of Roma Vecchia; and again, the sale of four piers of peperino to Bartolomeo Vitali, of two to the brothers Guidotti, and so on. Three or four hundred feet of the channel of the same acqueduct were destroyed by the owner of the farm of the Capannelle in 1887; the Mediterranean Railway Company, which, about the same time, built the new line to Segni, is responsible for other damages.

***

In the exploiting of the Roman monuments for valuable materials in mediaeval and early modern times, two classes of workmen in particular wrought the most serious damage. These were the Marmorarii, or marble cutters, and the Calcararii, or lime burners.

The Roman marble cutters, architects, sculptors, and mosaic makers, whose work was in a sense a precursor of the Renaissance, whose artistic creations still command our admiration, are generally called the "School of Cosmatis."

For our purposes it is sufficient to observe that for the space of three centuries the guild lived and prospered and accomplished its work at the expense of the ruins of ancient Rome. The marble workers made excavations and destroyed old monuments with two ends in view—to find models and to secure materials for their work. They were especially fond of epitaphs—whether pagan or Christian it mattered not—because the thin slabs of marble on which the epitaphs were inscribed could easily be adapted to their purpose, being almost ready for use in borders and panels of mosaic, ambones, and decorative patterns. This is the reason why the floors of our mediaevel churches are so rich in epigraphic documents; about two hundred inscriptions were used in making the pavement of SS. Quattro Coronati after the destruction of the church by the Normans, and nearly a thousand were similarly turned to use in the floor of St. Paul's Without the Walls.

Pirro Ligorio, the architect, discussing the best way of obtaining a particularly fine plaster, suggests the use of powdered Parian marble, "obtained from the statues which are constantly being destroyed." Flaminio Vacca, after describing a certain marble boat with figures on it, found in the Baths of Caracalla, remarks that "as it once floated on water, so now it has been made to steer its way through fire." He makes a similar observation with respect to a statue found by Orazio Muti, opposite the Church of S. Vitale, "which had been sent to the kiln to have the moisture taken off its back." Thousands of inscriptions have perished in the same way. Fra Giocondo da Verona, adducing testimony from his own experience, says that some Roman citizens boasted of having had the foundations of their houses and palaces constructed with ancient statues.

The headquarters of these destroyers of ancient Rome was at the "Botteghe Oscure"—that is, in the wing of the Circus Flaminius facing the street of that name—the arcades were then in a good state of preservation, and high above ground; but, as a matter of fact, there was no great ruin of marble or stone that did not have its own kiln. So important was the exercise of this industry of lime burning at the Circus Flaminius that the whole district received the name of Lime Pit, (calcarario, calcararia.)

Other famous kilns were those of S. Adriano, for the burning of the marbles of the imperial Forums; of the Agosta, fed with the spoils of the mausoleum of Augustus, and of La Pigna, supplied with materials from the Baths of Agrippa and the Temple of Isis. Then there were temporary establishments opened near this or that edifice, which were abandoned as soon as the supply was exhausted. We must class among these the kilns by the Baths of Diocletian, mentioned by Flaminio Vacca; those of the villa of Livia at Prima Porta, mentioned by Pirro Ligorio; those of the necropolis between the Via Latina and the Via Appia, seen by Marini; those of the Regia, described by Panvinio, and those of the Basilica Julia, and of the Temple of Venus and Rome, discovered by Nibby and by myself.

Outside the city the burning of lime was practiced for many years among the ruins of Ostia and Porto. The oldest record bearing upon the matter, that is known to me, is a document of Celestine III., dated March 30, 1191, where mention is made of a "locus qui vocatur calcaria extra portam non longe ab Hostiensi civitate." The exercise of this trade continued without interruption and with the tacit, if not open, approval of the Papal authorities, down to the pontificate of Pius VII.

***

Nothing would better illustrate the strange turns of fortune than the varied uses to which the marbles from ancient structures have been put in modern times; and I may, perhaps, fittingly close this brief sketch by relating a few out of the almost numberless instances that have come to my notice.

Up to about the middle of the sixteenth century there were considerable remains of the Baths of Titus standing east of the Coliseum, between S. Pietro in Vincoli and the Baths of Trajan. Here were found sections of "the most beautiful cornices," which, according to the prevailing custom, were sawed up into slabs, and were sold to the Jesuits to be used in their church of Gesu. The mention of this church brings to my memory another incident of the same sort. From the beautiful volume lately published by Plon in Paris, we learn that in or about 1541 the head of the Roman house of the Jesuits, Father Condatius, uncarthed in the piazza then called degli Altieri, now del Gesu, some great blocks of marble, which he sold for 100 ducats. Another document which I have discovered in the State archives tells us that the marbles were bought by a lime burner and consumed in a kiln close to the church.

When we think of the wealth of marbles displayed in the public and private buildings of Rome, and at the same time consider that every cubic foot has been obtained from the monuments of the ancient city, we gain a new insight into the magnitude of the building operations of the ancient Romans. We must remember, too, that the greater part of the ancient marbles used by modern architects and marble workers were found either shapeless or in a form unsuited to the use for which they were needed, so that at least from a third to a half of the gross cubic content has been lost.

In 1845 Faustino Corsi made a list of the marble columns dispersed over the fourteen wards of the city; the total number recorded by him is 7,012. Since the publication of this catalogue fifty-four years have elapsed, and we may calculate that the number has been increased by at least one-tenth, so that to-day the sum total is probably not far from 8,000. This is truly a surprising number, but it is far from incredible, if we recall that the city once possessed 3,000 statues of bronze alone.

---

*THE DESTRUCTION OF ANCIENT ROME. A Sketch of the History of the Monuments. By Rodolfo Lanciani. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $2.

La Gioconda Explains.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Fearing I may not have made myself clear in my communication of last week, at least, judging by the editorial heading, may I add a few words to a subject very near my heart?

I do not favor "the busy haunts of men" for pursuing a literary calling, nor personally for any calling, as far as a permanent residence is concerned. In indorsing "Cynic's" statement I simply acknowledged that there was infinite satisfaction in withdrawing from crowds to the seclusion of one's own study. Your editorial seems to have settled the question admirably, and would that we harkened more eagerly to the manifold lessons Dame Nature is ever ready to teach her children!

A city life is full of unhealthy excitement, social shams, and conventionalities which cannot be wholly cast aside for obvious reasons, as best set forth in a Roman allusion. Many a one secretly thirsts for more moments in which to read, nay think, than can be accorded the town-bred man or woman whose constant interruptions oft prevent more serious mental exercise besides that of skimming magazines and newspapers or perusing the very latest novel. Let us try to believe that the really strong-minded, earnest souls reject this time-wasting process, reading few books, if slowly, so they be the best in literature.

Oh, that our lives might be simpler, truer, and yet the demands of the age, the march of progress—what you will—effectually prevent such an ideal condition!

With every advantage that a city can offer, a glimpse of green is worth more to the burdened spirit than all the brick dust of a city's glory. For me, there's a song in every leaflet's rustle, a welcome note in the buzzing of the tiniest denizen of the air. A country life need never make us lonely if we draw upon the resources at our command, nor will those we regard as friends, in the highest sense, look upon us as unsocial beings. A single word will bring us together. Let us, as far as practicable, emulate the King of Nature—lovers of whom Emerson said: "His soul was made for the noblest society. * * * Wherever there is knowledge, wherever there is virtue, wherever there is beauty, he will find a home."

LA GIOCONDA.

New York, Jan. 14, 1900.

1900

BRAHMS.

Recollections by One Who Knew Him Intimately.*

Among recent books imported by the Scribners is a volume devoted to recollections of Johannes Brahms, by Prof. Dietrich, who formed one of a group of young musicians who gathered around Schumann at Dusseldorf, and was, for many years following Brahms's introduction to the public, on the most intimate terms with him. Many interesting and characteristic letters, covering the years 1853-1874, are given, Dr. J. V. Widmann, a well-known Swiss writer, giving us many details of the later years of the great musician's life, including letters covering the years 1886-1897.

The translator, Dora E. Hecht, states that nothing in the nature of a regular biography having appeared in the two years or more which have elapsed since Brahms's death in April, 1897, and realizing the great favor with which these recollections have been received among the German-speaking admirers of one of the greatest composers of the age, she has been led to hope that, in spite of the disadvantages of translation, the book may prove of interest to the English admirers of Brahms.

These reminiscences will be found most interesting, showing us in a charming fashion the personal side, more particularly, of a man who made hosts of friends wherever he went. Naturally having to do with the life of a musician, Prof. Dietrich, the writer of the first set of reminiscences, being himself a well-known composer and leader, the book touches more or less upon musical matters, and read in connection with "The Music of the Future," in Huneker's "Mezzotints in Modern Music," and "Johannes Brahms," in Hadow's "Studies in Modern Music, Second Series," those interested in musical matters will gain a completely rounded portrait of Brahms, the man and the musician. Hadow says of Brahms:

"He stands beside Bach and Beethoven. * * * All three are poets of the same order—noble, dignified, majestic. * * * All three are consummate artists, in whose supreme mastery of utterance the highest message has found fit and adequate expression. * * * If we call Brahms obscure, we are imputing our own weakness as the fault of a man who is too great for us. * * * When music attains to fuller knowledge and nobler practice, it will grant him a due place among its foremost leaders, and to us who honor him as a monarch will succeed a generation which reveals him as a hero."

And of Brahms, we find Mr. Huneker writing: "The death of Johannes Brahms in 1897 removed from the sparsely settled land of music the last of the immortals; the one whom Bülow justly ranked with Bach and Beethoven; the one upon whom Schumann lavished both praise and prophecy. * * * A pure musician, a maker of absolute music, a man of poetic ideals. * * * Brahms was elected to receive upon his shoulders the mantle dropped by Beethoven."

Prof. Dietrich, the writer of the first set of reminiscences, went in 1851 to live at Dusseldorf, in order to be near the Schumanns, by whom he was treated with the greatest kindness, becoming a daily visitor at their house.

Warm sympathy with the aspirations of young musicians was a leading feature in Schumann's character, and this explains the enthusiasm with which in 1853 he welcomed young Brahms to Dusseldorf. Joachim had recommended him most warmly, and had also drawn Schumann's attention to the works of the young genius.

Schumann introduced Brahms to Dusseldorf society, presenting him to Dietrich in the following words:

One has come of whom we shall all hear great things; his name is Johannes Brahms.

The young musician was soon at home in Dusseldorf circles, his modest, winning manner gaining all hearts. Only twenty at this time, his playing aroused great enthusiasm.

Brahms was asked to play, and executed Bach's Toccata in F major and his own scherzo in E flat minor with wonderful power and mastery, bending his head down over the keys, and, as was his wont, in his excitement, humming the melody aloud as he played. * * * Every one marveled at his remarkable talent, and, above all, we young musicians were unanimous in our enthusiastic admiration of the supremely artistic qualities of his playing, at times so powerful, or, when occasion demanded, so exquisitely tender, but always full of character; his wonderful compositions likewise took us by storm.

The musical circle which gathered about the Schumanns was an extremely happy one, but all too soon broken up by the latter's illness, which, after a long period of alternating hope and despair, was followed by his death in 1856. During all this sad time Brahms was able to be of much service and comfort to Clara Schumann. Indeed, Brahms is said to have regarded the latter as the noblest woman he had ever known, and was accustomed to say: "When you have written something, ask yourself whether such a woman as Mme. Schumann could read it with pleasure. If you doubt that, then cross out what you have written."

Dietrich had been appointed conductor of the subscription concerts at Bonn, and in 1859 married Clara Sohn, the daughter of a Düsseldorf artist, their first year at Bonn being made memorable by the visits of Brahms, Joachim, and Clara Schumann. The society at Bonn was particularly good at that time, Prof. Otto Jahn, the biographer of Mozart, becoming particularly intimate with Dietrich, and never missing one of the musical evenings, which the whole circle so thoroughly enjoyed.

In 1861 Dietrich was appointed conductor of the Grand Ducal Orchestra at Oldenburg, and in the Fall of that year he spent some time with Brahms at Hamburg.

I was surprised at the extent of his library, which from early youth he had collected with untiring zeal. Some of these books he had bought from the second-hand dealers who frequent the bridges at Hamburg.

Speaking of the visit Brahms paid them in Oldenburg, Dietrich writes:

He was the pleasantest visitor imaginable, always amiable and unassuming, always in good spirits; a child himself when with children, to whom he was devoted. He was happiest in simple surroundings, and considered our modest lot most enviable.

Going to Oldenburg at another time, to play Beethoven's concerto in G major at a concert there, the night before:

Brahms delighted the orchestra by playing to them his variations on a theme by Händel. These variations are wonderfully beautiful and full of true genius; they close with a fugue that is perfectly fascinating, and that is saying much of a fugue. His rendering of this beautiful work raised the enthusiasm of the members of the orchestra to such a pitch that at the concert itself the performance of the G major concerto was simply perfect, much to Brahms's satisfaction and the delight of the audience.

In 1867 Brahms had paid the Dietrichs a long visit.

A time Brahms had spent very happily and merrily with us in our home. It was in the beginning of the Summer; we lived mostly in our garden, which we had ourselves planted and tended. All this had a great charm for him, and the hours spent over coffee in the summerhouse, with the children playing around him, was so much to his taste, that every chord of his amiable nature was awakened.

In 1868 Brahms's "Requiem" was performed in the cathedral at Bremen on Good Friday, Dietrich having brought this work to the notice of the conductor, Reinthaler, who at once recognized its great importance.

The effect of the splendid performances of this wonderful work was simply overwhelming, and it at once became clear to the audience that the "German Requiem" ranked among the loftiest music ever given to the world.

After the performance there was a gathering of musicians and music lovers at the famous old Rathskeller, including Brahms and his father, Mme. Schumann and her daughter, the Reinthalers, Joachim and his wife, and many others, in all about 100, all of whom were most enthusiastic over music in general and Brahms in particular, one admirer of the latter having come purposely from England for this occasion. But if we are to mention the second portion of this book at all we must hasten, only adding a portion of Prof. Dietrich's closing paragraph referring to:

Those delightful memories which for us and a large circle of friends are centred in the name of Brahms. May his true self have been in some measure revealed to the great crowd of his admirers by means of this little book, so that they may not fail to discern in the consummate artist the noble and faithful man.

Dr. Widmann, whose recollections form the second portion of the volume, belonged to a very musical family, his parents, both Viennese, although resident in Switzerland, cultivating exclusively the old classical masters—Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, and Schubert. His mother possessed the grand piano made by Graf for Beethoven, with exceptionally powerful strings, on account of his deafness, which stood in the latter's room until his death. This instrument is now in the Beethoven Museum at Bonn. As a girl Mrs. Widmann's playing had once been praised by Beethoven; Schubert once speaking of Mr. Widmann's voice and musical ability, a fact they never forgot.

Meeting Brahms at Winterthur in 1865, where, in consequence of his marriage, Dr. Widmann had gone to reside, the latter writes that both in his personal appearance and powerful playing, Brahms, then in his thirty-third year, impressed me as a strong personality:

The short, square figure, the almost sandy-colored hair, the protruding under lip, which lent a cynical expression to the beardless and youthful face, * * * the total impression was one of consummate strength, both physical and moral. The broad chest, the herculean shoulders, the powerful head which he threw back energetically when playing, the fine, thoughtful brow, shining as with an inward light, and the two Teutonic eyes, with the wonderful fiery glance, softened only by the fair eyelashes—all betrayed an artistic personality replete with the spirit of true genius. In his countenance there lay a promise of victory, a radiant cheerfulness of a mind reveling in the exercise of its power.

Dr. Widmann thinks that the main reason for Brahms not writing opera lay in the fact that he never succeeded in finding a libretto entirely to his taste; setting forth at some length the latter's ideas as to opera construction, which were diametrically opposed to those of Wagner.

This portion of the book is full of interesting accounts of various Italian journeys taken with Brahms, which both he and Dr. Widmann so thoroughly enjoyed, but the most interesting portion of the latter's reminiscences will be found to be the last chapter—"The Last Years"—a sort of report of conversations in which Brahms gave a résumé of his whole life, both his early struggles and his later successes; saying emphatically that he could not wish his life to have been less beset with difficulties and privations. One would like to dwell at much greater length upon many portions of the entire book, giving as it does such attractive pictures of Brahms the man, to add to our estimate of Brahms the composer, but space will not allow. His music will without doubt be better appreciated from year to year, but even those who do not count themselves among Brahms lovers will enjoy reading these sketches of the life story of a very lovable man, who was, as Dr. Widmann writing after Brahms's death says:

Not only the great man; he was my friend—a faithful friend—to whom I owed an infinite debt. * * * Brahms's aim in his creative work was the attainment of harmonious beauty, combined with perfect form and purity of feeling, transfiguring everything commonplace into a lofty peace and calm.

The book is an attractively printed, well-bound volume, which will be found extremely interesting by all lovers of music or of memoirs. The frontispiece is the well-known photograph of the Brahms of recent years.

J. H. Gardiner, instructor in English at Harvard, has prepared for Charles Scribner's Sons "The Five Forms of Prose Literature," a volume which cannot fail to appeal to literary workers. As a text book it is designed to be used with Prof. Wendell's "English Composition." The suggestive scheme of the book accounts for exposition, argument, and criticism under "The Literature of Thought" and for narration and description under "The Literature of Feeling."

*RECOLLECTIONS OF JOHANNES BRAHMS. Albert Dietrich and J. V. Widmann. Translated by Dora E. Hecht. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, Importers. 1899. $2.

"WE HAVE NOT READ A BETTER BOOK FOR MANY A DAY."
—Current Literature.

RICHARD CARVEL.

By WINSTON CHURCHILL. Cloth, $1.50.

TWENTY-FOURTH EDITION. 310th THOUSAND.

"Richard Carvel . . . is among the most brilliant and captivating works of its class now before the public, and it is likely to remain a leader for some time to come. The fascination of this romance is singularly enduring."—Post, Hartford.

"Its vogue is likely to keep on growing and the volume itself to become one of the American classics."—Times, Los Angeles.

"The book on everybody's tongue this season has been that absorbing historical romance, Richard Carvel."

Issued on the first of June, when only summer novels are supposed to command attention, this "truly American novel" received ecognition never equaled in promp s and completeness. Its standard quality of workmanship throughout, the vigor and vividness of its descriptions, besides its thoroughly entertaining plot, are only a part of its double value. Mr. Churchill has made a thorough study of the time which he depicts, and the result is a wonderfully consistent social and historical study, yet, as The Review of Reviews points out, none the less "a tremendously good story" for meeting the tests of a standard novel.

The selling qualities of a novel do not prove everything, yet it is interesting to notice that its sale has exceeded 300,000, with no prospect of cessation.

"Richard Carvel is a finer, more conscientious, and more promising novel of adventure than most of those we have been reading and praising and promptly forgetting during the past five years."—Munsey's Magazine.

"Strong and enduring."—The American.

"One of the most successful books of the year. . . . Few books can lay claim to so much charm of locality and personality as does Richard Carvel."

"The Best American Novel That We Have Read for Years."
—Mail and Express.

The Macmillan Company, 66 5th Av., New York.

LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

HAVE NOW READY

SAVROLA.

A Tale of the Revolution in Laurania.

By WINSTON SPENCER CHURCHILL.

Author of "The River War; An Account of the Reconquest of the Soudan," "The Story of the Malakand Field Force, 1897." Crown 8vo, $1.25.

THE HISTORY OF LORD LYTTON'S INDIAN ADMINISTRATION, 1876-1880.

Compiled from Letters and Official Papers. By Lady BETTY BALFOUR. With Portrait and Map. Medium 8vo, $5.00.

"The first adequate endeavor to present the crowning labors of Lord Lytton's official life in a proper light, and its value to the future historian is unquestionable."—Standard.

THE HISTORY OF THE CASTLE, TOWN, AND PORT OF DOVER.

By the Rev. S. P. H. STATHAM, late Semitic Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge; Rector of St. Mary-in-the-Castle, etc. With numerous Illustrations and Plans. Crown 8vo, pp. xx.-462, $3.50.

THE REDEMPTION OF EGYPT.

By W. BASIL WORSFOLD, Author of "The Principles of Criticism," "South Africa," etc. With 4 illustrations in color, 20 full-page and 70 text illustrations from Sketches and Photographs by the Author. Fcp. 4to, about 300 pages, $7.50.

The subjects which are most fully treated in the descriptive chapters are the remains of Mediæval Cairo, the Mosques of Cairo, as illustrative of Saracenic Art, the Pyramids, and the Temples in the neighborhood of Luxor and at Philæ. These subjects are fully illustrated by half-tone blocks of the writer's sketches.

BUILDERS OF GREATER BRITAIN. (New Volume.)

RAJAH BROOKE.

The Englishman as Ruler of an Eastern State. By Sir SPENSER ST. JOHN, G.C.M.G., author of "Hayti; or, The Black Republic," etc., etc. With Portrait and 2 Maps. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO., Publishers, 91-93 Fifth Av., New York.

MAPS ATLASES GLOBES GUIDES

of all sizes and descriptions, showing the latest changes in political boundaries and discoveries in all parts of the world. In addition to our own extensive manufacture we carry a full assortment of the leading makers of Europe. Catalogue free. Correspondence solicited.
RAND, McNALLY & CO.,
142 Fifth Ave., New York.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS SUPplied, no matter on what subject. Write me. I can get you any book ever published. The most expert book finders extant. Please state wants, and when in England call and inspect my 50,000 rare books. BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOP, Birmingham, England.

"A style which can fairly be described as fascinating . . . One of the most important books on music that have ever been published."—W. J. Henderson, Musical Critic of The N. Y. Times.

LAVIGNAC'S MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

504 pp. 8vo, $3.00.

Henry Holt & Co., New York.

CAROLINE H. DALL'S BOOKS.

WHAT WE REALLY KNOW ABOUT SHAKESPEARE. 2d edition. 16mo, $1.25.
BARBARA FRITCHIE: A Study. Illustrated. 12mo $1.00.

LITTLE, BROWN & COMPANY, BOSTON

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS of famous persons BOUGHT AND SOLD
WALTER R. BENJAMIN,
1125 Broadway, New York.
SEND FOR PRICE LISTS.

TO AUTHORS.

WE want literary and musical manuscripts; large royalties paid to writers. 1899 has produced three great novels. The third is "Chelsea Come Home to Roost." $1.25.
WRIGHT & COMPANY, Publishers,
1369-71 Broadway, N. Y. City.

LONDON LITERARY LETTER

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW

By William L. Alden.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Academy recently asked most of the well-known authors resident in England to name the two books of the year which they had found most acceptable. Nearly all of them responded with the amiability characteristic of the guild. The person who calls herself "Ouida" was the one exception. She replied with an insulting letter, which The Academy printed in fac simile, thereby taking a rather cruel revenge. One would naturally suppose that novelists would read novels, but the result of The Academy's investigation seems to show that novelists read anything else. Mr. Hardy, Mr. Hewlett, Mr. Wells, Mrs. Craigie, and Mme. Sarah Grand each name their two favorite books, but in no case does any one of them name a novel. Mr. Zangwill names one novel, and so does Mr. Lang and Mr. Crockett, while Mr. Conrad finds himself unable to decide which have been his two favorite books. The only novels which are mentioned twice are Mr. Philpott's "Human Boy" and Anatole France's "L'anneau de l'Amethyste."

It is evident that many novelists do not care to read any novels except their own. The explanation doubtless is that they become so tired of fiction while in the throes of composition that when they have leisure to read they prefer solid scientific or theological books. Messrs. Pett Ridge, Conan Doyle, and Anstey are almost the only exceptions to this rule. Their favorite books are all novels. Nobody mentions Kipling's "Stalky" stories, and only one author—Mr. Anstey—seems to have read that remarkably clever novel "Red Pottage." Ian Maclaren is the only author who names "David Harum" as his favorite, and, in short, the favorite novels of most of the authors are evidently not the favorite novels of the public.

The Academy ought to extend its field of investigation next year. It would be interesting to know what are the favorite books of politicians, artists, and clergymen. Of course, it would be a loss of time to invite housemaids and cooks to name their favorite books. We know instinctively the names of the novels which are read below stairs, and perhaps it would hardly be fair to the two popular authors thereof to call the attention of the public to their clientage.

***

By the bye, Dr. Conan Doyle has volunteered to go to South Africa as a soldier. If he goes he will undoubtedly do himself credit as a cavalryman, for he is an excellent rider, but would he not be more useful if he went as a surgeon—a post for which he is abundantly qualified? While operating on patients, or attending them during their convalescence, he might amuse them by reading his unpublished manuscripts. I should not like to see any general emigration of authors to the Cape. It is doubtful if they could shoot as well as the average Tommy, and in case of accident their loss would not easily be made good. There are two or three minor poets who might be named who could do excellent service to their country by joining the Boers, and devastating Boer camps with their poetry; but this would hardly be a fair sort of warfare, and the Boers might make it a pretext for calling for the intervention of Europe.

***

Mr. Zangwill's play, "Children of the Ghetto," has not been a success, and consequently has been withdrawn from the stage. Like the plays of many other novelists, it was better suited to the closet than the stage. At least that is the general verdict of both press and playgoers. I have not seen it myself, for a London theatre in this season of fogs does not attract me, but I have little doubt that the verdict of the public was right.

On the other hand, Mr. Jerome's play, "Miss Hobbs," has been a very decided success. It is a serious play, and probably it is not conspicuous for literary merit, but it is interesting, which Mr. Zangwill's play was not. Mr. Jerome has had the necessary personal experience of the stage which enables a playwright to know just how a play should be constructed. Mr. Jerome's success will be very welcome to him, for it is reported that he has lost a good deal of money during the last three years in certain journalistic ventures. However, he always has a gold mine at his command, for he has only to write a new humorous book to be sure of a new fortune.

***

Of course books that do not treat of South Africa have very little prospect of selling just at present. Nobody thinks of anything except the war, and no novelist with any knowledge of the state of the market would think of bringing out a book at this season. Of course books are published, and the casual observer who glances at the publishers' advertisements would fancy that the town was being inundated with new novels. There are, however, chiefly the novels of new authors, who are so anxious to see themselves in print that they persuade themselves that their books will be exceptions to the general rule, and will sell in spite of the war.

The minor poets are hard at work filling the newspapers with war poems. Most of them are very bad. Mr. Richard Le Gallienne, who is by no means incapable of writing true poetry, though latterly he has preferred to write prose of a character which cannot add to his reputation, has written a long war poem, which would not be altogether bad were it not that most of its really good lines are due to the inspiration of Swinburne. The Poet Laureate does his best to do his poetical duty, but the results are not brilliantly successful. Kipling's "Absent-Minded Beggar" dwarfs everything else in the line of patriotic poetry, though the other day at a hotel table in Egypt I heard three men agreeing that Kipling never wrote a line of real poetry. I have not the slightest doubt that those three critics considered Karnak greatly inferior in point of architecture to the Brighton Pavilion.

***

Among the best of the Christmas books is undoubtedly "The Story of the Treasure Seekers," by the lady who signs herself "E. Nesbit." Hitherto she has been known chiefly as a poet, and she has written a good deal of verse that has true poetical merit. Some of the stories in the present volume have appeared in The Pall Mall Magazine during the past year, and very possibly I have spoken of them. They are characterized by a delicious vein of delicate humor. Now and then the incidents of some of the stories verge a little too closely on the incredible, but as a whole the book is one which ought to have a wide popularity, and already it is perhaps the most successful of all the Christmas books.

***

Punch carries out its threatened change of tactics with the beginning of the new year. It is enlarged to twenty-four pages, and is to contain a story every week. The opening story is by Conan Doyle, and he is to be followed by other popular writers. Why Punch should make this innovation is not very clear. It has virtually no competitor, and therefore there is no obvious reason why it should endeavor to make itself more attractive than it is. However, the public will not murmur at getting more for its money than it formerly got. It is the fashion to ridicule Punch as antiquated and dull, but to my mind it was never better than it has been during the rule of its present editor. A joke is not necessarily dull because it does not appeal to everybody. Many of the jokes in Puck which an American finds very entertaining would be quite unintelligible here; and in like many of Punch's purely English jokes can have no meaning to an American. It does not follow that either Puck or Punch is lacking in humor.

***

Mr. Spielmann's "Hitherto Unidentified Contributions of W. M. Thackeray to Punch" is as clumsy as its title. I do not know whether all the contributions exhumed by Mr. Spielmann were written by Thackeray, but I am very sure that many of them are rubbish, and they ought never to have been paraded before the public with Thackeray's august name appended to them. Thackeray did a very large amount of work for Punch, some of which was extremely good and some of which was extremely bad. Mr. Spielmann's books consist chiefly of the latter material, and it is a great pity that it was not suffered to remain in the oblivion which is its rightful due.

***

"A Miranda of the Balcony," by Mr. A. E. W. Mason, is the best of the Christmas novels, in spite of the length of the author's name. I am quite serious in saying this. No author ought to handicap himself with a name so long that no one can possibly remember it. Mr. Mason is entirely aware of this fact, for his earlier books were published with the author's name on the title page in the greatly abbreviated shape of "Mr. M." But this reminded wicked people too much of a certain London tailor who does business as "Mr. A.," and latterly Mr. Mason has recklessly used the whole of his initials.

Mr. Mason first became known by his "Maurice Buckler," which was a capital story, and met with the popularity which it deserved. His new book is by far the best thing he has done, and it is unfortunate that it is published at this particularly bad season. But it will make its way, as all good work invariably does, barring accidents.

***

In 1899 the two novels that were unquestionably the novels of the year were Mr. Richard Whiteing's "No. 5 John Street" and Miss Cholmondeley's "Red Pottage." Both of these authors had written other novels, but they were practically unknown as novelists to the general public. Their early books had been recognized as promising, but they distinctly were not successful. This year both Mr. Whiteing and Miss Cholmondeley have written books that have proved conspicuous successes, and have thoroughly deserved them. If either of them had written as good work years ago, it would certainly have had the same success. One has only to compare Mr. Whiteing's "Island" with his latest book to see why one of them was a failure and the other a success. Both were clever, but the new book appeals to the public, while the earlier one appealed chiefly to the author.

***

Mr. Morrison's "To London Town" has also been a successful book, and the same may be said of Morley Roberts's "Colossus." Probably the war has helped the latter book, the hero of which is, as every one knows, Mr. Cecil Rhodes. But both books have run into several editions and still continue to sell. In poetry, Mr. Phillips's "Paolo and Francesca" has been incontestibly the one brilliant success, for Mr. Swinburne's poem was appreciated only by a very small circle. Indeed, Mr. Swinburne's position as the greatest living English poet is due to what he has written in the past, and decidedly not to his later work. He still retains his marvelous mastery of words, but there is little behind them.

***

The Daily Chronicle, which was ardently on the side of the Boers, has gone completely over to the patriotic side. This was a necessity, unless the proprietors were ready to see the paper go into bankruptcy. Accordingly the editor was invited to resign, and the paper fell into line with the rest of the morning press. It now indulges in occasional illustrations, and publishes a new map of the seat of war every few days. In comparison with the illustrations and maps which appear in the leading American papers, not much can be said in behalf of The Chronicle's efforts, except that it means well.

***

Mr. Crockett has begun so many new serials that it is difficult to remember them all. He evidently writes one each simultaneously with the left and right hand while dictating another into a phonograph. Certainly he is working his popularity for all that it is worth, as his American admirers might say. I sincerely wish I could acquire a taste for Crockett, for in that case I should never be without a new novel waiting to be read.

W. L. ALDEN.

Clement Scott Discourses in a Book on the Victorian Theatre.*

Charles Lamb describes that sad feeling which comes about when looking over an old list of actors on a playbill. In one of his letters he writes: "Your communication to me of the death of Munden made me weep. Now, Sir, I am not of the melting mood. But in these serious times the loss of half the world's fun is no trivial deprivation." By some strange mental process—a hallucination, as it were—the actor never dies. Carried away by his art, he is to us as the personage he represents. He is not a being like ourselves, but some one else. When we learn, then, that an actor is dead, there arises some wonder. Slowly we come to our senses, and own reluctantly that there is no escape from the grave. Men of an older age may then have a somewhat depressing feeling in reading Mr. Clement Scott's "The Drama of Yesterday and To-day." Mr. Scott begins with the time when Mme. Vestris acted. Then there were produced in London Bulwer Lytton's "Money," in 1840, and in 1841 Dion Boucicault's "London Assurance." "These famous plays were born" when Mr. Scott was born. The author of the volume, as a critic and writer of plays, is perfectly familiar with his subject. With an abundance of material at hand, his illustrations are innumerable. Old playbills and letters, having to do with his many topics, are all presented. Anecdotes there are, so many as to be countless. Mr. Scott writes:

> If remembering with deep gratitude the drama of yesterday, and loving the drama of my own days, I pause here, I do so, believe me, with no feelings of anxiety or lassitude, with no sense of depression or despair. I hope I have proved in these pages that I am no mere "laudator temporis acti," as most old playgoers live to be. * * * We are living to-day in a period of transition, in a time when customs are changed, when manners are not so formal, when faith is not so pronounced or alluring, and when the love of what is beautiful and ennobling and true is not so absolute in the hearts of men and women. The stage, with its searching mirror, cannot afford to neglect the study of these things. And the stage has done it with uncompromising severity at the close of this remarkable century. The Ibsen reaction, with its unloveliness, its want of faith; its hopeless, despairing creed; its worship of the ugly in art; its grim and repulsive reality—regret it as we will—is a solemn and resistless fact, * * * At the outset some of us, conscientiously and in the interests of the art we loved and followed with such persistency, tried to laugh it out of court. But the time came when the laugh was on the other side. I own it; I admit it.

Mr. Scott tells of the time, some half century ago, when gas was not used on the stage. "Candles were used to light the Haymarket Theatre," as late as the year 1843, the terms of the lease prohibiting the introduction of gas. Here is a picture of the London theatre of a past generation:

> I should like to give you some idea of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, when I first saw it in 1840. Very little luxury; no lounging stalls; the pit right up to the orchestra; the faithful pittites sitting on hard benches, and constantly disturbed between the acts by women with huge and clumsy baskets filled with apples, oranges, nuts, ginger beer, bottled stout, and bills of the play, which they offered to the public in shrill, discordant voices—the very descendants of Nell Gwynne herself. The programmes—or bills—were no fashionably illuminated or artistically decorated things in those times; but long sheets of thinnish paper, vilely printed with bad ink which never seemed to dry, and that soiled the fingers and was ruination to gloves. There was a green baize curtain; and in the event of a tragedy such as, for instance, "The Iron Chest," a green baize carpet, for it was considered unorthodox and a theatrical crime to play a tragedy without a carpet of green baize. So much for the rough, uncouth disadvantages. But, on the other side of the picture, such a rapt attention on the part of the audience as I have never discovered since. No chattering, no conversation, no blasé or indifferent tones, no breaks in interest between the actor and the audience—caused by that fatal diversion of late dining and late arriving "stalls"—and the ever hungry pit; but an electric communication from the stage to the auditorium.
>
> "Give me the days when I played to the pit," said Charles Mathews again and again to me. "The stalls are profitable, but the pit was pulsating!"
>
> It was here among these apples, oranges, ginger-beer bottles, and inky bills of the play that I first saw "The Lady of Lyons."

The origin of a popular play of the author's was due to a singular accident. Mr. Scott thus describes it:

> I had been suffering from a bad rheumatic fever. For many days I was delirious; and how I dreaded closing my eyes in sleep, to suffer from those terrible dreams! A more pleasant vision came early one morning. I dreamed that Buckstone sat by my bedside and said, "Cheer up, my boy, you are getting better. And I'll tell you what you shall do for me. You shall write me a comedy, in which I can play the devoted cousin of a blind girl. She shall treat me like a faithful dog, name me 'Fido,' and wear a whistle for me round her neck. Before I come on she shall call 'Fido! Fido!' and whistle; I shall say, 'Bow-wow' behind the scenes, and everybody will laugh." The memory of the dream remained strong on me as I awoke. As soon as I could get to work I wrote my drama, starting from this little basis. Buckstone played the faithful doggie; Miss Reynolds called "Fido," and whistled for him; Buckstone barked "Bow-wow" behind the scenes; the audience laughed, (as it was sure to do,) and all turned out as prophesied to me in my dream of fever. The piece was a great success, and for a long time it remained a favorite stock piece in America. It is still played frequently in the country as "The Blind Girl's Fortune."

Charles Kean was rather pompous, but Mrs. Kean far exceeded her husband in the assumption of the grandiose:

> Charles Kean was playing "Hamlet" in the provinces on one occasion, and was of course very punctilious about the detail of the stage, which was his mania. A rising young actor, who was cast for Horatio, discovered, to his horror, that his tights had not arrived, as expected. He knew that Charles Kean's eagle eye would be upon him, as all the scenes of Horatio are with Hamlet. In his distress he was obliged to have recourse to a pair of old patched and darned scarlet worsted tights—a sorry contrast to the "trappings and suits of woe" of his friend the Prince of Denmark. Frightened out of his life, he repaired, in fear and trembling, to see Charles Kean and explain matters. He knocked nervously at the door, and, to his horror, Mrs. Charles Kean answered it. With tragic air, finger to lip, and walking on tiptoe, fearful of disturbing her nervous and sensitive partner, she asked, "What do you want, Sir?" "To see Mr. Kean."
>
> Whereupon Mrs. Kean made a stately and mysterious exit. She returned, still imploring silence by dramatic gesture. "What might your business be?" she solemnly asked. Horatio explained as well as he could the dilemma of the scarlet tights. "Could Mr. Charles Kean possibly forgive him?"
>
> Again a tragic exit on the part of Mrs. Kean. Once more she reappeared with a serene and seraphic countenance. "Mr. Kean will pardon you. But," (pointing ecstatically to heaven,) "will you be forgiven there?"

Playgoers of the past and those of to-day will find much which will interest and amuse them in Mr. Clement Scott's work. There are no stars, foreign or native, which do not appear in the author's firmament. The illustrations are innumerable.

*THE DRAMA OF YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY. By Clement Scott. Two volumes. New York: The Macmillan Company.

From an Eleven-Year-Old One.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

One day "An Old-Fashioned Girl" in "A Lilac Sunbonnet" saw "Dear Daughter Dorothy" standing by "The Big Front Door," with "A Son of the Revolution" and "Dick, the Door Boy," by her side. In the distance she heard "The Choir Invisible," singing to "Prisoners of Hope," while "Seraph" played "The First Violin." She saw "Janice Meredith," with "The Queen's Necklace" on her neck, by "Burnham Beaches," talking to "David Harum" about how "Richard Carvel" made "A Dash for the Throne." She heard that "Captain January" was one of the "Two Admirals" who commanded "The Ships That Pass in the Night," with "Caleb West" as "The Pilot." "Little Men" and "Little Women" sat on "The Red Staircase," and "The Little Lame Prince" played with "Beautiful Joe," while "Betty a Butterfly" read about "Hugh Wynne's" fight with "The Red Rover."

MARION LANE,
(Eleven years old.)

Honesdale, Penn., Jan. 18, 1900.

"Cannot Help."

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Our English friends take a mild pleasure in pointing out the loose ways we permit to ourselves in the writing of our common language, and it is not long since that I remarked in your London namesake a complaint that we do not know the difference between "can help" and "can't help." In James Bryce's admirable book, "Impressions of South Africa," Page 478, I note this phrase: "She spent no more money on it than she could help." Is it proper to say that Mr. Bryce uses no worse English than, in the prevailing state of British culture, he cannot help?

CIVIS AMERICANUS.

New York, Jan. 18, 1900.

JAN

1900

PARIS.

History and Letters as Written in Stones.*

France, through something akin to fury in the blood of her people, which loved to destroy monuments, remembering only the wrongs they had suffered, has been shorn of many of her most valuable literary and historical landmarks. The Revolution nearly completed the work which the religious wars and civil strife had begun. The present Paris we best know; the changes begun by the first Napoleon were continued by Louis Philippe and elaborated by the Second Empire. The Commune and the republic continued the work of demolition and reconstruction, but a halt has been called to the work of ruthless destruction by the Commission de Vieux Paris, and existing landmarks cannot now be removed unless good cause is shown. Voltaire has said that he would rather have "details about Racine and Despréaux, Bossuet and Descartes, than about the battle of Steinkerk. There is nothing left but the names of the men who led battalions and squadrons. There is no return to the human race for one hundred engagements, but the great men I have spoken of prepared pure and lasting pleasures for mortals still unborn." It was with this inspiration that the authors of the present volumes transformed themselves into pilgrims to the spots in Paris sacred in history and legend, in art and literature. They sought an unworn sentiment and found unalloyed pleasure in the scenes which have inspired and have been inspired by famous men and women. The fruit of their labors has been collected in the admirable study entitled "The Stones of Paris in History and Letters." This work is not intended to serve as a guide to modern Paris, but for those who would know more of her concealed attractions, "her records, and traditions in stone." The roofs and walls that have sheltered soldiers, statesmen, preachers, teachers, workers in art and letters, and illustrious men and women of all sorts and conditions have been diligently sought out and been made to take on the personalities of their former illustrious tenants.

To the chapter portraying "Three Time-worn Staircases" we can, in this brief notice, do little more than refer as a storehouse of delightful historical reminiscences. There can be found charming bits of old Paris, descriptions of the walls and temples of Lutetia, and glimpses of the scenes made famous by three centuries of noted men and women. The three time-worn staircases are (1) the spiral staircase leading to the top of the tower of Dagobert, the entrance to which is at 18 Rue Chanoinesse; (2) the tower at 19 Rue des Gobelins, where stood the commonly called Hôtel de la Rène Blanche, and (3) the tower of Jean-sans-Peur at 20 Rue Etienne Marcel. Many volumes of history could be crowded into the annals of these three precious fragments of old-time Paris.

The tower of Jean-sans-Peur brings home to us a wealth of memories of the ducal house of Burgundy. Known in earlier records as the Hôtel d'Artois, the Hôtel de Bourgogne was built by the younger brother of Saint Louis, Robert, Count of Artois, who fell on the disastrous field of Massouah, in 1250, when the pious King and his devoted Captains were made captives by the Sultan of Egypt and released with heavy fines, so ending the Sixth Crusade. For centuries it was the most magnificent residence in Paris. When "Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, Luxembourg, and Brabant, Earl of Holland and Zealand, Lord of Friesland, Count of Flanders, Artois, and Haimault, Lord of Salins and Macklyn," came in collision with the crafty Louis XI. the great house of Burgundy began to fall in power. The palace finally, through the marriage of the daughter of Charles the Bold, became the property of Emperor Charles V., and was by the latter given up to the French Crown. François I. sold a portion of it by auction, and Louis XIII. gave what was left of the donjon to the monks of St. Catherine du Val-des-Ecoliers. In this donjon the monks established "storehouses" for the poor. These were under the control of a certain Père Vincent, who has been canonized since as St. Vincent de Paul. Another portion of the palace became the home of the performers of passion plays and mysteries. The tower of Jean-sans-Peur, which is the only remaining vestige of the Hôtel de Bourgogne, has survived centuries of devastation, and with its grand unmutilated stairway is an ever-present reminder of the magnificence of the Burgundian Dukes.

If we have found a charm in the history which clusters about the three time-worn staircases, how shall we express the pleasure aroused by the romance and recollections of the portion of this fascinating work which describes the "Scholars' Quarter of the Middle Ages"? To be introduced to the habitations of Heloise and Abelard, Dante and Boccaccio, Rabelais and Villon, Ronsard and Rollin, Tasso and Pascal, Calvin and Erasmus, Bernardin de Saint Pierre and Descartes, and to read of their life in the Paris of their time, arouses all the keen interest of the scholar and the intense enthusiasm of the traveler. Following this array of literary celebrities, we read of others no less brilliant, among whom none shines more brightly than Molière, who was born at 92 Rue Saint Honoré. This house and 31 Rue du Point-Neuf, his subsequent home, are shrines to which admirers of genius may well journey. This son of the King's upholsterer cared nothing for his father's trade, but was intent on the stage. Early in 1642 he toured Languedoc, and in 1644 we find the first record of his assumed name "Molière," the true name of Jean-Baptiste Poquelin being but little known since. After many vicissitudes of fortune, he secured the patronage of the King, who permitted his company to bear the title of "His Majesty's Comedians," and from that time until his death, in 1673, Molière lived in comparative comfort. He was author, actor, and manager, and it was while personating his "Malade Imaginaire" that he was stricken down with a genuine illness and died a few days later.

Pierre Corneille and Molière were contemporaries, and in 1671 in collaboration wrote the "tragedy-ballet Psyche," a labor which cemented a friendship already begun between the two men. Corneille by this time had begun to bend with age and to break in spirit. Colbert's economy had left his pension in arrears, and on the accession of Louvois it was suppressed entirely. Age and poverty had taken up their abode with him, and his hand had by this time lost its fire and force, and the poet's last months were wretched enough. The faithful Boileau offered to surrender his own promptly paid pension in favor of his old friend, "the King of French Tragedy," a transfer not allowed by the authorities, and the King sent a sum of money to Corneille, which reached him only two days before his death. Besides these two greater stars, there lived in the same quarter Racine, Thomas Corneille, Boileau, and La Fontaine. Of their life in this section we here find a captivating description.

Voltaire's birthplace was in the Street of Jerusalem, and he was christened at Saint André-des-Arts on Nov. 22, 1694, the day after his birth, François-Marie Arouet. He led an uneventful life until his twenty-third birthday, which found him an inmate of the Bastile as a punishment for satirizing the Regent in verse. When set free he assumed the name Voltaire, and as such became, as John Morley has said, "the very eye of eighteenth-century illumination." From his home in the Hôtel Lambert, Rue Saint Louis-en-l'Ile, he wrote to his august correspondent, Frederick the Great, "this is a house made for a King who would be a philosopher."

There and in his other Parisian haunts he met among many of his notable contemporaries Diderot, d'Alembert, Marmontel, Piron, Grimm, Rousseau, and Le Sage. Diderot, by many ranked as a greater thinker than either Voltaire or Rousseau, was indeed one of the most striking figures of his century. The latter part of Voltaire's life as portrayed by the stories of Paris is dramatic in the extreme. Returning to Paris in February, 1778, in a triumphal procession without parallel, welcomed everywhere by exultant worshippers, he was visited by all Paris that was allowed to get near him. D'Alembert and Benjamin Franklin were included among the visitors to the great author. One month later he died, and his remains were hurried to Scellières, in Champagne, for burial. There his body was allowed to rest until 1791, when it was brought back in honor to the capital. A great concourse stood in silent reverence and viewed the cortège headed by Beaumarchais, all the famous men of France carrying the pall as journeying in the procession to the Panthéon. To Pierre-Augustin Caron, to which name its owner added the soaring name of "de Beaumarchais," French literature is indebted for many dramatic gems. His life and deeds are perpetuated in numerous monumental records now extant in Paris.

Of the Paris of the Revolution and the homes of Danton, Robespierre, Desmoulins, Mirabeau, Brisson, Marot, and Barras, many substantial remains are now discernible. And what a wealth of memory crowds the domiciles of these men. In visiting them we call to mind the names of some of the famous personages of those bloody days, many of whom were sent to the guillotine in the dark days of the Reign of Terror. David the artist, Alfieri the poet, Levoisier, absorbed in chemical discovery; Talma the tragedian; Rouget de l'Isle, author of the "Marseillaise"; Mme. Roland, Condorcet, the brilliant scholar; André de Chénier, the poet martyr; Laplace, the scientist. Here, too, we find the roofs which sheltered Napoleon, when in his days of poverty he idly tramped the streets of Paris with Junot, the lovable, generous comrade from Toulon. Of the grand mansions which he occupied when he came to power, all are swept away except Maimaison, the Elysée, Luxembourg, and Fontainebleau.

Coming to the early years of the present century, we find the remains of the homes of celebrated men and women in history and letters, or the places where they labored and died. In Rue Saint Dominique in 1820 lived de Tocqueville, whose "Democracy in America" created a widespread sensation and made him, like Châteaubriand, a lion in the salon of Mme. Récamier. His various dwelling places have been located and are here described, as are those of Guizot, Lamartine, Saint Beuve, Cousin, Mérimée, Michelet, Taine, Renan, de Musset, Châteaubriand, George Sand, Béranger, and Mme. Récamier.

The interesting pages of this scholarly work, which describe the Paris of Balzac, Dumas, and Hugo, are of sufficient value to give warrant for the existence of the volumes if all else were omitted. Of the struggles of Balzac at 2 Rue de Tournon and 1 Rue Cassini, of his hardships, his ceaseless toil, and his disappointments, we read with keen sympathy. Of his numerous other abodes in Paris, of the unceasing pursuit of clamorous creditors, of his marriage to Mme. Eve de Hanska, the Polish widow, and of his death, after years of painful struggles, at 14 Rue Allée Fortunée, a street since widened and renamed Rue de Balzac, we learn with mingled admiration and sadness. He was buried in Père-la-Chaise, Hugo walking on one side of the coffin in the funeral procession and Dumas on the other.

When we come to the Paris of Alexandre Dumas, we walk amid comparatively modern scenes. During his migratory career he occupied numerous apartments in Paris. While at 25 Rue de l'Université in 1824 there came into legal existence Alexandre Dumas, fils, whose mother was Marie Catherine Lebay, a dressmaker. The father formally owned the son by an acte de reconnaissance in 1831. Like Balzac, Dumas produced great quantities of novels yearly. "Monte Cristo," "Three Musketeers," and forty other works having all been prepared in a little over a year. Of his prodigality in expenditures, of his experiences with Garibaldi, and of his end at Pays in 1870, we find graphic accounts. Being asked how a monument might be erected in memory of a dead penwork, who in life had been misunderstood and maligned, Dumas replied, "Use the stones thrown at him while he lived and you'll have a tremendous monument." Dumas was misunderstood and maligned, yet it would be difficult to name a French novelist whose books are more widely read. Of the last of that great triumvirate of French novelists, Hugo, Paris bears many splendid mementos in lowly and stately dwellings. There he came with his mother as a child of six, and there he toiled and triumphed. Of his happy marriage in early life, of his success as dramatist and poet, of his exile during the Second Empire, and of his final years of prosperity as a novelist, we read with intense interest.

Comparatively few works of recent years give evidence of such great research as the "Stories of Paris in History and Letters." Doubtless some errors have crept in, but for these there will be indulgent correction. Where so much of history must be examined, old archives overhauled, and statements verified, it is difficult to pick out the truth. So many of the old stories have been overturned, that it is indeed a wonder that the authors have been able to rescue from the fragments such a wealth of information. It has evidently been a labor of love, and so faithfully and ably performed, that in the finished edifice which we now have before us there is a storehouse of knowledge and reminiscence that before existed merely as fragments without a home and beyond our reach. To the student of historical or literary landmarks, these volumes will be the most welcome of all the season's literature.

*THE STONES OF PARIS IN HISTORY AND LETTERS. By Benjamin Ellis Martin and Charlotte M. Martin. 12mo. Two volumes. 360 pp., 392 pp. With illustrations and index. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. Price, $4.

Putnam's New Books

Bismarck

and the Foundation of the German Empire. By J. W. HEADLAM, M. A., Fellow of Kings College. Heroes of the Nations, No. 25. Fully illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

"The work of this author is conspicuously superior to that of other recent writers on the subject. His conclusions are thoroughly sound and the book is a vast improvement on all the volumes thus far printed in England."—The Athenæum.

Henry Knox

(1750-1806.) A Soldier of the Revolution. Major-General in the Continental Army, Washington's Chief of Artillery, etc. By NOAH BROOKS. American Men of Energy, No. 2. Fully illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

The author, in his well-known forceful manner, shows that Gen. Knox was a more important figure among the Revolutionary officers than many others who have been more conspicuous in histories.

Theodore Beza

(1519-1605.) The Counsellor of the French Reformation. By HENRY MARTYN BAIRD of New York University. Heroes of the Reformation Series, No. 4. Fully illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

It is rather remarkable that this book should be the first biography of Beza in the English language, because Beza played a very prominent part in the Reformation movement; but the fact is he has been overshadowed by Calvin, just as Melanethon was overshadowed by Luther. It was, however, richly worth while to present in detail the life of such a worthy man and fine scholar.

Heredity and Human Progress

By W. DUNCAN MCKIM, A. M., Ph. D. 12mo, net, $1.50.

An expedient for relieving society of the heavy burden imposed upon it by weaklings and criminals.

The Regeneration of the United States

A Forecast of Its Industrial Evolution. By WILLIAM MORTON GRINNELL. 12mo, $1.00.

The opening chapters of Mr. Grinnell's volume are devoted to a consideration of the early history of the United States, with its lofty political ideals reduced in practice, as contrasted with the political and business degeneration which characterized the last half of the nineteenth century.

The Stage as a Career

A Sketch of the Actor's Life, Its Requirements, Hardships, and Rewards. By P. G. HUBERT, Jr. 12mo, $1.00.

Mr. Hubert's experience as a dramatic critic has brought him into close relations with the stage, and he speaks upon the subject with personal knowledge. His volume gives a sketch of the actor's life, its requirements, hardships, and rewards. He describes the qualifications and training essential to success, and gives expert opinions from such famous actors as Sir Henry Irving, Lawrence Barrett, Dion Boucicault, Joseph Jefferson, Helen Modjeska, Mary Anderson, and Maggie Mitchell.

The Midsummer of Italian Art

Containing an Examination of the Works of Michel Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael Santi, and Correggio. By FRANK PRESTON STEARNS, author of "Tintoretto." Second edition, revised. Illustrated. 8vo, $2.25.

"One of the most genuinely delightful and readable art books. The work is a model of sensible art writing."—New York Times.

Travels in Spain

Edited by ARCHER M. HUNTINGTON. With illustrations in photogravure. 16mo, net, $1.50.

The ingenious and diverting letters of the Lady ——'s travels into Spain, describing the devotions, nunneries, humors, customs, laws, militia, trade, diet, and recreations of the people.

Folk Songs from the Spanish

By HELEN HUNTINGTON. 16mo, vellum covers, gilt top, net $1.25.

Exploratio Evangelica

A Brief Examination of the Basis and Origin of Christian Belief. By PERCY GARDNER, author of "New Chapters in Greek History," etc. 8vo, net, $4.50.

An attempt to examine the phenomena of the rise of Christianity from a point of view which is purely historical and lay, although not irreligious.

St. Paul's Epistle

An Historical Commentary on St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians. By W. M. RAMSAY, D. C. L., Professor in Aberdeen University, author of "Church in the Roman Empire," etc. 8vo, net, $3.50.

The author shows in this book how much light the Epistle to the Galatians throws on contemporary history in the widest sense—the history of religion, society, thought, manners, education—in the Eastern Provinces of the Empire.

 Send for brief list of forthcoming books.*

G. P. Putnam's Sons, 24 Bedford Street, Strand, London. 27 and 29 West 23d St., New York.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower."

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I have waited long and vainly for an utterance abler than mine can be from SATURDAY REVIEW readers on the subject of one of last year's books. If no one else will speak I must, and this is the speech:

With the magnificent workmanship and wide study of "Richard Carvel," with the research and information of "Janice Meredith," and the wholesome fun of "David Harum," there stood forth another novel as a like phenomenon in the annals of literary success, and that was "When Knighthood Was in Flower." What does its popularity mean? Whence does it proceed? One can congratulate one's countrymen on their good taste in selecting "Richard Carvel" for a favorite. But could the same readers have enjoyed "When Knighthood Was in Flower"? Or was it a different class, and yet almost as large a class, as that which made Mr. Churchill's fame?

Edwin Caskoden's book attempts to tell a tale in the first person—the person of a sixteenth century man and the language the vernacular of to-day. Such vulgarisms as "When I left" and "He went off" abound. The Princess Mary and her lady in waiting are invariably spoken of as "the girls," and in address usually as "Mary" or "Jane," the latter sometimes as "Lady Jane" or "Lady Bolinbroke," or once as "Miss Jane." The sister of Henry VIII. "puts on her bonnet" (when she is not toying with the ribbons of her hat) and runs in for a friendly visit to her lover in his rooms, unnoted, perfectly free. The royal palaces are described (or rather the descriptions are shamefully slighted, for there is not the least attempt at atmosphere) as if they were suburban villas in which her Royal Highness might entertain two young men in her private parlor, but such an artifice as Wolsey's taking the King out of the front door and bringing him in by the back door must inevitably surprise the lady who sought to evade them. The very vague details are palpable "cribs" from trite historic records. The ignorance gullelessly betrayed would be piteous had it not succeeded far better than many painstaking students' work. Notes and voluminous letters fly between the characters, as if writing were commonly practiced at the beginning of the sixteenth century. "Well-furnished libraries" have owners from whom the hero and the storyteller freely borrow books. No one could suppose that the art of printing had been discovered not seventy-five years before.

History has given us the plot of the novel, and all the world knows how fine it is. But "Edwin Caskoden" has not seized one of its chances, unless we accept the scene on shipboard where Mary's sex is discovered. The most tremendous happening when the fleeing pair are overtaken is chronicled in some such prase as this: "In the morning a knock came at the door. Soldiers entered and arrested Brandon, who was carried to the Tower." The conventional view is taken of well-known personages, as the off-hand remark that Henry had not half the wit of his girl-sister. Whatever that King may have been, he was not a fool. State papers plead against "Edwin Caskoden" there.

And this is the book whose English a reviewer has told us is Shakespearean, whose contents have been devoured and lauded by thousands. What does it mean? one asks, while one reflects upon the work that Stanley Weyman and Conan Doyle or Robert Chambers or Winston Churchill might have given us based upon the loves of Mary Tudor and Charles Brandon. And instead we have "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and it sells.

A SEEKER AFTER KNOWLEDGE.
Catskill, N. Y., Jan. 5, 1900.

The New York Times.
Saturday Review of Books and Art
SUPPLEMENT TO
THE NEW YORK TIMES.
SIXTEEN PAGES.
NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JAN. 20, 1900.

JAN

KIPLING AND AN OLD ASSAILANT.

Nearly thirty years have passed since Mr. Robert Buchanan gave the world, first in the pages of The Contemporary Review and later in book form, his "Fleshly School of Poetry." In magazine form the article was signed Thomas Maitland, but later, the next year, when the book appeared, Mr. Buchanan's own name was found on its title page. Rossetti and his friends were afterward accused by the writer of the paper of trying to prove his criticism was the "malicious and cowardly work of a rival poet, afraid to strike in broad day or under his real name, and adopting a pseudonym to conceal his real identity. * * * I have only one word to use concerning attacks upon myself. They are the invention of cowards, too spoilt with flattery to bear criticism and too querulous and humorsome to perceive the real issues of the case."

We all remember how the controversy waxed hotter and hotter and what were the arguments brought to bear upon the question from both sides. The value of Mr. Buchanan's criticism is sufficiently well shown in the following extract. Perhaps the arguments advanced by the other side were more courteously expressed:

> Mr. Rossetti's poetry, not because it is by any means the best or worst verse of its kind, but because, being avowedly "mature" and having had the benefit of many years' revision, it is perhaps more truly representative of its class than the grosser verse of Mr. Swinburne or the more careless or fluent verse of Mr. Morris—the main charge I bring against poetry of this kind is its sickliness and effeminacy. * * * The charge of indecency need not be pressed at all, as it is settled by the fact of artistic and poetic incompetence. * * * We perceive that the silliness and the insincerity come, not by nature, but at second hand, Mr. Rossetti and Mr. Swinburne being the merest echoes—strikingly original in this that they merely echo what is vile, while other imitators reproduce what is admirable.

How this controversy finally ended, and Mr. Buchanan's seeming repentance when Rossetti died, we all perfectly remember. While Mr. Buchanan may be held excusable for the early attack above referred to, the passage of nearly thirty years should have rendered impossible a second paper of like nature, and yet "The Voice of 'The Hooligan,'" which appeared in a recent Contemporary Review, is full of the broadest personalities and utterly lacking in the critical spirit from beginning to end.

Has it never occurred to Mr. Buchanan that his own position, being that of a minor poet and essayist—albeit the writer of some charming verse and equally delightful prose—might render himself liable to a charge of envy, especially when he attacks a man of world-wide reputation? We find him writing of Mr. Kipling in the following words, which it must be admitted are anything but well weighed or temperate:

> As for our popular literature, it has been in many of its manifestations long past praying for; it has run to seed in fiction of the baser sort, seldom or never, with all its cleverness, touching the quick of human conscience; but its most extraordinary feature at this moment is the exaltation to a position of almost unexampled popularity of a writer who, in his single person, adumbrates, I think, all that is most deplorable, all that is most retrograde and savage, in the restless and uninstructed Hooliganism of the time.

Mr. Buchanan is perhaps equally complimentary to the public, claiming that one of the principal factors in Kipling's success is "the utter apathy of general readers, too idle and uninstructed to study works of any length or demanding any contribution of serious thought on the reader's part." Mr. Buchanan next proceeds to examine Kipling's poetry in much the same spirit that, thirty years ago, called forth his first bitter attack:

> How, then, are we to account for the extraordinary popularity of works so contemptible in spirit and so barbarous in execution? * * * Amused, therefore, by the free-and-easy rattles, the jog-trot tunes which had hitherto been heard only in the music halls and read only in the sporting newspapers, * * * the spirit abroad to-day is the spirit of ephemeral journalism, and whatever accords with that spirit—its vulgarity, its flippancy, and its radical unintelligence—is certain to attain tremendous vogue. Anything that demands a moment's thought or a moment's severe attention, anything that is not thoroughly noisy, blatant, cocksure, and self-assertive, is caviare to that man on the street on whom cheap journalism depends, and who, it should be said, en passant, is often a member of smart society.

And so the paper goes on, the whole being a tissue of personal abuse, directed both against Mr. Kipling and the undiscriminating public, who so evidently prefer the latter to Mr. Buchanan. Shall we allow it is, as Mr. Buchanan alleges, because Kipling, although in no true sense of the word a poet, "is as near" an approach to a poet as can be tolerated by the ephemeral and hasty judgment of the day? His very incapacity of serious thought or deep feeling is in his favor. He represents, with more or less accuracy, what the mob is thinking. * * * Of Mr. Kipling it may be said, so far at least as his verses are concerned, that he has scarcely on any single occasion uttered anything that does not suggest moral baseness or hover dangerously near it.

We might suggest that the above quoted words savor strongly of "envy, hatred, and all uncharitableness," to say nothing of the fact that so exaggerated a statement completely fails to carry weight in any critical discussion as to Mr. Kipling's place in our literature. Mr. Buchanan's opinions on most literary matters would be entitled to more consideration if worded more moderately. We are not willing to allow that in these days of wide educational advantages, with schools, colleges, universities, libraries, books, and good periodicals far more abundant and easily accessible than ever before, when the general level of education and refinement is far higher than in any other period of the world's history, all the result such progress has to show is inability to read anything that demands serious thought or feeling.

Mr. Kipling's work scarcely needs defense; even the charge that his work is all-suggestive of moral baseness is best disproved by his books themselves, which are open to us all, so that that charge may be passed over in silence. But just one point we would like to controvert—Kipling's incapacity for serious thought or deep feeling. That he has made not only India, but the British soldier, well known to us is an unquestionable fact, the latter not only on his lighter side, but his courage and devotion to duty, at least when emergencies arise, Tommy Atkins in camp being another story. We might also claim that it is really the deep feeling Kipling possesses that has enabled him to make us understand how thoroughly "Judy O'Grady and the Colonel's lady are sisters under the skin."

The appearance of "The Absent-Minded Beggar" in these days of the South African war will come with fresh force to prove, not only Kipling's earnestness, but his deep feeling and keen patriotism as seen in the story of this four-verse poem, which was sold to a London newspaper—The Daily Mail—for a large sum, that was immediately turned over as a nucleus for a relief fund. The poem was first printed in the pages of the paper and then reissued as a three-page broadside, in fac simile of Kipling's autograph, with a striking illustration on the middle sheet by Caton Woodville of "A Gentleman in Kharki Ordered South," the broadside being sold for a shilling per copy, the proceeds going to such fund for the benefit of the wives and children of the "Reservists," as the volunteer force is called.

The force and effectiveness of these four verses show more and more strikingly with each fresh reading. The style of the poem is not academic—far from it—but it is earnest and so written that the words, the message of the poem—written, one would say, at white heat, from the heart to the heart—make a direct appeal to you, to you personally, and not collectively, and also make you realize perfectly that the army is one huge brotherhood in these days of a common trouble and menace to all England:

> Cook's son, Duke's son, son of a belted Earl,
> Son of a Lambeth publican, it's all the same to-day.

The entire poem is admirably strong and virile, and all the more effectively perhaps for its very slang. Even the opening lines have their message:

> When you've shouted "Rule Britannia,"
> When you've sung "God Save the Queen,"
> When you've finished silling Krüger with your mouth, > a little method of warfare we all indulge in. Kipling adds;
> Will you kindly drop a shilling in my little tambourine,
> For a gentleman in kharki ordered south;
> He's an absent-minded beggar and his weaknesses are great—
> But we and Paul must take him as we find him—
> He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—
> And he's left a lot of little things behind him.
> * * * * * * * * *
> Here are girls he married secret, asking no permission to,
> For he knew he wouldn't get it if he did.
> There's gas and coal and vittals, and the house rent falling due,
> And it's more than rather likely there's a kid.
> * * * * * * * * *
> But it ain't the time for sermons with the Winter coming on—
> We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him.
> * * * * * * * * *
> Let us manage so as later we can look him in the face—
> And tell him what he'd very much prefer—
> That while he saved the empire, his employer saved his place,
> And his mates—(that's you and me)—looked out for Her.
> He's an absent-minded beggar, and he may forget it all,
> But we do not want his kiddies to remind him
> That we sent them to the workhouse, while their daddy hammered Paul.
> So we'll keep the homes our Tommy's left behind him.

Had we more space we might name many other poems by Mr. Kipling to show how unjust and completely prejudiced Mr. Buchanan's charge of lack of serious thought or deep feeling really is, notably perhaps the dedication to "Departmental Ditties." This little poem is so beautiful in style, wording, thought, and the deep feeling is so apparent—so decided a contrast, too, to the "Absent-Minded Beggar," because not drawn forth by strong patriotism, but entirely from within—that it has always seemed to us not only one of the most successful poems Kipling has ever written, but in some way to stand for the man's whole character and personality, as nothing else has ever done. Perhaps also it explains to a great degree the foundation for Kipling's popularity:

> I have eaten your bread and salt,
> I have drunk your water and wine.
> The deaths ye died I have watched beside
> And the lives that ye lead were mine.
>
> Was there aught that I did not share,
> In vigil or toil, or ease,
> One joy or woe that I did not know,
> Dear hearts across the seas?
>
> I have written the tale of our life,
> For a sheltered people's mirth,
> In jesting guise—but ye are wise,
> And ye know what the jest is worth.

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

The intelligence of Congress is of the equine order, the presence of one idea excluding all others, and any reader desirous of an example of this trait has only to read Mr. Herbert Putnam's paper on "The Library of Congress," the opening article in the February Atlantic Monthly. For years the new building had possession of all the attention which the legislative mind could give to such a trifle as the largest assemblage of books in the country, and then the selection of a Librarian absorbed it, and now its accessions are classified by a system adopted by Jefferson, except in one of its forty-four groups, and in that the work is now waiting for an appropriation. Officially it has no order department and no shelf department; no department of documents, and the British Museum can show 1,200 manuscripts for every one to be found in the most costly of all library buildings. Making all proper allowance for lack of precedent, the condition of this institution and of those managed by small boards of commissioners at least nominally outside the realm of political influence is a warning to those who would make Congress a railway manager and a lighting company.

Mr. Putnam's position deprives him of the privilege of saying anything of this kind, but his sketch of the British Museum, which is controlled by a Board of Trustees, forces the reader to think it. Also, it compels him to remember that every people has the government which it deserves, for during its entire existence the library has received precisely two gifts of any consequence and not one endowment of money, and the British Museum has been overwhelmed with gifts from Kings, peers, and commoners, so that the generosity of Parliament and the parsimony of Congress are precisely what should be expected.

On the other hand, the construction of the new building within the appropriation and the triumphant success of the attempt to appoint a librarian without considering his politics seem to indicate that Congress, like the people, supposes itself to favor literature. After both people and Congress have really favored it for a quarter of a century or so, the librarian of that time will not have to say, as Mr. Putnam says, that the Law Library, numerically one of the largest in the country, is excelled in efficiency by the libraries of the New York Bar Association and the Boston Social Law Library; that its collection of public documents is not the best even in the United States; that the library is deficient in State and municipal documents, and does not succeed in obtaining due response for its international exchanges, and that its Oriental literature is comprised in the library of the late Caleb Cushing and in a few Turkish books, the gift of Mr. Abram S. Hewitt. Here, again, the influence of the people upon the Government appears. The politician, Federal, State, or municipal, cannot be persuaded to send documents regularly and punctually and not always to send any, but files of newspapers for the last fifty years are complete, and there are files, complete or incomplete, of two leading papers representing the opposing parties in every State and Territory during the last twenty-five years. Here the press has aided the Government, and shown itself worthy of receiving the immense amount of priceless statistics and "reports" annually bestowed upon it.

In the matter of a catalogue there seems to be no room for hope. A force of seventeen persons has the whole charge of cataloguing and classifying, and might, if shut up with the present library, and working at average speed, classify it and catalogue it on the dictionary system in sixteen years and a quarter, allowing 30,000 or 40,000 annual new accessions to accumulate meanwhile. To do the work in a year a force of 448 persons and an expenditure of $350,000 would be necessary. The expense is modest, considering the numerical strength of the force, but certain parts of the work, like copying and label pasting, require but small ability, and, perhaps, it might be possible to give decent salaries to the directors of the work without exceeding the sum mentioned.

At present the whole library force consists of 105 persons, 56 of whom are in the reading room serving the economical Washingtonian, the curious rural visitor desirous of saying that he read this or that in the Library of Congress, and occasionally the legislator himself, but not often. Anybody may use the library of reference, and 5,000 persons visit the building daily.

Mr. Putnam does not discuss the future of the library, but his presentation of its present case is both valuable and curious.

WOMEN AMONG HUMORISTS.

At a recent gathering of what Mark Twain would call "literary persons," of both sexes, one of the men present made the sweeping assertion that most, if not all, women were entirely devoid of a sense of humor.

"I consider that an unjust assertion," remarked a well-known woman writer who was present. "I am sure that I enjoy a good joke as well as my husband or any other man."

"That may be true enough," said the man who had just spoken, "but you do not make jokes in your conversation, or write them in your books. I do not deny that there are plenty of women who are bright conversationists, but is there now, or has there ever been, a woman humorous writer?

"For instance, look at the long list of male humorists, beginning with Mr. Dooley of the present day, Mark Twain, Artemus Ward, Josh Billings, John Phoenix, Philander Doesticks, Bill Arp, Max Adler, Petroleum V. Nasby, Major Jones, Judge Neal, author of 'Charcoal Sketches'; F. C. Burnand, W. G. Gilbert, Locker, Calverley, Thackeray, Dickens, Tom Hood, and many others clear back to Rabelais. All of these men were not only bright and witty in their conversation, but their writings were permeated with fun and humor. Now, on the contrary, search the list of women writers from Mary E. Wilkins to Mrs. Aphra Behn, and you will not find a single professedly woman humorous writer. Some of them may have sporadic flashes of fun, but they soon lapse into gravity or sentimentality. I do not pretend to say why this is so, but simply state it as a fact. It may be that women are deprived of the humorous sense in the same manner that a person may be born without sight or hearing or speech. That, however, is a matter for the physiologists to take up. I myself do not know of any woman humorist; do you?"

"I am afraid I do not," replied the woman addressed, "but I intend to look the matter up and see if I cannot find at least one in the long list of women writers of all ages."

Perhaps some of our readers may help her in this quest for a real woman humorous writer, and if they will give their views briefly THE SATURDAY REVIEW would be glad to receive and publish them.

From a Man of Taste.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I have noticed much talk on likes and dislikes in your SATURDAY REVIEW, and if I may be allowed space I would like to display my crotchet.

Often have I been prone to wonder if there was not something lacking in me because of my inability to read and admire many novelists which most people do. Now it is my great delight to read and reread Lamb, Addison, Carlyle, Macaulay, De Quincey, and other essayists, but it is with much misgiving that I take up Dickens, save only his "Christmas Carol" and "The Cricket on the Hearth." Thackeray I like best for his essays. Whereas of Bulwer and Kingsley I have never yet finished a novel, and so it is with many more. Among the few novelists whose work I can read with great zest are Fielding, especially "Tom Jones"; Hawthorne, Sir Walter Scott, whose works I most particularly delight in; and of single novels, "Lorna Doone," by Blackmore; "White Company," by Conan Doyle, and the "Last of the Mohicans," by Cooper.

I meet people daily who wonder at my peculiar taste, and they often tell me that I should cultivate a taste in another direction, for I miss so many beautiful things. Is it possible to cultivate a taste for Dickens, Thackeray, et al., and is it better to read them than the essayist? My mind has been perplexed of late, so I concluded to state my case to you, being anxious for light. OMEGA.

New York, Jan. 16, 1900.

THE WEEK IN ART.

The week has brought three picture sales in New York of more than passing interest and two or three small exhibitions, while the art lovers of the city have found continued interest in the exhibitions of the National Academy of Design in the Fine Arts Galleries, of the Hassam drawings at Wunderlich's, of Chartran's portraits at the Knoedler galleries, and of F. Hopkinson Smith's water colors at the Avery galleries, open until Jan. 25—all of which were reviewed in this Supplement last Saturday.

***

The sale of the ninety-eight oils by Henry Mosler at the American Art Galleries on Thursday night, of Mr. Mosler's studio effects and paintings by other artists in the same galleries yesterday afternoon, of some sixty canvases by the late William L. Picknell at the Fifth Avenue galleries last night, and of the miscellaneous collection of pictures owned, for the most part, by Mr. Edward Tewkesbury and Mrs. Henry Purton, at the Fifth Avenue Auction Rooms on Wednesday night, were all well attended, and the interest shown and the prices brought for the Mosler-Picknell pictures and those in the Tewkesbury-Purton collection by American brushes augur well for the success of the coming exhibition and sale of the large collection of American pictures owned by Mr. William T. Evans. This collection will be placed on view at the American Art Galleries next week, and will be sold at auction in Chickering Hall on four evenings of the succeeding week.

***

The sixty-ninth annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, which was opened to the public in the academy building, on North Broad Street, Philadelphia, on Monday morning last, is well deserving of the high praise that has been given it everywhere by the art writers. A trip to view and study this exhibition would be well worth the while of the Council of the New York Academy of Design, and such a trip is respectfully suggested to the members of this august body. There is no reason why New York should not have, under the auspices of the academy, such exhibitions every year.

***

The Philadelphia exhibition has reached its artistic success through a breadth of view and the resolute rejection of inferior works. Its managers evidently started out with the intention of making the best display possible of American pictures, and they have succeeded. They also very wisely admitted a certain number of foreign works, so that the visitor can compare the work of contemporaneous American and foreign brushes and the artist can see wherein the American painters represented are behind their foreign brothers, and where ahead. If any adverse criticism could be passed upon the exhibition, it is that it is not sufficiently comprehensive in subject. Portraiture is to the fore, and there is an abundance of figure work, but the landscape and marine painters are not largely represented. With the opportunity to study such portraits as those of John S. Sargent, Cecelia Beaux, Frank W. Benson, William M. Chase, Carroll Beckwith, J. Alden Weir, John W. Alexander, and others, and the figure work of Gari Melchers, W. T. Dannat, the foreign artists, La Thangue, and others, one's time is sufficiently occupied at a first view, but when these have been sufficiently digested and at a second view one turns to the landscapes and marines, after the study of Winslow Homer's powerful marine and coast scenes, Ochtman's "Autumn Twilight," the two curious gray-toned landscapes with figure by Tanner, and a few others, one feels that the exhibition in these departments is too meagre.

***

The water color and sculpture display at this Philadelphia show, while not large, is eminently satisfactory. The landscapes of Mrs. Bradley and the New York street scenes of Shinn are particularly notable among the water colors, and there is some excellent miniature work. The painters of these, and especially Mrs. John Madison Taylor, formerly Miss Emily Drayton, should be represented in the first annual display of the American Society of Miniature Painters, now open at the Knoedler Galleries in this city. Mrs. Taylor, who has devoted much study to the history of miniature painting, as well as to the art itself, and who is the author with Miss Wharton of Philadelphia of a book on miniatures, shows, among other examples, miniatures of President McKinley and Mrs. McKinley, which are not only good likenesses, but extremely delicate and refined in color and treatment.

***

There are now on exhibition at the Keppel Galleries, 20 East Sixteenth Street, some fifty drawings by Peter Newell, the originals of illustrations which appeared in the Harper publications during the past year or so. Some of the drawings are in color. They are all familiar to readers of the Harper publications. Mr. Newell is an illustrator who not only draws well, and who by his color work shows that he is capable of good work in this line, but he is also possessed of a sense of good and kindly humor. He is a fun-making artist. Some of the drawings are extremely clever in subject and are accompanied by verses which well complete their humorous effect.

***

A large picture of an episode in the late civil war entitled "The Charge of the One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers to the Rescue of Randolph's R. I. Battery" has of late been on exhibition at the Schaus gallery. The artist is Carl Roehling, a German painter, who is engaged on some historical works for the German Government, and who obtained special permission to paint this canvas. The composition, while somewhat crowded, as has to be the case in a battle scene, is effective, and the color good. The painting shows earnest and conscientious work, and no doubt is a satisfactory presentment to those who were participants in the stirring episode it depicts.

***

Miss Violet Oakley has drawn a design for a stained glass window whose subject is the Epiphany, and has superintended the making of the window, painting the head and hands of the figures, so that the completed work is due almost entirely to her artistic taste and skill. The window is on exhibition in the studio of the Church Glass and Decorative Company, 3 West Twenty-ninth Street. In the centre of the window are the Virgin and Child, while before them stand the Wise Men of the East, holding caskets in their hands. The color of the window is deep and rich. The figures, which are robed in light colors, stand out against a deep blue midnight sky. There are halos around the heads of the Virgin and Child. The frame or border, which is dark in tone, a design of pomegranates and grapes with olive leaves, is artistic, effective, and appropriate.

***

Mrs. Clio Hinton Huneker, a pupil of St. Gaudens and MacMonnies, and who has been studying in Paris for the past few years, is in New York this Winter, where she is working in the large studio in the old Tenth Street building formerly occupied by William S. Chase, with her relative, the well-known sculptor, R. Hinton Perry. Mrs. Huneker, whose graceful and refined little figures have made her known to many an art lover, has about completed a large and handsome bowl, which is soon to be cast, and which she calls the Omar Khayyam Bowl, as she found her inspiration for it in the verses of the Rubaiyat. The various ideas of the Rubaiyat are expressed in a series of small and graceful male and female figures which surround the top of the bowl, intermingled with vines and grapes. Mrs. Huneker in this her latest work shows much grace of modeling and refinement of idea. Among other good works in her studio is a seated female figure in a bath robe, with a bath cap on her head, and which, in delicacy of line and modeling, is very suggestive of a Tanagra figurine.

***

The Society of American Artists announces that exhibits for its twenty-second annual exhibition will be received on Thursday and Friday, March 8 and 9, that varnishing day and press day will be on Friday, March 23, and that its exhibition will open on Saturday, March 24, and close on Saturday evening, April 28. The Hanging Committee this year will be composed of William A. Coffin, Louis Paul Dessar, and Irving R. Wiles.

***

The famous paintings shown at the great Rembrandt exhibition at Amsterdam in 1898 have been reproduced by Scheltema and Holkema's Boek Handel of Amsterdam in forty photogravures. The text is written by Dr. F. Hofstede de Groot, the noted Dutch authority on Rembrandt. Carl Glucksman, 14 East Forty-fifth Street, has the portfolio here.

***

Senhor Salvador de Mendonca, formerly Brazilian Minister at Washington, who sold his collection of old masters at auction last April at the American Art Galleries, in this city, after the sale returned the "Penitent Magdalene," attributed to Murillo, and which had been bought by Mr. Francis L. Loring, to him. Mr. Loring had served a notice of attachment and Senhor de Mendonca returned him his money. It will be remembered that an art writer in a weekly journal and M. de Madrazo, the portrait painter, pronounced the picture to be a copy, and on this Mr. Loring based his action. Very fortunately for the cause of art Senhor de Mendonca determined to push the matter, as he was naturally incensed at being virtually accused of fraud, and has made an investigation abroad regarding it. He submitted the picture first to Charles Sedelmeyer, the well-known Parisian art dealer from whom he bought it, and who has given him a signed certificate that the canvas was formerly in the famous collection of the Baron de Beurnonville, with the added expression of his firm conviction that it is an authentic canvas. After this Senhor de Mendonca obtained a signed statement from the Parisian expert, Eugene Feral, to the effect that the picture was an original Murillo, and from several London experts who all testified to the same effect. It is said that Senhor de Mendonca may institute legal proceedings against those who here impugned the genuineness of his Murillo. Meanwhile it may be well to suggest to those art lovers and buyers whose faith has been at all shaken in their own purchases or beliefs by the attacks of certain so-called experts that they should not necessarily despair or be ready to proceed against picture sellers of good personal reputation and character on the opinions of said experts. Experts, as well as doctors, differ.

***

The display of decorative work in the gallery of the Fine Arts Club, on the occasion of the dinner recently given to the visiting Baltimoreans by the Society of Mural Painters, is a comprehensive showing of the recent important works in fresco and stained glass in America. The Boston Public Library, the Congressional Library at Washington, the new Appellate Court building in New York, and many hotels and private houses are in evidence as to their elaborate and beautiful interiors. Mr. John La Farge shows reproductions of his work done for Bowdoin College and the Lambs, and Charles R. and Ella Condie exhibit many designs for the Sage memorial at Cornell University. The latter is mostly in stained glass, as is also the exhibit of Mr. Maitland Armstrong. Mr. Abbey's frescoes of the Holy Grail, and Mr. Sargent's Prophets, from the Boston Library, are side by side with the friezes of Kenyon Cox and George W. Maynard in the new Appellate Court room. Edwin H. Blashfield occupies the large central space on the east wall, with Sprague Pearce and H. Van Ingen to the left, and to the right C. Y. Turner and Elmer E. Garnsey and Frank Benson, with the burnt wood of J. William Fosdick, are hard by. Edward Simmons is represented by many spandrils from the Hotel Astoria as well as by his more important work in Washington and in two New York court houses. Some of the other mural painters represented are Walter Shirlaw, Abbott H. Thayer, H. O. Walker, Elihu Vedder, Robert Read, John W. Alexander, Frank D. Millet, Gari Melchers, H. J. Schlader-Mundt, Willard Metcalf, Will H. Low, Otto H. Beecher, Joseph Lauber, Francis Lathrop, and Frank Fowler.

***

The twenty-four ex libris mugs to be sold at the annual library dinner of the Salmagundi Club in April will be decorated by the following artists: Bruce Crane, C. C. Curran, L. C. Earle, Harry Fenn, William H. Howe, Isaac A. Josephi, George H. McCord, Charles Frederick Naegele, Henry R. Poore, Rufus Sheldon, James G. Tyler, A. T. Van Laer, Carleton Wiggins, Herbert A. Levy, F. K. M. Rehn, W. Granville Smith, Henry B. Wechsler, Gringero Yeto, Thomas Moran, J. Francis Murphy, Edward Polthast, A. C. Morgan, C. Myles Collier, and Thomas B. Craig. It is the purpose of the librarian to have one of each set of twenty-four mugs decorated with the book plate of the club. The artist who paints this particular mug is expected to treat his subject with the utmost freedom, giving it as much as possible the character of his individual work. Mr. Harry Fenn will do the book plate mug for 1900. Whoever secures this little piece of deift will have a dainty drawing in the picturesque manner of this artist, signed with the bold "F" so familiar to the readers of The Century and St. Nicholas. Last year this mug was done by Mr. George Elmer Brown, the designer of the book plate, and is now the property of Mr. W. E. Baillie of Bridgeport, an ex libris enthusiast. Mr. W. Granville Smith and Mr. Edward Polthast are two of the four prize winners in the Fall exhibitions, and Mr. Irving E. Couse, a third winner, is not called upon this year. Mr. George H. McCord's decoration will be a view of Edinburgh Castle. It is too early to name other subjects, but something characteristic is expected from each well-known artist. The mugs will be burned at the Crown Point Pottery of Mr. Charles Volkmar, and this year without the overglaze, which saves the delicacy of the drawing and leaves the color of a purplish tone, instead of crockery blue. Last year Mr. Walter Shirlaw's mug, as first choice, sold for $60, the book plate mug for $30, and a very handsome mug, by Mr. Granville Smith, for $37. The two dozen mugs brought the handsome sum of $397. The proceeds of this annual sale are devoted to the purchase of art books for the library of the club. It is the purpose of the Library Committee to establish and foster with this particular fund a costume and reference library for illustrators and painters.

***

An interesting competition for a series of important windows to be placed in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia has just been held in which a number of well-known New York artists have submitted elaborate designs in color. Mr. E. V. Seeler, architect of the church, aided by a committee of prominent Philadelphians, has awarded the entire work, consisting of nine figure subjects, an elaborate dome, and six decorative panels, to Mr. Otto Heinigke and Mr. Owen Bowen, two artists who have been associated in New York for several years. The successful designs are especially interesting to students of decoration, as they show a radical departure from modern precedent and partake rather of the spirit of an older day, when the artisans and craftsmen of Chatres and of Florence wrought out those marvelous windows in their beloved cathedrals, windows that seem to have been too little studied and never understood. The exceptional quality in the new work under consideration is the evidence of deep study of the great traditions of symbolic ornament, an absence of affectation for effect, and a profound comprehension of the subtle relations that are interdependent and eternal between architecture and decoration. These same artists have just finished eight large figures in stained glass in the new Baltimore Court House, a building where an appropriation was available for purposes of decoration, much as in the case of the Appellate Court House in New York.

The Skeleton in Art.

In Sienkiewicz's last romance, "In Monte Carlo," there is an "aside" which, having a bearing on art, is worthy of consideration. The leading character, Svirsky, the painter, has his mind occupied with a composition which he calls "Dream and Death."

Why, asks the painter, has "Christianity introduced the skeleton into life and art as representative of death?" Why, then, is death rendered horrid, repulsive by the means of a grinning skull and the rattle of dry bones? The Dance Macabre is a scarecrow ballet, with a touch of the ludicrous in it.

Sienkiewicz is bold enough to write this, that the skeleton "was born of the gloomy German spirit, the same which developed the grand Gothic style, which is so depressing, as though a church were not a passage to the light of heaven, but to a subterraneous and hopeless chasm." How came it that "the Renaissance had not reformed the symbol of death?" To the Greek, Thanatos had no dread aspect. To the genius of death he gave wings. To day the skeleton is no longer a symbol of death. The tombstone cutter would make a sad bungle with a memento mori. You may see in the shop windows skulls in pottery, used to hold tobacco. You fill your pipe and feel no shudder? There are, there must be, passing phases in art, but horror of the skeleton no longer exists. The "pieta," a favorite suoject of the artist of the fifteenth century, the lank and extenuated figure of the Divine One, though it might once have excited compassion, is never repeated in the Christian art of to-day.

Town or Country Again.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

That was a very interesting letter one of your correspondents sent from Arizona, and a very characteristic reply that "Cynic" honored him with. There is so much that is true in both letters, written, as they were, from such widely different points of view, that a socially inclined person can form from them quite an accurate idea of the value of books to persons of solitary habits, whether enforced or voluntary.

What "Cynic" says of the superiority of the town over the country for mental work is all very well, as far as he goes. Who of us city dwellers has not taken a book to one of our parks, thinking to read or study with the more concentration of thought for the comparative quiet of surrounding nature? But alas! for our anticipations in this direction! A squirrel here; an odd strut there; a group of children playing opposite; the invalid passing in his wheeled chair; the young couple wheeling their first little one with pardonable pride—all these distract the thoughts of the would-be student from his book, making him conscious of the stress of life all about him. He throws down his book in despair and gives himself over to the contemplation of his fellow-creatures as they pass in parade before his park bench. He will leave his studying for the solitude of his own room, where not even the constant noises of passing traffic and their usual accompaniments can distract his attention from his reading.

On the other hand, let our Arizona friend, who stands for the country, try to study in the city, and he will find there is so much to interest him in the real world that he will have very little time to give to the characters of the imagination. For him there will be no more study until he goes back to his desolate plains and lonely prairies, where he can in his own way get at the "heart of books."

It is all a matter of the mind's environment. The human brain adjusts itself to its surroundings and works best where it is most at home.

"Cynic" maintains that one can be more solitary in a great city than anywhere else. In a certain sense this is very true, for in a city one is under no social obligation that one will not willingly undergo, while in the country, where every one knows every one else, this is very different. But in the city the crowds create a certain human atmosphere, perhaps not wittingly noticed, but present all the same. One feels that there are people all around, that one can make acquaintances whenever one chooses or go to the theatre or other places of amusement at any time. In the very unflattering realization, nowhere so severely felt as in a great city, that we are but one small grain of a vast ocean, we may feel very small and solitary, but there is always the reflection, so dear to cynical hearts, that there are all around us other human atoms quite as insignificant as ourselves.

But the country dweller must create his human atmosphere for himself. There is no crowd to remind him of the vastness of the human family. All his resources for recreation lie within himself. His heart, however, craves for the sight of human faces; the life of a hermit, wrapped up in himself, is distasteful to him, and so he supplies the void for himself by peopling the vacuum with his book friends. His life, though perhaps dreamily delightful, is artificial, as is that of any one who thinks himself and his thoughts sufficient compensation for the divine gift of human society. He feels this, but he cannot help it. He has the social instinct, but he cannot gratify it, so he naturally looks to his books to supply it.

Solitude is a sad condition of life, either in the city or in the country; in the one the crust of life only serves to impress one's loneliness the more clearly on one's mind, while in the other the absence of activity makes one feel like a small atom in a vast field of space. That is, it does until one has become so egotistically self-sufficient that human companionship is no longer necessary.

There can be no set rules as to which place is the better for an intellectual life, any more than it can be determined where an author can best write his books. It depends upon the individual. The city-bred man will study best in the town; the country-bred man under the broad, open schoolroom of nature. But wherever we study, good books must always be the most priceless gift that man can make to man.

JOHANNA LOBSIEN.

New York, Jan. 2, 1900.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS.

Readers will permit us again to remind them of the necessity for keeping their full names and addresses with letters intended for this department of THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW. Our mails are now heavily freighted with "queries and answers." We are glad to get them and shall welcome all that our readers are pleased to send—all, that is, that are not trivial.

John Morgenthau, 308 West One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, New York City:—"Please give me the address of S. A. Hasty."

No. 32 Lavender Gardens, Clapham Common, S. W., London.

"A. C. P.," Brooklyn, N. Y.:—"Will you kindly tell me through your 'Queries and Answers' catalogue the value of the first edition of Holmes's 'Elsie Venner,' 1861, two volumes, in good condition? Also, is there any volume published in handy form giving information in regard to first editions, including their auction sale quotations; such that, with it, I might answer such a question as the above?"

The first edition of "Elsie Venner" is worth from $3 to $5. Foley's "American Authors," to be had at any large book store, gives information concerning American first editions. This should be supplemented by such a work as "American Book Prices Current," published each year at $5 by Dodd, Mead & Co., and by the "English Book Prices Current," a similar work, also published yearly. These books record the sales at auction of all books of importance, and are invaluable to one who is forming a library, however modest or extensive.

Frank Hankinson, Reading, Penn.: "The poem beginning

Cleon hath a million acres;
Ne'er a one hath I.

asked for by C. Smith in THE REVIEW of Dec. 29 is by Charles Mackay, and entitled 'Cleon and I.' It is included in 'Voices from the Crowd,' (1846,) his first published volume, and is also found in the 'Bryant Library of Poetry and Song.'"

Daniel Maurice, 812 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal.: "'F. R.' asks through your columns for information concerning means of knowing a first edition of Markham's poems. Mr. Markham once told me that in 'The Desire of Nations' in the first edition there is a compositor's error, an expression reading 'fruitless creed,' which should be 'mistless creed.' In all except the first edition the latter reading will be found."

Jessie F. Wheeler, Mechanicsville, N. Y.: "The poem beginning

O Thou eternal one whose presence bright
All space doth occupy, &c.,

asked for by W. Douglas, was written by Gabriel Romanovitch Derzhavin, a Russian lyric poet, who was born July 3, 1743. He was Secretary of State in 1791 and Minister of Justice in 1802. His complete works in five volumes were published in St. Petersburg in 1810. He died July 6, 1816. His ode on God, referred to above, was translated into several European languages, and also into Chinese and Japanese. It is said to have been hung up in the palace of the Emperor of China, printed in gold letters on a scroll of satin." The whole eleven stanzas may be found in 'The National Fifth Reader,' published in 1867 by A. S. Barnes & Co."

"Young Author," New York City:—"Will you kindly tell a young author the most propitious season of the year for publishing a new novel? Also, if it should be typewritten before sending it to the publisher."

Manuscripts should always be typewritten. Generally, most important literary works are published during the regular season, so to speak, from the Autumn of one year to the Spring of the next; but there are no set rules for literary success. If a book has that peculiar and often undefinable quality that makes for success it will become popular, no matter when or where published.

J. P. Hunter, Nashville, Tenn.: "Where can I find a sketch of S. R. Crockett?"

Samuel Rutherford Crockett, born in Duchrae, Galloway, Sept. 24, 1860, was educated in Edinburgh, at Heidelberg, and at New College, Oxford. In 1886 he entered the Free Church of Scotland, was a minister of Penicuik for several years, and then became a writer and novelist.

Arthur Wollaston, New Haven, Conn.: "Is the Huth Library, of which I have heard so much, still intact, and who owns it?"

The splendid library formed by the late Henry Huth, which ranks with such great private book collections as the Christie-Miller, the Devonshire, the John Carter Brown, and the Hoe, was inherited by Alfred Henry Huth, born in London, Jan. 14, 1850, the second son of Henry Huth. He was educated at Rugby and at the Berlin University, and has written and edited several works, among them a translation of Goethe's "Faust" (1880.) He is a Vice President of the Bibliographical Society, Treasurer of the Roxburghe Club, and has always been interested in books, having added largely to his father's collection.

D. M. Curtin, 83 Catharine Street, New York City:—"The author of the poem beginning, 'If I had known in the morning,' asked for by Miss E. E. Turney, 274 West Eighty-fourth Street, is Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, and is called 'Our Own.'"

"Curious," Jersey City, N. J.:—"Who first used the following sayings: 'Make a virtue of necessity' and 'Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves?'"

Geoffrey Chaucer, in line 3,094 of "The Knighte's Tale," uses it thus: "Maken Vertue of Necessite." Other examples: "Thus am I driven to make a virtue of necessity," (R. Wilson's "Three Ladies of London," Act II.); "To make virtue of necessity" (Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," Act IV., Scene 1); and "To dress up necessity into a virtue," (Swift's "Tale of a Tub," Sec. VI). Lord Chesterfield wrote to his son in his letter of Nov. 6, 1747; "Old Mr. Lowndes, the famous Secretary of the Treasury in the reigns of King William, Queen Anne, and George I., used to say, "take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves.'"

Harry W. Wilkens, 32 Grove Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.:—"is there any value attached to 'Advice to a Son,' by Francis Osborn, printed in the year 1673 in London? It is in excellent condition."

It has little value.

Edward J. Long, 145 East One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, New York City:—"Can you give me a list of the works of John Henry Newman; also advise where they can be purchased?"

Cardinal Newman's works are too numerous to be given in full. Longmans, Green & Co. published in 1890, at $50, a collected edition of his works, including letters and correspondence, with a brief biography, edited by Miss Mozley. There are thirty-nine volumes.

"L.," Boston, Mass:—"Who wrote the biography of James Gordon Bennett? It was published in [illegible] Review."

"F. W.," New York City:—"Will you kindly give me information as to the proper way to go about getting [illegible] of a foreign work of fiction [illegible]?"

If the novel has never been translated and is one that would prove acceptable to the public in an English form, the best and first thing to do is to bring the matter to the attention of a publisher.

"Reyna," New York City:—"What is the meaning and name in private life of Marie Corelli?"

Marie Corelli, (Maria Mackay,) of mingled Italian and Scotch parentage and connections, was adopted in infancy by Charles Mackay. She was musically educated in France. In 1886 her first novel, "A Romance of Two Worlds," was published. Other publications: "Vendetta," 1886; "Thelma," 1887; "Ardath," 1889; "Soul of Lilith," 1892; "Barabbas," 1893; "The Sorrows of Satan," 1895; "The Mighty Atom," 1896; "The Murder of Delicia," 1896; "Ziska," 1897; "Jane," 1897. She is unmarried.

"A. R.," Brooklyn, N. Y.:—"What are the recent books by the author of 'In His Steps'?"

"One of the Two," Revell, 50 cents; "Malcom Kirk," The Church Press, Chicago, 75 cents; "The Miracle at Markham," Church Press, 25 cents; "Richard Bruce," Pilgrim Press, 25 cents; "Robert Hardy's Seven Doors," Pilgrim Press, 25 cents; "The Twentieth Door," Pilgrim Press, 25 cents; "For Christ and the Church," Revell, 10 cents; "John King's Question Class," Advance Publishing Company, 25 cents; "Lend a Hand," Revell, 30 cents.

Appeals to Readers.

Frederick S. Dickson, 341 South Broad Street, Philadelphia:—"Will some reader inform me if there is a good engraved or etched portrait of Huxley suitable for framing?"

Edward Jay Allen, Braddock Avenue, Pittsburg, Penn.:—"Where can I find these songs of the war of 1812? I remember when a boy hearing a not unmelodious voice that lingered lovingly on the last note of each verse, singing,

You had the best of wine, John,
You drank our bock and sherry,
But you didn't like our fare, John,
You couldn't take our Perry.

Which was a reference to pear cider.
Also another song:

O have you never heard of Washington the Great
And Perry sailing all over the lake,
And how we beat the British back by the land and the sea,
And made them know their places."

Daniel B. Childe, 56 East Sixty-ninth Street, New York City:—"Who wrote 'The Voice of the Elms,' which contains these lines?

Caesar lived fifty, we an hundred, years,
And still another hundred we will stand like seers
And watch the nations as they come and go
Beneath our branches in their hurried flow."

M. H. Hadley, 50 Livingston Street, New Haven, Conn.:—"I would like to ask some of your readers for a poem about a schoolmistress and her ungrammatical lover. He persists in addressing her in very bad English, and she remonstrates, but finally he says 'Be you agoin' to marry me?' and she replies: 'I be.' I shall be greatly beholden to any one who will send me this poem."

"M. E. A.," Post Office Box 125, Burlington, Vt.:—"Will some one kindly give me the entire poem by the English poet Fakinham Beatty, the first verse of which is as follows:

By thine own soul's law learn to live,
And if men thwart thee take no heed,
And if men hate thee have no care,
Sing thou thy song, and do thy deed,
Hope thou thy hope, and pray thy prayer,
And ask no crowns they will not give.
Nor says they grudge thee for thy hair."

Paul M. Paine, 136 East Genesee Street, Syracuse, N. Y.:—"Can you tell me where to find (1) a poem, written I think, by H. C. Bunner to the Omar Khayyam Club of Burford Bridge, beginning:

Not 'mid the London dust and glare,
The wheels that rattle, the lamps that flare,
But down in a deep, green Surrey dingle
You drink to Omar in fragrant air.

The poem refers to a visit of Robert Louis Stevenson at Burford Bridge, and of a local tradition which he intended to make into a romance. (2) A ditty, entitled 'Lord Lovel and Lady Ouncebell':

Lord Lovel a gay and comely knight
Of Roxfordshire was he:
The feet were light of his steed so white
As singing he crossed the lea, &c."

Wanted and to Exchange.

It is still necessary to remind readers who send letters for this department of THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW that their full names and addresses should be given. We are pleased to note the wide interest taken in the department and are glad always to receive our readers' letters, but their contributions should be brief and should deal with books of value and interest. Most letters do this already, but some do not.

H. Y. Cummins, Room 1,106, 20 Broad Street, Manhattan, New York City:—"I have for sale the following: 'Encyclopaedia Britannica,' ninth edition, Scribner's reprint, sheep, twenty-four volumes and index; the 'Boydell Shakespeare,' London, 1874, two volumes, cloth, gilt, illustrated; the 'Shakespeare Concordance,' by Mary Cowden Clarke, one volume, London, 1879; Froissart's 'Chronicles,' two volumes, Routledge, London, 1874; Plays of Beaumont and Fletcher, two volumes, Boston, 1854; plays of Ben Jonson, one volume, Boston, 1853, with portraits."

Rev. J. J. Clopton, Casanova, Fauquier County, Va.:—"Wanted to sell: Richmond Dispatch, April 1, 1865, $5; soldier's Prayer Book, used during civil war, $5; nine copies Civil War Music, published in South 1861-5, $3 a copy, $27; Sash picked up on battlefield of Fredericksburg, $15; Kennett's 'Roman Antiquities,' 1726, $5; Guizot's 'France,' Estes & Lauriat, fifty-eight parts, $10."

C. C. Gardner, 33 Johnson Avenue, Newark, N. J.:—"I should like to receive an offer for Johnson's 'Cyclopaedia,' 1824 edition, bound in full morocco, and in excellent condition. There are nine volumes, including the second and third biennial supplements (1885) in one volume. I also have Encyclopaedic Dictionary, forty volumes, one-half russia."

Lewis Evans, Post Office Box 2,052, New York City:—"I want New York City directories for 1834 and earlier; 1836, 1838, 1843 to 1850 inclusive, and 1855; also Brooklyn directories for 1853 and earlier. State price."

J. Broadhurst, 537 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, New York City:—"First edition Kiplinг's 'Light That Failed,' magazine form, for sale or exchange."

Herbert Phillips, 99 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.:—"Wanted, Pearson's Magazine for January, 1899, and Critic, for December, 1898; also any numbers of Pearson's Magazine prior to December, 1898."

F. Hemmy, 210 Produce Exchange, New York City:—"I will exchange a set of Hugo's works for a set of Stevenson's works, (Scribner.")

H. Meincke, 33 Woodlawn Avenue, Jersey City.—"I would like to exchange or buy any books [illegible] Also any lectures by Lily or our Founders."

"Subscriber," St. Louis, Mo.:—"I have forty-nine volumes of the Niles Register, bound in sheepskin. There should be fifty volumes, but No. 49 is missing. I wish to sell them."

"MRS. F. S.," Brooklyn, send her name and address to G. H. L., P. O. Box 1,955, N. Y. City, and price of her Washington letters?"

Miss Emanuel, 178 East One Hundred and Fourteenth Street, New York City:—"I have two volumes of 'American Scenery' (1840), with about 150 steel engravings, by Bartlett, which I would like to sell or exchange for other steel plates."

H. Cerrom, 2,128 Broadway, New York:—"I would like to sell or exchange 'Report on Investigation at Assos, 1882-3, Part I., by Joseph Thacher Clarke; 'Poems,' by Felicia Dorothea Brown (Mrs. Hemans), first edition, Liverpool, 1808; 'Exposition of Articles,' by Harold Brown; 'Political Economy,' by Perry; 'Record of the Rebellion,' by Moore, two volumes; 'Hibbert Lectures,' 1884; 'Political Essays,' by Timothy Pickering, Cambridge, 1813; 'Lotus Eating,' by George W. Curtis, New York, Harper Bros., 1852, paper bound; 'Nile Notes of a Howadji' (George W. Curtis), 1851, Harper Bros., paper bound."

Mrs. E. S. Walker, 1,125 South Fifth Street, Springfield, Ill.:—"I have a fine copy, which I will sell at a reasonable price, of William Douglas's Summary, historical and political, of the First Planting, Progressive Improvements, and Present State of the British Settlements in North America,' London, 1760, two volumes, calf."

BOOKS RECEIVED.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

RECOLLECTIONS: 1832-1886. By the Right Honorable Sir Algernon West, K. C. B. 8vo. New York and London: Harper & Brothers. $3.

THE STORY OF LEWIS CARROLL. Told for Young People by the Real Alice in Wonderland, Miss Isa Bowman. 18mo. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $1.

ANDREA DEL SARTO. By H. Guinness. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.75.

BISMARCK AND THE FOUNDATION OF THE GERMAN EMPIRE. By James Wycliffe Headlam. 12mo. New York: G. P. Putnam & Sons. $1.50.

WHO'S WHO, 1900: An Annual Biographical Dictionary. Fifty-second year of issue. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.75.

HERMAN LUDWIG FERDINAND VON HELMHOLTZ. By John Gray McKendrick. 12mo. New York: Longmans, Green & Co. $1.25.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE EXPANSION OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE, 1500-1870. By William Harrison Woodward, Christ Church, Oxford, Principal of the University Training College, Liverpool. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company.

POETRY.

OMEGA ET ALPHA, AND OTHER POEMS. By Grenville d'Arville. 16mo. San Francisco: D. P. Elder and Morgan Shepard.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

IRRIGATION AND DRAINAGE. Principles and Practice of Their Cultural Phases. By F. H. King. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

POWER TRANSMITTED BY ELECTRICITY AND APPLIED BY THE ELECTRIC MOTOR, Including Electric Railway Construction. By Philip Atkinson, A. M., Ph. D. 12mo. New York: D. Van Nostrand Company. $2.

MICRO-COSMOGRAPHIE; Or, a Piece of the World Discovered in Essays and Characters. By John Earle. 18mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE. An Exposition of Mrs. Eddy's Wonderful Discovery, Including Its Legal Aspects. A Plea for Children and Other Helpless Sick. By William A. Purrington. 8vo. New York: E. B. Treat & Co.

CONSUMPTION AND CHRONIC DISEASES. By Emmet Densmore, M. D. 12mo. 2 Vols. London: Swan, Sonnenschein & Co. New York: The Stillman Publishing Company.

INVISIBLE LIGHT; OR, THE ELECTRIC THEORY OF CREATION. By George W. Warder. 12mo. New York: G. W. Dillingham Company. $1.25.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF SELBORNE. By Gilbert White. Edited with Notes by Grant Allen. Illustrated by Edmund H. New. 4to. London and New York: John Lane, The Bodley Head. $7.50.

GLEANINGS IN HOLY FIELDS. By Hugh MacMillan, D. D., LL. D., F. R. S. E., &c. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

BIBLE QUESTIONS. A Series of Studies Arranged for Every Day in the Year. By James M. Campbell. 16mo. New York: Funk & Wagnalls Company. $1.

FICTION.

DONNA TERESA. By Frances Mary Peard. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

STRANGER THAN FICTION. By Albert Ross. 12mo. New York: G. W. Dillingham Company. $1.

SHIRLEY. By Charlotte Bronte, (Currer Bell.) With an Introduction by Mrs. Humphry Ward. 8vo. New York and London: Harper & Brothers. $1.75.

VILLETTE. By Charlotte Bronte, (Currer Bell.) With an Introduction by Mrs. Humphrey Ward. 8vo. New York and London: Harper & Brothers. $1.75.

NATHAN HALE. A Play in Four Acts. By Clyde Fitch. 8vo. New York: R. H. Russell. $1.25.

THE TEMPLE EDITION OF THE WORKS OF JANE AUSTEN. Ten volumes. 18mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $8.

A DESPERATE CHARACTER, AND OTHER STORIES. By Ivan Turgenev. 18mo. New York: Macmillan Company. $1.25.

EARTHWORK OUT OF TUSCANY. Being Impressions and Translations of Maurice Hewlett, with Illustrations. By James Kerr Lawson. 8vo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.50.

THE KNIGHTS OF THE CROSS; OR, KEZYACY. Historical Romance. By Henryk Sienkiewicz. 2 vols. 12mo. New York: R. F. Fenno & Co. $2.

OLD MADAME, AND OTHER TRAGEDIES. By Harriett Prescott Spofford. 12mo. Boston: Richard G. Badger & Co. $1.25.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MYTHOLOGY FOR MODERNS. An Up-to-Date Textbook for Up-to-Date Students. By James S. Metcalfe, M. A. 8vo. New York: Life Publishing Company. $1.

THE LETTERS OF CICERO. The Whole Extant Correspondence in Chronological Order. Translated into English by Evelyn S. Shuckburgh, M. A. 2 vols. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $3.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA. The Rise of Formal Satire in England. By Raymond MacDonald Alden. 8vo. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania. Boston: Ginn & Co.

THE HITHERTO UNIDENTIFIED CONTRIBUTIONS OF W. M. THACKERAY TO "PUNCH." By M. H. Spielmann. 8vo. New York and London: Harper & Brothers. $1.75.

NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION. Journal of Proceedings and Addresses of the Thirty-eighth Annual Meeting held at Los Angeles, Cal., July 11-14, 1899. 8vo. Chicago: The University of Chicago Press.

OBSERVATIONS. By Ratcliffe Hicks. 16mo. New York: The Knickerbocker Press. $1.

COONTOWN'S 400. By E. W. Kemble. 4to. New York: Life Publishing Company. $2.

CELIBACY, AND ITS EFFECTS ON THE INDIVIDUAL, AND OTHER PAPERS. By Susan Channing. 18mo. Chicago: Open Court

THE LIGHT OF SCARTHEY

By EGERTON CASTLE, author of "THE PRIDE OF JENNICO."

THIRD EDITION.

"'The Light of Scarthey' has the charm of a daringly imaginative conception; the poetry and dream of passion are in it; the sunshine of romance, the magic and picturesque situation are felt throughout its pages; but when we have reckoned with all this we are moved to a warmer admiration by the manner in which Mr. Castle makes his personages live, causes their adventures and their environment to seem as natural as they are new and exciting. * * * The book is full of vitality and atmosphere."—New York Tribune.

Size 4¾x7½ inches, cloth, 456 pages, $1.50.

THE MARKET-PLACE.

28TH THOUSAND.

The last work of Harold Frederic, the author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," etc. A story of finance and business schemes for men—and of social struggles and English country life for women. With excellent illustrations by Harrison Fisher.

*"'The Market-Place' is a fine piece of work, one of the best novels of the year, a literary legacy that will be remembered almost as an heirloom. * * * From title-page to colophon it is compact of virility. As a study of character it is supreme, for there is not one single failure in the book, and as a Romance of the City it has no equal in modern fiction."—The Bookman.*

Size, 4¾x7½ inches, 401 pages, cloth, $1.50.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY,
5 & 7, East 16th St., New York.

CATHOLIC LIBRARIES.

Cathedral and Other Collections in New York—Work They are Doing.

How substantially the Catholic libraries of the city are contributing to the dissemination of good literature is nowhere more significantly recognized, perhaps, than in non-Catholic book and periodical publishing circles. Responsive to the intellectual awakening of the past ten years, they are reaching out on every side for the commercial patronage that was once almost wholly controlled by the Catholic publisher, who continues to cling tenaciously to the old order of things. The alacrity with which The Review of Reviews, The Forum, The North American Review, and kindred high-class periodicals recently ejected from their advertising pages, in response to Catholic protest, the advertisement of a book that gave offense, substantiated the commercial value put upon the Catholic reading public by the periodical press. Not a few Catholic circulating libraries have a committee of censors, who pass, before purchasing, upon new books submitted by publishers. Wherever Catholic dogma or history is misrepresented, the same is marked and returned to the publisher. Rarely are the censors' objections now ignored by publisher or author. Not the least interesting letters filed at the Cathedral Library are from leading publishing houses of the country stating that this or that objection in such or such a volume has been forwarded to the author, who assures that no misrepresentation was intended, and that in a second edition the objectionable matter will be eliminated. How largely this tolerance on the part of publisher and author is prompted by commercial enterprise is not questioned here. The fact remains that the Roman Catholic population of the city is no small factor in its intellectual growth, and editor and publisher find it to their profit not to give offense.

Scarcely a parish is without its Sunday school library. Not a few are made up largely of up-to-date fiction of the best popular writers. The books are not wholly confined to Catholic authors. Every college and academy has its collection of standard works, while the reference libraries of St. Francis Xavier's College and the Catholic Club are in certain lines of research unsurpassed. The Sunday school libraries are accessible only to members of the parish, while the reference libraries of the educational institutions and the Catholic Club are open to any student, irrespective of creed, who applies to the authorities with proper reference. The largest and most effective work is done at the Cathedral Library, 123 East Fiftieth Street. It is a free circulating library, and, in accordance with the law governing libraries, it receives annual appropriations from the State and the city. From a parochial collection of 400 books, it has grown in ten years, under the fostering care of a scholar and a book lover, the Rev. Joseph H. McMahon, to more than 36,000 volumes. The library is divided into several departments. The books are of a very high order. No library in the country, perhaps, excels its collection in English Catholic literature and ecclesiastical history. In musical literature it is quite complete, the basis being the library of the late John R. G. Hassard, who was for many years musical critic of The Tribune.

Unobjectionable English novels and a fair proportion of French make up the fiction, while unusual care has been given to the Juvenile Department. The library aims specially to cultivate in children a taste for the best books. It is not confined to Catholic authors, but every healthy book that can be had within the library's purchasing resources is added. Supervision is exercised over the reading of children who come to the library, parents being required to sign the application blanks of their children and to certify their willingness that their children should be members. Great discretion is exercised by the librarians in giving out books to children. They frequently suggest books they think more fitting and prudently withhold at times those asked for. Effort is made to encourage children to enter upon systematic courses of reading. The library is absolutely free. Its readers include Catholic, Protestant, Jew, and Gentile. It is open every day in the week from 9 A. M. until 9 P. M. and two hours on Sunday morning. The number of volumes issued the past year for home reading was 315,339. The library has at present five branches and a number of traveling libraries in the public and parochial schools. The branches are established in parishes operating small parochial libraries. The management is unique. Director McMahon is assisted by a number of young ladies of the parish, whose services are given gratuitously. The skill they have developed has been recognized by library directors, and no less than three have within the past few years been offered positions in various city libraries. Once a month the Director and his staff have a meeting, in which the latest additions to the library and subjects of interest to librarians are discussed.

The Paulist Sunday school has a free circulating library of 5,000 volumes. It has a department for teachers. It is strong in fiction, fully three-fourths covering that field. The library is under the direction of the Rev. Thomas McMillan and voluntary assistants. The library is open Sundays and Monday evenings. It will eventually be established on the same basis as the Cathedral Library. This library was established thirty-five years ago by Father Hecker, the founder of the Paulist order. At that time there were very few circulating libraries for children in New York. Certainly there was none on the upper west side adjacent to Central Park until the Paulist Fathers opened the library, which continues to flourish.

The Catholic Club has been thirty years collecting its library of 23,000 volumes. Its reference and reading rooms are open daily to visitors. Only club members and their families can take books from the library. In canon law, mediaeval controversies, the writings of the school men, history and sacred antiquities, the club's collection is almost without a rival. It contains the best modern edition of St. Thomas Aquinas, printed at Parma, from 1852 to 1873, in twenty-five volumes quarto. The library is rich in illuminated missals and manuscripts of rare value. It has many valuable specimens of the beautiful work of the Plantin, the Aldi, and the Elzevirs presses. Not the least curious possession is the great black letter volume and incunabula, printed from engraved blocks in the method which preceded the invention of movable type. Mr. Martin, the librarian, is at the club every evening and Tuesday afternoons.

The late Augustin Daly was much interested in the library, and from time to time contributed liberally. The impression was current that it was his intention to leave his famous $25,000 Doain Bible to the club. The student library at St. Xavier's College, in West 16th Street has 7,000 volumes, while the collection reserved for the use of the Jesuit Fathers numbers in the neighborhood of 40,000 volumes.

The impetus to library work began some ten years ago at the Champlain Summer School, which in turn was inspired and is still largely sustained by the Reading Circle Movement. The latter originated with the Paulist Fathers in 1889, in what is known as the Columbian Reading Room. Reading Circles are in active operation in almost every State and Territory of the Union. They have an organ, the Catholic Reading Circle Review, published at Youngstown, Ohio, by Mr. Warren F. Mosher. The object of the movement is to make known among Catholics the best literature by Catholic writers, and to cultivate a taste for good reading. To this end, it has printed catalogues of the works of Catholic writers, and is distributing them gratis in all the schools, colleges, and academies of the country. Publishers are lending every aid to facilitate the work. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. publish the works of eighteen Catholic authors. Everywhere effort is being made to have the public libraries of the country recognize the best Catholic literature. So persistently have books been asked for at the purely secular libraries of the city by people who have become familiar with the catalogues of the Cathedral Library, that the authorities have in an indirect way been forced to supply them. Another aid to the movement is the Guild of Catholic Authors and Writers, the members of which hold monthly meetings at the Marlborough Hotel, and are in vital touch with the intellectual thought of the day.

Theodore Winthrop's Gentleman.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Your columns open to correspondents have been so universally successful, I write to ask if it be possible therein to bring together quotations in regard to what constitutes a "gentleman" and a "lady." Of course, Sir Philip Sidney, Herbert, Addison, Scott, Thackeray, Tennyson, and Stevenson, Lowell, Emerson, Curtis, at once come to mind in connection with gentleman. But I should very much like to see what your correspondents consider the best descriptions in literature of the two words.

Evolution being the law of the race, there must be more than one adequate expression of the requirements of different times. The following quotation from "John Brent," by Theodore Winthrop, seems to me much to the point:

There is a small but ancient fraternity in the world known as the Order of Gentlemen. It is a grand old order. A poet has said that Christ founded it; that He was "the first true gentleman that ever lived."

I cannot but distinguish some personages of far-off antiquity as worthy members of this fellowship. I believe it coeval with man. But Christ stated the precept of the order when he gave the whole moral law in two clauses—love to God and love to the neighbor. Whoever has this precept so by heart that it shines through into his life enters without question into the inner circles of the order.

But to protect itself against pretenders, this brotherhood, like any other, has its formulas, its passwords, its shibboleths, even its uniform. They are external symbols. With some the symbol is greater than the thing signified. The thing signified, the principle, is so beautiful that the outward sign is enough to glorify any character.

The demeanor of a gentleman—being art, the expression of an idea in form—can become property like any art. It may be an heirloom in an ancient house like the portraits of the heirs who gave a family name and fame, like the portrait of the maiden martyr or the faithful wife, who made that name beloved, that fame poetry, to all ages. This precious inheritance, like anything fine and tender, has sometimes been treated with overcare. Guardians have been so solicitous that a neophyte should not lose his inherited rank in the order of gentlemen that they have forgotten to make a man of him. The demeanor of a gentleman may be possessed by a weakling, or even inherited by one whose heart is not worthy of his manners.

The formulas of this order are not edited; its passwords are not syllabled; its uniform was never pictured in a fashion plate, or so described that a snob could go to his tailor and say, "Make me the habit of a gentleman." But the brothers know each other unerringly wherever they meet, be they of the inner shrine gentlemen at heart, and life; be they of the outer court, gentlemen in feeling and demeanor.

No disguise delays this recognition. No strangeness of place and circumstances prevents it. The men meet. The magnetism passes between them. All is said without words. Gentleman knows gentleman by what we name instinct. But observe that this thing, instinct, is character in its finest, keenest, largest, and most concentrated action. It is the spirit's touch. "John Brent," Ch. X., p. 106. L. E.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1900.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

JENNIE BAXTER, JOURNALIST,

By ROBERT BARR.

JENNIE BAXTER was an American girl, a journalist of the modern school, pretty, bright, and audacious. Visiting London, she began to introduce her American methods into the English and Continental newspapers. Mr. Barr, as a veteran newspaper man, tells the story of her adventures with great people and affairs in his spirited and humorous style. Jennie Baxter is a unique character in the world of fiction and a most interesting one.

Size, 4¾x7¼ inches, small pica type, illustrated. Cloth, cover designed by F. BERKELEY SMITH. $1.25.

Other Works by Mr. Barr are:

Tekla, 12mo, cloth	$1.25
The Strong Arm, 12mo, cloth,	$1.25
A Woman Intervenes, 12mo, linen	$1.25
The Mutable Many, 12mo, cloth	$1.50
Revenge, 12mo, linen	$1.25
In the Midst of Alarms, 16mo, buckram	.75 cts.
The Face and the Mask, 16mo, buckram	.75 "
From Whose Bourne, 16mo, buckram	.75 "
One Day's Courtship, 16mo, buckram	.75 "
In a Steamer Chair, 12mo, boards	.50 "

For Sale by all Booksellers, or Sent Postpaid.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY,
5 and 7 East 16th Street, New York.

D. APPLETON & CO.'S RECENT BOOKS.

A New Book By Maxwell Gray.

THE WORLD'S MERCY

By MAXWELL GRAY, author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland," etc. No. 278, Appletons' Town and Country Library. 12mo. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"Maxwell Gray is one of the most finished, thoughtful, artistic and satisfying novelists of the day. Whatever she does is distinguished by its artistic taste and sense of proportion and by its dignity of ideas."—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

THE STORY OF ECLIPSES

By G. F. Chambers, author of "The Story of the Stars." Library of Useful Stories. 40 cents.

"The present volume is intended as a sequel to my two former volumes in the Newnes Series of Useful Stories, entitled respectively 'The Story of the Solar System' and 'The Story of the Stars.' It has been written not only as a necessary complement, so to speak, to those works, but because public attention is already being directed to the forthcoming total eclipse of the sun on May 28, 1900."—Extract from the Author's Preface.

D. APPLETON & CO., NEW YORK

CHOICE BOOKS CHEAP!

ALL $1.50 BOOKS

at Ninety-eight Cents

RED POTTAGE, 5 JOHN STREET, BEN HUR, JANICE MEREDITH, RICHARD CARVEL, DAVID HARUM, AND OTHERS.

Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary $6.40
Indexed regular ($12.00.) my price.

Bryce's Impressions of South Africa. New Edition. reg. $3.50, my price, $2.45

Briton & Boer. reg. $1.25, my price, 85c.

Mail and Library Orders promptly attended to.

HENRY MALKAN,
1 WILLIAM ST.
Tel. 1121 Broad—Opp. Cotton Exchange.

LARGE choice collection Old Books, Paper Mss., etc. Magazines, Prints, etc. O'RIELLY, 1,265 Broadway, above 32d St.

NOTES AND NEWS.

BOOKS AND THEIR MAKERS.

The fact that many of the London daily papers devoted considerable space to obituaries of Dwight Lyman Moody on the publication of the news of the death of the evangelist, is variously commented on by the literary journals over there. That The Daily News devoted nearly two columns to him and a single column to the late Duke of Westminster is deemed very significant. "That inequality," remarks The Academy, "is the measure of the enthusiasm raised of old in England by Mr. Moody's preaching and praying. He was not an educated man, yet his triumph as a popular orator, who dwarfed John Bright in his audience, was only one more tribute to the acceptability of the message of the Christian minister who speaks from the heart to the heart frankly, not from head to head."

That there are people who take Mr. H. G. Wells seriously—even as seriously as Mr. Bellamy was taken—is shown by a letter recently received by the novelist from Bensonhurst, N. Y. The writer says: "I have just finished reading your book, 'When the Sleeper Wakes.' It is a wonderful book—I may say a terrible one, for it, perhaps in a general way, reveals what will unquestionably take place unless the reconstructive forces of society can be set in operation. My reasons for writing you are twofold, first * * * Secondly, to suggest that the book be pushed in every conceivable way in the reform movement. I have not seen the book noticed in any of the leading Socialist papers. We need just such a book as you have written to stir the people and impel them to action. Even the intelligent middle class has no conception of what is taking place—no knowledge that we are now on the downward road that leads to National clash."

It is probably not generally known that Mrs. Roy Devereux, whose "Side Lights on South Africa" Charles Scribner's Sons are publishing, is considered quite an authority on the so-called new woman movement. "The Ascent of Woman," from her pen, published some time ago by Roberts Brothers of Boston, was received with unmistakable enthusiasm by the journals and writers devoted to its particular field. Mrs. Devereux is about thirty years of age, a brunette, and is considered one of the brightest and most beautiful women in London by the literary and artistic society in which she moves. She is a great traveler, and has visited most of the cities of the United States and Europe, to say nothing of her sojourn in South Africa, where she wrote a series of articles for The Morning Post of London, which later formed the basis of "Side Lights on South Africa." It is understood that during her recent visit in this country she collected material for a book which may be comprehended in the title "The American Woman In and Out of Society."

Arthur Henry Savage Landor, who will begin lecturing here next Tuesday, on Thibet, lays claim to a reading, writing, and talking knowledge of sixteen languages. When in Germany, or France, or Italy he lectures in the language of the country. His grandfather, the late Walter Savage Landor, it may be recalled, was also a great linguist, and on one occasion he remarked with a sincerity borne out by his critical essays, "Latin is my mother tongue." The grandson, who was educated in Florence, where he was born, and in Paris, is almost as well known as a portrait painter as he is as a traveler and explorer. In Paris and London, as well as in New York, there are several portraits of more or less well-known persons that bear his signature. Nor was "In the Forbidden Land" his first achievement in the literature of travel and exploration. Even before he entered Thibet, the forbidden land, he had traveled extensively in the East, in Australia, in Africa, and in America, and had given to the world "Alone with the Hairy Ainu," "Corea, or the Land of the Morning Calm," and "A Journey to the Sacred Mountain of Sino-on-tai-shan." When asked the other day how he could bear again to tempt fate by revisiting last Summer the scenes of his terrible torture, he replied, "One gets tired of afternoon teas, and artificial men and women with their artificial manners, clothes and conversation, and longs for the companionship of man in his primitive state. I hate people that live in houses, anyhow."

Many persons suppose that the literary career of Mr. F. Marion Crawford began with the publication of his "Mr. Isaacs" in 1882. This is a mistake. During the year preceding the appearance of this novel Mr. Crawford contributed many editorial articles to The Critic, then a weekly publication, whose editors still remember him as a most facile writer. Mr. Crawford on being asked for an article, no matter on what subject, would immediately sit down, and in almost microscopic characters would fill page after page, without pause or erasure, setting down names, dates, and circumstances that proved the writer to have an almost encyclopedic brain. The first contributions to the periodical press by James Lane Allen and Edith Thomas also saw light in the broad, well-printed columns of the old Critic.

"Shirley" is not the only novel by Charlotte Brontë in which autobiographical fragments may be discovered. In her introduction to the new edition of "Villette," just published by Harper & Brothers, Mrs. Ward recounts the first meeting of Thackeray with Charlotte, when the former descended from the lecturer's platform to congratulate Miss Brontë. The latter deemed Thackeray's manner in ill taste. During the same visit to London the author of "Jane Eyre" went to see the famous French actress Rachel. Both these episodes and the contrary emotions which each called forth in Miss Brontë may be discovered, veiled only as to names, in "Villette."

Accounts of the English book season of 1899 are not cheering. The Boer war has diminished the general demand for books. Publishers do not look for a revival of business, unless the African troubles come to an end. Looking over the general statistics for the years 1898 and 1899, there is but a slight difference in the total of books. In England for 1898 there were 7,516 books published. For 1899, 7,567. Between the novels, tales and juveniles, of the two years, there were some 67 more of these issued in 1899 than in 1898.

Part II. of the collection of the Oxyrhynchus Papyri, has just been published by the Egypt Exploration Fund. In some respects it is more interesting than the first one. In Part II. there are 12 new classical fragments, including one of Menander's, having 51 lines from a lost comedy, the title of which is "The Shorn Lady." There are some studies on the Greek metres, with citations from unknown poems, of Sappho, Anacreon, Callimachus and others. There is a commentary on the Iliad, of the first century. Very remarkable is a list giving the names of the Olympian winners of the games of 480-468, and 446-448 B. C. This list is written on the back of a money account. In the same collection are fragments of old Greek medical prescriptions. There is a specific cure for earache. "Dilute some gum with the balsam of lilies, and add honey and rose extract." Further advice as to treatment is added. "Twist some wool in a round * * * warm and drop in." Finally, the ear was to be "rinsed with warm onion juice."

Some one who has been looking for the grave of Mrs. Elizabeth Inchbald, in Kensington churchyard, found it in a terrible condition. The inscription on the tomb was barely legible. The author of "A Simple Story" died in 1821.

Despite anti-Semiticism in France, Heine is to have a monument set over his remains at Montmartre. An anonymous admirer of Heine supplies the means. M. Hasseris furnishes the design. On a cippus is placed the bust of the poet. The head leans somewhat forward. The ornamentation is symbolic. Leading French critics are loud in their praise of M. Hasseris's work.

One hundred years ago Wordsworth went to live in a little house close to the lake known as the Town End of Rydal Water. In Dove Cottage he devoted himself to poetry. Wordsworth had gone all the way on foot from Yorkshire to Rydal, and was without means. Fortunately for him, his sister had received a legacy of a hundred pounds. This was sufficient for the furnishing of the cottage. The 300 volumes the poet possessed found a place in the house. Dove Cottage now belongs to the English people.

Some one has asked what Robert Louis Stevenson meant when he wrote of himself and Balzac, "I wish I had his fist, for I had a better method, the kinetic, whereas he continually allowed himself to be led into the static." This passage as a quotation is to be found in Mr. Henry James's clever notice of Stevenson's letters in The North American Review. The static theory accounts for those phenomena of nature where the weight has all to do. A static condition does not include motion. The kinetic state is, on the contrary, one of excessive motion. It is in direct opposition to static. Perhaps it would be a trifle difficult to seize exactly what Stevenson did mean, as far as romance writing is concerned. Placing side by side Stevenson and Balzac, there may be more movement in the first. You might say then that the personages in Balzac's "Le Père Goriot" kept their places by force of their own perfect poise. They were immovable. Stevenson's men and women were more susceptible of change. They were subject to kinetic action. Of course both writers followed their own idiosyncrasies.

ITEMS OF THE DAY.

Stephen Bronsal's Latest Book.

Stephen Bronsal, war correspondent, and some time Secretary to the United States Legations in Peking, Madrid, and Tokio, will publish through the Macmillan Company next week "The Golden Horseshoe." This is the story of American expansion made up of letters exchanged by two young officers of the army from their respective posts in the Philippines and in Puerto Rico. In editing this correspondence for the reading public Mr. Bronsal is believed to have rendered a public service. And the frankness in the letters of the two inconspicuous actors in recent events is said to have been made conspicuous and valuable by the historical treatment that the editor has subjected them to.

Dean Crane's Gift to Cornell.

Dean Crane of the College of Arts and Sciences of Cornell has just presented to the library of the university his rich collection of mediaeval sermon books. Twenty years ago Prof. Crane pointed out to scholars the treasures of the story tellers' art which lay hidden in their old sermon books. Since then he has stood foremost among those who have made researches along these lines, and has gradually augmented his collection. It was these mediaeval sermon books which formed the basis of the Dean's study on "Mediaeval Sermon Books and Stories," published in 1883. It was also the possession of the knowledge what the collection contained which led the British Folk Lore Society in 1890 to intrust to Prof. Crane the important task of bringing out a critical edition of the most important of the preaching story tellers, the French Crusading Bishop, Jacques de Vitry.

A Club of Book-Builders.

About three months ago a number of young men engaged in all departments of bookmaking—publishing, printing, binding, illustrating and the many mechanical industries—some of which are hardly ever heard of by the general reader, but without which no book could be produced, formed a club with the idea of exchanging views on bookmaking during the luncheon hour. The new club drew largely from the Aldine Club. The membership of the new organization is already over seventy-five, and unlike its predecessors the club has cut down its dues strictly to a working basis. At the "Franklin Feast," held last Wednesday in the old rooms of the Aldine Club, at 75 Fifth Avenue, to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, some sixty men sat down to table. Among them were F. H. Hitchcock, S. W. Marvin, R. W. Smith, Jesse Lynch Williams, E. D. North, W. S. Moody, Robert G. Cook, W. H. Patten, W. D. Moffat, H. A. Thompson, Rupert Hughes, W. A. Nesworthy, Oliver Hazard Perry, George A. Plimpton, James Chapin, and Dan Beard. There seems to be a general feeling among the members of the club, that as a club of workers the Book-Builders had been organized along the right lines. A committee on publication has been appointed, and before long volumes bearing the imprint of "The Book-Builders' Shop" may be expected. It is understood that the first effort will be confined to the republication of some English classic in the most artistic and appropriate form imaginable. After that it is expected that a work on the art of bookmaking will come from the Book-Builders' Shop, which, in chapters, each one of which will be written by an expert, will set forth the whole subject of bookmaking, from the making of the type and the illustrations, the career of the manuscript in a publishing house, and the binding of the volume, to its final setting before the reader.

Quaritch's Business to be Continued.

Trustworthy information has come to this country in reference to the future of the rare book establishment so long conducted at 15 Piccadilly, London, by the late Bernard Quaritch. It is now announced that Quaritch's son, who has several times visited this country on his father's business, will carry on the establishment under the old name. Whether he will adopt his father's aggressive methods remains to be seen. The value of the stock of rare books with which he begins business has, it seems, been overestimated in some quarters. Bernard Quaritch sold last Spring in Paris many of his finest Spanish books, including the best of his acquisitions from the Salva Library, and in other ways he had reduced in late years his immense stock.

For the Disposal of Authors' Manuscripts.

Mr. John Russell Davidson, who has established an agency for the disposal of authors' manuscripts, in the Townsend Building, at Broadway and Twenty-fifth Street, holds a record in the handling of manuscripts. In the dozen years he filled the position of registrar on the editorial staff of the Harper periodicals no less than 250,000 manuscripts passed through his hands. From the vast correspondence pertaining to this mountain of literary effort Mr. Davidson has planned a scheme for the practical help and relief of young writers. Every manuscript sent to him with a small fee receives personal and prompt attention. If the manuscript proves unmarketable, it is returned to the author with a straightforward letter of criticism and advice. Mr. Davidson's long experience in the periodical world enables him at a glance to point out the magazine or newspaper to which a manuscript is best suited. This saves the inexperienced author much useless labor and expense.

The earliest incident in Mr. Davidson's literary career is one that he will long remember. On meeting one of the best-known humorists of the decade in the great Franklin Square publishing house, he received the welcome assurance that his lines were laid in pleasant places and success was already his, in these words: "Why, you are all right! Go right down into the counting room and claim relationship with the famous family. Your ancestor, David, was a great Harper!"

The Brothers Benson.

Arthur Christopher Benson, the author of the important biography of his father, the late Archbishop Benson, which has just been published by the Macmillan Company, should not be confounded with his younger brother, Edward Frederic Benson, author of "Dodo," "Mammon," &c. The former, however, although a writer on serious subjects, is rapidly becoming one of the most voluminous authors. The very week in which appeared the life of his father, which extends to two volumes, with an aggregate of 1,500 pages, there was also published a work from the same pen, "Fasti Etoneses," which has 538 pages. Apropos of his brother, the following tale of how the father, the venerable Archbishop of Canterbury, unwittingly helped to advertise "Dodo" has just come to us. Soon after "Dodo" had become the talk of London the Archbishop presided at an educational function at Tonbridge School, where he made a speech. In it he dwelt on the bygone customs of English public school life, many of which, he said, "are now as extinct as the—" Then he paused. The traditional simile, which was on the Archbishop's tongue, was at once divined by the audience, and a smile went round the room, spreading until it broke into a burst of laughter, in which the Primate of all England joined. The sentence was never finished.

New French Books from Paris.

Those standard French books of reference published annually in Paris, the "Almanach Hachette" and the "Almanach de Gotha," have been received in this city by dealers in foreign books. This year the former is divided as follows: History, geography, literature, beaux arts, marriage, home life, botany, sciences, law, agriculture, sports, Paris addresses, automobile, &c. Persons interested in the coming Paris Exposition will be glad to learn that Meyer Brothers & Co. have just received from Paris "La Revue Technique de l'Exposition 1900." It is divided into nine parts, relating to architecture, material, electricity, mining, industry, &c. The same house has also received "Le Musée du Louvre," a handsome work, illustrated with over 500 large plates, and published by P. Gaultier. This work will be followed by all the musées of Europe. The volume begins with a general view of the palace, and contains such plates as "The Colonnade," the "Henry II. Staircase," and "The Cour Louvre Under Charles V." Brentano's have just received from Paris "Une Nouvelle Douleur," by Jules Bois, with an introduction by Marcel Prévost; "Discours de Combat," by Ferdinand Brunetière; "Clio," by Anatole France, with twelve illustrations in color by Mucha, and "Au Fond du Gouffre," by Georges Ohnet.

A New House of Publishers.

Nearly two years ago Dr. Carlos Martyn and Charles F. Rideal, both men of ideas and enterprise, and both voluminous writers, established a printing business for the publication of their own works. Success is said to have attended their efforts to a most marked degree, and now Mr. Rideal and his colleague propose to present books other than the efforts of their own pens in the same artistic letterpress and binding that have contributed to the success of their original undertaking. Hence the house known as the Abbey Press has been established, with agencies in London, Paris, and Melbourne. The catalogue of this press containing the list of books now in preparation shows the fine and high-class works which will characterize the publications of this house. This catalogue, printed on rubricated pages, is inclosed in wrappers of hand-made paper with deckle edges. The house has issued this week a volume of essays by Edward A. Tabor, entitled "Danger Signals," being a free discussion of the dangers which confront the individual, as well as society, to-day in the United States.

An Opportunity for New Authors.

Probably every publishing house in the country keeps on hand quantities of manuscripts which are awaiting the proper opportunity for publication; others have been set up in type, but, for some reason or other, they have not been sent to the printer. There are others, too, which have been put aside for further consideration. The cry is ever for fresh individual work, but the publisher who must publish "something" in order to take advantage of industrial prosperity often has to be satisfied with what he considers not quite adequate. Later the public may teach him his error. Imagine, therefore, what an (exasperating problem has just been presented to the Lippincott Company by the fire, which destroyed all the plates and manuscripts that they had on hand. While their prominent books will be reprinted at once, there is evidently here a special chance for the consideration of new material, both for book and magazine publication. Aside from the particular call for new manuscripts created by the fire, the state of the literary market to-day is such that it is doubtful if a similar opportunity for new authors has ever before existed.

Mr. Zangwill's new story, "The Mantle of Elijah," will first see light in Harper's Magazine, probably in the May number. It is a story of modern political life in England.

"The Boer Woman" is an important feature in the current number of Harper's Bazar. The author is Miss Sannie Krüger, a grandniece of President Krüger.

The publishers of W. L. Andrew's "Trio of Eighteenth Century French Engravers of Portraits in Miniature" are Dodd, Mead & Co. Through an accident the title page of the edition does not contain their name, which, however, appears on the binding.

"The Love of Parson Lord, and Other Stories," by Mary E. Wilkins, will shortly appear from the press of Harper & Brothers.

Harper & Brothers are preparing for presentation in book form, with numerous illustrations, Robert W. Chambers's latest romance, "The Conspirators."

"Red Pottage" has just passed into its sixth edition at Harper & Brothers'.

Among the books to be published to-day by G. P. Putnam's Sons are "Aboard the American Duchess," by George L. Meyers; "Heredity and Human Progress," by Dr. W. Duncan McKim; "Henry Knox," by Noah Brooks, in the Men of Energy Series, and William M. Ramsay's important work, "A Historical Commentary Upon St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians," all of which have been briefly described in these columns.

Among the books to be published by the Doubleday & McClure Company Feb. 2 will be "Shakespeare, the Man," by Prof. Goldwin Smith; "The Life of Lincoln," by Ida M. Tarbell, in two illustrated volumes, containing hundreds of letters, speeches, and telegrams never before published, and a new edition of "The Man with the Hoe," in which the author, Edwin Markham, has made some textual changes, especially one line—instead of "and pillared the blue firmament with light," it now reads "and marked their ways upon the unknown deep." Although the volume will contain no other poem, there will be an exhaustive commentary concerning "The Man with the Hoe."

Fifty copies of Prof. E. K. Rawson's "Twenty Famous Naval Battles," published by T. Y. Crowell & Co., have been ordered by the United States Government to be placed in the various libraries maintained on the battleships and elsewhere. The work, which is in two volumes, is said to be as much in demand as it was at the close of the late war with Spain.

The constantly increasing sale of Gilbert Parker's historical romance, "The Seats of the Mighty," recalls the fact that this book is presented in a uniform edition consisting of six volumes by D. Appleton & Co. The other volumes of the set which include most distinctive specimens of this author's voluminous works are "The Trail of the Sword," "The Trespasser," "The Translation of a Savage," "Mrs. Falchion," and "The Pomp of the Lavilettes."

Two books that will appeal both to mercantile as well as to scientific circles are being published by Longmans, Green & Co. "The Prevention of Factory Accidents," by John Calder, Inspector of Factories for Scotland, is a work that is bound to interest American factory owners as well as legislators, to say nothing of the information that it contains which will appeal to the sociologist. "Telephotography," by Thomas R. Dallmeyer, is a comprehensive work on the science of taking photographs as the objects appear when viewed through the telescope.

Among the features of the February number of The Home Magazine will be a special illustrated article descriptive of the impressive ceremonies at Mount Vernon on Dec. 14 last, commemorative of the centenial of Washington's death. The photographs illustrating this article are said to be the only ones hitherto published. The same number contains "An Appreciation of Gen. Lawton," by a personal friend of the dead soldier, Dr. Thomas Calver of Washington.

Mr. Ernest Seton-Thompson's "Biography of a Grizzly" will shortly be issued in book form by The Century Company. It should make a charming companion volume to "The Trail of the Sandhill Stag," published about Christmas time by Charles Scribner's Sons. Both these books are illustrated by the author, whose charming conceptions of nature are well known.

"The Open Road," being a little book for wayfarers, compiled by E. V. Lucas, is in active preparation at Henry Holt & Co.'s. The volume will be presented with illustrated cover-linings, with flexible covers in green and gold.

"Mexican Vistas," a book of travel, by Harriott Wight Sherratt, just published by Rand, McNally & Co., is said to be already in large and increasing demand, probably owing to the fact that because of its growing industrial prosperity Mexico presents more and worthy attraction for the American. Mrs. Sherratt shows that the enterprising, bustling Mexico of to-day is quite a different thing from the dormant Mexico of only a decade ago.

J. F. Taylor & Co. have in preparation a new edition de luxe of the "Poetical Works of Alfred Lord Tennyson." This edition, which contains ten full-page etchings and photogravures, is to be published in ten volumes. There will be presented with this edition the "Life of Tennyson," by the present Lord Tennyson, including twenty-four full-page etchings and photogravures, in four volumes. The edition of these works is limited to 500 impressions.

Since the announcement was made that Lord Roberts of Kandahar had been appointed to the chief command of the British troops in South Africa, renewed interest has been shown in his "Forty-one Years in India: From Subaltern to Commander in Chief." The book is published in this country by Longmans, Green & Co., and graphically sets forth the formative influences which contributed to make the character of the man who has now been sent against the Boers, with the hopes of England speeding him on.

Notes From Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 17.—A unique publication, which will be issued at no very distant date by Drexel Biddle, is Albert White Vorse's "The Laughter of the Sphynx." Drexel Biddle was a heavy loser by the Lippincott fire, and among other things this entire book was destroyed—plates, illustrations, and even the manuscript. It has been rewritten, however, by Mr. Vorse from notes in his possession and from portions of it which have appeared in the magazines. These articles attracted no little attention when they were published, but the illustrations which will form a strong feature of the book will be in the nature of a surprise. They are the work of F. W. Stokes, whose fame as the delineator of arctic scenes and subjects is well known. The book is a curious one—arctic romances—the writer depicting the Eskimo through the medium of fiction as he really exists in his frigid home. That both author and artist are thoroughly well qualified for the task is a foregone conclusion. They were both members of Lieut. Peary's expedition of 1892, which reached about the same degree of north latitude as that attained by the second Grinnell expedition under Elisha Kent Kane in 1853-4, and the scenes of "The Laughter of the Sphynx" are largely drawn from the experiences of that trip. The illustrations, which are ten in number, are from paintings, both in water and oil, and are especially strong in depicting the racial characteristics and the animal life of the far north.

Mr. Biddle's own book, "The Madeira Islands," in two volumes, with superb illustrations from photographs, was equally unfortunate, the entire American edition being destroyed. It has, however, been issued in London and has been very favorably received. Drexel Biddle was awarded the silver medal at the recent National Export Exposition at Philadelphia for book publishing.

The New Lippincott Magazine promises two new features of special importance for 1900. The first of these is a series of papers on "The Great Battles of the World," by Stephen Crane. Since his first book, "The Red Badge of Courage," Mr. Crane has not returned to the subject which made him famous, and the New Lippincott is highly favored in being the medium for this second appearance in his best field. The second of the striking features of the New Lippincott is a series of Mormon stories, by a writer who has seen much of the inner life of polygamy, Mrs. J. K. Hudson, and who describes the pathetic—often tragic—scenes of women's heroic suffering under an odious tyranny. These facts are draped in a cloak of glowing fiction. Among the distinguished writers who will contribute novels to the New Lippincott during the coming year are the following: Mrs. Margaret Deland, Gen. (formerly Capt.) Charles King, Mrs. Anna Katharine Greene Rohlfs, E. W. Hornung, W. Pett Ridge, Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, William Le Queux, Charles G. D. Roberts, Alice Brown, and Ellen Olney Kirk. The Lippincott still adheres to the plan which it first popularized, that of publishing a complete novel in each issue.

The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia will shortly commence the publication of a series of biographical sketches of the late Dwight L. Moody by his son, Will Moody, entitled "Memories of Moody." "The Grip of Honor," the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's new romance of the Revolution, will begin, to be issued serially, in The Post in about a month. Scribner's will publish it in book form. Another feature which is promised for The Post is a series of short stories of adventure by A. T. Quiller-Couch.

Paul Leicester Ford has been so busily engaged with other matters that he has been unable to finish the third volume of "The Life and Letters of John Dickinson," which he is editing for publication by the Pennsylvania Historical Society. He has now returned to the work, however, and the publication of the third volume may be looked for at no very distant day.

An important genealogical work which will shortly be issued through the Historical Society is the genealogy of the Earle family, of which George H. Earle is the present head. It is being prepared by Thomas Allen Glenn, the author of many genealogical works, and its copious illustrations will lend it especial distinction.

Mr. Finck's "Primitive Love."*

When Mr. Henry T. Finck, the well-known musical critic, published some years ago his estimate of love, which he entitled "Romantic Love and Personal Beauty," it seemed as if he had exhausted, in a way, the subject. He now, however, gives us a new and still more exhaustive historical study of the emotion of love, under the title of "Primitive Love and Love Stories." Although he necessarily repeats himself, it is only fair to say that in his last work Mr. Finck fascinates his reader and keeps his interest throughout as he did in his first book.

The present volume, one of some 351 pages, is really a remarkable compendium and shows unusual power of research. The author has done more than roam through libraries and tomes. He has browsed, and to good purpose, through the almost exhaustless fields of erotic literature extant, with the evident purpose of adding his discoveries on the universal topic to those of the numberless writers before him on this subject and to demolish the generally accepted and sentimental idea that the emotion known as love in its better and purer sense has always existed, even among primitive and savage peoples, and is prevalent to-day. Mr. Finck is, in other words, an iconoclast, and out-Schopenhauers Schopenhauer and out-Spencers Spencer. He would have us believe that romantic love, in the general acceptance of that term, has never been a characteristic of ordinary human nature, and that even in the most refined civilizations of to-day it is still comparatively rare. He compares his function in writing the book to that "of an architect who gets his materials from various parts of the world and fashions them into a building of more or less artistic merit," and he also very truly says that "the anthropologist has to gather his facts from a greater variety of sources than any other writer."

The sub-title of Mr. Finck's book, as may naturally be supposed from this indication of its contents, should not be the one which he says he has been tempted to give it, "A Vindication of Civilization," as against the misrepresentations of those sentimentalists who try to create the impression that savages owe all their depravity to contact with whites, and were originally spotless angels. But "Non virginibus puerisque." Mr. Finck has found it necessary or advisable in his exhaustive study of the history of love to describe practices, tell stories, and, particularly in his review of primitive love in India and Eastern countries, to give examples which are not for the young man and woman. In some cases he himself is obliged to quote the original Latin or French. It is, however, only fair to say that, while certain portions of the book bring it distinctively and distinctly under the head of erotic literature for private libraries only, the author treats the subject with all possible delicacy, and that a high purpose is apparent all through the work. To briefly sum up his argument, it is that love is a composite and variable sentiment and not a simple feeling, and that love among all primitive peoples and except among most highly developed and civilized organizations has always been and is always based either on the natural inclination to perpetuate the species, or the absolutely selfish holding of women as property, for their use as slaves or breeders. Altruistic love, which is the only truly romantic love and which finds its satisfaction in the happiness of the loved one, is, he tells us, rare.

This argument, while advanced by Mr. Finck in an entertaining way and exemplified by numberless illustrations, is not a new one. The student of Schopenhauer and of Herbert Spencer must feel all through that the author has saturated himself with their arguments and "goes them one better." He is dexterous in argument and a facile writer, but he is not original. There are more of those who will read Mr. Finck's book and who should read it if they wish to be entertained and instructed who in the main agree with him, not having read his work, than he can possibly imagine. There are more men and women who from reading and experience have come to know with Mr. Finck, or before him, that what we call romantic love is a very composite mental state, made up, to take his very excellent compilation, of "individual preference, monopolism, coyness, jealousy, mixed moods of hope and despair, hyperbole, adoration, purity, pride, admiration of personal beauty, gallantry, self-sacrifice, sympathy, and affection," than he probably imagines. Admitting this, it may be further said that it would be difficult to find a man or woman so persistent and so interested as to give to the proving of the argument such time and such research as has the author. In this way he has performed a most praiseworthy task and one that should bring him the grateful acknowledgment of readers and students. Between the covers of his well-printed and well-compiled volume one may find a wealth of material, and the results of an examination into the erotic literature of all climes, lands, and ages, that makes it really worthy of the title "Infinite riches in a little room."

This valuable result of Mr. Finck's labors makes us ready to excuse or overlook his somewhat dogmatic tone, his rather unnecessarily rough handling of the misguided men and women who have woven from their imagination misleading tales of sentiment among savages with which in the past they have charmed us, and his seemingly unconscious and refreshing idea that he has found something in the history of love that Darwin, Spencer, and Schopenhauer did not discover before him.

It is sad to have to break another puppet of our fancy—that which represented love in past ages and especially among uncivilized people as a pure and holy sentiment. What was left of this puppet—already battered—Mr. Finck in this latest work pretty well destroys.

*PRIMITIVE LOVE AND LOVE STORIES. Two. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. By Henry T. Finck.

An Egyptological Puzzle.*

Rawlinson may be antiquated, and as for that, Brugsch-Bey, but Mr. Orlando P. Schmidt's "Chronological History of Ancient Egypt" is so novel as to take one's breath away. Supposedly it is when the author studied Manetho that he found the key to the chronology of the many thousands of years that passed before the time of the Egyptian priest. Taking such dates as Josephus furnishes, the birth of Adam is set down as having happened in 4138 B. C. and the Exodus in 1648 B. C. Mr. Schmidt writes:

The strangest fact, however, connected with this chronology and the attempt of Josephus to convert the Expulsion of the Hyskos into the Exodus, is that modern Egyptologists still cling to the date 1648 B. C. for the beginning of the eighteenth dynasty, although they are well aware that the expulsion of the Hyskos had no connection with the Exodus.

Mr. Schmidt quotes Maspero, who in his "Dawn of Civilization" has in a prudent way tried to fathom the mysteries of the long past. Maspero wrote to this effect, that Mena and his successors had only some fragments of papyri with which they constructed history—in short, that they were no more sure of their facts than we are. The author of the volume under notice writes:

We read and wonder how one of the most distinguished interpreters of hieroglyphic inscriptions of the ancient Egyptians could have developed into such an agnostic as to the history, literature, and civilization of the people to whom he has devoted the best energies of his life.

The purpose of the author and his work he thus defines:

As the title indicates, it is a self-verifying, chronological history of ancient Egypt from the foundation of the kingdom to the beginning of the Persian dynasty. It covers a vast period of 3,700 years, much of which was heretofore unknown and unexplained.

Commenting on the work of investigation as carried out before Mr. Schmidt, he writes:

Some of the errors and superstitions regarding the Egyptians, which were current among so-called "scientists," were of such a preposterous nature that my native common sense recoiled from them instinctively, but there were others which were of a more subtle character.

Presumption of universal knowledge on the part of a reviewer must be always considered as ridiculous. Mr. Schmidt goes, however, fearlessly to work, building up an edifice, which he peoples with the Princes of the most remote periods. Prehistoric researches are difficult things to handle, and so we are forced to confess, that to us the early Egyptian dynasties are just as obscure as they ever were. Nevertheless, all modern research proves that we must put further back the civilization of Egypt.

*A SELF-VERIFYING CHRONOLOGICAL HISTORY OF ANCIENT EGYPT. From the Foundation of the Kingdom to the Beginning of the Persian Dynasty. A Book of Startling Discoveries. By Orlando P. Schmidt. Cincinnati, Ohio: Charles C. Shaw.

A volume containing selections from Lesage's "Gil Blas," edited by Prof. W. U. Vreeland of Princeton, will shortly be published by Henry Holt & Co. This house will also present at the same time eight of Baumbach's delightful "Soumer Marchen," edited by Dr. Edward Meyer of Adelbert.

DODD, MEAD & CO.

OFFER

BARGAINS IN BOOKS

previous to removal to 35th Street and Fifth Avenue, about February 1st.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY to secure books, rare, choice and miscellaneous at very low prices.

Hundreds of miscellaneous books much below cost.

Books in fine leather bindings at prices to tempt the closest buyers.

Sets of Standard Authors in the most desirable editions and bindings at decided reductions from usual net prices.

French Books. A small lot way below cost.

Stationery at decided reductions.

Clearance catalogue on application.

DODD, MEAD & CO.,

Fifth Ave., Cor. 21st St., New York.

Hundreds of Thousands Have Been Sold of

MRS. WIGGIN'S DELIGHTFUL STORY

The Birds' Christmas Carol,

but the demand continues unabated. New edition, from new plates. With illustrations. Attractively bound. 50 cents.

Penelope's Progress

An inimitable story of sense, wit and uncommon interestingness. $1.25.

The Story of Patsy. 60 cents.

Timothy's Quest

$1.00; illustrated by OLIVER HERFORD. $1.50.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston

11 East 17th Street, New York.

MR. CHOATE.

An Address at Acton on Books and Libraries.

The Hon. Joseph H. Choate, the American Ambassador to England, supported by Lord George Hamilton, the Bishop of London, and many other gentlemen, on Jan. 3 opened the Passmore Edwards Public Library at Acton. The audience included Mrs. Choate and Mrs. Creighton, to the former of whom was presented a beautiful bouquet of orchids as she entered the building. The library has accommodation for 20,000 books, but it opens with 8,000, to be increased shortly to 10,000. Mr. Passmore Edwards has given £4,000 toward the cost. Mr. E. F. Hunt, who presided at the meeting, alluded to the sympathy of Britons for the United States in their late war, and to the sympathy practically expressed by Americans for England in her present difficulty. Mr. Choate was most cordially greeted. After declaring the library free and open to the public, he said:

If there is one thing on which Americans of all creeds, parties, colors, and social conditions most heartily agree it is this subject of education, and of free libraries as a part of education. It is a perpetual bond of sympathy between all who read English books and speak the English tongue. However much we, as a young Nation, may have to learn from older nations, we may in this one field claim at least the sympathetic interest of all the world. Our common school system, which dates back to the very earliest days of our Colonial life, provides free education at the public expense for every boy and every girl up to the time when they are able to take care of themselves. Public and private munificence supplements that system by the establishment of free libraries, bringing knowledge home to the very doors of the people throughout the land.

With us free libraries are numbered by thousands. Every considerable town is proud of its free library, and the towns are and will be graded and measured according to the dignity and usefulness of the libraries they possess. The truth is that our whole social and political structure in America is based on the general education of the people. When our fathers resolved for self-government—that is the government of the people, by the people, and for the people—they wisely concluded that the permanence of our Constitution and the security of our liberties must rest on the educated intelligence of the whole community. And there it has rested in safety unto this day.

Let me add one other thing about our system of libraries. So urgent are the American authorities to give the people easy access to knowledge that in the great State of New York the Regents of the University, who have charge of the people's education, have established a regular system of traveling libraries, in addition to the free, stationary, permanent libraries existing throughout the State. These traveling libraries have 100 volumes each. They make tours of the remoter school districts, and as each advances it is followed by a similar library with books to take the places of those already read. I do not know that any parts of England are so remote and solitary as to require such an institution, but if there are poor and remote districts without books I most cordially recommend the utility of such a system.

London has great libraries. First and foremost is one which is almost, if not quite, the greatest and noblest in the world—the library of the British Museum—but unless a man can give all his time to reading, or has a special subject of research, he can hardly go there. An hour or two hours a day, which is all that the busy man or woman can give to reading, can hardly be spent at the British Museum. To go there is quite an expedition. It takes at least half a day. So there is the necessity, which Mr. Passmore Edwards has been a pioneer in recognizing, for these local free libraries, which, like justice, shall come to the very doors of the people. Your library of 8,000 volumes will undoubtedly be of greater use to the inhabitants of Acton than the whole million and a half on shelves and in stacks at the British Museum. In these 8,000 volumes you have a record of all the great things that have been done and thought and said from the beginning of history, means of ample recreation and entertainment for the individual and the household, facilities for advancing by self-improvement the education which you have already received at the hands of the State. Nothing tends more to enrich and dignify and ennoble a community than such an institution as this. Shakespeare says: "If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps." That is as true to-day as it was in the sixteenth century. Here Mr. Passmore Edwards has erected one of his twenty-four monuments that dot the surface of the great metropolis, and the men and the women who have been active in promoting this scheme have erected their monument too. Henceforth Acton will be a better place to be born in, to work in, and to live in, than it has ever been before.

There is special provision for children in your library, and I think when men come to make choice of a residence in Acton they will not forget that fact. [The latter part of this sentence was almost drowned by the crying of a baby among the audience.] Don't be disturbed by the baby. Nobody knows better than my Lord Bishop that out of the mouths of babes and sucklings cometh wisdom. A free library, too, is a great thing for the workingman. Nothing dignifies and advances him so much as knowing more to-day than he did yesterday, and more to-morrow than to-day. I do not like to appeal to mere mercenary views, but when the people of Acton find that this library has advanced the price of real estate and leaseholds in the neighborhood the objections of those who regard it as merely for the benefit of the working classes will disappear. One of the great officers of your Government said to me since I came that the permanent population of London is growing at the rate of 60,000 persons a year. I say, therefore, that there ought to be one library equal to this established every year in some part of this great metropolis. It is a great object for the new century, wherever that begins. The question is one that I leave for dignitaries of the Church and the State to determine.

I do not know what motto you have concluded to put over the door of this institution, but "Medicine for the soul" was the inscription over the door of the library at ancient Thebes, and I suggest that it would be a good motto for your institution. Carlyle says that all that man has done, gained, thought, or been is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of books. "They are the chosen possession of men," and here you have them. Each citizen in this district owns these 8,000 volumes quite as much as all his fellow-citizens.

Now you have got the library, how shall you make the most and the best of it? That is a great question. There is a book with which all of you, except, possibly, the baby, are familiar. It is Ecclesiastes, and it says that in the making of books there is no end. Subject to correction, I think that was written about 1,600 years before the invention of printing. What would the writer say now if he came and found that the British Museum alone contained a million and a half of volumes, that the teeming press of Great Britain was pouring out 5,000 new volumes a year, and the press of America almost as many? Suppose a person can read 100 books a year, a very liberal allowance for men and women who have anything else to do. It would take him 15,000 years to read through the library of the British Museum as it stands to-day. Then there is the increase. It would add 100 years to his reading for every year that went by, so that when he had got to three times the age of Methuselah he would find himself further off the end than ever. And I think we may safely believe that if he ever did get through he would be one of the most learned fools on earth. It is quite evident that a man cannot read everything. Most of us have very little time for reading. What shall we do? Great scholars and sages have laid down rules worth remembering. Bacon's is the best. He says, "Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested." Books like the novels of the day that you can read best by judicious skipping are to be tasted at the rate, say, of one an hour, or one an evening. The books to be swallowed are those, I think, which may be read once. The books to be chewed and digested are the gold nuggets of literature.

Old Fuller, a great reader himself, says "Memory is like a purse. If it be overfull so that it cannot shut, all will drop out of it." That is very true. You must remember it when trying to make the best of your library. I would like to find some mode of remembering the best parts of what I have read. Some generations ago men remembered a great deal more of what they read than they do now. It was a day of fewer and dearer books, when the household library was made up of such volumes as the Bible, Shakespeare, Milton, and Plutarch's "Lives." Our Puritan forefathers read the Bible through every two years, each man in the presence of his family. It was one of the best things they did. What was the result? They knew the Bible by heart, and it had a vast influence on their language, their morals, and their character. That is the way in which you may be sure of retaining a good memory. Read less and read it over and over again. The habit of committing something to memory daily is invaluable, yet we abandon it as we grow older. If it were kept up, a man at fifty or sixty would remember as well as a boy and would carry with him to the end a vast deal of rich and happy thought to gladden his life. I would rather read one of the best hundred books three times than three books outside the hundred once each. A good book improves on acquaintance, like a perfect work of art. A bad book does not. That is a valuable test. Let me give you another saying from Carlyle. It is this: "If time is precious, no book that will not improve by repeated reading deserves to be read at all." Lastly, I would say, read what you like. Do not read anything merely because other people like it. Select some good author or subject that excites your admiration, and read over and over again.

Ancient Irish Heroes.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I have seen Mr. Charles de Kay's interesting review of Dr. Douglas Hyde's "Literary History of Ireland," and was not a little surprised to find Mr. de Kay undertake to depress from actualities to mere gods some of our ancient Irish heroes. Mr. de Kay, whose treatment of his subject certainly shows an acquaintance with ancient Irish history exceptional in an American, and a keen sympathy with the subject, goes god-making too light-heartedly. "Because none of the old Irish genealogies work back to Finn and Cuchullain, these two are therefore myths or gods," is logic so loose that one of Mr. de Kay's abilities should have hesitated to use it. Also, Cuchullain and Finn certainly did not belong to the "despised race." I should like Mr. de Kay to quote any authority for this. Finn, far from belonging to the despised race, was one whom the despised race and their gods hated heartily, and worked hard (in the mythical tales that will centre around distant heroes) to circumvent. The Fuatha de Danaans again and again endeavored to enchant and destroy Finn and Feine—because they were the boldest and best of the race that had conquered. Finn was so human and so real that even in the mythical tales in which he figures he had not a shadow of divine attribute. By a fortunate accident he had (in the mythical tales) received the power of prophecy. And this was an accident by which any other mortal would, under the circumstances, equally have benefited.

None of the bardic or historical tales hint at any divinity in Finn's nature. He is recognized as a brave man, a great general, and a fairly good fighter. Even in the imaginative realms of the folk-tale, (passing beyond the folk-lore of the later centuries, in which he is represented as a giant with extraordinary strength,) I distinctly recall that wherever Finn is dragged in as portion of the machinery, or even where (as often happens) the tale is woven around Finn himself, all the supernatural actions are performed by mysterious individuals who opportunely appear at the opening, and who disappear again at the close. A sea has got to be crossed, the Ship-builder of Shipbuilders throws two chips upon the water, and immediately two stately ships rise and ride upon the waves, awaiting Finn and his friends. An impregnable castle has to be entered; the Climber of Climbers goes over the unclimbable wall and unbolts the gates to Finn. A stolen child has to be stolen back from the giant king. The Thief of Thieves achieves the impossible, and steals it for Finn; and so on.

Finn was an actuality as real as Cormac Mac Art or Charles de Kay or

SEUMAS MAC MANUS.

New York, Jan. 16, 1900.

Religion in Colonial Maryland.*

It may be remembered by students of Church history, as an incident in a controversy of wider import between Mr. Gladstone and Cardinal Manning, that the former denied the Cardinal's claim of Maryland as a place where the Church of Rome had given religious toleration. Dr. Smith's very interesting and able volume is written with the purpose of emphasizing and substantiating Mr. Gladstone's assertion.

Instead of an apostle of toleration, in advance not only of his Church but of his time, he portrays George Calvert, Lord Baltimore, as a disappointed statesman, a ruined man, to whom poverty and obscurity would have been a living death. The Maryland enterprise, according to Dr. Smith, was simply a business venture, undertaken by an ambitious, much-thwarted man with an eye not to the good of humanity or the glory of God, but to his own advantage and aggrandizement. In other words, Lord Baltimore and his successors are to be placed upon the same footing as any other colonists; and the toleration extended to Protestant sects in Maryland was of the same as the famous subsequent act of James II. of England, intended merely as a cover for the protection of Roman Catholics.

Dr. Smith's argument is ingenious, and he marshals to its support much documentary evidence. Fiske takes, more temperately, a similar view in "Old Virginia and Her Neighbors." These writers have not only testimony but probability on their side, for human nature is but human nature. Saints are scarce in any Church, and are not to be looked for in the ranks of politicians and at the Courts of Kings. Disinterested toleration is the last lesson to be learned by the world. Every Church that has had the power has been a persecuting Church.

Therefore, although it is always painful to lose an illusion, we can see nothing in Dr. Smith's statements that need rouse the ire of those who differ from him. He raises questions of fact that should not be questions of feeling. His assertions should be met by proof, not by denunciation. If they are irrefragable, he has simply shown, we think, that the Lords Baltimore were of the same mold as the Protestant colonists, and that, to quote Fiske, "Religious toleration in Maryland was a happy product of circumstances," and not the inspired action of Christlike rulers.

Dr. Smith rather too obviously holds a brief for the Anglican Church in Maryland, and cannot quite shake himself free from religious animus when he treats of the faults and failures of his brothers of other communions. In our age when the Quakers alone saw any wrong in slavery what is more puerile than to try to fix the guilt of its introduction into a colony upon a particular nation or Church? Puritans or Jesuits, English or Dutch—what boots it which actually imported the first slaves, when the conscience of all permitted slavery? Again, we should imagine it very provoking to Roman Catholic, and, indeed, to all save Episcopalian readers, to find no Church recognized as such save the Church of England. The chapter entitled "The Beginnings of the Maryland Church," for example, simply means the beginning of the Anglican Church in Maryland. Dr. Smith evidently struggles to be fair. He appreciates the really great qualities, the "inspired common sense" of Cecilius Calvert, the second Lord Baltimore; but his churchmanship sways him too often from the historic attitude, and mars a book which would otherwise be a valuable, as it is certainly a luminous and eminently readable, contribution, to the early history of a unique and fascinating colony.

Would Abolish Uncut Edges.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

In THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 13 I notice your interesting article on "Modern Bookbinding." I wish you had said a few words of disapproval of the late style of uncut edges. During the past few months many books have been advertised, some in expensive bindings, with the alluring bait "gilt tops and uncut edges," as if a nice chromo were to be thrown in.

I have no fault to find with gilt tops; they adorn the book; but how uncut edges can add to the appearance of a book, or can be endured, passes my comprehension. To say nothing of the trouble to be obliged to cut the leaves apart with a knife, think of the uneven and ragged edges—catching dust and dirt, soiling so much more easily, and necessitating, for home use, a paper knife, a nuisance for ever. How can any lady endure handling such a book, or any one who likes neatness?

You mention Cobden-Sanderson and Miss Prideaux as bookbinders who have made efforts to make fine decoration and finish in books. Surely they do not think uncut edges neat or approve of the style! And will they not make also (as well as many publishers of books) a great effort to abolish the uncut edges and give the public smooth, clean-cut edges every time?

I have heard many persons lately express their dislike for uncut edges in bound books. When one draws from the public libraries a book with rough, ragged, and soiled uncut edges, and next one with clean, smooth, even-cut edges, what a grateful contrast, and how noticeable! I hope the uncut edges will be short-lived.

GEORGE H. KNOWLTON.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1900.

"Not One of the Clique;" Not at All.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

If THE TIMES is not one of the clique of newspapers that refuse their columns to Baconians, I do not think you will lose prestige by having the honesty to admit that Ignatius Donnelly (even if he be only Ignatius Donnelly—let us grant that much to begin with) has in his last book proved some curious circumstances.

If you and I and the rest of mankind find such words as "Francis" and "Bacon" on a page of Shakespeare, what does that amount to? Nothing (except to possibly one more grain of circumstantial evidence added to the already formidable heap.) But if we find that the text in the vicinity of those words is distorted to admit them, what does that prove? Nothing! If, however, so poor a man as Ignatius Donnelly, living in the barbaric West, pencil in hand, discovers that a certain exact count leads to each of these words, what does that prove? Nothing! If, however, by exactly the same count, we find also the words "Nicholas" Bacon's son in the near vicinity of the words "Francis" and "Bacon," what does that prove? Oh, nothing! What, then, would be considered as circumstantial evidence? If I set out to write "Tom, Dick, and Harry," and, instead, write "Tom, Dick, and Francis," do I do that for any purpose, or is it a slip of the pen? But, admitting that it is a slip of "Shakespeare's pen," is it not curious (not curious evidence, but only curious accident,) that when this "Shakespeare" comes to speak of the patron saint of Theeves, he should write St. Nicholas instead of St. Hermes? These two slips bring in accidentally two words required into focus. It is all very well for gentlemen like Appleton Morgan (who was a Baconian himself once) to sneer at us, and say that we prove that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's just once every ten years! We have not proved it yet, perhaps. But the rule of cumulative evidence is growing. And while the Shakespeareans are quarreling in your columns (as videlicet a year ago) as to whether poor little Sidney Lee's "Life of Shakespeare" was fact or fable, we Baconians are patiently enduring your ridicule and braving your contumely, and making the cairn higher and higher, until, some day, some respectable person will (on his own motion, and not under duress,) exclaim: "Did a Warwickshire lack-linen three hundred years ago know more about all created and uncreated matter than the entire civilization of this planet can dream of in the last twelfth month of the nineteenth century?"

A POOR, DESPISED BACONIAN.

The New York Public Library, Dec. 18, 1899.

A Way to Judge One's Friends.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Your delightful literary sheet, THE SATURDAY REVIEW, is a source of great pleasure to me, and there is always so much in it that I would like to answer, I have refrained altogether lest I acquire a monopoly. What Clara Conway says in your issue of Jan. 13 appeals to me so strongly that I must voice my sentiments by agreeing with her.

A man is usually judged by his friends, but he can be judged much more truly by the books he loves. In too many cases our friends are the results of the accident of circumstances, but our choice of books is deliberate—there is no truer expression of a man's heart and mind than the kind of book he loves. Is there anything more gratifying than to read a book, then circulate it among your friends, finding out what each one thinks of it, and when you find the one who thinks as you do recognize in him or her a kindred spirit? It is a sure, safe way to gauge one's friends.

M. C. DOWELL.

Ridgefield Park, N. J., Jan. 15, 1900.

"Les Miserables" a Literary Education.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I see some souls, without a single thought, are giving forth maudlin criticism of "Les Miserables," Hugo's unique monument of literary immortality.

All sums of human experience teach that paths without obliquities are morbidly monotonous. So with any great literary product; if it met no adverse comment it would probably die from the torpor of universal acquiescence inspired by its existence.

"Les Miserables" was written, as is well known, to illustrate the inevitable oppression of human laws by reason of their oft-unmitigated universality. To a lawyer, at least, the utility of its function is thoroughly apparent. "Les Miserables" is the nearest approximation to a literary education that was ever placed between the covers of one volume. Tried by the truest all-time test of merit, it carries a weighty moral, and that insures it life as everlasting as the stars.

F. R. A.

Washington, Jan. 3, 1900.

*RELIGION UNDER THE BARONS OF BALTIMORE. By the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, D. D. Baltimore: E. Allen Lycett, Church Book Store. $1.25.

1900

TOO MANY BOOKS.

Part of an Address Before the Booksellers' League at the Aldine Club, on Jan. 17, by Francis W. Halsey, Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW.

Statistics have shown that more than 5,000 books are now published each year in England. In this country the total falls only some hundreds short of this. When we reflect how small a part of the writing activity now going on finds representation in these books, the result is appalling. Three years ago Frederick Macmillan declared publicly in London that his house in one year had accepted only 22 books out of 315 that were submitted. Inclined as we may be to blame the publishers for our deluge, these facts show us how substantial is our debt to them.

Other figures may appall us still more. The capacity of the book printing houses and binderies of New York has been estimated to be 100,000 volumes per week. It is believed that another 100,000 volumes of school books and cheaply made books could also be produced in one week. One New York house has been known to take an order on a Monday morning to manufacture 2,000 copies of a book of 350 pages by the following Wednesday night. One bindery in New York is said to have a capacity of 10,000 volumes per day.

Authors themselves have caught this fever of rapid production. Once fame has come to them they strive more and more to meet the demand—a process certain to ruin their art, and yet few withstand the temptation. One author records, as if proud of the achievement, that he can regularly produce a thousand words in a day; another can write fifteen hundred; while the most accomplished in that line boasts of four thousand. Writing done at this rate of speed is not literature and cannot be. It is simply job work—the work of day laborers; in no sense the work of genius or inspiration.

How deplorable would be the consequences if librarians counted among their treasures all the books sent to them, or if editors undertook to review all the books they receive. An editor would need a staff of enormous size, and he would produce the dullest of all periodicals. During a single month more than 400 books have been received by THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW. To notice all of these would mean to print over 100 reviews in each issue of that weekly paper. Does there exist on this planet one individual who in his own will would read each week 100 book reviews? Would ten persons read a quarter of them? To ride safely in this sea an editor has only one course open. He must select the interesting books—the vital, the wholesome, the purposeful, the good, and he must ignore the stupid and the vicious. All this means that, in the main, his articles will be favorable.

Since the time of Whipple and George Ripley a new office has come into the life of the critic. It need seldom be his duty to point out books that are bad. Life is far too short and the books of that kind are far too numerous. Bad they often are through ignorance, moral tone, or pretense. He may well neglect them. Silence is best, alike for them and for him. He has a far higher duty—a duty he owes to authors, to the public, and to himself. Let him find the good books—books like the Stevenson and Browning letters, and when he finds them exalt and proclaim their worth—not once, but a score of times.

The future probably holds little to afford us hope that the number of books will decline. It is more likely to increase, and the ratio will be a large one. But we need not despair. We may be more certain than of anything else that good books will live and bad ones die. It is with books as with all art—the art meant for all time. In old Athens once stood thousands of houses, but only one Parthenon was there. Still may our poet sing,

> Earth proudly wears the Parthenon
> As the best gem upon her zone.

In Italy have been erected millions of buildings, but the Roman Pantheon, St. Mark's at Venice, and St. Peter's have survived them all.

Let us get our 5,000 or our 10,000 books every year. It will still remain true that not more than one really great book can be produced in 100 years. We must remember how long Italy waited before Virgil came, that

> Wielder of the stateliest measure ever molded > by the lips of man,"

how long she waited for Dante; how long England waited for Shakespeare and still waits for a second Shakespeare; how France waited for Molière and Spain for Cervantes. Along with these divinely gifted men came throngs of second, third, and fourth rate writers—whole regiments of them—who had their brief reward, and then, each with his book in his hand, walked silently and forever into the unknown beyond.

No group of men knows better than this group assembled here that nine-tenths of the day's books are ephemeral. Their terms of life are not much longer than those of the newspapers; or, as old Omar would say, "a little longer than the flowers." Because a book sells by its hundreds of thousands, as many are now doing, does not mean that that book is certain of long remembrance. More strictly it means that the book will have no such remembrance at all, for the world's greatest books, and even the lesser great, have commonly met with cold receptions at their birth.

Time in these matters, as in so many others, is the great judge and the great avenger. It sets things right at last. Time sends to oblivion the unworthy and the pernicious. Time exalts and preserves the true, the beautiful, and the good. When we are told that some popular author has gained from his book a sum running into five, or possibly into six figures, let us console ourselves and still pin our faith to time's verdicts by recalling that "Paradise Lost" brought to its author only $75, and that Hawthorne wrote his "Twice-Told Tales" for $3 each.

Surely in our respective callings—for each of us in his own modest way—there lies an opportunity to do something to restrict this public appetite for the ephemeral and the unworthy. It has fallen our province to [illegible] books that are everlastingly good; books that have messages fit for the heart of man; books that will not perish as perish newspapers; books that make for righteousness.

Sidney Lanier's "Bob."*

The present book shows Sidney Lanier in a new light. The Southern poet has turned aside from his muse to write about something which, in the hands of many, if not of most, writers, would have been exceedingly commonplace. The incidents used by the author are briefly these: A young mocking bird has fallen from its nest. It is picked up and brought home. It is put in a cage. It eats. It grows. It is hungry. It is fed. It fights with its own reflection in the looking glass. It sleeps, molts, sings, and finally the cat kills it. Not very promising material, truly, and yet out of it Mr. Lanier has built up a narrative that every bird lover will want.

But the book before us contains something more than a touch of nature. The tall pines of the Georgia seacoast, with their abounding mocking birds, have a story to tell us above and beyond being only a setting out of which fell poor little Bob, who was found by a wayfarer in a sandy road which skirts a grove of pines, swept by generous breezes from the neighboring Gulf Stream. We see as we read something of the mystery of life, for Bob was but a few days old and had recently been only an egg with possibilities. He had broken the shell and become a bird, but so helpless that had it not been for the wayfarer he would have known life but to part with it. To save his life the bird was placed in a cage, not for the mere exercise of the power of reducing the bird to captivity. A certain charm there always is in regard to bird life, and in this particular case the poetic instinct has brought out much that were otherwise overlooked. It is hard to realize that anything but selfishness prevails among birds, but here we are told in all seriousness of a mocking bird that rose in the scale, so far as a bird could, to the exalted plane upon which the fearfully wounded Sir Philip Sidney rested when, denying himself the proffered cup of water, he ordered that it should be given to his comrade, the unknown dying soldier. Bob, following in the footsteps of Sir Philip, violated all traditions when he gave to a sick fledgling guest the portion of food allotted to him, even when his hunger was most intense. It is possible thus to learn unexpected lessons of the birds, and to find sermons in them that may well rank those lurking in dead stones.

A charming bit is that in which the battle of Bob and his looking-glass image is described. Realism speaks in all the lines, and the bird that had posed as an ornithological Sir Philip Sidney becomes a veritable feathered Don Quixote de la Mancha. We catch fleeting but fascinating glimpses of some of the wonders of the bird world when in the story Bob sings songs that he never learned. We cannot help but sorrow at this untimely taking off nor feel anything but resentment at the cat through whose fell agency the deed was done. The history tale is told with charming grace and with artistic setting. The illustrations of Mr. Dugmore harmonize admirably with the text and add to the beauty of outline the seduction of color. The book is a particularly dainty and pleasing volume.

*BOB: THE STORY OF OUR MOCKING BIRD. By Sidney Lanier. With sixteen illustrations in colors by Mr. Dugmore. Cloth, decorated boards, gilt top, uncut edges. Pages 82. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. Price, $1.25.

BRENTANO'S GREAT JANUARY CLEARANCE SALE

..AT PRACTICALLY WHOLESALE PRICES..

COMMENCING TO-DAY, BOOKS THROUGHOUT THEIR STOCK AT

DISCOUNTS NEVER BEFORE OFFERED

No Catalogues, No Exchanges, No Orders for Goods not in Stock taken at these Prices

		REGULAR PRICE	SALE PRICE
75,000	NEW BOOKS, Best Writers, Fiction, Biography, History, and all subjects.	$1.25	88c.
50,000	NEW BOOKS, Best Writers, Fiction, Biography, History, and all subjects.	$1.50	$1.05
25,000	NEW BOOKS, Best Writers, at $2.00, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00, $10.00.	At Corresponding Reductions
50,000	FRENCH BOOKS less than Paris Prices	75c. and $1.00	60c.
10,000	GERMAN BOOKS	$1.00	72c.

5,000 BOXES FINE WRITING PAPER, 15c.

50,000 PAPER NOVELS at 5c., 10c., 15c., 25c., and 31c.

	Regular Price	Sale Price
Standard Dictionary. Indexed, With Stand.	$12.00	$ 7.95 10.25
La Chartreuse de Parme. by De Stendhal. 2 Vols.	7.50	3.50
Waverley Novels. Half calf, 25 Vols., ...	60.00	31.50
Balzac. 20 Vols., Edition de Luxe, ...	50.00	37.50
Hugo. 28 Vols., with 140 Etchings. Best Edition in the Market, ...	70.00	30.00
5,000 Pocket Dictionaries. English, French, German, Italian and Spanish,	1.00	.75
The Celebrated Rosenthal Method for French, German, and Spanish, . . .	5.00	3.50

	Regular Price	Sale Price
Kipling Masterpieces. 7 Vols., boxed, ...	$3.50	$1.39
Shakespeare. Reader's Edition, 8 Vols., half lea., . .	15.00	7.79
Bulwer. Illustrated with 125 photogravures and etchings. 25 vols., 12mo, half mor., gilt tops. Per set,	75.00	33.75
EHot. Complete library edition, containing 60 full-page Illustrations: 8 vols., large 12mo, half calf, gilt tops. Per set,	16.00	11.95
Dickens. Containing over 300 illus. by Cruikshank and others. 30 vols., 12mo, half morocco, gilt tops. Per set, ...	90.00	64.50

HUNDREDS OF OTHER SETS AT CORRESPONDINGLY LOW PRICES

31 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK

NO. 15—JAPANESE BOTANY. Fac simile of Japanese book. (Cloth.)

NO. 16—"A THANKFUL REMEMBERANCE GOD MERCIE, 1630." Collected by Georgius Carletonus, D. D., Bishop of Chichester; 4th edition revised; printed by Aug. Muth, London, for Robert Mylbonne, at the sign of Three Pigeons, in Paul's Church Yard, 1630. Full morocco.

NO. 17—SIR THOMAS MOORE, "Utopia," 1624. One half calf. Printed by Bernard Alsop, Distaffe Lane, "Sign of Dolphin."

NO. 18—THE REPUBLICA ANGLORUM. The manner of government or policies of the Realme of England, compiled by Thomas Smyth. Printed by Henrie Middleton for Gregorie Seton, 1583. Full morocco.

NO. 19—HEURES A L'USIAGE DE ROMME AVEC CALENDAR, 4to. Printed on vellum, with woodcut borders composed of singular figures of birds, etc. Olive morocco, gilt edges bound by Zaehndorf; 1491, Paris S-Vostre. (Marque de Pigonchet.)

NO. 20—LAY OF THE LAST MINSTREL, (Walter Scott). 10th Ed., 1809. Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, and Orme, by Jas. Ballantyne & Co., Edinburgh. Full green morocco; medallion on cover.

Address WALTER ST. JOHN JONES, 23 East 3d St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Robert Clarke's Rare Books.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Being a subscriber and reader of your SATURDAY REVIEW, and seeing quotations therein of the value of old books, I take the liberty of inclosing a list of valuable books and manuscripts that have come into my hands as the executor of the Robert Clarke estate (Mr. Clarke was the old bookseller and publisher in Cincinnati,) and desire to know from you what they are worth, and with whom I could correspond looking to their disposal.

WALTER ST. JOHN JONES.

Cincinnati, Jan. 15, 1900.

NO. 1—BURNS'S POEMS, third edition, printed for A. Strahan, T. Cadell, in the Strand, and W. Creech, Edinburgh, 1787; bound in morocco; very rare.

NO. 2—HISTORY OF PERTH, by Thomas Hay Marshall. Published by John Fisher, High Street, Edinburgh, 1849; illustrated; bound in wood.

NO. 3—THE BREECHES BIBLE, printed in 1610; Robert Barker; bound in leather.

NO. 4—THE COURT SERMON, 1674; English manuscript; by Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, to James, Duke of Ormond; very rare.

NO. 5—CONTINUATION OF OUR WEEKLY NEWS. (The first newspaper.) Printed May 2d, 1622; No. 29; Nathaniel Butter and William Shenard; London; one-half calf.

NO. 6—M. S. Officium Beatae Mariae Virginis cum Calendario, 12mo. Manuscript on Vellum, capital letters, borders richly illuminated in gold and colors; bright gilt; red morocco, extra gilt edges; a beautiful volume. Silver ink, very rare.

NO. 7—MANUSCRIPT ON VELLUM, dated 1420. Brevarium Romanum cum Calendario, 24mo. Capitals and borders illuminated in gold and colors; several hundred initials in red and blue; red morocco; neat gilt edges; according to a note bearing date 1681, "Scripium in monastario in quo vixit, Thomas à Kempis."

NO. 8—"DELIGHTS FOR LADIES TO ADORN THEIR PERSONS." Printed by Humphrey Lovell, 1611. Bound in sheepskin.

NO. 9—NATURA BREVARIUM, 18mo., 490 pages, 1540. Black letter; London; woodcut of Royal Arms on title page; red morocco, gilt edges, tooled sides. By Hayday.

NO. 10—APHORISMS, OPINIONS AND REFLECTIONS OF THOMAS FAINE, by Juvencus, 1826. Printed by R. Carlile 62, Fleet Street, London. Full morocco.

NO. 11—RESTITUTION OF DECAYED INTELLIGENCE IN ANTIQUES; concerning English Nation. Printed 1653. Cloth annotated. Printed by John Bill, printer to King.

NO. 12—MANUSCRIPT ON VELLUM, 15th Century. "Livre D'Heures, Orations, Psalmi, Lectiones et Preces-varise cum Calendario." Beautiful, finely written Gothic characters; five illuminated miniatures, exquisite; eleven capitals; floriated borders; numerous small capitals in gold and colors.

NO. 13—COMMODIES CHINOIS. Old; paper bound.

NO. 14—POEMS ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS, by James Beattie, LL. D., Fr. S. E. Philadelphia, 1787. Bound in calf. Autograph of Fits Greene Halleck, and check inclosed.

Chaucer at the Grolier Club.

The coming exhibition to be held at the Grolier Club in commemoration of the five hundredth anniversary of the death of Geoffrey Chaucer should have for lovers of early English literature a special interest. Beginning with the first edition of "The Canterbury Tales," printed by William Caxton about 1478, all the important editions of Chaucer's chief work will be shown. In a number of instances, such as the first edition of the "Tales" and the "Troilus" of 1517, printed by De Worde, the copies exhibited are the only examples on this side of the Atlantic. It will, therefore, be seen that, bibliographically, the Grolier Club Chaucer exhibition will be unusually important. Its literary interest is, of course, self-evident.

To show the scope of the exhibition, the list of books to be exhibited is given here: "The Canterbury Tales," printed by Caxton about 1478, one of the eleven known copies; two leaves from Caxton's second edition of about 1484, of which only one perfect copy is extant; "The Noble and Amerous Ancyent Hystory of Troylus and Cresyde," Wynken de Worde, 1517, perhaps the finest copy known; two copies of the "Workes," of 1532, edited by W. Thynne, the first collected edition of the works of Chaucer; the Reynes and Bonham issues of the "Workes," of 1542; the Petit, Toye, and Kele issues of the undated edition of the "Workes," (about 1550;) three issues of the "Workes," of 1561; two issues of the "Workes," of 1598, and two of the edition of 1602.

The folio "Workes," of 1687, a reprint of the edition of 1602, is the last of the folios to be shown. Urry's edition of 1721, a large paper copy, follows, and then comes Tyrwhitt's splendid edition of 1775-8, in five volumes. The Pickering reprint of Tyrwhitt, in 1822, five volumes, is to be exhibited, on both small and large paper, as well as the reissue of Tyrwhitt in 1830, one of two copies made on India paper. The "Works," Pickering, 1845, Aldine Series, in six volumes, follows, together with the "Romaunt of the Rose," 1846, the masterly edition of Prof. Skeat, 1894, and the lovely edition printed by William Morris in 1896 at the Kelmscott Press. The exhibition will be closed on private view at the club's annual meeting Thursday, Jan. 25, and will be open for two weeks after that date.

Chief Among Them All.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I agree most cordially with Mr. Hiserodt as to Dickens being a writer for the emotions and Thackeray for the intellect, but as to the former's being a photographer, it is I think hardly the proper term. Few of Dickens's characters are true to life—they are either exaggerated in one respect or another.

Call Dickens rather a clever portrait painter in dealing with his heroes and heroines, and an excellent caricaturist when describing his other characters. Characters! When we see an odd-looking or strange-acting person of either sex, we exclaim, "How like Dickens!" but the every-day commonplace populace—that's what Thackeray told about. He really "held the mirror up to nature."

Who ever saw a Silas Wegg, a Smike, or the Brothers Cheeryble, or, if they did, did they not look upon them with the same curiosity as they would gaze at the freaks in a museum?

But Pendennis, Rawdon Crawley, and the rest—why, we see them every day.

And the language. Thackeray's people talk as we hear men and women talk, while with only one exception that I can think of—Bella Wilfer—the Dickens characters declaim, orate, or dissolve into tears in a way very common on the stage, but seldom met with in real life.

This may be heresy, but it grows on me the more I read, and both the novelists have been the chiefs of my lares and penates for years.

GEORGE L. CONROY.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Count Tolstoi and Mr. Crosby's "Plain Talk."

Count Leo Tolstoi has written a letter to Mr. Ernest Crosby with reference to his new book of verse, "Plain Talk in Psalm and Parable," (Small, Maynard & Co., Boston,) in which he announces his intention of having it translated in part into Russian as follows: "I like the book very, very much. Some of the pieces—the choice is difficult because all are very good—I will have translated into Russian and published. There is nothing more new and interesting than the most common subjects looked at from a Christian point of view, and that is what you are doing in your book, and doing with talent and sincerity."

A Happy Child's Book.*

Nothing ever comes about in this story which disturbs Jane and John. They are the happiest of children. The world is full of pleasures to these little ones. There are lovely dogs and cats in the story. The author's object being to make children perfectly joyous, she has succeeded. The illustrations are excellent.

*THE WONDERFUL STORIES OF JANE AND JOHN. By Gertrude Smith. Illustrations by Allen Wood. Boston: Robert S. Peare & Co. Price, 75 cents.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Dr. Purrington's Volume on the Subject and Its Legal Aspects.*

Mr. William A. Purrington, whose legal practice has been largely associated with the regulation of medical practice, and who has become a legal authority upon what is sometimes known as medical jurisprudence, has brought together in a volume of less than 200 pages a number of periodical articles and public addresses of his own on the subject of Christian Science and its relation to the law. Two of the articles contained in the volume were contributed to The North American Review within the past year, and consist largely of an exposure of the preposterous claims of Mrs. Mary Moss Baker Glover Patterson Eddy, these numerous names being indicative of several mental experiments more or less successful, better known simply as "Mrs. Eddy," the putative mother of Christian Science. In these will be found a somewhat racy account of this remarkable pretender to miraculous powers of healing, and of the books with which she has succeeded in gulling so many credulous victims into a belief in her peculiar cult. The exposure of the crudities of her style, the inconsistencies of her contentions, the palpable falsity of many of her statements, and the ridiculous boastfulness of her claims makes it seem the more extraordinary that people of real intelligence and apparent sincerity should be counted among the devotees who have made her career one of great profit as well as notoriety.

But the serious purpose of Mr. Purrington's book is to show the peril to life, especially for children and other helpless persons, in the unrestrained practice of what is brazenly called Christian Science as a substitute for the rational treatment of the sick, and to indicate what can or should be done by legal means to restrain such practice. He concedes what is familiar to all physicians, the influence over the body of mental stimulus and powerful emotions, including hope and faith, and the effect they may have upon various nervous or hysterical disorders; but he is relentless in dealing with the pretense that organic diseases, contagion, and serious physical injuries can be cured by faith or the ascendency of mind over matter. The theory of Mrs. Eddy, indeed, is a parody of that of Bishop Berkeley when he said "there is no matter," for she makes all disease a mental condition to be dispelled by inducing a different mental condition by the simple acceptance of her doctrines. The author also concedes that, as a matter of theory or of faith, religious or otherwise, these doctrines would not be worthy of serious attention, much less a matter for legal interference.

But when they come to be acted upon to exclude proper medical treatment and care from the sick and suffering, especially children and those who in severe illness are at the mercy of others, it becomes a serious matter with which the community is concerned. In the course of the different papers brought together here Mr. Purrington shows how the subject has been dealt with by the law and the courts of different States, and points out the defects in legislation and adjudication which remain to be remedied. He maintains that, independent of the statutory regulation of medical practice, when life is lost by the substitution of charlatanism, in whatever disguise, for proper medical treatment, those responsible for it are guilty of homicide and should suffer its penalties. But his main contention is that people who avow that in the treatment of disease there is no need of knowledge of the human body and its functions or of any physical agency in dealing with them in health or sickness, and who scorn all such knowledge and its application, should not be permitted to practice the art of healing and thereby imperil the lives of their victims and the health of the community.

He would exclude no one from practice as a Christian Scientiest, even though the practitioner professed to rely upon the methods taught by Mrs. Eddy, but would simply require of such a person the same qualifications that are laid down for registered physicians of other classes or "schools." He sees no reason why a pretense of religion or of divinely revealed power and wisdom should be allowed to exempt any one from a requirement of a reasonable knowledge of the human system and of its functions and maladies before he presumes to act as the healer of his kind; and he assumes that such a requirement applied to the Christian Scientist would speedily extinguish his "science." The Christian Science healer now evades the law by claiming that he does not, and does not pretend to, practice medicine, which suggests the need of a legal definition of such practice which shall include all who profess to cure diseases by whatever means. "But, after all," concludes the author, "that which will destroy Christian Science is the true exposition in the reviews and daily press of its absurdities, its vulgarities, its false pretenses, and its dangers." This book will contribute powerfully to that end if it is read by all who find themselves disposed to yield to the crude fascination of Mrs. Eddy's strange doctrines.

More About George Selwyn.*

The modern world always accepts George Selwyn as a type of the happy-go-lucky personage who was not much more than a good story-teller. As a manufacturer of the bonmot, he is not likely to be forgotten. Somehow or other George Selwyn is always turning up. Supposably he represents the fine gentleman of the time of King George III. Mr. Winston Churchill introduces him in "Richard Carvel."

Mr. Jesse has given us in "George Selwyn and His Contemporaries" an excellent study of the conspicuous persons in the Georgian period. Mr. Jesse's four volumes were made up from correspondence. Quite recently there has been found among the family papers of the Earl of Carlisle some 200 letters, written in large part by Selwyn. The period covered by these letters is from 1707 down to a few weeks before the death of Selwyn, Jan. 25, 1791. A great part of the correspondence is addressed to Lord and Lady Carlisle.

Owing to family connections, Selwyn had many lucrative positions given him. He had the opportunity of associating with the best society of his day. Perhaps there are few public executions in England which do not bring into the newspaper reports some mention of Selwyn's fondness for hangings. It is a curious expression to call this Selwyn's "little weakness." It was a brutal taste, and an inexpressibly horrible one. Mr. Roscoe and his collaborateur, Helen Clergue, explain as well as they can what might have been his mental condition when Selwyn found pleasure in seeing a man hanged.

When one is conversant with the history of the time the astonishment is ridiculous. The sight of a man on the gallows no more disturbed the serenity of the most good-natured of men at the end of the eighteenth century than do the dying flutters of a partridge the susceptibilities of the most cultured of modern sportsmen. Selwyn was ever trying to get as much amusement out of life as possible, and he would have been acting contrary to all the ideas of the fashionable society of his age if he had sat at home when a criminal was to die. It was said of Boswell, just as it was of Selwyn, that he was passionately fond of attending executions. We need not, therefore, be surprised that Selwyn did as others of his time. Gilly Williams was a kind and good-natured man, yet we find him writing to Selwyn:

Harrington's porter was condemned yesterday. Cadogan and I have already bespoken places at the Braziers, and I hope Parson Digby will come time enough to be of the party. I presume we shall have your Honor's company, if your stomach is not too squeamish for a single serving.

It is hard to believe that there were many who, like Selwyn, went to the scaffold to see some poor wretch in his last agony, just as they would have visited the playhouse. Henry St. John writes to Selwyn: "We had a full view of Mr. Walstcott as he went to the gallows. I hope you have had good sport at the Place de Grève to make up for losing the sight of so notorious a villain."

This is a capital description of Pitt, as Selwyn saw him in 1781:

I heard yesterday young Pitt; I came down into the House to judge for myself. He is a young man who will undoubtedly make his way in the world by his abilities. But to give him credit for being very extraordinary, upon what I heard yesterday, would be absurd. If the oration had been pronounced equally well by a young man whose name was not of the same renown, and if the matter and expression had come without that prejudice, or wrote down, all which could have been said was that he was a sensible and promising young man. There is no fairer way of judging.

Of Charles James Fox, what Selwyn writes most about has to do with Fox's gambling at Brooks's:

You must know that for these two days past all passengers in St. James's Street have been amused with seeing two carts at Charles's door filling, by the Jews, with his goods, clothes, books, and pictures. He was waked by Basilico yesterday, and Hare afterward by his valet de chambre. They being told at the same time that the execution was begun, and the carts were drawn up against the door. Such furniture I never saw.

Betty and Jack Manners are perpetually in a survey of this operation, and Charles, with all Brooks's on his behalf, in the highest spirits. And while this execution is going on in one part of the street, Charles, Richard, and Hare are alternatively holding a bank of £5,000 ostensible, and by which they must have got among them near £2,000.

Again Selwyn writes:

I walked home, but called in at Brooks's as I passed by; Hare in the chair; the General chief punter, who lost a 1,000. The bank concluded early a winner, 12 or 1,300. Charles, de cote ou d'autre, told me that he had won 900. I said that I was informed from the Emperor that he had lost lately 8,000. He said, in two days, at various sports. I hinted to him that I had a suit to prefer. He guessed what it was, and begged that I would not just then speak to him about money. He was in the right. I meant to have dunned him for yours.

The volume is amply provided with notes, so that all the leading personages and their conditions can be understood.

Egerton Castle's New Work.*

That the publishers announce a third edition of "The Light of Scarthey" demonstrates its acceptability to a large circle of readers. The English reviewers have been enthusiastic in its praise, even to the length of declaring it "a piece of art perfect and reposeful as the marble Antinous." In his rather prolix preface the author himself asserts: "This book is my dream-child."

Yet we confess we have found the story both disappointing and painful. It wearies us by its length. Although we agree with the author that it should not have been distributed between two books, we think the tale would have gained much by such excision and compression as would have confined it within a volume two-thirds as large as the one it fills at present. Nor can we envy Mr. Castle "the stuff his dreams are made of," for "The Light of Scarthey" is replete with pain and with horrors. Unhappy and guilty passions, the atrocities of the Vendéean insurrection, sickening details of violent death, fill too many of its pages. The reader is, in a measure, compensated for all this tragedy by thrilling incident, forcible style, picturesque description, and some strong characterization and vivacious dialogue. But, unfortunately, the repulsive features are the salient ones.

The author tells us that "the haunting thought round which the tale is gathered" is the effect upon a man of meeting in middle life the lost love of his youth, she untouched by time, he "scarred and seamed by many encounters in the battle of life." "The Light of Scarthey" contrives this situation by introducing in the fullness of time a daughter who is the replica of her dead mother. The development of such a motif might be an interesting psychological study, but just here, we think, this story signally fails. In view of the fact that the thought was long brooded over by the author there seems to be a singular lack of effectiveness in its working out, and of reality in its presentation; perhaps it loses force by being too much complicated with other matters, tumultuous and tragic. The realism of the book goes beyond the rules of art when it describes a hanging, and fails below them when it portrays the heroine's repulsive and impossible pursuit of the man who loves her sister.

We cannot, therefore, join hands with the laudatory critics across the sea, except to agree with The St. James's Gazette that the author gives us "good measure, pressed together, and running over."

A Laborer in the Cause of Freedom.*

When the author of "Personal Reminiscences of Anti-Slavery and Other Reforms and Reformers" had written two-thirds of his book death came to him. His last chapter told of his intercourse with Sumner, Whittier, and Lydia Maria Child. Mr. Isaac H. Clothier, in his introduction, while regretting the unfinished state of these reminiscences, is satisfied that the work done by Aaron M. Powell will still teach the lesson of human liberty.

Mr. Powell's first acquaintance with the American Anti-Slavery Society began in 1850. Stephen S. and Abby Kelley Foster were the guests of Mr. Powell's father and mother. When he was nineteen he attended the first anti-slavery convention, which was held at Union Village, Washington County, N. Y. Mr. Powell describes a woman of color, Sojourner Truth, who, born in New York in 1787, had been a slave up to 1827, when slavery was abolished in the Empire State. It is this woman, so it is believed, who did so much in shaping the career of Frederick Douglass. Douglass was, at the beginning of the anti-slavery movement, rather discouraged. On one occasion he was dwelling at length at a public meeting on the many difficulties in the way. Sojourner Truth, who was in the audience, cried out in a stentorian tone, "Frederick, is God dead?" It was like an electric shock, and instantly changed the current of thought and feeling in the convention.

As a co-worker Mr. Powell was on terms of intimacy with all those persons who were in the advance, striving for emancipation. Before the reader passes William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Joshua R. Giddings, James and Lucretia Mott, Susan B. Authony, Whittier, and Sumner. Mr. Powell's labors never ceased until slavery was at an end in the country. At the World's Parliament of Religions held in the Exposition year in Chicago Mr. Powell delivered an address. His subject was "Grounds of Sympathy and Fraternity among Religious Men and Women."

Aaron Macy Powell died in the Spring of last year. Mr. Edward H. Magill, in his "In Memoriam," writes most feelingly of Powell, and of his ability as a religious teacher. At Chautauqua Mr. Powell acted as Chairman of the Religious Conferences.

Myths and Legends.*

In his new volume Mr. Skinner has continued the delightful work he had previously done in "Myths and Legends of Our Own Land" and "Myths and Legends Beyond Our Borders" so as to include studies in the folk-lore of Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines. His researches reveal the fact that our new possessions are rich in both myth and legend. The natives are a simple people, near to nature's heart, and unlearned in book knowledge. Their unwritten traditions are many, and exact knowledge has not yet entirely crowded out myth. Extermination and civilization are both ill fitted to preserve unchanged the curious and most interesting legends that once obtained among these people, so that Mr. Skinner in stretching forth his hand to preserve these myths and legends has certainly done something laudable. In his introduction attention is called to the wonderfully great similarity that exists between the myths of uncivilized peoples, no matter how widely separated. We encounter surprises of this kind just so soon as we begin to collate legends. Variants exist, to be sure, but it is possible to recognize earmarks, so that two legends that seem unlike at first glance are easily harmonized and identified one with the other. Mr. Skinner has gathered from here, there, and everywhere copious and pertinent material that he has stamped with his own pleasant personality, so that the subject never sinks into dryness. He evidently loves the myth of which he writes, and, loving it himself, he is better prepared to inspire a similar feeling on the part of those who read his text than if he wrote as a task upon the speedy finish of which rejoicing waited.

In "Myths and Legends of Our New Possessions" the standards erected by Mr. Skinner in his former books are easily maintained. The dedication is characteristic of the genial author, who somehow finds time in the midst of busy newspaper life to write books that people are pleased in reading.

*CHRISTIAN SCIENCE. An Exposition of Mrs. Eddy's Wonderful Discovery, Including Its Legal Aspects. A Plea for Children and Other Helpless Sick. By William A. Purrington, Lecturer in the University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and in the New York College of Dentistry upon Law in its Relation to Medical Practice, one of the authors of "A System of Legal Medicine." New York: E. B. Treat & Co. 1900.

*GEORGE SELWYN: HIS LETTERS AND HIS LIFE. Edited by E. S. Roscoe and Helen Clergue. T. Fisher Unwin.

*THE LIGHT OF SCARTHEY. A Romance. By Egerton Castle. Frederick A. Stokes Company. $1.50.

*PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF ANTI-SLAVERY AND OTHER REFORMS AND REFORMERS. By Aaron M. Powell. Published by Anna Rice Powell, Plainfield, N. J. New York: Clafon Press. $3.

*MYTHS AND LEGENDS OF OUR NEW POSSESSIONS AND PROTECTORATE. By Charles M. Skinner. Cloth, decorated cover, rubricated title page, slit top, deckle edges, 12mo. Pages 354. Philadelphia and London: J. B. Lippincott Company. Price, $1.50.

"MR. CRAWFORD has sought to embody the simple, crude ideals of honor and faith which ran like a thread of gold through an age of violence and wrong."—KANSAS CITY STAR.

VIA CRUCIS A ROMANCE OF THE SECOND CRUSADE.

53d THOUSAND. By F. MARION CRAWFORD. BUCKRAM, $1.50.

"VIA CRUCIS is a romance of adventure; a delineation of character, worked out and developed from deep passions and strong emotions; an historical picture of great vividness, and a valuable study of the causes, progress and results of the second crusade."—LIVING CHURCH.

"If this be not the best work which Mr. Crawford's pen has thus far produced, in important respects it certainly stands very near to the head of the list."—CONGREGATIONALIST.

"It is certain of meeting wide appreciation. For literary merit and picturesque treatment of the theme it must rank among the very first of this author's books."—BROOKLYN EAGLE.

"VIA CRUCIS will hold its place among the best of Mr. Crawford's novels."—PHILA. PUBLIC LEDGER.

VIA CRUCIS is a strong argument against those who deplore the prevalence of fiction; it must be reckoned among Mr. CRAWFORD'S strongest productions, whether considered as a romance, an historical novel, or a character study of the most unusual kind; and it is no weak impression that is left by the closing words, which point out the true "Way of the Cross" as in men's souls, and the glory of Christ's resurrection as in the saving of a soul. Yet it is no gloomy sermon; rather one of its author's most brilliant adventure stories.

While the sale of a book is by no means a reliable criterion of its worth, it is both interesting and encouraging to note that eight editions of 5,000 each were exhausted in as many weeks after publication, and that the one now on sale is the fifty-third thousand of VIA CRUCIS.

"VIA CRUCIS is a strong and brilliant novel, as absorbingly interesting as its notable predecessors. It is a splendid picture . . . intensely dramatic scenes develop and the play of human passions is handled in a masterly manner."—JOURNAL OF EDUCATION.

"We find in all his works a wonderful mastery of emotion, pure and simple, a most human treatment of the romantic passions, painted with the touch of a genius. His simplicity of expression, purity of diction, and marvelous display of cleverness in his conversations have at least placed him on a higher plane than the other novelists of the day."—N. Y. TIMES.

"VIA CRUCIS is a strange and delightful novel."—PORTLAND TRANSCRIPT.

The Macmillan Company, 66 Fifth Ave., New York.

DAILY, ONE CENT. SUNDAY, THREE CENTS.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

The New York Times.

THE WEATHER.
Fair and colder; southwesterly gales shifting to northwesterly.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.

VOL. XLIX...NO. 15,611. NEW YORK, SUNDAY, JANUARY 21, 1900.—TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES. PRICE THREE CENTS.

EUROPE'S INTEREST IN THE BOER WAR

Even Party Wrangling in Great Britain Is Suspended.

ENORMOUS ISSUES AT STAKE

Government Admits Gravity of the Indian Famine.

The Situation, However, Even Worse Than Stated—France on Her Best Behavior—Hopeful Signs in Spain.

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—All the week the world has been on tiptoe, watching the development of events in Natal. The attitude of Europe might lead one to imagine that civilized countries were as one in the opinion that the fate of the British Empire hangs on the conflict now impending, if not actually raging as I write. Every Bourse has felt the influence of this strained feeling, and one might almost say that political wrangling has been hushed until the fate of Buller's advance is disclosed.

Such being the attitude of civilized mankind in general, it is not surprising that at home here there has been little coming to the surface of a kind to interest your readers. Even the wrangling of party politicians has in a great measure ceased, and comparatively little attention is to-day paid to such addresses as Herbert Gladstone's to his constituents at Leeds. Doubtless we shall have plenty of criticism when Parliament meets, but anything like a combined endeavor to turn out the Government is nowhere in contemplation.

A great provincial newspaper gave currency this week to a statement pointing to the reconstruction of the Ministry at the instance of Lord Rothschild and Mr. Beit. These great financial magnates, and others interested in Rand mines, are, I hear, thoroughly discontented with the attitude of the purely Conservative section of the Ministry. They did not relish Lord Salisbury's announcement that we sought neither mines nor territory in making war on the Transvaal; still less were they pleased with Mr. Balfour's description of the Jameson raid. Probably, therefore, they have been using expressions against these gentlemen and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, whose promise to tax the Rand mines in order to help pay for the war was also not to their taste. But that they seriously contemplate a move to upset the Tory portion of the present Ministry and to put thorough-going partisans of their own in the places of the honest Conservatives turned out is not to be believed.

I should not have alluded to this incident except for one reason. To the best of my recollection, this is the first time in our history when any responsible newspaper has publicly stated that the Government of this country was capable of being shaped by and carried on under the orders of the great cosmopolitan financiers.

What such a statement portends in the near future I am not prepared to say, but should events in South Africa fail to take the course which the promoters of the war anticipated I am inclined to fear that these cosmopolitan financiers will find themselves in trouble. The language used in private regarding them is shocking, and often disgusting.

***

GEN. BULLER'S ADVANCE.

At the moment of writing hopes are high for an immediate triumph through the great turning movement now being executed for the relief of Ladysmith, and when one considers the enormity of the issues at stake, and the dangers to the British Empire as well as to British commercial expansion that might arise from our defeat, not even the bitterest opponent of the war can help sharing the desire that the struggle may be decisive in our favor. Even the friends of peace may well desire it to be so, because only by a decisive victory for the British can an opening be found for effective protests against the continuance of a war that undoubtedly hurts the consciences of a powerful minority among the British people.

Nevertheless, it is well to be cautious in one's hopes, and the facility with which Buller and Warren have been able to cross the Tugela and advance apparently across the Boer lines of communication, so as not only to get between them and the roads into the Orange Free State border, but to prevent them from maintaining their position around Ladysmith, warns us there may be some sinister design behind the burghers' quiescence. Before final victory is secured our Generals may have a desperate struggle to go through in order to maintain their own lines of communication.

It will at best be some days yet before the world can know whether the movement now in progress has been completely successful or not, and until the final shot has been fired in the struggle around Ladysmith it will be well to avoid speculation about peace or anything else.

***

GRAVITY OF INDIAN FAMINE.

At last we have official knowledge of the truth of a statement made by me to you months ago. The Indian famine, it is now declared, affects fifty millions of people, twenty-two millions of them in British territory and the remainder in native States. It will take from thirty to forty million rupees, the head of the Indian Revenue Department declared at a Council meeting, to sustain those now upon relief works up to the end of March, the number of such natives being about three and a quarter millions.

Lord Curzon plaintively states that while in 1897 hundreds of thousands of pounds were contributed by Great Britain, and "the world shared our sorrow," the Government of India has now to struggle alone because the whole thoughts of those at home are centred in South Africa.

This is, indeed, true, and the position is really far worse than the Government even now admits. It is nonsense to talk of only thirty or forty million rupees being required to sustain the people in life. Probably this means what we intend to spend on our direct subjects, but the destitution in native States will lead to appalling loss of life, in spite of the noble efforts native Princes and wealthy men of all degrees are making to sustain the people, unless we come to their aid also out of the Imperial Treasury.

Judging from past experience, I should say that if the Government spent one hundred millions of rupees in keeping the people alive between now and the end of March it will not have disbursed one anna more than will be necessary. Under the pressure now being put upon its finances the Indian Government is naturally inclined to parsimony, because all surplus calculations and all currency schemes or projects for railway expansion must be more or less interfered with while this scourge lasts. But parsimony that dictates merely keeping the people from dying of starvation, and that does not go so far as to sustain them in health or help them to replace their dead cattle, and in other ways give them heart and hope for the future, is shortsighted and dangerous.

This calamity is, I assure you, not yet nearly at its height. There has been no Winter rain, the whole land is parched up, and it will take during the next nine months at least six millions sterling to cope with the scourge in an effective manner.

What sense, then, is there in minimizing the monetary outlay now? Lord Curzon's advisers must know that the figures they put forward are entirely delusive, if the famine is really to be tackled and beaten. For years to come the finances of the dependency must suffer by remissions in the land revenue if the population is to be allowed a chance to recuperate.

***

QUESTION OF SEIZURES SETTLED.

For the present the Delagoa Bay incident must be considered as closed by the practical defeat of Great Britain at all points. The only thing in which we have been successful is in securing to the German Emperor the ready passage of his naval programme bill. In other respects I do not imagine that the consequences of our hasty seizure of the three German steamers will be serious, but the fact that none of these vessels was found to contain contraband must make us cautious for the future before interfering with the shipping of neutral nations on the high seas.

Indeed, we have promised Germany that her mail steamers will not again be interfered with on mere suspicion, and have agreed to restrict our right of search in other directions. No vessels will be searched within the radius defined by Aden, and it is probable that we shall in future accept the ship's manifests as proof of the quality and nature of the cargo.

It is a pity that our naval officers should have been so officious, because we cannot at present afford to increase the natural and inevitable hostility and jealousy displayed toward us by neighboring nations which are seeking to rival us in the commerce of the world.

***

CALM ON THE CONTINENT.

But all is quiet on the Continent, and the malicious innuendo and steady torrent of spiteful criticism to which we have been subjected have in a great measure died down under the influence of coming events.

France, moreover, is now anxious to assume an air of the highest respectability and courtesy before the world, so as to insure the success of her exhibition. Her stormiest politicians will, from now on, be on their best behavior, and it is improbable that any change will take place in the present Ministry. The plots formed to overthrow it have all come to nothing, because behind French gasconading there is always a solid appreciation of self-interest capable of swaying the passions of the people and keeping extravagance of sentiment in check.

In Austria, too, everthing is superficially calm, and the Emperor is making a last effort, shall we say to reconcile the irreconcilable. A Ministry of Under Secretaries is being formed to carry on the business of the Government until it can be seen whether a modus vivendi between Czech and German is indeed possible.

***

POPULAR MOVEMENT IN SPAIN.

The most curious item of news really comes from Spain, where the meeting held at Valladolid, of a most representative character so far as the commercial element of the country is concerned, appears to betoken a power of popular organization against the Government hitherto unsuspected. We know that Catalonia was hostile to Signor Villaverde's budget, and I have explained to you why that hostility was suddenly dropped; but now there is apparently a strong body of opinion, as represented by Chambers of Commerce, in favor of a universal strike against the payment of taxes unless the claims of the Chamber of Deputies for retrenchment and reform are satisfied.

Should this really be a cohesive movement for reform it may signify much to Spain, because the curse of that country lies in the absolute helplessness of public opinion on ordinary occasions. You see a Liberal Ministry succeeded by a Conservative, and vice versa, but it is simply a matter of contract. Each side gets its turn, and when the ins have had enough, or the other side gets too impatient, the ins move out and let the opposition assume office. Both parties impartially unite in feathering their own nests and in providing places for their own dependents while in power, and the nation consequently is never in the least degree better for a reform Ministry, any more than for a reactionary one. Taxes are eaten up and abuses flourish under one side as much as under the other.

If, however, there should now be a body of public opinion formed in Spain powerful enough and loyal enough to insist that this system of spoiling the community must be abandoned, and genuine reforms instituted, Spain will take a step forward in the comity of civilized nations greater than any attempted by her since the days of Gen. Prim's dictatorship. He was the ablest, noblest, and most unselfish of modern Spanish statesmen, but it is perhaps as well for the ultimate progress of the country that he did not live to impose his reforms upon the nation, because the benefits conferred by dictators are seldom deep rooted. We had rather see a nation raise itself to dignity and self-respect sufficient to enable it to cleanse away its own corruptions.

***

THE SALE OF WEST'S PAINTINGS.

A very slight interest has been excited this week by the news that the Dean and Chapter of Winchester Cathedral have sold Sir Benjamin West's picture of "The Raising of Lazarus" to American purchasers for £1,500. The picture is to be hung in the new cathedral in New York, it is understood, and in Winchester as well as throughout the diocese great indignation is said to be felt that such a transfer should have been made. The clergy are accused of having parted with property held in trust and belonging to the cathedral. This is not a fact. The cathedral Chapter brought the painting about 120 years ago, and, I imagine, had a perfect right to sell it.

Anyway, Dean Stephens declares that the picture will have a much more fitting home in America than in Winchester, where it was out of harmony with its surroundings. That is true enough. Winchester is much more associated with our old royalties, above all with Mary Tudor, than with incidents in the history of the Founder of Christianity.

***

A PAUPER EX-OFFICER.

A very pathetic incident cropped up this week among our chronicles of the poor. An old officer of the Gordon Highlanders, who has seen service in the Crimea, the Indian mutiny, and on the northwest frontier of India, has been driven by age to seek parish relief for himself and his wife from the Lambeth Guardians of the Poor. What the circumstances were which brought this officer so low I have not heard, but the aged couple are now receiving 5 shillings a week in consequence of their application. It is possible enough that the officer, whose character is said to be blameless, may have lost his money in some of those stock exchange speculations to which retired army men are only too much given.

But whatever the cause, the incident is a reminder to us that we are not always particularly careful of those whom we call heroes when battle is joined, and forget when it is over. Benevolent funds are subscribed abundantly, and once in a while a broken down warrior dies from starvation.

But thoughts of this kind are not admissible now. All the nation is united in bidding the volunteers godspeed for the front. A. J. W.

THE BENJAMIN WEST PICTURE.

J. P. Morgan Understood to Have Bought It for the Cathedral.

It is understood that the picture by Benjamin West of the "Raising of Lazarus," referred to by the special correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES in London as having been sold by the Dean and Chapter of Winchester Cathedral, has been bought by J. Pierpont Morgan for the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Morningside Heights.

When Mr. Morgan was seen with regard to the matter he declined to state definitely whether the report was true, but he allowed it to be inferred that he was the purchaser, and would give the painting to the Cathedral.

MAY BEAT SENATOR MORGAN.

Gov. Johnston of Alabama Makes the Senatorial Fight a Hard One.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 20.—United States Senator John T. Morgan is in danger of losing his seat when the General Assembly of Alabama meets next November to elect his successor. In Gov. Joseph F. Johnston of this State he has met one of the shrewdest politicians the South has ever produced, backed by the strongest political machine ever created in Alabama. The primaries for United States Senator will be held in over fifty counties in April, the remaining sixteen either having held their primaries or are preparing to hold them in the near future. The net result so far has been an advantage for Johnston. The counties of Jackson, Marshall, Macon, and Morgan have gone for Johnston, giving him six votes in the next General Assembly; Colbert and Limestone, with two votes, have gone for Morgan, and ex-Congressman Gates has carried Henry with one vote. In the fifteen hold-over members of the State Senate Johnston has six, Morgan seven, and two are doubtful. This is the situation to date.

The Democrats have let the bars down and Johnston, who has constantly appealed to the Populists in different ways, finds these former adversaries of the Democratic Party prepared to take part in the Democratic primaries to assist in electing him to the Senate by sending men to the State Legislature who are for him. It is doubtful if there will be more than half a dozen Populist legislators in the next General Assembly, against nineteen in the last, so evident is the intention of the Populists to return to the faith. The Populists are tired of being beaten, and the bars have been so thoroughly let down that they can return without question.

Morgan has the cities. Of this there is no doubt, but in Montgomery County, for instance, although the population of the city largely exceeds that of the rest of the county, the county has a larger representation in the County Convention, and can outvote the city by the beat system. This, of course, is much against Morgan. It is very much of an agrarian struggle. The Governor even profited by the university land deal by going before the country people as a man who cared more for the country boys, who wanted to learn a little "readin' and "writin'," than the rich city folks, who went to the colleges to learn Latin and Greek. The sale of the university lands to the Schloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company was roundly condemned by the alumni and Trustees of the university, and has been declared illegal by them, but the Governor has not excused himself and even parades the fact before the rural masses.

Morgan's friends have just organized, and the immediate result of that organization has been the evidence of a very strong Morgan sentiment, such as has given them much encouragement, but it is a hard fight, and they know it. If Morgan wins it will be the victory of his life.

PRIZE FOR A NAVAL OFFICER.

Lieut. H. R. Jackson Wins in the Institute Competition.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 20.—The Naval Institute, the organization composed of all the officers of the American Navy as far as practicable, awarded its annual prize to-day for the best thesis upon certain given subjects. The competition was open to all naval officers.

The subject which won the prize was "Torpedo Craft, Types and Employment," and the succesful competitor was Lieut. R. H. Jackson. Lieut. R. H. Chandler was awarded honorable mention. He wrote on the "Automobile Torpedo and Its Use."

The prize consists of a gold medal, life membership in the institute, and $100 in cash.

Plumbers Granted an Increase.

BUFFALO, Jan. 20.—At a conference last night between committees of the Master Plumbers' Association and the Journeymen Plumbers' Association an agreement was reached regarding pay during this year. An eight-hour day was agreed upon and a minimum wage of $3 for all plumbers and gasfitters, an increase of 50 cents per day.

New York to Pinehurst, N. C.
Via Penna. & Southern Ry. Leave New York daily, except Sunday, 4:25 P. M. Arrive Pinehurst following morning, 11:00 o'clock. Sleeping and dining car service to High Point. New York Office, 271 Broadway.—Adv.

Tampa Bay Hotel, Tampa, Fla., and Florida West Coast Hotels, now open. Information, circulars, &c., Plant System, 290 B'way. —Adv.

Thomasville and Brunswick, Ga.
Special service in connection with The New York and Florida Limted, via Penna. and Southern Ry. Leave New York 12:40 P. M. daily, except Sunday, arrive at Brunswick following day at 1:35 P. M., Thomasville 4:10 P. M. Two other fast trains. New York Office, 271 B'way.—Adv.

The Phenomenal Success of G. H. Mumm's Extra Dry—109,303 cases imported in 1899, 72,495 cases more than any other brand—is due to its unsurpassed quality. The 1895 vintage now imported has no equal.—Adv.

DID CROKER HELP GOEBEL?

Republicans Accuse Him of Sending Money to Kentucky.

J. R. McLEAN ALSO ATTACKED

Alleged that the New York and Ohio Men Conspired with the Standard Oil to Defeat Taylor.

Special to The New York Times.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 20.—The Republican legislators here to-day declared that they had discovered a representative of Tammany here in the person of William H. Clark, who, they believe, was sent here to investigate the contest and see what bearing it could be made to have upon the national situation. Clark was at once served with a subpoena as a witness to appear before the Contest Board.

Gov. Taylor, it is said, will bring other witnesses from New York to prove that Richard Croker, as the executive head of Tammany Hall, was in league with William Goebel, the contestant in the present hearing, to carry the State for the Democratic nominee.

The attempt will be made by the Republicans to show that at least two of the leading Democratic politicians of this State visited Mr. Richard Croker in behalf of William Goebel, and that they secured from him, as the official head of Tammany Hall, substantial aid in carrying on the Democratic campaign.

It has already been charged by Gov. Taylor in his counter-claim, filed with the Board of Contests yesterday, that Mr. Goebel, together with the Chairmen of the Democratic State Central and Executive Committees and others, entered into a combination with Richard Croker of New York, John R. McLean of Ohio, the Standard Oil Company, and other persons and corporations to debauch and corrupt the voters of the State and for this purpose said persons and corporations contributed large sums of money with which many voters were induced or bought to remain, and did remain away from the polls. Other and similar uses of funds are alleged in the counter notice.

The Republican attorneys refuse absolutely to talk about the matter. Ex-Gov. Bradley admitted that William H. Clarke had been summoned, but declined to say anything about what they expected to prove by him. Clarke is recognized as the confidant here of Croker.

"I can't talk about him at this stage of the case," Mr. Bradley said. "It will all come out at the proper time."

More than this ex-Gov. Bradley would not talk.

KENTUCKY KILLER INDICTED.

Col. Colson Must Answer for the Shooting of Lieut. Scott.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 20.—The Grand Jury to-day returned indictments charging Col. David G. Colson with wilful murder of Lieut. Ethelbert Scott and L. A. Demaree.

A CARNEGIE OFFICIAL RESIGNS.

Secretary Lovejoy Severs His Connection with the Company.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 20.—Secretary F. T. F. Lovejoy of the Carnegie Steel Company has resigned and has also quit the Board of Managers. A. M. Moreland has been appointed to succeed him. This makes a vacancy on the board, Mr. Moreland having been elected manager at the time Mr. Frick was dethroned. Harry W. Oliver's name is being canvassed for the vacancy.

Mr. Lovejoy was the warmest friend Frick had among all the Carnegie officials.

MR. CARNEGIE GIVES $50,000.

Offer of a New Public Library for East Orange Accepted.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 20.—East Orange is to have a new public library, as a gift from Andrew Carnegie, who has agreed to give $50,000 for the purpose. The only condition imposed upon the city in accepting the gift is that a site shall be provided for the building and that the city shall appropriate $5,000 a year for its maintenance.

Mr. Carnegie's offer was received by Mayor Bruen this week and was to-day submitted to a number of prominent citizens, whom the Mayor called together for the purpose of discussing it. It was decided to accept the offer, and the actual work of selecting plans and beginning the construction of the building will be begun as soon as a site can be selected.

The gift for the new library was obtained from Mr. Carnegie through the efforts of Alexander King of Walnut Street, East Orange. Mr. King and Mr. Carnegie were boys together and have kept up a lifelong friendship. East Orange named a street after Mr. Carnegie a few years ago, and this fact, together with the knowledge that Mr. Carnegie is interested in securing the establishment of free libraries, induced Mr. King to ask his millionaire friend for aid in securing a library for East Orange.

At a meeting of the Trustees of the Orange Free Library yesterday afternoon plans were adopted for the Stickler Memorial Library, which is to be erected by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Stickler of Orange in memory of their son Dr. J. W. Stickler. From among a score or more of plans submitted in a recent prize competition the plan offered by Brower & Albro of East Orange was selected, and the Trustees decided to engage McKim, Mead & White of New York as supervising architects. Work on the new building will be begun in April.

Will Give a Library to York, Penn.

YORK, Penn., Jan. 20.—Mayor Geise has received a letter from Andrew Carnegie in which the latter offers to present York $50,000 for the erection of a public library building. The gift is conditioned on the city's purchase of a site and appropriating by ordinance $5,000 a year for maintenance of the library.

Skeletons in a Tennessee Cave.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 20.—W. L. Allison, while prospecting for minerals on Lookout Mountain to-day, discovered five skeletons in a cave fifteen miles from this city. There is a difference of opinion whether they are skeletons of Indians or of miners who disappeared from the ore mines at Rising Fawn several years ago. The cave is being explored to see if it contains more skeletons.

Louisville Recovers a Judgment.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 20.—A decision against the Louisville Bridge Company, controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and in favor of the City of Louisville was entered in the Circuit Court to-day. The judgment is for $108,143.28 and interest for six years on part of the amount, for franchise tax for every year since 1894.

A Day and a Night to Florida.
Florida Special; 13th season begins Jan. 16. Quickest to Georgia Resorts, Florida, Cuba, Nassau. Apply Atlantic Coast Line, 229 B'way, N. Y. —Adv.

Notice to the Public.
Now open. Hotel Royal Palm, Miami, Florida, and all other East Coast hotels. Golf. Address Travelers' Information Co., 3 Park Pl., N. Y.—Adv.

TWO GET THEIR FREEDOM

Theodore Von Bremsen Says Perjured Testimony Convicted Them.

GARDINER'S OFFICE ACCUSED

Gov. Roosevelt on Granting the Pardons Asks "What Shall I Do with Such a District Attorney?"

Through the efforts of Theodore Von Bremsen, two men who, it is alleged, were convicted on perjured testimony are to-day enjoying their freedom. The men are Max Hustedt, nineteen years old, whose mother lives at 190 Chrystie Street, and John Sullivan, whose residence is unknown. Mr. Von Bremsen said last night:

"On the night of May 24, 1897, Hustedt and Sullivan were arrested by Policeman Susselman of the Madison Street Station as suspicious persons. It was alleged that the men had robbed the grocery story of Bernard Jaffe of 131 Division Street earlier in the evening of goods valued at $5. The men were arrested at the instance of Morris Aaronson and Samuel Posen, who were employed by Jaffe.

"The next morning the men were arraigned in the Police Court and held for trial in General Sessions Court. On June 25, 1897, they were arraigned before Judge Newburger, and under his instructions the jury returned a verdict of guilty of burglary in the third degree. The Court then sentenced them to four years and six months in Sing Sing on the charge.

"Nine months ago Hustedt's mother, who believed her son was not guilty, got me interested in the case. In the meantime she had filed an application for a pardon with the Governor, but had received a letter from the Governor's private secretary, which said that she would have to furnish some proof of her son's innocence. I secured a certified abstract copy of the testimony, and found that the testimony offered at the police court and that given before Judge Newburger conflicted. It was perjury of the worst kind.

"I then learned that the two men had been drinking all night and at midnight had started home. They were walking down Division Street when arrested. It was testified at the trial by Posen and Aaronson that when the men were arrested they had a large bundle with them, while such was not the case.

"I then determined that I would go to the District Attorney's Office and report what I had learned, thinking that the District Attorney would be glad to prosecute persons who had perjured themselves. When I arrived at the District Attorney's Office I consulted Assistant District Attorney Unger. He referred me to Mr. Flynn, the bond clerk.

"I explained my business to that gentleman, and was informed by him that he was at work on a report of the case which the Governor had asked for. I noticed that Flynn had an original abstract of the testimony before him at that time, but that it had been 'doctored.' Portions of the testimony given at the trial had been almost erased. I asked him if he intended to send that report to the Governor, and he replied that he did. When I informed them that I had a certified abstract of the original testimony Unger and Flynn were dumfounded.

"In a few days I received a note, which seemed to come from Col. Gardiner, asking me to call at the District Attorney's office with the copy of the abstract I had in my possession. I called, but did not have the abstract with me, and, instead of seeing the District Attorney, found that Flynn was waiting for me. He asked me for the copy of the abstract I had, but I refused to let him have it. Finally, he said if I would let him have a copy of it my client would be released. On these conditions I allowed him to copy the abstract, but I retained the original certified abstract.

"I thought that District Attorney Gardiner would be glad to know that such business was being carried on in his department and concluded to call upon him. When I did I was surprised to learn that he was acquainted with the case in all its phases.

"When I asked Flynn why he wanted a copy of my abstract he said he did not want the copy he was going to send to the Governor to conflict with the copy I had.

"Judge Newburger promised to write a letter to the Governor asking for the pardon of the men, but instead wrote an infamous letter. He also failed to indorse the report sent by the District Attorney to the Governor.

"I procured a copy of the report made by the District Attorney's office to the Governor from the Governor's secretary. It contained several mistakes. The testimony given was entirely different from that given at either the arraignment or the trial."

"I then made a diagram of the district where the alleged robbery occurred, showing where the men were arrested, where taken, and where they came from and the course taken by the men Aaronson and Posen when they found the policeman. This diagram I sent with an affidavit from the Sergeant who received the prisoners at the station house and a similar affidavit from Policeman Susselman, which I secured through Inspector Brooks. Susselman refused to make such affidavit until taken before the Inspector.

"After carefully reviewing the case Gov. Roosevelt signed the pardon for the men's release on Jan. 4, restoring them to full citizenship, adding the comment, 'What shall I do with such a District Attorney?'"

Mr. Von Bermsen says he proposes to bring suit for damages against those who perjured themselves by giving false testimony which resulted in the men being sent to prison.

DIVORCED COUPLE MAKE UP.

Suit Dismissed After Five Years and Pair Reunited.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—After five years of contest in the divorce courts Thomas C. Chappell, a well-known lawyer, and his wife have become reconciled and the husband's suit for divorce was dismissed in the Baltimore County Court to-day.

Mrs. Chappell is now in Boston, where she has been for the past few years, but will go to New York within the next few days to rejoin her husband, who has taken up his residence in that city. This case has been an extraordinary one. The bill for divorce was filed in March, 1895, by Mr. Chappell, asking for an absolute separation and divorce. The bill contained about thirty absolute and distinct sections, one of the main allegations being that his wife was laboring under mental difficulties, and that this existed at the time of their marriage. The case has never been tried upon its merits, but has been to the Maryland Court of Appeals at Annapolis four times upon questions of alimony, counsel fees, and many complex questions of law.

Accompanying the papers filed to-day was a written assent on the part of Mrs. Chappell, to the dismissal of the case.

$500 for Stamford's Y. M. C. A.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 20.—The General Secretary of the Stamford Young Men's Christian Association, William A. Wells, received to-day from John N. Hendrie of Sound Beach a check for $500 to be used in the liquidation of the association's debt.

The Southern Route For California.
Sunset Limited's connection leaves New York Tuesdays and Saturdays, 4:25 P. M., via P. R. R., Southern, A. & W. P., W. of A., and L. & N. Special Sunset Limited drawing room and stateroom sleeping car to New Orleans, connecting through to the Pacific Coast. Observation and dining car service. New York Office, 271 Broadway.—Adv.

A Beautiful Souvenir Mug Will Be presented to our bottled beer customers on record February 1st. THE OTTO HUBER BREWERY, Broadway and 42d St. Telephone: 2902-38th Str. —Adv.

A SHIP IN DISTRESS.

Believed to be a Steamer Ashore on Fenwick Island Shoals, Near Cape Henlopen.

LEWES, Del., Jan. 20.—The Fenwick Island Life Saving Station reports a vessel throwing up rockets about eight miles off shore. It is thought to be a steamer ashore on Fenwick Island Shoals.

The tug North America left Delaware Breakwater at 9 o'clock to-night to go to her assistance. Fenwick Island is about twenty miles south of Cape Henlopen.

MEXICANS DEFEAT YAQUIS.

Two Hundred Indians Are Killed and Five Hundred Are Prisoners.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—A special to The Examiner from Nogales, Mexico, says a battle has been fought by the Mexicans and Yaquis, in which the Yaquis were defeated with heavy loss. The killed numbered 200. Five hundred were taken prisoners.

TWO LYNCHED IN KANSAS.

Meeks Brothers, Murderers, Hanged by a Fort Scott Mob—Were Trying to Break Jail.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Jan. 20.—George and Edward Meeks, the convicted murderers of Leopold Edlinger of Bates County, Mo., were taken from the jail in this city at 9:30 o'clock to-night and lynched by a mob of 500 men.

Amos Phillips, a convicted accomplice, was barely saved by a fraction of the mob and the officers, because there was some doubt as to his guilt. The lynching was conducted in a quiet manner.

The indignation that resulted in the lynching was provoked by a desperate attempt on the part of the Meeks brothers to murder a Deputy Sheriff and break jail at 6 o'clock this evening. They felled the officer to the floor and a blow that would have killed him was warded off by another officer, who arrived just in time. A battle followed, in which from twenty to thirty shots were fired. George Meeks was shot in the leg.

The nerve displayed by the two victims of the mob was remarkable. George Meeks, the elder of the two, was carried to the tree from which he was swung smoking a cigarette. He was apparently the least interested man in the crowd. His brother, Edward, attempted to make a statement, but the mob would not listen.

Since the arrest of the Meeks brothers, who were known to be desperate characters, the jail had been heavily guarded. About 6 o'clock to-night one of the guards found that the murderers had sawed the steel rods upon which the doors were hung, and had made their way into the corridor.

The entire Sheriff's force and a number of police were called. The corridor could be entered by but one man at a time, and the prisoners thus had a great advantage.

For half an hour the officers attempted to persuade them to come out, but they refused, and finally ex-Sheriff T. J. Allen volunteered to go in. He had no sooner stepped into the cage than George Meeks sprang from a cell and dealt him a blow on the head with a steel bar. He fell into Policeman Dillon's arms, and that officer's club caught the next blow.

Then the officers rushed into the corridor firing at the prisoners, who had taken refuge in a steel cage. The lights had been tampered with, and in the darkness the firing was ineffective.

The officers could not approach because of the advantage of steel bars over pistols as weapons. At intervals one of the two men would spring out and strike at the officers, who, owing to the darkness, could not see to shoot at them.

The situation remained unchanged until finally a shot struck George Meeks in the leg, and then the men surrendered.

The lynching party was organized by prominent citizens in the Court House. Nooses were tied in three ropes and the details of the lynching were minutely arranged.

The outside door of the jail was battered down in five minutes. The inside steel door resisted for twenty-five minutes.

When the steel hinges finally yielded, a half dozen leaders stepped in and the Meeks brothers were dragged out with the ropes around their necks and were carried to two trees and strung up. Half an hour later the bodies were cut down and the crowd quietly dispersed.

WILLIAM E. BARNETT ILL.

New Haven Road's Third Vice President in a Critical Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 20.—Vice President William E. Barnett of the New Haven Road was stricken suddenly with congestion of the brain in Boston on Thursday, and is now at his home in this city in a dangerous condition. Mr. Barnett went to Boston on Wednesday to attend to the duties of his office there, and staid at the home of a friend. Thursday evening he was taken with dizziness, and later in the morning with a sudden attack of congestion of the brain. He was removed at once to the station and brought to this city, Dr. Eggleston of Providence joining him on the way. His brother, Dr. John F. Barnett, and Drs. Bacon, Hawkes, and Townsend met him on his arrival here, and are still in constant attendance. Dr. Barnett said to-night that Vice President Barnett was in a critical condition, and that his recovery was not assured.

Mr. Barnett was promoted to the Third Vice Presidency of the New Haven Road at the meeting of the Directors last Saturday. He has been with the road for thirty-one years, the last two as attorney. He took up his duties as Vice President this week, and was to have handled the corporate interests of the road, with tax and general administration work.

H. W. CANNON ILL IN LONDON.

President of the Chase National Bank Had a Bad Voyage.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Henry White Cannon, the President of the Chase National Bank of New York, is ill in this city. He is suffering from a general collapse, the result of a bad voyage on his recent trip across the Atlantic, and from other causes. His condition is not dangerous, however, and the attending doctors expect that he will recover in a few weeks.

News of the illness of President Cannon at the Hotel Cecil in London, has been received at the Chase National Bank. Mr. Cannon is abroad on a pleasure trip, having landed in London about four days ago and gone directly to the Hotel Cecil, where he was taken ill at once with an attack of indigestion, from which he has suffered before.

"Mr. Cannon's condition is not in the slightest degree serious," said an official of the bank yesterday. "His illness was simply due to a bad shaking up caused by a rough trip. His physician told him before he sailed that a severe trip would superinduce one of his attacks of indigestion. He is recovering rapidly, however."

Democrats Win in Knoxville, Tenn.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 20.—The municipal election of Knoxville to-day resulted in the selection of Samuel G. Heiskell, Democratic, for Mayor over George W. Henderson, independent. The entire Democratic ticket was elected.

New York, St. Augustine, and Tampa.
New York and Florida Limited, via Penn. & Southern Ry. Finest train in the world, leaves New York daily, except Sunday, 12:40 P. M. Dining, compartment, drawing room, sleeping, library, and observation cars, New York to St. Augustine; drawing room, sleeping cars, New York to Aiken, Augusta, and Port Tampa. Two other fast trains, 3:25 P. M. and 12:16 night. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars to Jacksonville and Miami. Dining car service on all trains. New York Office, 271 Broadway.—Adv.

BOERS DEFEATED IN ALL DAY FIGHT

Driven from Ridge to Ridge by Gen. Clery's Force.

ONLY 100 WOUNDED REPORTED

The Number of the Dead Not Ascertained as Yet.

Bursting Shells of the Relieving Army Can Now Be Distinctly Seen by the Beleagured Ladysmith Garrison.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The War Office, shortly after midnight, posted the following dispatch from Gen. Buller, dated Spearman's Camp, Jan. 20, evening:

"Gen. Clery, with a part of Gen. Warren's force, has been in action from 6 A. M. till 7 P. M. to-day.

"By a judicious use of his artillery he has fought his way up, capturing ridge after ridge for about three miles.

"The troops are now bivouacking on the ground he has gained, but the main position is still in front of them.

"The casualties were not heavy.

"About 100 wounded had been brought in by 6:30 P. M.

"The number of killed has not yet been ascertained."

A special dispatch from Spearman's Camp, Natal, dated to-day, says that the firing of field guns was heard to-day from the left. Evidently Gen. Warren has commenced the bombardment of the Boer trenches on Tabanmyana Mountain. There was also a brief musketry fire.

A later dispatch from the same source says:

"The Boer trenches were shelled continuously to-day. Gen. Lyttleton's brigade advanced and occupied a kopje 2,000 yards from the Boer position at Brakfontein. A company of rifles advanced with a balloon into action and were received with a heavy fire from the Boers.

"The artillery and musketry fire continues from Gen. Warren's position. The enemy had not shifted its position at the time this dispatch was sent, and the shells set fire to the grass.

"Lord Dundonald's force on Thursday surprised 350 Boers. The British, who were posted on a kopje, allowed the Boers to advance leisurely before opening fire. The Boers did not reply and a majority of them galloped off. It is reported that the remainder surrendered.

Among the prisoners captured Thursday was a grandson-in-law of President Krüger.

A special dispatch from Cape Town, dated Friday, Jan. 19, says:

"The Ladysmith relief force is steadily working northward. Heavy fighting has occurred. The Boers are retreating."

It is evident from Gen. Buller's dispatch and the advices from Spearman's Camp that a big battle is now being fought. As far as can be gathered from these dispatches, the result remains undecided, and unless the Boers withdraw during the night, the engagement on which hangs the fate of Ladysmith and which may prove the turning point of the whole war should be resumed this morning.

LADYSMITH, Jan. 20, via Spearman's Camp.—The enemy have placed in position new guns throwing eight-inch shells, and have been bombarding more vigorously for the last few days, though little damage has been done. Three of the British force have been wounded. The troops are jubilant over Gen. Buller's successful advance. His guns can be heard distinctly and the bursting of shells can be seen.

BULLER SURPRISED THE BOERS.

BOER HEADQUARTERS, UPPER TUGELA, Jan. 16, (via Lorenzo Marques, Jan. 19.)—It became known to-day that 300 English had crossed the Pontdrift, over the Great Tugela, and were on the federal side.

A display in force had been made toward Colenso and another northward, toward Oliver's Hoeck Bridge, which was blown up by us a few days ago. Toward 5 o'clock the alarm was given that the English were coming. The lookouts observed long, successive lines of infantry moving down to the new British position, a bush-covered chain of hills, known as Swartzkop. Their forces were sometimes lost in the trees studding the river bank. At 6 they emerged in open order and advanced in two lines to the low kopjes on the river bank. At 6:30 they took up a position, amid complete silence on the Boer side, their horses tethered where there was the least danger from chance shells, and the men prepared to make a night of it at their posts. Night had now fallen. With the gloom came fitful flashes of lightning from the thunder-clouds which had been threatening all day. The clouds eventually separated, showing the moon. Simultaneously with the clearing sky well-known Dutch hymns were repeated from kopje to kopje, with a strangely weird effect, highly inspiriting both to the graybeards and the beardless youths.

The battlefield is full of historical significance. Splonkop Hill, whence I am now writing, was a hill from which the Boer trekkers, after crossing the Drakensberg Mountains, spied out the then barbaric Natal and found it fair in their eyes.

FRENCH EXTENDING HIS LINES.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The War Office made public a brief report from Field Marshal Lord Roberts, under to-day's date, sa founded. He has not the slightest desire but to do the best he can as a staff officer and he does not at all exaggerate his capabilities in this respect. He does not take out with him a number of mules, as has been asserted. The only unusual part of his equipment is a wagon, or "spider," in which Lord Randolph Churchill traveled all over South Africa and which the Duke of Marlborough has placed at the service of Lord Valencia, his immediate commander, by whom the courtesy is greatly appreciated, as a well-sensoned "spider" is one of the best means of transport. The five horses the Duke of Marlborough takes out will, likely enough, be much needed as remounts before the Duke sees Blenheim again, and if he does not use them himself they will always be at the disposal of his brother officers.

The Duke of Marlborough's rumored retinue consists of a valet, who, when the Duke leaves the ship or his base quarters, would probably be dispensed with. Once in the field, the Duke contemplates taking no more baggage than allowed in the case of any officer. He is greatly amused at the stories regarding the Oriental style in which, it has been asserted, he would travel. Probably the only articles outside of the official kit which the Duke of Marlborough will have with him when the Yeomanry is sent forward is an ingeniously devised writing portfolio, or, rather, field desk, for carrying staff documents, invented by himself. The Duchess will not follow him to the Cape.

The Duke is much pleased at the expressions of friendship for Great Britain emanating from the United States, and is seriously anxious to learn if such feelings represented the majority of American opinion. Judging from all appearances and from the frankness of his conversation, the descendant of England's great warrior has dropped his rank and is just an ordinary Captain or Yeomanry, honestly anxious to serve his country and to emulate, as far as in him lies, his famous ancestor.

At about 11 o'clock the Duke and Duchess drove to the Waterloo railroad station and made their way through a crowd of khaki-clad officers, and Red Cross nurses, and a labyrinth of baggage trucks to the reserved saloon-carriage, where Capt. and Lady Grenfell, Ladies Blandford, Dudley and Essex and Mrs. Arthur Paget were seated. The Duchess of Marlborough wore a black dress and a bolero jacket, with a heavy fur boa thrown carelessly across her shoulders, the only glimpse of color being sable silk trimming. The Duke wore a close dark-gray overcoat, dark trousers, a black derby hat, tan shoes, a blue shirt, and a black tie.

Soon after the Marlboroughs arrived a contingent of the National Fire Brigade Union, of which the Duke of Marlborough is President, arrived to bid him farewell, and the railroad car in which the Duke and Duchess and their friends sat became the centre of attraction of the entire train. The Fire Brigade men started cheers as the train pulled out, which were taken up along the whole platform, the Duke of Marlborough, standing at the door of the car, smilingly acknowledging the cheering.

The departure of the second detachment of the London Volunteers for South Africa this morning led to a repetition of the scenes of enthusiasm of last Saturday along the whole route from Wellington Barracks to Nine Elms Station. The Londoners commenced assembling before daybreak, headed by several bands, and the volunteers, numbering 700 men, left the barracks at 7:15, marching in fours. For a time the people contented themselves with cheering, and the column advanced in good order until it reached Great George Street, where the friends, wives, and sweethearts of the men insisted on joining them and marching arm-in-arm. Thus, in the midst of constantly increasing enthusiasm, the volunteers finally reached the station at 9:30, where the Duke of Connaught, the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and other military and civic dignitaries had assembled. The volunteers were rapidly entrained for Southampton, and steamed away to the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen."

Large crowds met the volunteers at Southampton and gave them a ringing send-off as they embarked on the transports Ariosto, Kinfauns Castle, and Gaul.

SOUTHAMPTON, Jan. 20.—The transport Kinfauns Castle, with the Duke of Marlborough, Baroness Burdett-Coutes, Admiral Frederick A. Maxse, and many army officers on board, inland for Africa, sailed to-day. She was enthusiastically cheered by the large crowds of people who, in spite of the fact that it was raining heavily, lined the quays.

BOER LOSSES ESTIMATED 6,425.

RENSBURG, Cape Colony, Jan. 20.—Carefully compiled figures from republican sources, some of which have been investigated and found to be correct, show the Boer losses up to date are, approximately, 6,425 men, including 2,000 casualties during the siege of Ladysmith.

CRITICISM OF THE WAR OFFICE.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The War Office is coming in for considerable criticism for refusing to accept offers of private houses for the reception of the wounded from South Africa. This patriotic movement has been snubbed by the curt reply that the wounded would be retained in the hospitals until they were able to dispense with nursing. On the other hand, the army surgeons' employment of the Roentgen rays in field surgery has proved most successful and has met with the highest commendation. Orders have been received for a fresh equipment and skilled operators, and before February it is likely that every column at the front will be furnished with a Roentgen ray outfit.

Another electrical advance is that wireless telegraphy is rapidly gaining ground. Marconi outfits are being installed on three vessels destined for active service.

The selection by the War Office of Major Gen. Sir Frederick Carrington for service at the front calls out the comment that the Government has recognized this officer's claims at a very late day, considering the fact that his name is a byword in South Africa, where he spent almost his whole military career as a leader of expeditions. While Sir Frederick Carrington's billet is at present a mystery to the English press, it was not, after all, at the initiative of the War Office that he was called, and further, he will be intrusted with what will be practically an independent command of large proportions, and will attempt to achieve by means of one of the most heterogeneous forces ever gathered on the face of the earth the gallant objective hitherto held by the commanders in the field to be an impossibility.

SALISBURY'S POSITION SECURE.

(Copyright, 1900, by the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Nothing so adequately lends itself to a ready and forceful simile of the prevailing temper of the British nation as the popular conception of the stock market. On the floor there is a certain small percentage with such huge interests at stake that they are never budged by rumors that make or break the smaller fry. But these compose the very inmost ring, and their exclusiveness may be judged from the fact that one never knows when opening, from day to day, such solid and conservative journals as The Times, The Morning Post, or The Standard whether they will uphold or bitterly abuse the Government. In a like manner does the majority of public opinion sway as fanned by news from the front. Thus, it is well-nigh impossible to determine the real feeling toward the administration and the war, and it is still harder to forecast the result of the debates in Parliament.

Yet, in spite of this tremendous vacillation, the information which correspondents have gathered from all sorts of sources tends to strengthen the impression that Lord Salisbury will continue, not only in power, but, in the matter of votes, with but a slightly diminished control, which is tantamount to saying that the war against the Boers will be pursued to the bitter end, regardless of foreign interference and whimperings at home.

DUKE OF YORK TO GO TO SEA.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Duke of York has placed himself at the disposition of the Admiralty and will probably receive a command. But though he intimated that he was desirous of duty with the Cape Squadron, he will not attain his desire for the same reasons which prevented the Duke of Connaught from going to the front.

No one was more anxious to go out than the Duke of Cambridge. Realizing, however, that this was utterly impossible, he consoles himself by making life miserable for the nigh War Office officials. He is continually appearing with some new suggestion, and is generally being turned over to Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, Adjutant General to the Forces, who is very deaf. So firmly is the Duke of Cambridge convinced that his advice is essential to the country's existence that he will not take his usual Winter trip to the Continent.

KIPLING GOES TO MEET RHODES.

LONDON, Jan. 20. — Rudyard Kipling sailed for South Africa to-day. The news that he and his family were going came as a surprise, and is facetiously attributed to the fact that they have been driven out of England by the ceaseless jangling in music and recitations of his "Absent-Minded Beggar." A correspondent learns that the real reason which has prompted Mr. Kipling to go abroad is his desire to be "in at the death."

He is especially desirous of meeting Mr. Cecil Rhodes, with whom he is on terms of close friendship, immediately after the relief of Kimberley. Moreover, Mr. Kipling will utilize his trip in gathering good literary material. But he will not unnecessarily risk his safety, as he intends to stay at Cape Town until the conditions at the front assume a more pacific aspect.

A DUKE GOING HOME TO MARRY.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The young Duke of Westminster is coming home from South Africa. He will marry Miss West, youngest daughter of William Cornwallis West. The Duke will return to South Africa, almost immediately after his marriage, as an officer of the Imperial Yeomanry.

The future Duchess is a sister of Lieut. Cornwallis West, whose name has so often been connected with Lady Randolph Churchill's.

MACRUM'S TRIP IS A MYSTERY.

ROME, Jan. 20.—Charles E. Macrum, former United States Consul at Pretoria, who left Lorenzo Marques Dec. 18 and landed at Naples last Thursday, has arrived here.

The Naples correspondent of the Corriere Italia says Mr. Macrum denies that he bears a letter from President Krüger to President McKinley.

Mr. Macrum will go to Paris and London, and it is believed by some that he has a semi-official mission to the European Governments from President McKinley.

The Tribuna expresses the belief that he has a delicate mission from President Krüger to the Government of the United States and has orders to report in Washington as soon as possible.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A special dispatch from Rome received this morning says:

"Mr. Macrum, the returning American Consul at Pretoria, who arrived here yesterday, (Saturday,) denies that he left his post owing to a disagreement with President Krüger and State Secretary Reitz. He says he has a letter from President Krüger to President McKinley, and also a message to President Loubet, but no mission beyond delivering them."

Regarding the war, Mr. Macrum said that, while he believed the British would ultimately be successful, it would take a long time to convince the republics that they must submit. He said they had ample stores and munitions, and that there was the greatest enthusiasm in Pretoria for the war; and plans had been laid for a long struggle.

More Prisoners Arrive at Pretoria.

PRETORIA, Jan. 19.—Capt. Bates-Dennison and 135 prisoners of the Kuruman garrison have arrived here. It appears that six Boers were killed and eighteen wounded during the fighting at Kuruman.

Not Enlisting Boer Recruits.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 20.—Dr. Leyds, the representative in Europe of the Transvaal Government, has issued a statement, through the press, saying he is in receipt of so many offers from men who wish to volunteer for service with the Boers that he is compelled to announce that he is nowise authorized to enroll anybody in Europe, and that every one wishing to serve in the war must go to South Africa at this own risk and expense.

More Mules for the Transvaal.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 20.—The British steamer Corinthia cleared to-day for Cape Town with 1,400 mules for the British Government, and also a large quantity of foodstuffs.

CANADIAN TROOPS DEPART.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 20.—The first section of the second contingent which the Government of Canada is sending to South Africa to take part in the war against the Transvaal and Orange Free State embarked on the steamer Laurentian, which had been chartered for that purpose, this afternoon. The first section consists of artillery, and is in command of Major Hurdman.

The scene along the streets as the soldiers marched to the dock yard was one of great enthusiasm. Thousands assembled along the route of march and gave the men a tumultuous demonstration. The crowds cheered almost constantly and waved flags and handkerchiefs.

Before the artillerymen left their armory they were addressed by Frederick E. Borden, Minister of Militia and Defense in the Ottawa Cabinet; Gen. Hutton, Commander in Chief of the Militia, and Sir M. E. Daly, Governor of Nova Scotia.

The Laurentian at 2 o'clock hauled out from the pier and anchored in the stream. It was thought probable she would remain all night as the fog was very thick.

BOER SYMPATHIZERS FALL OUT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—There is to be a pro-Boer meeting to-morrow night in the Grand Opera House in this city. It will be presided over by Representative Sulzer, and the list of speakers expected to be heard is long and interesting. The attempt to organize this meeting was attended by some annoying incidents, chief among them being the alignment of Representative Fitzgerald as a supporter of the expansion policy of the President after he had been invited to preside over this meeting to express sympathy with the Boers.

The Washington Sentinel, which is a very pronounced Boer paper, and very earnest, as may be seen, in its appeals to the Hibernians and Germans to withhold anything like sympathy with Great Britain, tells the story of Fitzgerald's desertion of the pro-Boers thus:

"At the beginning of this movement it was decided that J. J. Fitzgerald of Boston, who represents an Irish district, was to be made Chairman, and an invitation was forthwith sent to that gentleman and formally accepted. On Jackson Day Mr. Fitzgerald in a speech defended the President and vigorously advocated the continuance of McKinley's war in the Philippines and announced that he would leave the Democratic Party if it opposed the prosecution of that 'damnable war against a people who are fighting for their rights against Republican tyranny and hypocrisy.'

"Protest was made against allowing a person who held such views to preside at a meeting of patriotic citizens. A special meeting of Hibernians, Germans, and the Executive Committee was called and the result was that Mr. Fitzgerald was informed that the committee had unanimously decided that as long as he held such un-American views he could never preside over a meeting of true Americans, and that therefore his invitation was revoked. This will show to the country where the Irish and Germans stand, and further show to our weak-kneed Congressmen what will be the issue in the next campaign."

Excitement at Esquimault.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 20.—There was considerable excitement at Esquimault yesterday occasioned by the receipt of a cipher message by Capt. Fagan, who is in charge of the station. What it contained Capt. Fagan, of course, is not willing to divulge, but orders were sent to the torpedo-boat destroyer Virago to prepare at once for a cruise. Shortly afterward the vessel steamed down the straits. At the fortifications the guard was doubled. At the dock yard all the guns are in readiness and a big gun covering the yard is manned night and day.

DEATH OF G. W. STEEVENS.

South African Fever Victim Had Won Success as a War Correspondent and Descriptive Writer.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The news of the death at Ladysmith on Monday of G. W. Steevens, the special correspondent of The London Daily Mail, from enteric fever, has been received with genuine sorrow in London, where he had many friends in and out of his profession. Mr. Steevens had a distinguished career at Oxford. His first newspaper success was a series of letters which he wrote from America, headed "The Land of the Dollar." His last work before going to the Transvaal was "The Tragedy of Dreyfus", and his long stay in hot, unsanitary Rennes is thought to have undermined his constitution to an extent that made him an easy prey for the fever.

Mr. Steevens made a romantic marriage a few years ago with a Mrs. Rogerson, well known in London society. She was sixty years old and Mr. Steevens was twenty-six, but the marriage was happy.

Mr. Steevens showed that he possessed faculties far above the average while yet a schoolboy. His career at the City of London School and at Balliol College, Oxford, was a succession of triumphs. To the great surprise of his friends, who had supposed that he would enter upon an academic career, Mr. Steevens became a journalist. An opportunity was given to him to join the staff of The Pall Mall Gazette in 1893, and he soon showed that he had chosen the right vocation. Before long he had become one of the most valued writers in the service of the paper, his articles on the British Navy and his letters from this country attracting considerable attention.

It was not, however, until 1897 that Mr. Steevens showed his real qualities as a descriptive writer. When The Daily Mail was started in that year by Alfred Harmsworth, Mr. Steevens was induced to join the staff, and soon afterward an opportunity came to him to do other than routine work. This was the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, and the description of the scene at St. Paul's was quoted in newspapers all over the world. Later in the same year he published his account of the war between Greece and Turkey under the title "With the Conquering Turk." The book had an immediate success, and was spoken of as initiating an entirely new style in war correspondence. Mr. Steevens was next heard of through his articles on the advance of Kitchener to Khartoum. Not content with publishing a book about that campaign, he also wrote another volume about the condition of Egypt. After that he went to India with Lord Curzon, and his articles on the voyage and on the condition of Hindustan were republished in yet another volume.

But the book which brought Mr. Steevens the greatest amount of celebrity was the recently issued volume, "The Tragedy of Dreyfus." This volume contained a number of errors, but its style was said by all literary critics to be masterly, and Mr. Steevens succeeded in producing pen pictures of the trial as no other of the correspondents at Rennes was able to do.

GERMANY GROWS ANGRY AGAIN.

British Press Comments on Count von Buelow's Speech Cause Bitter Feeling.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The tone of the British press comments on Count von Bülow's speech in the Reichstag yesterday gives offense here and is causing a fresh outbreak of bitter feeling. The Government is understood to be displeased with the reception of the Foreign Ministers' speech in England, and the news that another German ship has been captured adds fresh fuel to the flame. The papers ask how the seizure of a ship with flour can be reconciled with Lord Salisbury's promises.

The German press to-day comments liberally on yesterday's interpellation in the Reichstag on the seizure of German steamers by British cruisers.

The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"The whole session showed that, since the English answer was known beforehand, this peculiar parliamentary action might have been spared us."

The Freisinnige Zeitung expresses the opinion that the interpellation took both a dignified and an appropriate course.

The Vossische Zeitung asserts that Count von Bülow "showed in this whole affair as much tact as energy," and well deserved the ovation which the Reichstag yesterday accorded him.

The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, with the whole Agrarian Party, is not satisfied with the results. The paper says:

"In the Reichstag there was loud applause after von Bülow's speech; throughout the land, we can assure the delegates, there was bitter disappointment."

The National Zeitung says:

"The effect of yesterday's proceedings on public opinion in England will be in the nature of a corrector, we hope."

The Vorwaerts calls the interpellation a "miscarried farce."

The Post, enumerating what Great Britain offers in reparation, says:

"Truly all these are successes in which we may rejoice heartily, because they mean that full satisfaction is given to Germany."

The Tageblatt, in its comments, remarks:

"England now knows fully that in the German Empire she faces a country which will not yield a hair's breadth from what it conceives to be right. The Foreign Minister and the Reichstag both carefully avoided shouting triumph at Great Britain's backdown, but people in England will deduce a lesson from this reserve, that the German Empire, whose moderate policy is supported by a vast majority of its Parliament, cannot be provoked with immunity."

To Express Sympathy for the Boers.

A meeting to express sympathy with the Boer republics over the South African war will be held Jan. 29 at the Grand Central Palace, Lexington Avenue and Forty-third Street, under the auspices of the New York Committee to Aid the United Republics of South Africa. Among the speakers will be Montagu White, formerly Consul General for the South African Republic at London, John Van Voorhis of Rochester, Robert B. Roosevelt, Ernest H. Crosby, William Astor Chanler, William McAdoo, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Samuel Gompers, Congressman Charles F. Cochran of Missouri, and Congressman John G. Lentz of Ohio.

E. M. SHEPARD TO DEMOCRATS.

At a Reception to Long Island Congressmen He Gives Warning Against Free Silver Issue.

The National Civic Club of Brooklyn tendered a reception last evening to the Congressmen from Long Island who voted for the gold standard bill. Congressman Mitchell May was not present. He voted against the bill and was not invited with his fellow Representatives.

Congressman Townsend Scudder of the First District was unable to attend the reception. He sent a letter, in which he said that, having done what his judgment and sense of right dictated, and nothing more, he did not feel that he was entitled to any credit.

Edward M. Shepard, the President of the club, said the votes of the Congressmen were given not alone on behalf of the wage-earning interests of Long Island, but with a view to larger politics. The sound dollar and a sound currency represented the best traditions of the Democratic Party, and neither in 1900, nor in any other year, would it be faithful unless it stood for the gold standard.

"We are about to welcome a distinguished Democrat," he continued, "one who represents a large and powerful constituency West and South. We desire that he and other Democrats who have large constituencies should look carefully at the Democratic situation.

"On the great questions of the day that are timely, with a single exception, the party is united in a way which should bring victory to the party and benefit the country at large. We are agreed that in our foreign relations we shall not be disloyal or favor the setting up of any government that is inconsistent with the principles of the Declaration of Independence, and in opposition to all the features of special privileges embodied in Republican legislation, the aggregation of capital. The opposition to that is Democratic from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and we can all stand on that without surrendering our convictions expressed in 1896 or since.

"We hope that with all Democrats, and especially with the distinguished Democrat who is coming here, the free silver question may be held in suspense for the time being. We can say that if the free coinage of silver is right and fitted to the economic conditions of the American people, the longer the discussion the longer the cause will prevail. A missionary effort in four years must bring a change of sentiment if the silver men are right. The silver cause should not be crowded to an issue, but wait the growth of sentiment.

"It is easy to say a sound thing, but to act is left to things a privilege reserved only for a few. This vote of the Congressmen present is the most significant thing done in the Democratic Party for years, and is a harbinger of success."

Congressman John J. Fitzgerald of the Second District, who was then introduced, said that he believed it was his duty to act as he saw the light. He said he believed the people of his district would be best served by a vote for the gold standard bill, and he thought it was for the best interests of capital and labor that there should be a fixed and permanent medium of exchange.

Congressman Edmund H. Driggs of the Third District said few realized the tremendous strain the Congressmen had been under in taking the stand they did. Referring to the war in the Philippines, he declared it was the duty of the Democratic Party to stand by the Republican Administration until Aguinaldo had been made to understand what the majesty of the United States meant.

Congressmen Bertram T. Clayton of the Fourth District and Frank E. Wilson of the Fifth District also made brief speeches. Letters of regret were read from John G. Carlisle, Charles S. Fairchild, and others. In his letter Mr. Carlisle said:

"The gentlemen to whom the reception is to be given have set an example of independence and fidelity to sound financial principles which entitles them to the confidence and support of all true Democrats and encourages hope that the time will come when the party of which we have all been proud in the past will resume its proper position upon this and other public questions. The proposition to authorize the free coinage of legal-tender silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, or any other ratio, has become a pure abstraction. As a practical question it is dead as African slavery."

W. J. BRYAN IN BALTIMORE

Addresses the Silver Wing of the Local Democrats.

DEFINES A COMING ISSUE

Says the Income Tax Will Be in the Next Campaign—Declares that Silver Still Lives.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—William J. Bryan delivered an address here to-night upon the political questions of the day to an audience which filled the Music Hall, the biggest auditorium in the city, and which greeted him and his remarks with the greatest enthusiasm.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Maryland Democratic Association, one of the free-silver wings of the Democratic Party of the State, and was not encouraged in any manner by the regular Democratic organization. In fact, the latter held strictly aloof from any participation in the affair. They made no effort to discourage it in any manner, but not one of the Democratic leaders appeared upon the platform, and an offer of stage tickets was politely declined by the principal members of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Mr. Bryan came over from Washington in a special car accompanied by a committee under the leadership of S. S. Field, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements. Upon reaching this city the party drove to the Eutaw House for supper, after which they went to the Music Hall.

With the party who came over from Washington were Senator Tillman of South Carolina, Congressmen Sulzer of New York, Richardson of Tennessee, Jones of Virginia, and De Armand of Missouri. It was nearly 8 o'clock when the party reached the Music Hall, where the crowd greeted him uproariously. Mr. Bryan said in part:

HIS WORK FOR THE PARTY.

"I want to assure you in the beginning that my happiness does not depend upon any honor which the people of this Nation can confer, neither do I believe that this Nation's happiness or welfare depends upon any one person. In politics as in the army, the Generals get the glory and the privates do the work. And therefore I feel that I owe it to those who for nearly four years have been bearing the burden in the heat of the day; I owe it to them to say that what I have done is but an atom compared with what they have done.

"In 1896 the voters proved that they could control the policy of the party, and during the last three years they have proved that they could hold what they gained in 1896. In spite of newspapers, in spite of railroads, of banks, and in spite of every influence supposed to obtain, the plain people of the Democratic Party have stood and now stand for the Chicago platform, in all that it says.

"I want to begin with an accepted proposition, that proposition which I consider most fundamental in government. I find it in the Declaration of Independence—if you will pardon me for quoting anything from so old and worn-out a document as our Republican friends seem to think it. The Declaration of Independence was once a highly respected document; it is under a cloud just now, but I have confidence that in a few months the cloud will be rolled by and that old document will shine with all its former brilliancy. That fundamental principle is that all men are created equal.

"I do not mean to say that all men are created equal in physical strength; I do not mean to say that all men are created equal in mental ability, or in moral worth, or that under any just form of government a man will be equal in capacity for enjoyment, or in the enjoyment that we have. What I mean to say is this: that whenever government comes into contact with the citizen, whenever the citizen touches the government, then all must stand equal before the law, and there must be no high, no low, no rich, no poor. That government must be administered according to the maxim, 'Equal rights to all and special privileges to none.'

WHO PAYS THE TAXES?

"I am going to ask the Republicans here to think for a little while when they go home of the income tax and to see if it is not in line with that doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none. How do we collect our Federal taxes to-day? Well, before the Spanish war broke out we collected almost the entire tax from two sources, from internal revenue duties on liquor and tobacco and import duties on what we eat and wear and use. In what proportion do the people pay these taxes? In proportion to the benefits received from government? Not at all. In proportion to population? Not at all. In proportion to income? Not at all. In what proportion do people pay internal revenue taxes? Why, largely in proportion to the liquor and tobacco they use. They do not use those things in proportion to their income, and so far as you collect taxes from liquor and tobacco, you make the poor man pay on an average a larger percentage of his income to support the Government, and the rich man a smaller percentage on his income.

"When the Spanish war broke out we had to have more taxes, and the Republican Party looked around for any old thing to put a stamp on, and you run across the stamp taxes all the time. Every time I send a telegram I have to pay the regular rate and, in addition thereto, 1 cent is added for the beneficial assimilation of the Filipino.

INCOME TAX AN ISSUE.

"Why is it that the man who sends the telegram has to pay the tax? Because the telegraph company says so, and why was the law so made that the telegraph company could shift the burden on to the man who sends the telegram? Because the telegraph company has more influence with the Republican Party than all the poor Republicans who use the wires.

"In an hour of peril this Government can take the son from his mother, the husband from his wife, the father from his child, and stand them up in front of an enemy's guns, but in an hour of danger this Government cannot lay its hands upon accumulated wealth and make that wealth bear its share of the expenses.

"Why is it? It is because the Republican Party has made money more precious than blood. My friends, you heard men denounce our income tax in 1896. I want to say it is stronger to-day than it was then. And if those who have been shirking their taxes think that they have settled this question forever, I want to tell them that the income tax will be in the next campaign, and it will be in the campaign until the Constitution of the United States is so amended as to specifically authorize an income tax, so that neither one Judge nor nine Judges can build a bulwark around the fortunes of the great and throw the burdens of government on the poor.

SAYS SILVER LIVES.

"But this is only one question. I am going to speak of another question, which shows how the Republican Party is looking after the interests of wealth and neglecting the welfare of the people. I am going to say a word on the money question. I know they say that the money question is a dead issue. But, my friends, silver has been lurled so often that a little thing like a funeral does not bother us like it used to. When reverses in a war with a handful of Boers will shake our financial system, where will the gold standard be if England ever attacks a nation of her size and gets into a real war?

"When we join ourselves to the gold standard, when we make gold alone the legal tender for the payment of debts, we connect ourselves with every disturbance in Europe, and make ourselves dependent upon their conditions for our prosperity.

"You tell me it is a sound system? It is false, that system is not sound. Tell me it is an American system? It is a lie; there is no such American system; there is no American system that makes us tremble every time there is trouble among the gold standard countries of the Old World.

Continuing upon the currency question Mr. Bryan asserted that in 1896 all of the leading political parties demanded a double standard, differing only in the method of obtaining it. Now, the Republican Party insists upon a single standard, and a bill is pending in Congress which not only seeks that end, but also endeavors to perpetuate the present National banking system.

TRUSTS AND IMPERIALISM.

Mr. Bryan took up the trusts, which he discussed at great length, insisting that the Republican Party had no intention whatever of interfering with such corporations under any circumstances. From the trusts he passed to a discussion of the standing army, and declared that the presence of 100,000 soldiers in this country and the Philippines was but a step toward militarism. He then discussed imperialism, arguing that there was a great difference between that and expansion.

The present policy of the Administration, he asserted, tended toward imperialism, although its friends and upholders endeavored to show that it was expansion. "I want trade," he said. "I want to expand our trade by peaceful means, but I would not put one American boy on the auction block and sell him for all the trade of the universe. And yet the man who says it will pay must be prepared to figure with pencil how much the boy is worth.

"You cannot find an argument," said he, "for holding the Philippine Islands that would not apply to Cuba. When we went into the war we said that the people of Cuba are, and of right ought to be free, and I challenge you to draw a line between the rights of the Cubans and the rights of the Filipinos. There is only one difference between Cuba and the Philippine Islands. We promised independence to Cuba; we did not promise it to the Philippine Islands. But, my friends, our promise was but the recognition of a right that would have existed without the promise. We said that Cuba should, and of right, ought to be free, but if that was right then, my friends, it existed in the Philippine Islands without the necessity for the express promise.

"I want," said Mr. Bryan, in conclusion, "if I can, to help to restore a government founded upon the Declaration of Independence and administered according to the doctrine of Jefferson; a government that will stand, as it did in Jackson's days, between a bank aristocracy and the people. But, my friends, I cannot tell you what fate has decreed, but I know this—that if it is fate that this Nation is to cease to be a Republic and become an empire; if it is destiny that this, the greatest Republic of history, is to extinguish its light and follow in the light of the monarchies of the Old World. I pray to God that the Democratic Party may go down to eternal death with the Republic rather than to live when its principles are gone."

At the conclusion of Mr. Bryan's address he was the guest at a banquet given in his honor by his admirers of this city and vicinity.

Miners Want No 16 to 1.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 20.—At to-day's session of the United Mine Workers of America a resolution favoring the free coinage of silver was tabled amid cries of "We want no 16 to 1!" "We are not a monetary convention!"

BOSTONIANS INVITE BRYAN.

Bryan Club of Massachusetts Asks Him to Breakfast Jan. 30.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—William Jennings Bryan will be the guest of the Bryan Club of Massachusetts at a breakfast Jan. 30, a telegram accepting an invitation being received to-day.

The Bryan Club of Massachusetts is the result of a number of conferences held during the past two months by Democrats, Populists, and Silver Republicans, and has been formed for the purpose of propaganda work. It is the intention to form a branch club in every city, town, and hamlet in the State.

HERE TO MEET BRYAN.

Politicians Talk of Schley as Running Mate—Mr. Hogg Says the Party Needs No Funds.

Many prominent Democrats are in town to attend the dinner to be given to William Jennings Bryan in this city to-morrow night. Among them are ex-Gov. Hogg of Texas, Frank Campbell, Chairman of the New York Democratic State Committee, and Norman E. Mack of Buffalo. All of these are at the Hoffman House.

While ex-Gov. Hogg would not discuss the question, it can be stated that he is in no sense a candidate for the Vice Presidential nomination, despite published rumors to the contrary. Indeed, he would not accept it.

It was learned, though, that the name of Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley will be pressed by delegates from the East and South as an excellent running mate for Mr. Bryan.

Chairman Campbell said that while he did not know what city would get the National Convention, he favored New York.

When a TIMES reporter asked ex-Gov. Hogg where the Democrats would get funds to conduct the campaign, he said:

"Money! We don't need it. We need no better metal than principle in the coming contest. There must be something radically wrong in our monetary system when money is quoted at 186 on Wall Street."

Mr. Bryan will arrive early to-morrow, and has engaged quarters at the Hotel Bartholdi.

Dr. John H. Girdner of 31 West Forty-fifth Street repudiated a published statement that Mr. Bryan was to be his guest, in the sense of staying at his house. He expects to entertain Mr. Bryan, for whom he has great admiration.

BRYAN WILL VISIT JERSEY CITY.

Arrangements to be Made for a Public Meeting Wednesday.

City Collector Robert Davis of Jersey City was yesterday advised by Congressman Daly that Col. William J. Bryan will visit Jersey City on Wednesday next. Mr. Daly also asked Collector Davis to arrange for a public meeting at which Col. Bryan can speak.

Mr. Davis said he would make the necessary arrangements, but he could not say positively whether Col. Bryan would speak in Jersey City or Hoboken. There were but two halls in Jersey City, Mr. Davis said, that were large enough for the purpose, one being St. Peter's, the other the Congregational Tabernacle. If he can secure either for Wednesday night, the meeting will be held in Jersey City, if not it will be held in Hoboken.

When asked on what subjects Col. Bryan would speak he said he did not know. "I think it safe to assume, however," he added, "that he will not speak of 16 to 1. My idea is that he will confine himself to trusts and imperialism."

SAYS HER HUSBAND IS INSANE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 20.—Upon a warrant sworn to by Olive E. Burnham, wife of Capt. D. R. Burnham, retired, charging her husband with insanity, that officer occupies a cell in the insane ward of the county hospital. All efforts made by Burnham's friends to release him from custody proved fruitless, as the statutes forbid an examination until twenty-four hours of incarceration have elapsed.

Mrs. Burnham is the granddaughter of Sir Thomas Palmer of England, her mother being a cousin of President Buchanan.

Their son, William, is a Captain in the regular army, now stationed at Morro Castle, Havana. Friends will to-morrow demand a full hearing of the case.

NEW ENGLAND WOMEN TO MEET.

Reception to Members of the National Society Next Wednesday.

Mrs. Henry Clark Coe, President of the National Society of New England Women, will give an informal reception to all members (active and associate) at Delmonico's on Jan. 24, from 2 to 5 P. M. Musical selections will be rendered by Mrs. Lawrence Earle, Miss Florence Boese, and others, and a monologue on New England life and other selections by Mrs. Henry Gielow.

The Entertainment Committee has decided to give on Feb. 9 a matinée benefit at Wallack's Theatre for the purpose of founding a scholarship fund. Able talent has been secured. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Malcolm McLean, 31 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street.

SUIT OVER $40,000 TRUST FUND.

Sarah Jane Quin Accuses Her Brother, Grahams Polley.

Sarah Jane Quin, formerly Sarah Jane Polley, through her counsel, ex-Corporation Counsel Albert G. McDonald, yesterday obtained from Justice Marean, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, an injunction restraining Grahams Polley, her brother and trustee, from disposing of any part of a fund of $40,000 belonging to her and now in the possession of the defendant as trustee. The Polleys are well known in the Eastern District of Brooklyn.

The plaintiff, who is now the wife of William T. Quin, inherited $40,000 from her father. She alleges that Grahams Polley has used part of the fund for his own benefit. She asks that he be removed as trustee; that he be compelled to account, and that a receiver of the fund be appointed.

New Yorker's Suicide in Berlin.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—E. Jacobson, formerly of New York, has committed suicide here.

NO RAPID TRANSIT DELAY

Charter Amendment to Avert Obstacles to Bond Issues.

READY FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Municipal Assembly's Approval Not Required Under New Provisions—Sureties of Contractor McDonald.

The Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners held a meeting yesterday afternoon and considered an amendment to the charter, the new provision being designed to permit the financial officers of the city, in connection with the Rapid Transit Board, to issue bonds for building the tunnel as they may be required, without the approval of the Municipal Assembly. It was considered by the Controller and others connected with the board that the wording of the existing section in this relation is somewhat ambiguous, and to clear away any possible doubt and to leave them with a free hand the subjoined amendment was drawn. It will be taken to Albany next Tuesday by Controller Coler, Commissioner Rives, and Counsel Albert B. Boardman.

Mayor Van Wyck, Controller Coler, members of the Council, and others have expressed their approval of the proposed change, and it is not thought there will be any opposition to its passage. It will be introduced into both Houses of the Legislature simultaneously.

THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The amendment as it will stand if passed reads as follows:

"Section 1. That the Charter of Greater New York, being Chaptre 378, laws of 1897, is hereby amended as to Section 45 to read as follows:

"'Section 45. The Municipal Assembly is authorized to grant from time to time to any corporation thereunto duly authorized the franchise or right to construct and operate railways in, upon, over, under, and along streets, avenues, parkways, or highways of the city, but no such grant shall be made except upon the limitations and conditions of this act elsewhere provided in respect to the grant by the Municipal Assembly of franchises and rights in the streets, avenues, parkways, and highways of the city; and, further, to the end that cheap, easy, and convenient intercourse may be had between all parts of the city, the City of New York as hereby constituted shall have full and exclusive power to establish, and full power to enjoy, by leasing or otherwise, and to maintain and regulate ferries over all streams and waterways within or adjoining the limits of the said city. The Municipal Assembly may pass appropriate ordinances not inconsistent with law or with this act, or with the vested rights of existing companies or corporations, to enforce the provisions of this section and to carry out its purpose.'

AS TO THE ISSUE OF BONDS.

"Nothing in this act contained shall, except as in this section hereinafter provided, affect the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners established by Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, or any proceeding by it had or begun, or the provisions of the said act for the issue of bonds or other means to meet the cost of municipal construction of rapid transit railroads, or the provisions for the issue of revenue bonds to meet the expenses of the said board, or in any other way to repeal or affect in any manner the provisions of the said Chapter 4, Laws of 1891, as amended, or any other rapid transit act, or any provision thereof, applicable to the corporation hereafter known as the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New York, or any municipality herein united therewith, or territory embraced therein, or to repeal or affect the general laws of the State in respect to street surface railroads. No consent or approval of the Municipal Assembly to or for the issue of corporate stock, as provided by Section 169 of this act, shall be necessary to authorize the Controller to issue said stock for the purposes described in said Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended; nor shall the certificate of the Controller mentioned in Section 140 of this act, or any other certificate, consent, act, or proceeding, not mentioned in said Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, be required to render valid and of full force and effect, any contract entered into under the authority of said Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended. But the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Controller of the City of New York, as hereby constituted, shall be subject to all the duties and obligations prescribed in said Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, for the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and Controller therein mentioned.

"Section 2.—This act shall take effect immediately."

PART SUBJECT TO REPEAL.

That part of Section 45 which it is proposed to repeal reads as follows:

"Nothing in this act contained shall repeal or affect in any manner the provisions of the Rapid Transit act, applicable to the corporation hereafter known as the

MOLINEUX WITNESS GONE

Mrs. Gelle, Athletic Club Housekeeper, Suddenly Disappears.

SUBPOENAS TORN UP BY HER

Tan Overcoat Belonging to Cornish Also Reported Missing—Postmen Contradict Heckmann.

The developments in the Molineux case yesterday were several. One story was that Mrs. M. A. Gelle, housekeeper at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, had suddenly disappeared. It was said that several days ago a subpoena had been served upon her, and that she tore it up and stamped upon it, declaring that she would never appear against Molineux. On being served with another subpoena by Detective Sergeant McCafferty, she is said to have torn it up before his face.

It is presumed she was to be asked if she had seen in Barnet's apartments any paper resembling that of the poison packet sent to Cornish, but the principal importance attached to her disappearance is that in connection with it the story is told of the disappearance also some time ago of a tan-colored coat belonging to Cornish, which he wore about two years ago.

The fact that the housekeeper had left within the last three days, as it was put, was confirmed at the club. It was also said that there had been some talk of one of Cornish's coats having been missed. During the testimony of Koch, the letter-box man, it was brought out that the man who called upon him in December, 1898, and hired a box wore a tan-colored coat.

It was said yesterday that should such a coat as that lost by Cornish turn up in evidence for the defense it would very readily be shown that it was not of a size that would be worn by the man who in the diagnosis blank gave his chest measurement as 37 inches.

The coat is not likely to turn up, however. Mr. Weeks said last night: "We have no tan coat. I had not heard of the story. I know nothing about it."

The writing expert Hagan was at work yesterday making a chemical test of the writing on Exhibit F, in which a correction in the address had been made. The tests were made at the Criminal Court Building, and it was said they had established the fact that two different kinds of ink had been used. Heckmann, the letter-box man, said that Molineux, on renting a box from him, had taken a letter from his pocket and made a correction.

A point made yesterday by persons around the court building was as to whether Juror Martin had brought himself under the provision of Section 413 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which provides that if a juror has any personal knowledge respecting a fact in a case he must declare it in open court during the trial, and must be placed upon the witness stand.

The matter had no further basis than that this juror asked permission to show the writing expert two specimens of writing which he had made himself, one of which he had blotted, while the other had dried naturally. He desired an opinion as to whether such writings might not be mistaken for writings made with different kinds of ink.

The Recorder permitted the juror to ask the question, but with the understanding that the matter was not to go on record; while the expert said he would want to make a chemical test to express an opinion about inks, and it was ordered in the case of the letter Exhibit F that it should be so treated. Mr. Osborne said he would not call the juror to the stand. He did not think Mr. Martin's question showed any opinion or the knowledge of a fact.

The testimony of Heckmann that after he had kept uncalled-for mail two or three months after the expiration of the period for which a box had been rented he was accustomed to throw it away, because the letter carriers had told him to, has been made the subject of investigation by Postmaster Van Cott, who had his attention called to the matter. He summoned the postmen who have served the route in which is 257 West Forty-second Street. They have all been on that service for ten years. The following statements from the letter carriers were the result:

Carrier James F. Mohn said: "My attention being called to the statement of Nicholas Heckmann of 257 West Forty-second Street, on my route, saying that he offered to return mail, and the carrier refused to accept the same, I wish to state that on all occasions when offered mail to be returned to the Post Office as not deliverable I have taken the same to be treated as per Post Office rules. As to the statement saying the carrier told him to destroy mail matter, I would state the same to be a deliberate falsehood."

Carrier L. A. Smalley said: "Mr. Heckmann's statement is most absurd. I cannot think of one instance where he offered to return mail that I—and I think my partners on the route—refused to take it; we have had too much experience in Post Office duties to do anything like that."

Carrier Charles Buls said: "Nicholas Heckmann states that the carriers refused to take back mail which was to be returned to the office. I deny the statement. I emphatically deny that I ever told Nicholas Heckmann or any other person to destroy any mail matter of any description. I have known Nicholas Heckmann for a number of years."

The fact that such an investigation had been made leaked out accidentally at the General Post Office, and Postmaster Van Cott reluctantly allowed the letter carriers' statements to be made public.

Gen. Molineux paid his usual Saturday afternoon visit to his son in the Tombs, spending about ten minutes with him.

There were no developments yesterday to indicate the nature of the defense. It is expected the case for the people will be closed by Tuesday and that possibly Mr. Weeks will make his opening address to the jury that afternoon. The letter carriers, it was learned, will be called as witnesses by the defense.

Rejection of the Holland Boat.

The representatives of the Holland Torpedo Boat Company in this city had not been notified officially yesterday that the Naval Board of Construction at Washington had made an adverse report on the proposed purchase of the submarine torpedo boat Holland. A rumor was current that owing to the fact that Chief Engineer Lowe recommended the construction of several such boats for harbor defense around New York, and that Rear Admiral Hichborn voted in favor of the adoption of the Holland, a new board may be appointed to look into the advisability of having the decision of the present board reversed.

Trouble About Religion Near Nyack.

NYACK, Jan. 20.-A religious argument has been started in Piermont between Catholic parents and the Board of Education of that place. A new schoolhouse for Piermont, Sparkill, and Grandview was opened, and the Catholic parents made objection to their children taking part in the religious exercises which opened the day's study. They had their children remain out of the building until after 9 o'clock, so as to skip the exercises, and as a result the Principal dismissed sixteen Catholic pupils this week.

J. K. Brown Again Sentenced to Die.

James K. Brown, who shot and killed Policeman Charles Gebhard in Hoboken on July 26, 1898, and who secured a stay through an appeal on the ground that he was illegally tried before a struck jury, which plea the United States Courts set aside, was yesterday resentenced by Judge Lippincott at Jersey City. The day set for the execution is Feb. 9, the same day that on Friday was fixed for the execution of Edward Clifford.

Want Money for McClellan Monument.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The fund for the McClellan monument, which it is proposed to erect in Washington, now amounts to about $10,000, and the committee in charge will ask Congress for $50,000 for the pedestal. It is hoped to have the ceremonies attending the laying of the cornerstone at the time of the reunion of the Society of the Army of the Potomac in Washington in 1901.

Two Knitting Mills for Georgia.

GRIFFIN, Ga., Jan. 20.—E. H. Spivey of Talbotton has completed arrangements for the erection of a twenty-thousand-dollar knitting mill at this place. A. S. Brown of Little Falls, N. Y., has been here for several days, and has about closed a deal to bring his knitting mill plant here from Little Falls.

CLARK IS STILL ON THE RACK.

Montana Witnesses Continue to Accuse the Senator of Buying Votes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Investigation by the Committee on Privileges and Elections into the allegations of bribery against Senator Clark was resumed to-day.

T. F. Normoile, a bookkeeper of Butte, was first called. He was a member of the last Legislature. He testified that within a week after his election he was approached with an indirect offer of a large sum for his vote for Mr. Clark. It was said to him that he could get $15,000 to $20,000 for his vote, and perhaps enough to make him a snug fortune if he would merely absent himself from the Legislature at the time of the voting for United States Senator. When the Legislature convened a man had approached him and asked him if he proposed to make a "sucker" of himself and not get anything out of the election. Finally, he said, just before the election he was offered $12,500 for his vote for Clark, the sum to be placed in the hands of some disinterested person.

At the conclusion of Mr. Normoile's testimony, Mr. Cason, one of yesterday's witnesses, was recalled for cross-examination by Mr. Faulkner. He admitted that he had gone to W. A. Clark's office in November, soon after election, to talk with him about the election of a United States Senator. He explained why he had gone to see Mr. Clark, saying that generally the Republicans were favorable to Clark's election, and he thought there was a good chance to elect him.

At the two interviews he had with Mr. Clark in November he had indicated his belief that Mr. Marcyes, Representative-elect from Custer County, might be induced to vote for Clark, but he said that no approach to corruption with reference to Mr. Marcyes was made at these interviews. Mr. Cason said Clark had authorized him to pay $10,000 to Representative Marcyes, the authorization being given him in a whisper and by holding up the fingers and thumbs of both hands. Subsequently he had learned that Marcyes was favorable to Clark anyhow, and he made no offer of money to him.

Mr. Cason, after admitting that he received $500 from Senator Clark for his services said that Mr. Clark did not have the reputation in Butte of being a liberal payer.

A letter of Cason to Root, in which the former held the latter responsible for the making public of the written statement of Cason, which was to be held as sacred between them, was offered in evidence. In another letter Cason reiterated the statements made in the Root letter, declaring that Mr. Clark had said he would hold his seat in the Senate if it cost him $1,000,000.

On re-direct examination Mr. Cason told how Mr. Root had given him $1,500 to leave Butte and keep away from the service of a subpoena of the Senate Committee.

Daly Renews War on Clark.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Montana, Jan. 20.—Marcus Daly's hostility has been stimulated by a report that ex-Senator Mantle, who has heretofore been neutral, is now friendly to Senator Clark. Recently Clark bought The Butte Inter-Mountain to further his political ambition. Now Daly is to re-establish the defunct Anaconda Chronicle, which is to be an anti-Clark organ.

DEATH OF JAMES PYLE.

He Was a Pioneer of Modern Business Methods—Brought "O. K." Into Popularity.

James Pyle, the well-known soap merchant, died yesterday at his home, 215 West Forty-fifth Street. Mr. Pyle was born at Guysborough, Nova Scotia, Aug. 16, 1823. His father had been a Loyalist who had gone to Nova Scotia from Pennsylvania after the battle of the Brandywine. The family originally came from the Isle of Wight, England, having obtained a grant of land from William Penn. The Pyles were very influential in the Isle of Wight, where there is to this day a village called Pyle. There is also a Pyle Street in Cowes. James Pyle came to New York when he was twenty-two years old, and started in the washing fluid business, later dealing in soda and soap, and finally in pearline, made widely familiar through extensive advertising.

It was when located in the vicinity of the old Tribune office that Mr. Pyle, who had become acquainted with Horace Greeley, learned the value of that advertising in which he afterward expended sums aggregating millions. Mr. Greeley had sought to secure his "ad" for some time. Finally he is reported to have said in substance: "Here is the rate card. Use whatever space you wish for one year. If at the end of that time you find that it has paid to advertise, you may pay for whatever space you have used. If it hasn't paid, you need not pay." The space was duly paid for.

His advertisements were notable for their pithiness. They contained phrases and epigrams that were calculated, and did, to catch the public eye and impress themselves on the public memory. He was the first to utilize in advertisements the letters "O K" in their business significance of "all correct." He had read the version of the origin of the use of these letters by Stonewall Jackson as an indorsement, and was struck by their catchiness. By his extensive employment of them he probably did more than any other person to raise them to the dignity of a popular term and an established business institution.

He was a Republican, but never took an active part in politics. During the draft riots his house, which was then in Wall Street, was marked for destruction, but it was never attacked.

Mr. Pyle was a very large man, being 6 feet 5 inches in height. He was plain in his tastes and habits. He always refused to work for another, and would never have a partner until his two sons, James T. and William S., were of an age to be taken into the business. He was not only a man of large stature, but of large heart. His religious convictions—he was a Baptist—were as firm as his business convictions, and he lived up to them. He expected that all those in his employ would do the full measure of their duty to him, and he considered that his duty to them required that he should treat them with kindness and generosity. He was a strong advocate of the Saturday half holiday system, and set the example by shutting down on that day promptly at noon. He never went into society, and avoided clubs. He believed that there was in truth no place like home, and passed there practically the whole of the time that he could spare from his business. For several years he had been an invalid, and had been confined to his home since December, 1898. For six years he had been blind, but he bore his affliction with cheerfulness, and was never heard to complain. He leaves, besides his sons, a widow and one daughter, Mrs. Charles W. McAlpin.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon at the Central Baptist Church, of which he was a member. The burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

LARGEST LAKE SHIP LAUNCHED.

The John W. Gates, Five Hundred Feet Long, to Carry Ore.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, Jan. 20.—Hundreds of marine men and thousands of other visitors witnessed to-day at Lorain the launching of the largest vessel ever placed upon the great lakes. She is the first 500-foot ore carrier ever built, and the cargo which she will carry will be almost equal to two ordinary cargoes of two or three years ago. The vessel, which was built by the American Shipbuilding Company, is named the John W. Gates. Mrs. John W. Gates christened it. The vessel is scheduled to carry 8,000 gross tons, and is to hail from Duluth.

Among the large number of new vessels which will carry ore next season three more of the 500-foot type will be built. The second one, now under construction at the same shipyards, will be named the J. J. Hill. She will be launched in about six weeks. It is asserted by marine men that there will be a demand next season for more vessels in the ore traffic than can be found on the lakes, and that this and a few following years will form an era of lake shipbuilding.

For a Cooking Class Fund.

The New York State Household Economic Association has undertaken to establish a Kitchen Class Fund, to be used in the continuance of its work last Winter in conducting cooking classes in the tenement districts. Many applications for a renewal of the work have been received from former pupils and other women tenants of the congested districts, but the funds of the society for this purpose have been exhausted. A course of twelve lessons for a class of from sixteen to twenty women requires an expenditure of $25. Information as to methods of contribution to the proposed fund may be obtained from Miss M. K. Dodge, Secretary of the association, at 1,775 Broadway.

FOG COVERS THE HARBOR

Collision Between Ferryboats, with Slight Panic on One.

Steamships, Inward and Outward Bound, Greatly Delayed by the Perilous State of Navigation.

The fog lay heavier on the water yesterday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon than it did on Friday, and the result was a collision in the North River in the morning between two ferryboats of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the New Jersey, which runs to Cortlandt Street, and the Pennsylvania Brooklyn Annex Boat No. 4.

The New Jersey left her slip on the Jersey side at 7 o'clock with a large number of passengers. The boat felt her way slowly into midstream, blowing her whistle almost continuously. When she was nearing her slip on the New York side the whistle of another boat was heard not far away. Nothing could be seen and the pilot of the New Jersey, who was not able to locate the sound, gave several sharp pulls on his whistle to tell the Captain of the other boat that he could not locate him. The other boat answered immediately, and the next moment the Captains of both boats saw each other's outlines. The Captain of the New Jersey signaled "Stop!" and "full steam astern!" but before the order could be carried out she ran into the Annex, striking her on the port side about a dozen feet forward of the paddle wheel, and jamming her bows into the women's cabin, smashing the windows and woodwork, and carrying away part of the guard.

Fortunately there were very few passengers on the Annex. No one was hurt. On board the New Jersey there was somewhat of a panic, and this was added to by the colored porter, who ran through the cabin advising the passengers to put on life preservers. However, when they realized that their boat was in no danger of sinking, they became reassured. Both boats continued on their course. When the New Jersey reached her slip, it was found that her steering gear had been damaged.

No other collisions were reported during the day, the craft in the rivers going at very slow speed and blowing their whistles constantly. Several of the steamers that had left their docks on Friday remained tied up in Quarantine most of the night, not daring to venture out. Other steamers that were cleared yesterday also dropped their anchors down the bay, waiting for the fog to lift. Only a few of the steamers that were due yesterday came in during the day. The steamer Pennsylvania, with 1,448 bags of mail for Europe, left her pier at Hoboken at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and had not reached Sandy Hook by evening.

ENGINE WRECKS A TROLLEY CAR.

Dashes Into It While It Is Stalled on the Track—No One Injured.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Jan. 20.—In the dense fog of last night a trolley car, stalled on the Bloomfield Avenue crossing of the Greenwood Lake Railroad at Caldwell, was struck by a train and badly wrecked. The conductor and two passengers who were in the car got out before the crash came. The motorman saved himself by jumping just a moment before the collision.

The car was in charge of Conductor Wheatland and Motorman John Flanagan. It reached the crossing about 6 o'clock, and the pole slipped from the wire as the car was halfway over the tracks. The lights went out, and Wheatland, who is a new man in the company's employ, got off the car and fished vainly in the darkness for the wire to which to adjust the pole. The two passengers also alighted.

Suddenly the 5:53 train from Caldwell loomed up, going at good speed. Flanagan dove from the side of the vestibule and landed in the roadway. The crash came immediately afterward. The trolley car was hurled from the track to the roadway, and the front platform and vestibule carried away. The pilot on the locomotive was broken and the cab was damaged. A flagman tried to avert the accident by waving a red light, but his lantern went out.

BOSTON ENVELOPED BY A FOG.

As a Result Vessels Go Aground and Two Trains Collide.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—A dense fog enveloped the harbor all night and to-day and interfered to a considerable extent with shipping. The steamers from Eastern ports were detained, having been obliged to proceed at half speed until the harbor was reached.

The ferryboat Cody of Chelsea grounded on the mud flats off East Boston, and had to be floated by a tug. The ferryboat sustained no damage.

The big four-masted schooner Mary Manning of Perth Amboy, Capt. Barr, loaded with coal, from Baltimore, while coming in this morning, grounded near Buoy 8, on the "Lower Middle," but it was thought she would float at high water.

Two trains came into collision just outside the South Union Station in the fog this afternoon, but no one was hurt. Traffic was delayed, and two engines were badly smashed.

The steamer Halifax, outward bound to Halifax, is ashore on the flats off Spectacle Island in the lower harbor. She is resting easily and will probably float on the next tide and proceed.

RAIN SPOILS THE ICE CROP.

Not a Pound Gathered Thus Far in the Hudson River.

CATSKILL, Jan. 20.—To-day's rain has dealt the Hudson River ice crop a hard blow, from which it may not recover. The mild weather the past week culminated last evening in a heavy fog, followed by twelve hours of warm rain. The ice at this point began breaking up this morning, and tonight is moving with the tide. The ice harvest should be well started at this date, but thus far not a pound of ice has been taken from the river north of Poughkeepsie, and but a small amount from the creeks and still water. Several hundred thousand tons of last Winter's crop has been carried over—perhaps one-third of a supply.

Fog Extends Down the Coast.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—Capt. Diggs of the steamer Itasca, which succeeded in getting into port this afternoon, reported he first met the fog, (the heaviest he had ever encountered,) on Thursday night off Thomas Point. The steamer Berkshire, for Providence, and the steamer Howard, started Friday evening, but anchored in the river until this afternoon, when they passed out clear.

Shipping Delayed at New Bedford.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 20.—A very thick fog in Buzzard's Bay has delayed shipping, as there were no arrivals here today.

RAINFALL IN JANUARY.

Making Up for Shortage of Months—Its Beneficent Effect in Increasing Brooklyn's Water Supply.

The steady rain of yesterday morning, however much discomfort it may have caused to the average citizen, was a source of delight to the officials of the Water Works Department. The men connected with the Brooklyn bureau, especially, whose wits have been taxed in the efforts to eke out the depleted water supply of that borough, shared the joy of the umbrella and rubber shoe dealers as they watched the continuous downpour and figured how it would replenish the wells and springs which feed the reservoirs.

Thus far the new year has done well toward paying the debt of rain which was left by 1899. The total rainfall for 1899 was 2.74 inches below the average, and a large part of the deficiency was in the later months of the year. It was largely this which created the recent serious situation with respect to the water supply of Brooklyn. Thus far, however, the month of January has made up nine-tenths of an inch of last year's shortage, and two more such months will pay off the debt entirely, and give New York City all that is coming to it in the matter of rain. The rainfall for the month thus far has been nine-tenths of an inch above the average, and nearly all of it has come in two storms, of which yesterday's was the less important.

Yesterday's rain began officially at 11:14 o'clock Friday night, though there was a preliminary shower in the afternoon and continued until 1:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon. From 2 o'clock in the morning until noon the rain was practically unbroken, but the downpour was not violent at any time. The total precipitation was 1.07 inches, as compared with 2.12 inches on the 11th and 12th insts. The rain area yesterday embraced the entire country from the Gulf to the great lakes, and from the Mississippi to the Atlantic Coast.

The storm was accompanied by high temperatures, the lowest reported in the country being 18 degrees above zero at La Crosse, Wis. The thermometer registered 54 degrees in this city at 8 A. M., and the same at noon. It was warmer here than in Jacksonville, Fla., which reported a temperature of 50 degrees, or New Orleans, where the thermometer registered 46. The only places reporting higher temperatures than that of New York were Norfolk, 56; Tampa, 58, and Key West, 68.

While the storm was marked by a moderately low barometer, the winds were comparatively light. The area of low pressure was central here at noon, when the barometer read 29.20. The storm moved in a northeasterly direction and its centre in the afternoon was on the New England coast, where the barometric conditions were regarded as indicative of high winds and rough seas.

THE BICYCLE SHOW OPENED.

Big Crowd at the Garden to See the New Things in Wheels and Automobiles.

That the Fifth National Cycle and Automobile Show is likely to be fully as popular as its predecessors was evidenced last night, when the show was opened, by the enormous crowd which gathered in Madison Square Garden. The building was comfortably filled a short time after the doors were thrown open at 8 o'clock, and by 10 o'clock it had become so crowded as to render the examination of the exhibits a matter of difficulty.

The phrase "a blaze of light" is often used, but it is the only expression which describes the appearance of the interior of the Garden. The keen rivalry among makers of bicycles has resulted in each exhibitor endeavoring to attract attention to his portion of the wall space without regard to cost. The invariable means by which this has been done is by the lavish display of incandescent lights, and the result is dazzling.

This is the first exhibition in which automobiles have been shown in any quantity, and the interest displayed in them by the visitors to the Garden last evening was considerable. The soda-water wagon, which has been seen in the streets of this city during the last week or two, attracts much attention. The wagon weighs almost two tons, and when it was being taken into the Garden before the show was opened it proved too heavy for the capacity of the floor, through which it sank. It was, however, placed in position and the floor repaired before the doors were opened. Another automobile exhibit which was viewed with interest was that of the company which makes "forecarriages." These can be applied to any vehicle, and some of them have been used in London to draw ordinary hansom cabs.

With regard to the bicycles, it cannot be said that the exhibits are so interesting as those of a year ago, when the first chainless models were shown. The improvements shown this year consist entirely of new details, the most important of these being, perhaps, the coaster brake, which enables the rider to coast with his feet on the pedals, which remain motionless. A large number of improved lamps are shown, together with innumerable "freak" inventions.

To a good many of the exhibitors a show of this kind must mean a considerable outlay apart from the ordinary expenses. The craze for souvenirs becomes keener every year, and much ingenuity and money is expended to gratify it. One exhibitor is giving away at the show watch fob chains in the form of bicycle chains. The links are nickel plated, and a miniature sprocket wheel forms a charm at the end.

One of the interesting features of the show is the performance of Murphy, the "Mile-a-Minute Man," on a home trainer. A platform has been erected in the gallery at the Fourth Avenue end of the Garden, on which is an imitation of the rear hood in which Murphy rode when following a train on the Long Island Railroad. In this hood Murphy endeavors to show the speed at which he traveled when he made his famous record.

Another feature of the show is a demonstration of the method of making graphite, while an exhibit which attracts many spectators is a collection of bicycles dating from 1850 to the present time. At the commencement of the official programme of the show are brief histories of both the bicycle and the automobile. It is claimed that the first attempt to run an automobile was made by Cugnot, in France, about 125 years ago.

The show will remain open all this week.

CIVIL SERVICE FOR CONSULS.

Business Men Will Ask for Change in Method of Appointment.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The Executive Committee of the National Business League met here to-day to discuss the bill to be presented to Congress for changes in the methods of appointing United States Consuls to foreign countries, and also to select delegates to take the measure to Washington and present it.

The object of the bill is to do away with politics in the Consular Service and apply civil service methods, sending men to represent this Nation in other parts of the world who are qualified for the positions. The bill will provide for a commission composed of members of both houses, and three other citizens experienced in commercial matters to formulate and put into operation the reorganization plan.

John W. Ela, counsel for the league, received a telegram from Senator Cullom tonight, saying that a hearing before the Inter-State Commerce Committee of the Senate and House would be granted representatives of the league Jan. 26.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER CAUGHT.

C. L. Foote, Once of Fall River, Is in Custody in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Charles L. Foote, formerly Postmaster and City Treasurer of Fall River, Mass., charged with the embezzlement of $6,000 in that city, was arrested here to-day. Foote has eluded the authorities for over three years.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 20.—Charles L. Foote, who is reported to be under arrest in Chicago, left this city Dec. 10, 1896, and at the same time an actress, known both as Wood and Harper, left the city. Later it was said that Foote had been attentive to the actress.

After Foote disappeared it was alleged that he had taken $4,900 from the Fall River Co-operative Bank and $2,300 from Lincoln & Hood, with whom he had been a trusted clerk. He also held a clerkship for the bank. He left his wife and child in almost destitute circumstances.

Some time after Foote left he was located in Chicago, where he had lived six months with the woman who was thought to have been his companion at the time of his disappearance. Mrs. Foote is living with her parents in this city.

WOMAN CONFESSED A MURDER.

Killed Her Mother, for Which Crime Her Stepfather Was Hanged.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Jan. 20.—Information has reached here that Mrs. Van Horn, who recently died in the State of Washington, confessed on her death bed that she murdered her mother, Mrs. Thomas Egan, near this city, Sept. 12, 1880. For this crime Thomas Egan, the woman's husband, was hanged, although to the last protesting his innocence. Mrs. Van Horn was his stepdaughter.

Mrs. Egan was choked to death with a rope and her head was bruised with a wooden picket. The clothes Egan wore were found in the barn covered with blood and this caused his conviction.

Miss Bazaine Leaves Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 20.—Miss Eugenie Bazaine, the only daughter of the late Marshal Bazaine of France and Mme. Bazaine, who recently died here under especially sad circumstances, is about to leave Mexico for Spain, where her surviving brother lives. Miss Bazaine is a goddaughter of the Empress Eugenie, after whom she is named, and it is believed that the ex-Empress will take an interest in the lady now doubly orphaned.

New Atlantic City Special Express

VIA CENTRAL R. R. OF NEW JERSEY.

Train of vestibuled coaches and parlor cars leaves foot Liberty St. at 3:30 P. M., South Ferry 3:25 P. M. Reaches Atlantic City at 6:45 P. M. Train from Atlantic City at 2:10 P. M. reaches New York at 5:25 P. M. Tickets are good to stop over at Lakewood.—Adv.

ACCIDENTS ON THE OCEAN.

Mishaps to Vessels in Various Parts of the World.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Jan. 20.—The weather is now more favorable for operations at the wreck of the steamer Helgoland in St. Mary's Bay, and the people along the coast propose starting early to-morrow in an attempt to recover the bodies which have been washed ashore in the coves.

Father Driscoll, the priest of the parish, has urged his flock to avail themselves of the first opportunity for this humane undertaking, and has given the use of his church for the care of the bodies until final arrangements shall have been made by the ship's owners and agents for their disposal.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A dispatch has been received stating that the British ship Blythswood, Capt. Dixon, from Portland, Oregon, for Cape Town, has arrived at Valparaiso with cargo shifted, decks swept, bulwarks stove, and having lost and split several sails.

The German tank steamer Diamant, Capt. Reiners, which sailed from Hamburg for New York, has returned to Hamburg with her machinery out of order.

ST. THOMAS, West Indies, Jan. 20.—The British steamer Frederick Knight, Capt. Evans, from Malta, Dec. 26, for New Orleans, in ballast, has been towed in here by the German steamer Venetia, Capt. Schulke, from Hamburg, Dec. 31, for New Orleans. The Venetia encountered the Frederick Knight 800 miles northeast of St. Thomas with propeller lost and shaft broken.

TO ABOLISH STATE LOANS.

Bill of Mr. Weekes, Who Considers the System Useless and Costly.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—Assemblyman Weekes of New York will shortly introduce a bill providing for the abolition of the State Loan Commissioners.

Mr. Weekes thinks the time has gone by when the farmers need State aid to obtain loans, as money can be had for 4 and 5 per cent. interest, and he says he is informed by the Controller that the State is a loser by the present system through poor loans, the losses of last year amounting to $20,000. In case of failure of passage of his bill to abolish the Loan Commissioners, Mr. Weekes will try to have the law amended so that the Commissioners will be obliged to record all mortgages with the County Clerk.

Deposits by Private Bankers.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—The recommendation in the annual report of Superintendent Kilburn of the State Banking Department that private bankers be compelled to deposit United States bonds with the department will be embodied in a bill soon to be introduced by Assemblyman Weekes of New York.

MORPHINE HABIT KILLED HIM.

Temperance Lecturer Used the Drug and Liquor to Excess.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—Excessive use of morphine, to which, it appears, he had been addicted for the last four years, was the cause of the death in a hospital here last night of Will J. McConnell of Cleveland, Ohio, well known in the West as a temperance lecturer. He came to this city on Wednesday and registered at Green's Hotel. That night he was found on the street in an unconscious condition and removed to a hospital. At that time his identity was unknown. The physicians discovered that he was suffering from morphine poisoning, and despite their efforts he died.

McConnell's fourteen-year-old son was murdered by his brother-in-law in Allegheney City four years ago, and since then it has been commonly reported that the temperance advocate used both liquor and drugs to excess, although not discontinuing his lectures.

THE KIDNAPPING OF EVERETT.

State of Washington to Conduct an Official Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The State Department has been notified that the State of Washington will examine into the allegation that officers of that State were responsible for the kidnapping of an American named Everett, and if it is borne out, the men will be punished. The State has called for the report made to the department by the United States Consul at Victoria as a basis for action.

This report shows that Everett, who was charged with stage robbery, was spirited across the line from Washington into British Columbia, where he was held by the authorities, but that the blame lies upon the Washington officers instead of upon the British Columbian police, as was at first supposed. The man is still under arrest, and his case is a subject of correspondence between the State Department and the British Government through the British Embassy here.

Naval Conference Regarding Samoa.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Admiral Crowninshield, Chief of the Navigation Bureau, will leave Washington Monday for San Diego, Cal., under instructions from Secretary Long to confer with Admiral Kautz respecting conditions in Samoa, and particularly at Pago-Pago, where the Navy Department is erecting a coaling station.

SHIPPING AND FOREIGN MAILS.

Miniature Almanac—This Day.

	A. M.	P. M.	P. M.
Sun rises	7:19	Sun sets	5:04
Moon rises	10:58

High Water This Day.

	A. M.	A. M.	A. M.
S. Hook	10:56	Gov. Isl'd	11:00
H. Gate	....
	P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
S. Hook	11:26	Gov. Isl'd	11:42
H. Gate	12:36

Outgoing Steamships.

TO-DAY, (SUNDAY,) JAN. 21.

Mails Close. Vessels Sail.

Amsterdam, Rotterdam ..10:00 A. M. 12:00 M.

MONDAY, JAN. 22.

Orinoco, Bermuda .....10:00 A. M. 12:00 M.
*10:30 A. M.
Talisman, Barbados ....12:00 M. .....

TUESDAY, JAN. 23.

Lahn, Southampton and Bremen ..... 7:00 A. M. 10:00 A. M.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 24.

Advance, Colon ..... 9:30 A. M. 1:00 P. M.
*10:00 A. M.
Friesland, Antwerp .....10:30 A. M. 12:00 M.
Ithaka, Tampico ..... 1:00 P. M. 3:00 P. M.
New York, Southampton. 7:00 A. M. 10:00 A. M.
*9:00 A. M.
Oceanic, Queenstown and Liverpool ..... 8:00 A. M. 11:00 A. M.
*9:30 A. M.
San Juan, San Juan..... 1:00 P. M. 3:00 P. M.
U. S. transport, Puerto Rico .....10:30 A. M. .....
Vigilancia, Havana, &c.. 1:00 P. M. 3:00 P. M.

THURSDAY, JAN. 25.

Auguste Victoria, Naples, &c. ....
Cienfuegos, Santiago .... 1:00 P. M. 3:00 P. M.
La Bretagne, Havre..... 7:00 A. M. 10:00 A. M.
Tjomo, Trinidad .....11:00 A. M. 1:00 P. M.

FRIDAY, JAN. 26.

Maracaibo, San Juan....11:00 A. M. 1:00 P. M.
*11:30 A. M.
Roriama, St. Thomas... 9:30 A. M. 12:00 M.
*10:00 A. M.

SATURDAY, JAN. 27.

Adirondack, Jamaica, Costa Rica .....10:00 A. M. 12:00 M.
*10:30 A. M.
Andes, Haiti .....10:00 A. M. 12:00 M.
*10:30 A. M.
Campania, Queenstown and Liverpool ..... 8:30 A. M. 12:00 M.
*10:00 A. M.
Horatio, Para ..... 7:00 A. M. .....
John Sanderson, La Plata Countries ..... 1:00 P. M. 3:00 P. M.
Mexico, Havana, &c...11:00 A. M. 1:00 P. M.
Rotterdam, Rotterdam .. 8:30 A. M. 12:00 M.
Trinidad, Bermuda ..... 8:00 A. M. 12:00 M.
Yarmouth, Nuevitas .... 1:00 P. M. 3:00 P. M.
Kaiser Wilhelm II., Naples ..... 9:00 A. M. .....

*SUPPLEMENTARY MAILS.—Additional supplementary mails are opened on the piers of the American, English, French, and German steamers and remain open until within ten minutes of the hour of sailing

TRANSPACIFIC MAILS.

Mails for China and Japan and Philippine Islands, via Seattle, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. $21., for dispatch per steamship Riojun Maru, (registered letters must be directed "via Seattle.") Mails for China and Japan, via Vancouver, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. $23, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Empress of Japan, (registered mail must be directed "via Vancouver.") Mails for Society Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan $26, inclusive, for dispatch by ship City of Papeiti. Mails for Hawaii, Japan, China, and the Philippine Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. $27, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Doric. Mails for Hawaii, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Feb. $2, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Australia. Mails for Australia, (except West Australia, which go via Europe, and New Zealand, which go via San Francisco,) Hawaii and Fiji Islands, via Vancouver, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Feb. $3, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Miowera. Mails for Australia, (except West Australia,) New Zealand, Hawaii, Fiji and Samoan Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. after Feb. $3 and up to Feb. $17, inclusive, or on day of arrival of steamship Campania, due at New York Feb. $17, for dispatch per steamship Alameda. Mails for Hawaii, China, Japan, and the Philippine Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Feb. $4, inclusive, for dispatch per steamship Nippon Maru.

$Registered mail closes at 6 P. M. previous day.

Postmaster Van Cott announces that the mails from Hongkong of Dec. 23, Yokohama Jan. 3, and Honolulu Jan. 12, which arrived at San Francisco per steamer Doric, are due at New York on the morning of Wednesday, Jan. 24.

Incoming Steamships.

TO-DAY, (SUNDAY,) JAN. 21.

Algonquin, Jacksonville, Jan. 17.
Bendo, Hamburg, Dec. 31.
Briscoe, Gibraltar, Jan. 7.
Bucentaur, Gibraltar, Jan. 6.
Cluden, Amsterdam, Jan. 6.
El Sud, New Orleans, Jan. 16.
Florida, Brunswick, Jan. 11.
Glanton, Hamburg, Jan. 1.
Indrani, Lisbon, Jan. 7.
King Bleddyn, Rotterdam, Jan. 3.
La Bretagne, Havre, Jan. 13.
Llandaff City, Swansea, Jan. 4.
Ohio, Hull, Jan. 6.
Pauillac, Pauillac, Jan. 6.
Pretoria, Bermuda, Jan. 17.
Pretoria, Hamburg, Jan. 8.
Stalheim, Christiania, Jan. 2.
St. Cuthbert, Antwerp, Jan. 8.
St. Leonards, Antwerp, Jan. 8.

MONDAY, JAN. 22.

Amity, Bordeaux, Jan. 8.
Fontabelle, St. Thomas.
Pocahontas, Gibraltar, Jan. 6.
State of Nebraska, Glasgow, Jan. 10.
Winifred, New Orleans, Jan. 16.

TUESDAY, JAN. 23.

Adirondack, Port Limon, Jan. 16.
Chaucer, St. Lucia, Jan. 16.
Concho, Galveston, Jan. 17.
El Cid, New Orleans, Jan. 18.
Ethiopia, Glasgow, Jan. 11.
Georgic, Liverpool, Jan. 13.
Hevelius, St. Lucia, Jan. 16.
Hudson, New Orleans, Jan. 17.
Rotterdam, Rotterdam, Jan. 13.
Southwark, Antwerp, Jan. 13.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 24.

Andes, Jamaica, Jan. 17.
Aquileja, Algiers, Jan 9.
Finance, Colon, Jan. 17.
Kansas City, Swansea, Jan. 10.
St. Jerome, St. Michael's, Jan. 14.
Teutonic, Liverpool, Jan. 17.
Trapani, Bremen, Jan. 10.

THURSDAY, JAN. 25.

Albers, St. Lucia, Jan. 18.
Manitou, London, Jan. 14.
Palatia, Hamburg, Jan. 14.

FRIDAY, JAN. 26.

Dona Maria, Lisbon, Jan

FATE OF PAYN UNDECIDED

Governor Does Not Force Mr. Platt's Hand at the Conference.

THREATS OF NO LEGISLATION

Believed Senator Will Let Col. Roosevelt Fight His Own Battles—Superintendent Payn Confident.

Apparently the fate of Louis F. Payn, so far as it relates to the office of State Superintendent of Insurance, remains undecided. Senator Thomas C. Platt, Gov. Theodore Roosevelt, and Chairman B. B. Odell, Jr., of the Republican State Committee breakfasted at the Fifth Avenue Hotel at 8:30 o'clock yesterday and then were closeted in conference until a few minutes after 11 o'clock. About the only unanimous conclusion arrived at was that none of the conferrees should make any statement concerning what transpired.

It was the opinion of politicians gathered about the hotel corridors that Senator Platt had decided to let the Governor fight his own battles, and the impression seemed to prevail that under those circumstances neither Gov. Roosevelt nor Superintendent Payn had a sure thing in the contest over the latter's official position. "I can give you no information at all," remarked Senator Platt as he hastened from the hotel and started for his office.

Gov. Roosevelt first submitted himself to the hands of a barber after leaving the conference. When asked what decision was arrived at with relation to Superintendent Payn's office and other matters, he replied: "Really, I am very sorry, but I have nothing to say."

"Did you submit a list of names or request the selection of a candidate for Mr. Payn's place?" he was asked.

"We agreed to say nothing about the matters discussed."

"Will there be any more conferences?"

"No—that is, not for some time."

"Will you make a statement at Albany on Monday?"

"It is too early to talk about that. I don't know what I may do on Monday."

"Will you send to the Senate next week the name of any man for the office of Superintendent of the Insurance Department?"

"I can't say a word about it."

WILL NOT SEE PLATT AGAIN.

"Will you see Senator Platt again before your return to Albany?"

"No. I am going to my sister's now. Then I shall lunch with Gen. Francis V. Greene, Capt. A. T. Mahan, and others. I have two dinners to attend to-night, and I hope to get through in time to take the midnight train for Albany."

Then the Governor hurriedly sent a telegram and, bustling out of the hotel, was joined by his nephew and was driven up Madison Avenue.

"I regret exceedingly," remarked Chairman Odell replying to a query, "that I have no information to give you. I have nothing to say because it was agreed that we should say nothing about what transpired at the conference."

"Is the conference ended definitely?"

"It is finished."

"Was it a peaceful discussion?"

"There is no blood on me."

"Were any names submitted by the Governor for Mr. Payn's place?"

"I have nothing to say."

Then Chairman Odell put on his overcoat, grabbed an umbrella, and, ordering a coupé, was driven down town to Senator Platt's office. There, it is said, Senator Platt and Mr. Odell talked with Mr. Payn and intimated that in the interest of harmony he ought to withdraw. Superintendent Payn, however, was obdurate, and insisted that under no circumstances would he voluntarily retire.

It was reported that it was intimated to Superintendent Payn that the comfortable position of Secretary of the United States Senate awaited him if he would be conciliated. Senator Platt, Chairman Odell, and Mr. Payn simply smiled when asked about the proposition.

It was also reported and not contradicted that Mr. Payn declared to Senator Platt that Lemuel E. Quigg and Gov. Roosevelt were trying to "do" him, and under the circumstances he would not retire from the field until a certain warm locality was frozen over.

Superintendent Payn was apparently not in the best of spirits when seen in the afternoon at the Grand Union Hotel. "There is absolutely no change in the situation despite the conference to-day," he said.

"Then you purpose to stick?"

"Of course I do," Mr. Payn replied. "Why do you ask such —— foolish questions?"

SUPERINTENDENT PAYN CONFIDENT.

"And you are as confident as ever?"

"Certainly," was the reply. "None of my friends need have the slightest anxiety about the outcome. I will win all right."

Politicians were very much in evidence about the Fifth Avenue Hotel all day, and among them were George W. Aldridge, ex-Superintendent of Public Works; John R. Hazel, State Committeeman from Erie; Senators Ford and Wilcox, ex-Senator Owens of Kings, William Brookfield, ex-Chairman of the State Committee; John McCullagh, Superintendent of the Bureau of Elections, and his deputy, Mr. Van Dusen; Police Magistrate Meade, Gen. Howard Carroll, ex-Senator Myer Nussbaum, Aqueduct Commissioner W. H. Ten Eyck, ex-Deputy Attorney Generals Hasbrouck and Kisselburgh, Assemblyman N. M. Henry, ex-Congressman Ward, and ex-Senator J. Irving Burns of Westchester, and a host of others.

Chairman Odell, after his return to headquarters in the afternoon, admitted there was absolutely no change in the situation. The Payn matter remained as it was on the preceding day. This statement was made after Mr. Odell had seen Mr. Payn after the conference with the Governor.

There was a persistent rumor in political circles last night, which Chairman Odell would neither affirm nor deny, that at the conference Senator Platt and Mr. Odell suggested to the Governor the name of Robert M. Hunter of Poughkeepsie to succeed Mr. Payn. Mr. Hunter is Mr. Payn's chief deputy. Gov. Roosevelt, it is said, positively refused to consider the proposition.

During the day there were all sorts of stories afloat, and one that was generally believed by politicians was that the Governor failed in his attempt to force Senator Platt's hand. It was persistently asserted that Gov. Roosevelt presented a list of names to Senator Platt and Chairman Odell. This was said to be composed of State Committeeman John R. Hazel of Erie, ex-Senator H. H. Persons of Buffalo, ex-Senator Charles Davis of Greene, ex-Senator Myer Nussbaum of Albany, ex-Speaker Titus Sheard of Herkimer, and ex-Surrogate James M. Varnum of New York. It was claimed that the name of neither Judge Saxton of Wayne nor Prof. Cuthbert W. Pound of Cornell was submitted, and the opinion prevailed that Judge Saxton is "out of the race."

In presenting the list it is reported that Gov. Roosevelt said he would send in the name of any person selected by his fellow-conferrees. Senator Platt and Chairman Odell are reported to have replied that the organization had no choice.

GOV. ROOSEVELT ANGRY.

The answer is said to have angered Gov. Roosevelt, who is understood to have replied:

"Well, gentlemen, there will be no legislation until this matter is disposed of."

It was added that Gov. Roosevelt rather championed the selection of ex-Senator Persons, but his associates strenuously objected, because Mr. Persons has persistently opposed John R. Hazel, the Platt lieutenant in Erie County. Color was given to this report by the fact that Chairman Odell and Mr. Hazel had a long conference at State headquarters in the early evening.

One of the most prominent Republicans in the State, and who is known to be a stanch friend of Mr. Payn, but who declined to be quoted, said: "The Governor seems determined to be rid of Payn; the latter is just as determined that he will not allow the Governor to oust him. I believe Senator Platt would like Payn to withdraw. Payn won't do it, and Platt has been compelled to tell Roosevelt that he will have to fight his own battles. That means that Payn has a fighting chance to retain his position. The whole affair is to be regretted. Roosevelt has been too personal in the Payn matter. If Payn should lose, it would have a very bad effect on the party—something that ought to be avoided at all times, and especially in a Presidential year."

Ex-Congressman Belden of Syracuse, seen at the Hotel Manhattan, remarked: "The Roosevelt-Payn fight may have serious consequences. The results of the conference, as I understand them, are that the situation is unchanged. Mr. Platt may have told Gov. Roosevelt that he must fight his own battles, but in my opinion Platt and the organization will quietly help Mr. Payn."

A man supposed to be close to Gov. Roosevelt, but who declined to permit his name to be used, said: "The Governor will win. He is determined that Payn shall go. If he can't do anything else, he will send one name after another to the Senate, and the friends of the rejected will raise such a storm about Senator Platt's ears, holding him responsible, that he will be forced to interfere."

A warm friend of Mr. Payn thereupon remarked: "The Governor cannot afford to take any such step. He must stand 'pat' on the first nomination he sends in, if he transmits one to the Senate at all."

GOV. ROOSEVELT AT DINNER.

Guest at Banquet Given by Capt. Goddard to Awaken Interest in Mr. Fallows's Lottery Policy Bill.

Gov. Roosevelt was the guest of honor at a dinner given last night at the Union League Club by Capt. F. Norton Goddard, Republican leader of the Twentieth Assembly District, for the purpose of awakening interest in the bill presented in the Assembly by Mr. Fallows of the Twenty-first District prohibiting the playing of lottery policy. Mr. Goddard's guests, besides the Governor, were Edward H. Fallows, Recorder Goff, Judge Cowing, Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., John Proctor Clark, Alexander Mason, Theron G. Strong, ex-Judge Blanchard, Magistrate Cornell, Joseph Watkinson, John Shea, John McCullagh, Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler, Senator Elsberg, Senator Ford, Deputy Controller Gilman, Assemblymen Aflds, Morgan, Price, Cooley, and Henry; Warren N. Goddard, and Gen. Avery D. Andrews.

Capt. Goddard opened the discussion by explaining in detail the nature of policy, during which he said that each policy shop in a poor district takes out $30 to $50 a day from the district, and he said policy shops are often on every block.

"The game is especially harmful," he said, "because women and children play it. The minimum bet being 2 cents, it is obvious that almost any child can get together 2 cents. Women are sometimes the worst fiends, and will get so infatuated with the game that it is not at all infrequent for mothers to pawn their children's clothes and put the children to bed, using the money to play policy."

The speaker declared that the police protect policy playing, and that fining the players after conviction does not act as a deterrent force, as backers pay the fines. He thought nothing will prevent policy playing in this city except imprisoning the writers.

Mr. Strong explained the bill of Mr. Fallows saying it would positively prevent the use of premises for policy shops, suppress a prevalent evil, and save a great many families from destitution.

Gov. Roosevelt took the floor as soon as Mr. Strong sat down. "Let me say," he began, "that I would not have accepted another invitation to-night but this one. I am glad to be with you in this good work. I feel that every decent citizen striving to do his duty is in favor of this crusade against policy. The passing of laws that stand for the good of the community redounds to the credit of the party that passes them. A party can be built up to the extent that it can make people believe that it stands for decency and the upright enactment of the law."

Gov. Roosevelt touched briefly on the evils of policy playing and on the difficulty the police find in putting a stop to it even when they are willing to try. He spoke of his own experiences in that respect when President of the Police Board, and laughed as he called to mind some humors in the then situation.

"I remember," he said, "we had to try one well-meaning policeman with a thick head for one arrest he made. He had been told to keep his eyes open and arrest any policy players he saw. Well, he saw a man with a slip of paper in his hands, and noticed that there were several figures on the paper. The man put the slip of paper in his pocket and the policeman promptly arrested him as a policy player, and he was locked up all night. Next day the man proved that he was a Sunday school Superintendent, and that the figures on the slip were the numbers of the hymns to be sung in church the following Sunday." Superintendent McCullagh, who was Chief of Police at the time referred to, confirmed the truth of the story when the Governor appealed to him.

In concluding his speech Gov. Roosevelt said the number and the wealth of the policy sellers and backers present a menace to the safety of the city, and that unless carefully watched they would make the local elections a farce.

Joseph Watkinson, President of the Civic Club, and Gen. Andrews spoke briefly in favor of the proposed amendment.

Gov. Roosevelt did not remain until the end of the dinner. As soon as he had finished his address he hurried to a carriage and was driven to the Metropolitan Club, where he was the guest of the Boone and Crockett Club.

OHIO REPUBLICAN PROSPECTS.

Gov. Nash Says the Party Is United and Predicts a Big Majority.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Gov. George K. Nash of Ohio, who was one of the speakers last night at the Sons of Ohio banquet, said to-day:

"There are no factions in the Republican Party of Ohio to-day. The party is absolutely united, and I look to see Senator Foraker re-elected two years hence without opposition. Ohio, always strongly Republican in Presidential years, will this year give William McKinley the largest majority in the history of the State. The State is in a wonderfully prosperous condition, and the people are not going to turn to the party which stands for a reversal of present conditions."

VICE PRESIDENCY NOT DESIRED.

Gov. Shaw of Iowa Would Not Accept a Nomination.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 20.—The friends of Gov. Shaw are generally of the opinion that he would not consider seriously the mention of his name in connection with the Vice Presidency. It is reported upon the best of authority that he had said to his friends that he did not wish to be considered in this connection and that he could not think of accepting such a nomination. He does not wish to have it understood that he is in the least inclined to accept it or that he is coquetting with the nomination.

The friends of Gov. Shaw are looking further ahead, and they have larger ideas and greater ambitions for his future than any second-rate position in this country.

GOV. PINGREE MAY RUN AGAIN.

Will Make an Independent Race If D. M. Ferry Is Nominated.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 20.—Gov. Pingree announced to-day that if D. M. Ferry of Detroit is nominated for Governor by the next Republican State Convention, he will be a candidate for re-election on an independent ticket. Gov. Pingree declares that Mr. Ferry is not in accord with taxation reforms he has been working for for the past four years and bases his objection to him as a candidate on this fact. Said the Governor to-day:

"If the Republican Party cannot find a more representative man than Ferry has proved to be, it is time for every Republican who is not a corporation stockholder to lift up his voice in protest. I am not particularly infatuated with the office of Governor, but I'm willing to make another campaign rather than see the State Government pass into the hands of the corporation reactionists."

ILLINOIS INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

Formed to Further the Interests of the Republicans.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The Illinois State organization of the National Commercial and Industrial League was perfected to-day. The league is a political organization in the interest of "sound money" and a protective tariff. It believes in the principles of the Republican Party, its ability to deal with trusts, currency, and other questions, indorses the administration of President McKinley, believes in the expansion of trade, and the establishment by Congress of a Department of Commerce and Industries.

The officers of the Illinois division are: President—Alonzo Wygan; First Vice President—Alexander H. Revell; Second Vice President—the Hon. George E. Adams; Third Vice President—Melville E. Stone; Fourth Vice President—William J. Chalmers; Treasurer—Ethridge C. Keith; Assistant Treasurer—D. F. Haigh.

AMERICANS DINE IN PARIS

Chamber of Commerce Supports the Reciprocity Treaty.

Urges France and the United States to Ratify It in the Interest of Trade Between the Countries.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The sixth annual dinner and meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce in Paris were held to-night at the Restaurant Bonvalet, and proved the most successful ever held in point of attendance, there being present 130 members and a few invited guests, including United States Consul General John K. Gowdy and the staff of the consulate and Prof. Benjamin D. Woodward, Assistant United States Commissioner to the Paris Exposition. Gen. Horace Porter, the United States Ambassador, was unable to be present, owing to a previous engagement.

As a mark of the esteem of the members and in recognition of the energy and success of the administration of the affairs of the Chamber under Henry Peartree, an emblem of the Legion of Honor, set in brilliants, was presented to him, he having been made a Chevalier of the Legion by the French Government in October last for his active participation in the negotiation of the Franco-American commercial treaty. Mr. Peartree replied to the presentation address in a graceful speech.

Mr. Gowdy took advantage of the occasion to present figures which, he said, showed the fulfillment of his prophecy made two years previously as to the increase of commerce under the present tariff. The exports from Paris in 1899, he said, showed an increase over those of 1898 of 31,400,000f., and over those of 1894 of 63,374,000f. In 1899, over 92 per cent. of the exports were sold before leaving Paris. He was of the opinion that the export trade of the United States to France was only in its infancy, and urged France and her people to buy American goods.

In the speeches many approving references were made to the reciprocity treaty between the two countries, and the hope of its ratification was frequently expressed. At the business meeting following the dinner, a resolution was adopted expressing hope of the early ratification of the treaty by both Governments, and confidence in its tendency to increase the commercial relations of the two republics. Prof. Woodward spoke briefly on the Exposition.

The following officers were elected: President—Henry Peartree; Vice President—George Amant; Treasurer—B. I. Shoniger; Secretary—Francis Kimbel, Honorary Director—John K. Gowdy.

GAIN FOR RECIPROCITY TREATY.

French Government Victory Said to Have Improved Its Prospects.

Copyrighted, 1900, by The Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The Ministry of M. Waldeck-Rousseau, which, its Nationalist opponents declared, was tottering to its fall and would receive its death blow immediately upon the reopening of Parliament, has obtained a fresh lease of life in the very first week of the parliamentary session by the substantial majority it received on the vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies on the interpellation regarding the attitude of the Government toward the strikers at St. Etienne. Thursday's Government victory leaves the Cabinet in an unexpectedly strong position, which encourages it to persist in its projects.

This situation, it is believed, will have an indirect bearing upon the prospects of the American reciprocity treaty, which, despite the sanguine predictions of the officials here, was thought in many quarters to be imperiled by the influential industrial and agricultural opposition. The fact that the Government is entitled to count upon a strong backing as revealed by Thursday's vote on the strike interpellation, may induce it to endeavor to force the treaty through.

GERMAN ESTIMATES PASSED.

Count von Bulow Announces Himself a Follower of Bismarck.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The Reichstag to-day passed the Imperial Estimates after a debate, during which Prince Bismarck expressed the hope that Count von Bülow's statement that he intended to follow in the footsteps of the first Prince Bismarck would be fulfilled, though, he added, these footsteps were obliterated and not easy to find.

FRENCH NAVAL PROPOSALS.

Report in Favor of Construction of Submarine Torpedo Boats.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The Government naval proposals involve an expenditure of 750,000,000 francs, of which 500,000,000 francs is to be devoted to the reorganization of the fleet. M. Delaporte, Republican Radical Deputy for Deux-Sèvres, who reported on the scheme, has just declared himself favorable to the majority plan. His report contains some remarks regarding the proposed submarine boats, especially in connection with recent experiments in the United States with the submarine torpedo boat Holland.

He asserts that the new type of submarine vessel, of which the Government proposes to build two, will have a sphere of action on the surface of the water of from two hundred to four hundred knots, and a submarine sphere of action of from forty to forty-five knots. Thus, he says, these vessels will be of offensive value, instead of merely a defensive type. He expresses the hope that France will provide herself with a large number of these submarine war vessels. The press warmly supports their construction as a protection to the coast against an attack from the British Navy in event of war.

Castellane's Expected Statement.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The sensation caused by the reported heavy losses by speculation of Count Boni de Castellane was only of one day's duration here, in view of the emphatic denial given the story by his father. Unless the cavalier fashion in which the Figaro treated the Marquis de Castellane's letter, which it stated was consigned to the waste paper basket, should have further results, interest now naturally turns to the statement on the subject which Count Boni is expected to make on his arrival in New York.

France and the Danish West Indies.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The anti-Government organ, La Patrie, charges the Government with abandoning French prior rights over the Danish West Indies, and says: "Denmark only dispatched a representative to negotiate the session of the islands to the United States after negotiations with the French Government, which benevolently renounced the French rights of pre-emption."

Floods Threaten the Rhine District.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The whole Rhine district is threatened with floods, owing to the masses of snow and frequent thaws. Several of the Moselle towns are now flooded. The Rhine, in several places, has risen ten feet within twenty-four hours.

Bolivia Complains to Brazil.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 20.—The Minister of Bolivia had a conference to-day with members of the Government. He claims the State of Amazonas is aiding Galvez in Acre, and demands that Brazil send troops and vessels to subjugate the rebel Government.

Prizes for Darwinian Essays.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The sum of 30,000 marks has been given by Profs. Haeckel, Conrad, and Fraas to be awarded for the best essays submitted up to December, 1902, on the application of the Darwinian theory to international political development and legislation.

Labori Coming Here to Lecture.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A contract has been signed for M. Labori of counsel for Alfred Dreyfus in the late trial at Rennes to lecture for thirteen weeks in the United States in the Autumn of the present year.

Brazilian Officials to Resign.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 20.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. do Magalhaes, will probably resign Jan. 26, with Senhor Vieira, the Minister of Industry. The Chief of Police, Senhor Vega, will also tender his resignation.

The Kaiser Rewards a Diplomat.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The Emperor has bestowed the Order of the Red Eagle of the second class on Dr. Mumm von Schwarzenstein, recently Acting German Ambassador at Washington, in recognition of his work at the American capital.

EXPECTED HEIRS OF ROYALTY.

The Czar Again Hoping for the Birth of a Son.

Copyright, 1900, The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The announcement is made that the year 1900 will give the Queen several new great-grandchildren. Since the first of the year two have already made their appearance, the Crown Princess of Roumania having given birth to a daughter, and Princess Henry of Prussia to a son.

In the Spring the Duke of York expects again to become a father. The Czar is also once more hoping for a son, while the Crown Princess of Greece and Princess Feodora of Reuss will also probably add to Queen Victoria's long list of descendants.

PARIS EXPOSITION OUTLOOK.

To be Opened on the Advertised Date —The American Exhibit.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—M. Picard, Commissioner General of the Paris Exposition, announces that most of the buildings are now in an advanced state of construction and the opening of the exposition will occur on the advertised date, even if it becomes necessary to work day and night shifts. The American section is the subject of many appreciative notices in the press. The République Française says: "From every point of view the United States will have a place worthy of it," and adds that it considers that the exhibit of American schools will surprise many, as American methods will be a revelation to European nations.

Space has been obtained for exhibits from Cuba, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico in the portion allotted the United States for its colonies, and the exhibits will be shown under the American flag.

FRENCH SENATORIAL ELECTION.

Bitter Contest Over the Candidacy of Gen. Mercier.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The elections for the renewal of 101 seats in the Senate, which will occur Jan. 28, are keenly anticipated, as the result will indicate the feeling of the country toward the Government. In view of its Dreyfus policy and the high court prosecutions there is a strong moderate Republican opposition to the Ministerial candidates.

The most interesting contest is in the constituency of Loire Inferieure, where Gen. Mercier, the inveterate antagonist of Dreyfus and one of the Nationalist idols, is pitted against the Government's candidate, a Radical. The League of Rights has issued a manifesto arraigning Gen. Mercier for his alleged illegalities in the Dreyfus case, and citing at length distinct acts of Gen. Mercier, which, it is asserted, render him amenable to the Penal Code. The manifesto calls upon the electors to reject him and the effect will be to make the contest extremely bitter.

Prof. Virchow Has a Kansas Giant.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—Prof. Virchow will exhibit to his class in pathology a Kansan, Lewis Wilkins, reputed to be the tallest man in the world, pointing out the remarkable abnormalities of his skull.

AGAINST 8-HOUR POLICE BILL.

President York Says Such a Law Would Be a Public Misfortune.

The bill now before the Legislature, by which the policemen of Greater New York hope to have eight hours constitute a day's work, has met with but small favor in higher police circles, and President York declared yesterday that if the bill passed it would be a public misfortune. He said that such an alteration in the working of the department could not result in other than a great increase in the force.

"At present," he said, "we police the city properly only by having each man do his whole duty, and even with our present force it is all we can do with the number of men allowed us by the Board of Estimate. It is impossible to gauge the work of a policeman with men engaged in ordinary occupations. It is not manual labor, but such as requires attention only during the greater part of their tour of duty.

"You might as well set a limit on the hours each day that a soldier or a sailor can serve. The whole thing is absurd and not practical." Other police officials agreed with President York that any alteration from the present system could do nothing but work harm to the efficiency of the department.

WIDOW ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Her Marriage to Broker Ruprecht Unknown to His Relatives.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Jan. 20.—Mrs. Bertha M. Ruprecht of New York, widow of Harry Ruprecht, a New York stock broker and a former Batavian, who died in New York on Dec. 23 and was buried in Batavia, shot herself with suicidal intent at the Genesee House this morning, the bullet passing three-quarters of an inch below the heart. She will recover. At the time of Ruprecht's death his mother and brother, who live in Batavia, were not aware that he was married, and they say they had no intimation of it until the appearance of the young woman in this village on Wednesday. Ruprecht was about forty-seven years old, and his widow is twenty-eight.

The object of the widow's visit to Batavia is not known, further than that she said she came here to meet her husband's relatives. At the time of his funeral, she says, she was ill and unable to attend the service. She says she and Ruprecht were married by the Rev. Dr. Wale, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Stamford, Conn., on July 26, 1899, and that they lived at 219 East Tenth Street, New York. Ruprecht's death occurred at St. Mark's Hospital.

WOULD KILL HALF THE WOMEN.

So Says One of Them Who Tried Suicide After Drinking Two Beers.

Mrs. Margaret Jennings of 35 Clay Street, Paterson, who was locked up at the Eleventh Street Police Station, Hoboken, on Friday evening for attempting to throw herself from a ferryboat, made a second attempt at suicide during the night by trying to strangle herself with a handkerchief. When arraigned before Recorder Stanton yesterday, she said she was sorry she had not succeeded in her attempts to kill herself.

"There are too many women in the world," she continued. "There are at least two women to every man. Every nation is making the matter worse by sending the men to the wars to be killed, while the women are left at home to make trouble. Pretty soon there won't be any men left, and then the world won't be fit to live in. The women should be sent to war, where they can be killed, instead of being left at home to fight with their husbands. If half the women were killed off, the world would be happier for it."

Mrs. Jennings admitted that while in New York visiting relatives she drank two glasses of beer. She was sent to the penitentiary for thirty days.

Music at the Church of the Ascension.

In the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, this evening an organ recital will be given by Charles Heinroth, assisted by Leo Schulz, 'cello. The programme will include the Prelude and Fugue in A minor by Bach; Sonata No. 1 in D minor by Guilmant, and an aria in C major by Dethier.

American Guild of Organists.

The tenth public service in connection with the American Guild of Organists will be held in St. Bartholomew's Church on Thursday evening, Jan. 25, by the combined choirs of St. Bartholomew's and South Churches. A number of soloists will render an appropriate musical programme.

Borough of Queens Democratic Club.

The Democratic Club of the Borough of Queens will give a vaudeville entertainment and reception at St. Mary's Lyceum, Fifth Street, near Vernon Avenue, Long Island City, to-morrow evening. The proceeds will be devoted toward building a new clubhouse.

Man and Wife Sixty-three Years.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., Jan. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. David F. Barney of this place celebrated their sixty-third wedding anniversary yesterday. Mr. Barney is nearly eighty-six, and his wife will soon be eighty-three years old. Mr. Barney works every day on his loom weaving carpets.

Bridge Builder's Fatal Fall.

EAST HAMPTON, Conn., Jan. 20.—Jacob P. Keller of Selina Grove, Penn., employed in the construction of a new bridge here, fell thirty feet to-day and was killed. He was thirty-two years old.

MICROBES IN HOLY WATER.

Alleged Discovery of Bacilli in a Font at Turin, Italy — Opinion of Priests Here.

According to a recent issue of The Philadelphia Medical Journal, Dr. Abba, a distinguished bacteriologist, has discovered microbes in holy water in a number of churches in Turin, Italy.

Dr. Abba examined thirty-one specimens taken from the fonts in different churches. Among the bacteria detected, as alleged, were the bacilli of diphtheria and tuberculosis. The conclusions drawn by the physician were that the fonts were a means of distributing disease.

The article above mentioned was shown to the Rev. Father James N. Connolly, Secretary to Archbishop Corrigan. After reading it he said:

"It seems to me that the microbe theory is being brought down to too fine a point. In all my experience I have never known a case of a person being made ill by reason of using the holy water in the fonts.

"The fonts are cleaned regularly, and every precaution is taken. Of course, when from 8,000 to 9,000 persons, both rich and poor, are using the fonts in a church, the fonts may not look as neat at the end of the service as they did when the church was opened.

"I have seen many of the people, when they enter the church, touch not only their foreheads with their fingers, which had been dipped into the font, but also place them to their lips.

"The water is blessed every week, and in all the churches the fonts are thoroughly scoured and cleansed before they receive the newly blessed water."

The Rev. Charles H. Colton of St. Stephen's Church said that the fonts were always clean, and that no possible danger could arise from their frequent use.

Dr. Feeney, Chief Sanitary Inspector of the Health Department, said, after reading the article in the medical journal:

"In theory it is perfectly correct, but in practice I have never known any person to become infected with a contagious disease through the medium of the holy water font.

"As a precaution against danger, the churches might use smaller vessels, which could be cleansed and quickly refilled with holy water after each service."

BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT.

Annual Report of the Company Filed—The Grand Jury and Alleged Stock-Jobbing Rumors.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company filed its annual report in the office of the County Clerk of Kings County yesterday. The company's report is as follows:

We, the undersigned Directors of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, a stock corporation, do hereby make a report as of the first day of January, 1900, signed by a majority of the Directors thereof and verified by oath of the President and Treasurer, as follows:

First—The amount of the capital stock is $45,000,000, and the proportion actually issued is $45,000,000.

Second—The amount of its debts does not exceed the sum of $10,000,000.

Third—The amount of its assets is at least the sum of $1,

In witness whereof we have made and signed this report in duplicate.—Dated January 16, 1900.

Theodore F. Jackson, Seth L. Keeney, J. G. Jenkins, Henry Selbert, C. L. Rossiter, William Bryant, H. C. Du val, John Englis, D. H. Valentine, John D. Kieley, T. S. Williams, C. D. Meneely.

The report is sworn to by Clinton L. Rossiter, President, and Treasurer Williams.

The matter of the charges against the circulators of rumors affecting its stock, brought before the December Grand Jury by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, was discussed again by the present Grand Jury before its adjournment on Friday. According to rumors circulated about the District Attorney's office the present Grand Jury feels slighted because an extraordinary Grand Jury has been called for the consideration of these complaints. The present Grand Jury has very little business on its hands.

The presentment made by the Grand Jury of last December laid the matter before the succeeding jury, and it is the opinion of many of its members that it should be considered by that body. Assistant District Attorney McIntyre last Monday was called before the Grand Jury, as several of the members expressed a wish at that time to continue the investigation into the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's charges. Mr. McIntyre's explanation of the reasons for calling a special Grand Jury for the consideration of these charges was evidently unsatisfactory, for it was not until Col. Gardiner himself appeared before that body that the subject was dropped.

According to all accounts, the Grand Jury on Friday showed a tendency to revive the matter. It was even rumored that several members had asked Judge McMahon's advice concerning the propriety of taking up the charges in opposition to the wishes of the District Attorney. Judge McMahon denied this, however, and said he had heard nothing of the charges since he turned over the presentment to the Grand Jury.

"It is their privilege," he said, "to consider anything they may hear about, but I have heard nothing at all from them in regard to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit business."

PRESIDENT HADLEY EXPLAINS.

Alleged Remarks on Social Ostracism Grew Out of a Chance Remark at Denver.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 20.—President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale University, who returned from his Western trip last night, gave out to-day the following statement, explaining his position on the subject of trusts:

"My position with regard to trusts has been that most of the evils attributed to them are due to other causes. The real evils can be cured better by publicity and enforcing responsibility of directors than by repressive legislation. A full account of these statements is given in a magazine in November last.

"The alleged quotations with regard to social ostracism grew out of a chance remark in the course of a talk before business men of Denver. Social ostracism will serve as a remedy for any public evil. It is in fact the only effective remedy. It applies to evils connected with trusts in the same way that it does to any other form of commercial wrong. I did not suggest the ostracism of trusts, but of the individuals who grossly abuse the powers which the existence of trusts place in their hands."

Silverware Trust Buys a Factory.

WALLINGFORD, Conn., Jan. 20.—George C. Edwards, of Bridgeport, an officer of the International Silver Company, has purchased a controlling interest in the Hall-Elton Company here. The price paid was $63,000. The capital stock of the company is $125,000. The plant has been operated for more than ten years by the Meriden Britannia Company until one week ago, when the factories were closed, two hundred hands being thrown out of employment.

Formation of a Lime Trust.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCKLAND, Me., Jan. 20.—The Knox County lime syndicate has materialized in the form of a gigantic corporation, with an authorized capital of $2,000,000. The trust has absorbed all the large lime manufactories in Maine. The trust is backed by ample capital. It is reported on good authority that John W. Hill, who is slated for the next Governor of Maine, has invested heavily in the stock.

Paper Box Trust Loses in Court.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 20.—Judge Townsend of the United States Court to-day handed down a decision in a case involving the manufacture and sale of millions of paper boxes. The case is that of the National Folding Paper Box Company against Munson & Co., an independent box manufacturing concern of this city. Infringement of patent is alleged, and the plaintiff asked for an injunction. The court denies the motion for an injunction and holds that the Munson Company is manufacturing an entirely different box under its own patents.

Bottled Beer for Families.

The Otto Huber Brewery, of Brooklyn, with a Manhattan office at the Hotel Metropole, Forty-second street and Broadway, has started a new feature in the bottled beer trade. For years they have been very successful with their Golden Rod brands of lager beer, as well as with the O.-H. Extract of Malt, but to further stimulate the family trade the brewery will present a beautiful imported beer mug to customers recorded on their books up to February 1st next.—Adv.

B. Altman & Co.

MONDAY, JANUARY 22d.

ORIENTAL DEPARTMENT.

EXCEPTIONAL OFFERING OF INDIA ART FABRICS, SUITABLE FOR THE FURNISHING OF COUNTRY HOMES, ORIENTAL AND SMOKING ROOMS.

1,000 Bragas, used for Pillow Coverings, Table Mats, Scarfs, etc., Value $2.00 each, at 90c.

100 Silk Embroidered Kutch Borders, suitable for Mantle Draperies, value $4.25, at . $3.25

100 Delhi Phulkaries (embroidered in Silk with Mirror decorations), size 4x7 feet, suitable for all hangings, formerly $4.50 to $5.75. at $3.00

250 Odhney and Hazara Phulkaries, suitable for Curtains, Draperies and Wall Hangings, value $5.50 to $8.50, at $4.75 and $6.00

100 Ghagras, Blue grounds embroidered in Yellow Silk, with Mirror decorations, 31 inches wide, 4 yards long, value $5.00 to $6.50, at . . . $3.75

COTTON DRESS GOODS.

ADVANCE STYLES FOR SPRING ARE SHOWN IN EMBROIDERED SWISSES, SILK PERSIAN ZEPHYRS, SATIN LUSTERINE, MERLAWNS, DIMITIES AND THE NEW MERCERIZED COTTONS; ALSO MADRAS AND OXFORD SHIRTINGS, TOGETHER WITH A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF FRENCH CHALLIES IN EXCLUSIVE DESIGNS.

TO-MORROW—MONDAY.

Ten Thousand Yards Scotch Zephyrs, in Corded and fancy effects, at (Counters Rear of Rotunda.) Per yard, 18c.

LINEN DEPARTMENT.

FURTHER REDUCTIONS HAVE BEEN MADE IN PRICES OF HOUSEKEEPING LINENS, INCLUDING A QUANTITY OF FINE DOUBLE DAMASK TABLE CLOTHS AND NAPKINS, ALSO

250 Pairs Hemstitched Linen Sheets, Double Bed size, Per pair, $3.50

400 Pairs Hemstitched Linen Pillow and Bolster Cases, as follows:

22½x36 inches	. Per pair,	$1.15
25x36	" . . "	1.50
27x36	" . "	1.85
21x72	" . . Each,	1.20

FUR DEPARTMENT.

DECIDED REDUCTIONS HAVE BEEN MADE IN PRICES OF FURS AND FUR GARMENTS, INCLUDING PERSIAN LAMB COATS, FUR LINED WRAPS, LONG COATS, COLLARETTES, ETC.

For to-morrow (Monday) the following attractive values are offered:

Blue Fox Scarfs . .	$8.75
Stone Marten Scarfs . .	7.50
Brown Fox Muffs . . .	7.50
Blue Fox Muffs . . .	8.75

Electric Coney Storm Collars and Collarettes, $7.50 to 10.50

Mink Storm Collars and Collarettes, $23.00 to 45.00

And a number of

Baby Lamb Coats and Etons, formerly $175 to $225, at $125.00

Eighteenth Street, Nineteenth Street and Sixth Avenue.

GOT 10 CENTS AND A BABY.

Crean Spent the Money for Candy and the Infant Went to the Police.

Crean Sheir is ten years old, and he is known as a most accommodating boy. He lives with his parents at 1 Carlisle Street.

He was playing about his doorway last evening when a well-dressed woman appeared with a pretty baby in her arms, and she asked Crean if he would "mind it until she came back." She offered him 10 cents, which he took along with the little girl, and he was still holding both when Mrs. Johanna Butler, who lives in the same house, came down stairs.

Crean was rocking the infant as best he could, but he could not stop its crying for its mother, so Mrs. Butler carried it to Sergt. Porter at the Church Street Police Station. The Sergeant called in Matron Linner, who took the little one to Bellevue Hospital. It was neatly clad in white and has light hair and blue eyes.

Crean spent his 10 cents for candy.

Army Officer Acquitted of Murder.

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 20.—Capt. Frederick J. Mills, ex-Lieut. Gov. of Idaho, was acquitted to-day of the charge of murder. The jury took but one ballot. Capt. Mills killed John O. O'Melveney, Chief Engineer of the Oregon Short Line, in this city on Oct. 30 last. The evidence showed that while the defendant was absent serving

CHICAGO'S W. C. T. U. LOSES

The "Temple" Will Pass from the Control of Women.

FIGHT OF YEARS IS ENDED

Mrs. Palmer Fails to Say What "Society" Is—The State Will Treat Tuberculosis.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—After a long-drawn fight lasting several years, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has thrown up the sponge on the issue of retaining the great temple on La Salle Street, and the organization will soon give up all claim to an interest in the building. This is the structure the erection and maintenance of which have caused such dissension in the union's ranks, and which threatened at one time to cripple, if not wreck, the organization which believes in putting down the rum traffic. It is one of the finest office buildings in the city, and was built upon land owned by Marshall Field.

The originator of the idea of erecting thereon a "temple" for the union was Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, who for nearly a quarter of a century was the leading spirit of the organization. The completion of the really ornamental pile, the dedication of Willard Hall, as the principal assembly room is called, and the installing of the union in spacious rooms, was a great triumph for Mrs. Carse, for all this was not accomplished without great opposition from certain factions in the organization.

The financing of the enterprise was also Mrs. Carse's work, and it was here that her calculations went awry. Her plans were beautiful on paper, but the figures refused to come her way when settling day arrived. For five years she has fought her fight and tried by every proper means to raise the money for the heavy interest, but she was handicapped heavily by those who had from the first frowned upon the building, and the money refused to come. In the last two National conventions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union she was badly beaten, and now she appears to be completely repudiated so far as the building is concerned.

The headquarters are to be moved to the Willard Home, in Evanston, and already the temple shows signs of passing into the hands of men who may be less temperate but who are better financiers.

Willard Hall is to be transformed into a bank, and in the rotunda space has been rented for a cigar stand. It is only a question of time perhaps before it will also contain a place wherein may be bought drinks which not only cheer but inebriate.

When the building was first put up, an attempt was made to prevent tenants from smoking even in their offices, but this was afterward modified. Great consternation once was caused by the discovery that a room had been rented to the agent of an out-of-town brewing concern, and again when it was found that the temple dynamos were furnishing electric light to two saloons across the alley. Mrs. Carse has not entirely given up the fort. As her private office she occupies a wooden structure situated on top of the temple roof and reached by a circuitous stairway after the elevators have carried you as far as they can.

Elbert Hubbard has been here this week telling the people at the Art Institute about the Roycrofters, but he did not seek to prove his celebrated postulate that "East Aurora is not a location, but a condition of mind." He contented himself by modestly admitting that he was doing a great work, and carrying a message to Garcia in the most approved manner.

The Woman's Club on Wednesday did its best to elucidate the question, "What is Society?" but it did not succeed so well, perhaps, as it would if Mrs. Potter Palmer had not disregarded her promise to take part in the discussion. Mrs. Palmer is not a member of the club, but is of the sister organization, the Fortnightly. She was asked to this discussion because of her acknowledged social leadership. The announcement that she was to define "society" brought to the club every member and over 500 guests. Imagining that she was being exhibited as a showpiece, she refused to read her paper, although she remained to hear the others read.

Mrs. Fairchild Allen, editor of Our Fellow-Creatures, and Secretary and Treasurer of the Illinois Anti-Vivisection Society, does not believe that the local societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals will ever make much headway in their work until they begin to inculcate in the young a love of pets, and to this end she advises the best gifts for children are birds and animals. She says:

"Humane education lowers the criminal record. Many a boy may be kept out of evil company if he is permitted to have a pet on which he may lavish his affection. This education is the prime feature of the International Kindness to Animals Society. It is not a prosecuting society, but, besides its monthly magazine, it issues a quarterly for children and distributes thousands of tracts."

An unusual interest is being manifested here in the proposed State treatment of tuberculosis. Dr. John A. Robinson, who is the Secretary of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Consumption, and who originated the plan for a State sanitarium for the treatment of that disease, says:

"The recommendation of the State Board of Health that Illinois establish a State sanitarium is an assurance that the next Legislature will provide funds to build the Institution. This unanimous recommendation resulted from a six months' investigation by a committee appointed by the Governor at the suggestion of the Legislature. The results of the committee's work will be handed to Gov. Tanner, and he will present it to the Legislature. The suggestion is that $50,000 be spent in purchasing a site and erecting the buildings. We hope that in two years from now the institution may be in working order." R. B. P.

R. H. SOUTHGATE A BANKRUPT.

Man Who Conducted the Brunswick Files a Petition in Chicago.

CHICAGO Jan. 20.—R. H. Southgate of this city, manager of the Auditorium Hotel, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy here to-day. The schedules indicate that he, as President of the late Hotel Brunswick Company of New York, which was closed in the Fall of 1897, became personally involved for himself and others, since deceased, by indorsements and personal guarantees of the long term leases of the hotel property.

The closing of the Brunswick, Mr. Southgate says, was brought about by the erection of modern fireproof palaces such as the Waldorf-Astoria, Holland, Savoy, Imperial, &c., in the near vicinity of the Brunswick. In Mr. Southgate's attempt alone to sustain the Brunswick property he lost heavily. He has no liabilities except those incurred in guaranteeing and indorsing for the Brunswick Hotel Company. He states it is contemplated to reconstruct the Brunswick Hotel on a modern style.

The bankruptcy proceedings have no connection with the Auditorium Hotel business.

The liabilities are placed at $424,938, and his assets $206,775. The largest debt is $240,200, due the Hotel Brunswick Company of New York as a liability on subscription for 2,240 shares of stock. This, however, is also scheduled as the petitioner's principal assets. Most of the creditors live in New York. Among these as scheduled are: Acker, Merrall & Condit, $15,656; estate of Josiah M. Fiske, $27,250; J. G. Wallace, $11,426; estate of A. G. Hull, $23,850; Emma S. Filliere, $21,176, and W. A. Lattimer, $12,600.

Sets Aside Verdict on His Own Charge.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 20.—Supreme Court Justice Keogh to-day set aside the verdict recently obtained in a suit brought in the Supreme Court, himself presiding, by Thomas H. Lyons against Dr. Edward F. Sheehan and George Connors for goods delivered by Lyons, who is a grocer, to Connors, a customer. The verdict is set aside on the ground that it was against the entire weight of evidence and on account of the erroneous charge of the Judge that the defendant was liable for $80, as per the agreement of $15 payable every three months, and which misled the jury.

Boston & Montana Company Enjoined.

HELENA, Montana, Jan. 20.—The Supreme Court has granted the application of Adolph Wetzstein for an injunction against the Boston and Montana Company restraining it from working the Comanche Copper Mine at Butte, except under a fifty-thousand-dollar bond, and to furnish Wetzstein an accounting of all ores produced.

Black and Colored Silks.

You can buy good silks in many stores—you can buy cheap silks at many more stores—but we doubt if silks as good as these, at prices as low as these, can be bought at present anywhere in New York.

40 pieces of figured black GROS GRAIN, 20 in. wide, all pure silk, in small and medium designs, very suitable for a separate waist or an entire dress, worth 75c. a yard; on sale Monday at 49c

35 pieces of black dress TAFFETA of a handsome quality, 27 in. wide, and beautifully dyed and finished; we have never before sold this quality for less than $1.00 per yard, but for Monday the price will be . 79c

30 pieces of TAFFETA BROCADE, for evening wear, in a fine line of delicate gaslight shades, including pink, ciel, rose, maize, Nile, violet, cream and white; actually worth 98c. a yard; to be on sale Monday at 69c

Ladies' Capes.

A transaction just consummated places us in position to offer a stock of about 1,500 Cloth and Plush Capes at prices averaging just about one-half original cost.

PLUSH CAPES, handsomely embroidered, braided and beaded in large scroll designs, collars and fronts edged with sable—opossum; rhadame silk lining and deep facings of plush; 29 inches long and 110 inches sweep; to-morrow at 7.90

KERSEY CAPES, 30 inches long and very wide sweep, large hood, lined with black or black and white plaid taffeta; on sale to-morrow at 6.75

KERSEY CAPES, completely lined with plain black or black and white plaid taffeta silk; on sale to-morrow at 9.75

GOLF CAPES, made of the well-known "Champion Shawls," in new spring colorings, plain or plaid, ruffled bottom and strapped hood; a very rich quality; on sale to-morrow at 7.90

Ladies' Jackets.

For immediate clearance we will place on sale to-morrow

500 GARMENTS, made of kerseys, cheviots and in rough effects, at 3.75, 6.75, 9.75

These prices are beyond doubt the lowest on record, considering the high standard of the goods—and the exquisite workmanship of them.

Ladies' Waists.

A special purchase of 100 dozen plain, striped and dotted FRENCH FLANNEL WAISTS will be opened and placed on sale to-morrow at 1.90

As in our last week's sale, we again suggest early selections, as all the most delicate and therefore most desirable tints will be sold out first.

Semi-Annual Clearance Sale of Men's Neckwear.

Twice a year we clear our shelves of every bit of neckwear irrespective of cost and irrespective of loss, so as to start the new season with a clean slate. Six months have elapsed since we made a similar sweeping proposition—six months more will have to go by before we'll renew it.

HERE IS THE OFFER—
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ANY NECKTIE IN THE STORE MONDAY FOR 25c

All the ENGLISH SQUARES.
All the PUFF AND TECK TIES.
All the FOUR-IN-HANDS.
All the IMPERIALS.
All the BOWS AND CLUB TIES.

Sold heretofore at 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

Beginning with Monday and continuing until every tie is sold, YOUR CHOICE FOR TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Ladies' Winter Shoes at About Half Price.

We have on hand several lines of ladies' shoes that were intended for outdoor wear, but owing to the mild, dry weather we have had thus far this winter there has not been much of a demand for shoes with double soles, nor is there likely to be. For this reason we have decided to sell these shoes at half their actual value.

LADIES' SHOES, custom hand made, of French calf, made in the lace style, with extension soles, bought to sell at $5 per pair; reduced for to-morrow to 2.90

LADIES' LACE SHOES, of the best quality box calf, with double soles, in regular heights and in extra height for skating: well worth $5 a pair; reduced for to-morrow to 2.90

LADIES' SHOES, lace or button, several styles, in tans and blacks, nearly all sizes, mostly $2 grades; reduced for to-morrow to 1.00

Silver and Cutlery.

Goods that glisten and cut—made for use as well as ornament—at specially reduced prices for Monday.

WAITER, quadruple plated, sateen finish, with handsome border, 14 inches in diameter, worth fully $3.00; for to-morrow's sale at . 1.45

CANDLESTICKS, quadruple plated and highly polished; a choice of two designs, either of which is worth fully $2.00, to-morrow at . 95c

ODDS AND ENDS OF BROKEN TEA SETS, worth up to $7.00 and $8.00 per set, offered to-morrow at these greatly reduced prices:

COFFEE, CHOCOLATE AND TEA POTS, quadruple plated, choice at 1.50

SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS AND SPOON HOLDERS, quadruple plated, choice at 98c

DINNER KNIVES AND FORKS, with handles of cocoa wood or stag horn, regularly sold at $2.00; on sale to-morrow, per set of 6 knives and 6 forks, at . . . . . 95c.

CARVERS AND FORKS, with stag handles and fancy sterling ferrules, (fork has jockey guard,) regularly sold at $2.75; on sale to-morrow at 1.48

NAPKIN RINGS, silver plated, highly polished and fancy engraved, worth 15c. each; here to-morrow at 5c

PEPPERS AND SALTS, silver plated, highly polished and fancy engraved, worth 15c. each; your choice to-morrow, special, at . 5c

Watches.

"Mark time!" Here are some good time-markers low enough in price to be owned by all who need them:

SOMETHING VERY SPECIAL—AN AMERICAN WATCH FOR 95c

This watch has a second hand, is stem-wound and stem-set, and is guaranteed for one year from the date of purchase; just the sort of watch that everybody wants, at just the price that everybody can afford to pay.

MEN'S WATCHES, silver filled, open-face style, fitted with a fine American movement, actually worth $5.00 each; reduced for to-morrow to 2.95

LADIES' WATCHES, 14-karat, gold filled, open face, handsomely embossed case, guaranteed for 25 years, and fitted with a fine American movement, formerly sold at $7.50 each, special to-morrow at 5.50

Groceries.

The World's Great Pure Food Mart always sells the best Groceries and for the least money. If you want proof read the following prices:

SUGAR—7 lbs. H. & E. granulated Sugar 34c

FLOUR—Siegel Cooper Co.'s Flour, best Minnesota patent, per ½ sack 55c

FISH—Fat family Mackerel, no heads, no tails; per 5-lb. kit.. 65c

COFFEE—The drink of all "drinks;" a perfect cup of coffee is "nature's restorer;" it soothes and comforts tired nature; one cup contains more real merit than all the quack concoctions of burned corn, oats, bran, &c., that have been placed on the market with bright-sounding names and supposed medicinal value. Try our "popular" blend Mocha and Java; makes a delightful, aromatic cup of coffee; 4 lbs., $1; per lb. 28c

TEA—Your choice of our green, black, or mixed Teas, noted for their full strength and rich aromatic flavor; regular 50c. quality, 5 lbs., $1.75; per lb. 38c

BUTTER—Finest Elgin Creamery Butter, sweet as a rose; 5-lb. pail 1.29

OLIVES—"Kenwood" brand Queen Olives, per large bot. . . . 25c

OLIVE OIL—Beaumarchand Olive Oil, per quart bottle 45c

PICKLES—"Crown" brand Gherkins, Mixed Pickles and Chow-Chow, very dainty and crisp; per pt. bot., 9c; per qt. bot. 13c

BAKING POWDER—Hazel pure cream tartar Baking Powder, absolutely free from all chemical adulteration, per ½-lb. tin. 15c

CEREALS—Hazel Farina, made from the finest Spring wheat, 1-lb. pkge. 8c

Hazel Rolled Oats, makes a delicious morning dish, per doz., $1.15; per pkge. 10c

Yellow or White Cornmeal, granulated Hominy or rolled white Oat Flakes, 10 lbs. 25c

Hazel Corn Starch, makes perfect custard or pudding, pkge. . 7c

SAUCE—Mason's A1 International Sauce, pts. per bot. 23c

RICE—Choice Carolina Rice, 10 lbs. 60c

SALAD DRESSING—Yacht Club Salad Dressing, ½ pt. bot. . . . 23c

PRUNES—Choice Santa Clara Valley Prunes, 12 lbs. 1.00

PLUM PUDDING—Like homemade, per can. 10c

JELLIES—Hazel Pure Fruit Jellies, Strawberry, Blackberry, Currant, Quince, &c., 1-lb. glass jar 22c

CANNED VEGETABLES—"Delaware" brand, solid red ripe Tomatoes, "Pontiac" brand Sugar Corn or Farren's String Beans, per doz. 90c., per can. 8c

"Quinn Augustine" brand "Trenton" brand, solid hand-packed Jersey Tomatoes, "Lilac" or "Hazel" brands, Fancy Maine Sugar Corn or "Emerald Sweet Wrinkle" Peas, per doz. $1.25, per can. 11c

Farren's Lima Beans or "St. Nicholas" brand Succotash, per doz. $1.05, per can. 9c

ASPARAGUS—"Gold Dust" brand Asparagus, snow-white stalks, California packing, per doz. $2.70, per can. 23c

CANNED FRUIT—"Royal Red" brand California Pears, Yellow Crawford Peaches or Green Gage Plums, packed in heavy syrup, per doz., $2.10, per can. 18c

Anderson's "Favorite" brand Bartlett Pears, per doz. $1.65, per can. 14c

"Milford" or "Royal Red" brand California Apricots, preserved in heavy syrup, per doz. $1.75, per can. 15c

SPICES—Hazel Genuine English Mustard, per ½-lb can. . . . 15c

Black Pepper, Ginger, Mustard, Cloves, fresh ground daily, per lb. 19c

STARCH—5-lb. best Laundry Starch 17c

SOAP—Hazel "White Soap," Kirk's "White Cloud" or Dobbin's "Electric" Soap, 100 cakes to box, per box $4.50, per cake 5c

Fairbank's "Mascot" Soap, 10 cakes 31c

The Daily Story of The Big Store.

SIEGEL COOPER Co.

Sixth Ave., 18th and 19th Streets.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 21, 1900.

Beginning with Monday, January 22d, Ending with Saturday, January 27th.

The Annual Sale of Ribbons.

Will you permit us to omit the customary lengthy explanations and allow us to introduce the annual Ribbon event with but a few short words? We may both like it better.

Silks have advanced 50% since last January—labor has advanced at least 30%—and ribbon prices the world over are just that much higher.

We simply want you to keep these facts in mind when you read of prices for superior Ribbons that to-day cannot be reached even by jobbers in case lots.

The whys and wherefores? We'll omit them. We do not feel called upon to apologize for prices that will be the sensation of New York within another day.

Velvet Ribbons.

Black Satin Back All Silk VELVET RIBBONS, choice, staple goods on which prices have advanced 50%, to be sold as follows:

Width No. 5, per yard 6c
Width No. 7, per yard 9c
Width No. 9, per yard 12c
Width No. 12, per yard 14c
Width No. 40, per yard 20c

Taffeta Ribbons.

Black all-silk superior TAFFETA RIBBONS in beautiful moire effects, 3½ inches wide, standard 25c. value; for sale at 12c

Double-Faced Satin Ribbon.

700 cartons all silk, superior quality, heavy, double-faced satin ribbon, with cord edge—all the choicest new spring colorings as well as blacks.

The 3-inch widths for, a yard 15c
The 3½-inch widths for, a yard 19c
The 4-inch widths for, a yard 25c
And every yard worth just double.

Loom Ends of Ribbons.

By special arrangement we secured from the leading Ribbon makers of America upward of a million yards of LOOM ENDS in 1½ to 8 yard lengths, and we will now sell them as follows:

At 14c. a Yard. LOOM ENDS of black double-faced satin ribbons, 2 to 4 inch widths, black and colored satin and gros grain Ribbons, as well as black and colored taffeta Ribbons, worth up to 39c. a yard.

At 7c. a Yard. LOOM ENDS of all-silk, satin and gros grain Ribbons, and all-silk taffeta Ribbons, up to 3 inches wide, desirable colors, worth 15c. to 25c. a yard.

At 5c. a Yard. LOOM ENDS of all-silk, satin and gros grain Ribbons that regularly sell for 10c. to 15c. a yard.

Satin and Gros Grain Ribbon.

200 cartons No. 2 SATIN AND GROS GRAIN RIBBONS, all silk, every desirable color, also black; to be sold only in pieces of 10 yards; the entire 10 yards for 15c

House Gowns.

Clearing prices on some special lines of comfortable and pretty house garments of which we are slightly overstocked.

WOMEN'S FLANNEL TEA GOWNS AND EIDERDOWN ROBES—About 40 dozen in all—the kinds that sold throughout the season at from $4 to $6 apiece, here to-morrow to pick and choose from at, each 2.75

(We haven't all sizes in all colors, and for a choice selection we would therefore advise that you come early in the day.)

150 dozen WOMEN'S WRAPPERS, made on a good full pattern and prettily trimmed, your choice to-morrow at the reduced price of . 49c

One Lot of WOMEN'S WRAPPERS, in small Persian stripes, made with revers, braid trimming and ruffle on skirt, now reduced in price to, each 98c

Women's Muslin Underwear.

This is the season of White Goods Sales—the best time in the whole year, probably, to lay in your supplies. It will be many a long day before you can find the equal of these goods at the prices at which we are now offering them. Look at a few sample quotations and form your own opinion:

WOMEN'S MUSLIN UNDERSKIRTS, with tucked flounce, special at . . . 49c

WOMEN'S DRAWERS, with tucked ruffle and embroidery edge, at 29c

WOMEN'S MUSLIN DRAWERS of a fine quality, plain tucked, at 17c

WOMEN'S MUSLIN DRAWERS, with wide lace-trimmed ruffle, at . . . 39c

WOMEN'S SKIRT CHEMISE, with embroidery trimmed sleeves, neck, bertha and tucked skirt, at 75c

WOMEN'S MUSLIN GOWNS, with tucked hubbard yoke and embroidery finish, worth 75c. each, here to-morrow at 49c

WOMEN'S MUSLIN GOWNS, tucked yoke, with embroidery insertion or plain tucked yokes, worth 85c., on sale to-morrow at . . . 65c

Silk Underskirts.

If you would know the real reason of the phenomenally large quantity of silk skirts sold at this store, you should study these Monday offerings:

300 GIVERNAUD'S TAFFETA UNDERSKIRTS, all shades, with corded umbrella flounce or ruffles on umbrella flounce, worth from $5 to $6 each, on sale to-morrow at 3.95

GIVERNAUD'S TAFFETA UNDERSKIRTS, in all colors, with double umbrella corded flounce; your choice to-morrow at . . . 5.00

TAFFETA UNDERSKIRTS, with drop and accordion plaited flounces, finished with pinked ruffles, here to-morrow at . . . 6.50

SILK MOREEN UNDERSKIRTS, in black or colors, with yoke band and double umbrella corded flounce, regular $4.50 value, for to-morrow 3.00

Embroideries.

We are offering an exceptionally fine assortment of well-made EDGINGS and INSERTIONS that for lowness of prices and variety of patterns we can hardly recommend enough.

At 5c. yd. At 8c. yd. At 10c. yd. At 15c. yd.

8c. values. 12c. values. 15c. values. 25c. values.

Also a special lot of 20-in. ALL-OVERS, in lace and embroidery effects, adapted for yokings and shirt waists, all new and attractive designs; a very large assortment of 75c. and $1.00 qualities; Monday, special at, per yd. 49c

Linen Handkerchiefs for Men and Women.

WOMEN'S PURE LINEN REVERED HEMSTITCHED HANDKERCHIEFS, ¼ and ½ hems, regular price 12½c., at 9c

WOMEN'S ALL-LINEN HEMSTITCHED, EXTRA QUALITY HANDKERCHIEFS, ¼, ½ and 1 inch hems, regular price 15c. and 18c., at 12c

MEN'S PURE LINEN HEMSTITCHED HANDKERCHIEFS, full size, ½ and 1 inch hems, regular prices 15c., 18c. and 25c.; special at 12c. and 19c

Sewing Machines.

EVERY HOME NEEDS A GOOD SEWING MACHINE.

The one we offer for to-morrow is a GOOD ONE—an improvement on the latest Singer Sewing Machine, in fact, and as good as any $50 machine now on the market. The name of the manufacturer (stamped on each and every machine) is well known the world over. It has all the latest improvements and attachments and comes in polished oak (five-drawer drophead style), having the appearance of a table when closed. Guaranteed for 5 years from the date of purchase. Come and see it in operation. Your purchase money back if it is not all we claim for it. To-morrow's price, only 14.95

A Clearance Sale of Dress Linings.

We will place on sale to-morrow all our odds and ends of CHANGEABLE SILKS, PLAID SILKS, CHECKED SATINS and PLAID WOOL MOREENS that formerly sold at as high as 60c. a yard—at, per yard 12½c

Also special for to-morrow: SHRUNK FRENCH HAIR CLOTH, about 16 inches wide, at per yard 10c

Ready-Made Sheets.

The material representing over 95 per cent. of the total cost of sheets, and cotton materials having advanced remarkably of late, the following offerings become all the more noteworthy:

SHEETS for single beds, on sale to-morrow at, each 28c

SHEETS for full-sized beds, at, each . . . 36c

(Ask for sheets that are marked "C")

"FRUIT OF THE LOOM" SHEETS, a well known brand, at these remarkably low prices:

Single bed size, each 35c
Extra large size, each 55c

Fringed Doylies.

Whoever heard of all-linen doylies being sold at these low prices? Two lots only, but prices are so small that we must reserve the right to sell only 12 of any lot to any purchaser.

Lot 1—1,000 dozen all-linen Fringed DOYLIES, with borders of red, blue or salmon, also plain white, 13 inches square, the kind that sells regularly at 5c. each; here to-morrow, per set of 6 . 15c

Lot 2—1,000 dozen all-linen Fringed DOYLIES, with plain white borders, or in assorted colors, 15 inches square; set of 6 to-morrow at . . 25c

Damask Table Cloths.

For to-morrow we offer BLEACHED DAMASK PATTERN TABLE CLOTHS of pure flax, with borders on all four sides, in ten handsome designs, at these attractive prices:

For the 2-yard size 1.00
For the 2½-yard size 1.25
For the 3-yard size 1.50

Notions.

No home or dressmaking establishment should be without these—not at the low prices quoted for to-morrow:

M. Heminway & Sons' 10-yard TWIST, all desirable colors, per doz. 10c

Battenberg BRAIDS, linen or cotton, in desirable widths, per dozen yards . . . 5c

25 yards HAND SEWING SILK, black, a dozen spools for 17c

BASTING COTTON, white, 500 yards on a spool, per spool 3c

Heavy mohair TUBULAR SHOE LACES, 1¼ yards long, per dozen 5c

WHITTEMORE'S GILT-EDGE SHOE DRESSING, per bottle 13c

SEAMLESS STOCKINET DRESS SHIELDS, sizes 3 and 4, per pair . . . 7c

Wide, white, flat COTTON CORSET LACES, 2½ and 3 yards long, per doz. . . . 6c

Home Decorations.

(Third Floor.)

An unpretentious little list, but if you study it you'll find it full of great bargains.

OPAL PUFF BOXES, hand painted, worth 29c., here to-morrow at . . . 15c

OPAL TOILET BOTTLES, hand painted, worth 39c., here to-morrow at . . 25c

PILLOW TOPS AND BACKS, stamped in new designs, worth 45c., on sale to-morrow at 29c

"COLUMBIA" SHETLAND FLOSS AND GERMANTOWN WOOL, worth 15c per hank, here to-morrow at 8c

RENAISSANCE PATTERNS, all sizes, worth 25c. and 35c. each, on sale to-morrow at 10c

Unframed Pictures.

Before stock-taking (Feb. 1) we wish to close out our entire lines of fine WATER COLORS, REMARQUE PROOF ETCHINGS, ENGRAVINGS, &c.—reproductions of the work of such well-known artists as J. G. Brown, Fred Morgan, Percy Moran and other artists of high standing—pictures for which you would have to pay from $10.00 to $40.00 in any fine art store; while they last you may have your choice Monday at 3.00

Umbrellas.

Don't forget that the rainy season has yet to come. Prepare for it in advance. Take advantage of our splendid offering for to-morrow.

300 UMBRELLAS, with covers of Union taffeta silk and all-silk serge, 26-inch size, a choice assortment of handles for men and women—such as full length pearl with silver trimming, horn, Dresden, ebony and natural woods; none worth less than $2.75, yet you may have your choice to-morrow at 1.49

A Clearance Sale of Dress Goods.

Prior to stock taking we offer many broken lines of the season's most popular and stylish dress goods at greatly reduced prices.

At 59c. Per Yard—Imported Crepons that were $2.75 a yard; French Multi-hued Plaids that were $2.75 per yard; Camel's-Hair Novelties that were $2.25 a yard; Teazled Novelties that were $1.75 a yard; Odd pieces of Imported Novelties that were $2.75 a yard; Two-toned Poplins that were $1.50 per yard; Plaid Homespuns that were $1.45 a yard; Boucle Plaids that were $1.25 a yard, and Imported Stripes that were $1.25 a yard.

At 39c. Per Yard—Odd pieces of Novelties that were $1.00 a yard; Venetian Cloths that were 75c. a yard; Cheviot Plaids that were 75c. a yard; Scotch Plaids that were 75c. a yard; Cheviots that were 75c. a yard, and All-Wool Henriettas that were 69c. a yard.

At 95c. Per Yard—An assorted lot of BLACK NOVELTY DRESS FABRICS, consisting of various weaves of Crepons, &c., the former prices of which ranged from $1.25 to $2.25 per yard.

At 39c. Per Yard—90 pieces of BLACK ALL-WOOL CHEVIOT, of very excellent texture, sponged and shrunk, ready for the needle—a fabric that can't be had elsewhere for less than 65c. per yard.

Also, by SPECIAL REQUEST from many hundreds of patrons, we will place on sale again to-morrow 200 pieces PLAID BACK GOLF SUITINGS, the ideal fabric for separate skirts—face shows an Oxford gray, with backs of the most brilliant plaids—per yard 39c

A Sale of the Famous P. & P. 1.25, 1.50 and 1.75 Kid Gloves at 65c a pair.

Pings & Pinner Gloves need no recommendation from us or any one, being one of the world's most famous brands, and in offering their entire sample lines, as well as selections from their regular stock that are in any way mussed or marked, we are secure in our belief that the opportunity is one of most exceptional merit.

"Barthold" and "Fontaine" are their choicest GLOVES, real French made kid gloves that have stood the test of time and have earned the admiration of five continents; we will show them in 2 and 3 clasp styles, in all sizes, in all colors, and at the price stated, per pair 65c

As we expect to sell them out in short order, we advise early selections, disclaiming all responsibility for disappointments after Monday.

Housefurnishing Goods.

The economical housekeeper can save money by buying them here. We have shown it to be so quite often in the past; we will demonstrate it again to-morrow with:

CHINA SPICE JARS, with neatly painted names and decorations, regularly worth 35c.; special at 18c

Six-foot STEP LADDER, strong and durable, of ⅞ inch stock, nicely painted, with pail rest, regularly worth 80c.; special at . 55c

Another opportunity to buy our DEWEY COOK RANGE at about half of its regular value. This stove is built of extra heavy castings, fitted with best brick, dumping and shaking grate, nickel plated trimmings, cabinet base, with broiler door and end shelf, fully worth $20.00; special at 9.80

(This price covers the setting up of stove at your home, also pipe, elbow and damper.)

INCANDESCENT GAS LAMPS, fitted with the best chemically prepared mantle, guaranteed to give a powerful light; complete with shade, mantle, solid brass burner and chimney, special to-morrow at . . 35c

THE CROWN SELF-BASTING BROILER; can be used in oil, gas or coal stoves; made of stamped steel with perforated holes; special at 20c

SLEEVE OR PRESSING BOARDS, similar to the Day style, 36 in. long, made of hardwood; special at 18c

CLOTHES WRINGERS, with hardwood frame, white rubber rollers and malleable iron parts; special at 1.00

SPONGES of good quality, for carriage or house cleaning purposes, regularly worth 20c.; special at 6c

Fine China

at half price and less—an opportunity that is not afforded every day, here or elsewhere.

DINNER SET of 100 pieces, fine thin German china, handsomely decorated, newest designs, imported to sell at $20.00, to go at 10.00

TEA SET, 56 pieces of Lanternier Limoges china, newest shapes and rich decorations, traced with coined gold, imported to sell for $10.00 and $12.00; special at 4.75

Thos. Haviland's Fine French China at half price to close out an open stock.

We can only mention a few items, showing the special values offered, as follows:

CUPS AND SAUCERS, coffee size, worth $8.00 per doz.; special at 4.00

CUPS AND SAUCERS, tea size, worth $6.00 per doz.; special at 3.00

CUPS AND SAUCERS, A. D. size, worth $5.00; special at 2.50

CHOCOLATE POTS, worth $6.00 each; special at 3.00

TEA POTS, worth $2.25; special at 1.13

PLATES, dinner size, $5.25 per dozen; special at 2.63

PLATES, soup size, $5.00 per dozen; special at 2.50

PLATES, coupe size, $3.90 per dozen; special at 1.95

CHOP DISH, $2.00 each; special at 1.00

SALAD DISH, $2.40 each; special at 1.20

Also special for to-morrow:

JARDINIERES, 8 and 9 inch size, large shapes, handsomely tinted in Rookwood colors, rococo designs, regularly sold at 75c. and 95c.; your choice at 50c

JARDINIERE AND PEDESTAL, 34 inches high, 12-inch opening, jardiniere handsomely tinted in raised figured designs, imported to sell at $12; special at 7.50

Cigars

The stock of the Manhattan Importing Co. is well-nigh exhausted, yet there remain a few boxes of many lots, hardly enough to speak about in detail, yet a great mass taken collectively. Some of the offerings may not last throughout the day, so don't blame us if you're too late.

	Manhattan Importing Company's Price.	Our Price.
LA FLORILLA, a high grade, clear Havana, Cuban hand-made cigar, equal to the imported: Conchas Fina Especial, box of 50	3.95	2.75
8,000 Sumatra Wrapper, long mixed Havana filler cigars, (4¾ inches long), box of 50	2.75	2.00
4,000 Havana Wrapper, Havana filler, Conchas, 10c. value, hand-made, box of 50	2.50	1.75
CREMO CIGARS (Acker, Merrall & Condit's), a limited quantity, one box to a customer only, per box of 50	2.25	1.65
DUMPLINGS, Sumatra Wrapper, fine long mixed Havana filler, Puritanos, box of 50	2.25	1.50
5,000 Sumatra wrapper, mixed Havana filler cigars, several brands, per box of 50	2.00	1.25
FIRST EDITION (N. Y. made), Sumatra wrapper, fine long mixed filler CONCHAS ESPECIALES, per box of 50	1.75	1.00

Wines and Liquors.

Clearance Sale of THE MANHATTAN IMPORTING CO.'S stock. Here are the prices. You know the goods and values too well to need further argument.

GUINNESS DUBLIN STOUT, per doz. 1.53
Usher's O. V. G. SCOTCH WHISKEY, per bottle 85c
CREME DE MENTHE, large bottle 55c

(Mail orders promptly filled.)

	Manhattan Importing Co.'s Price.	Our Price.
Fisse Thirion & Co., Rheims. FRENCH CHAMPAGNE	30 00	19.75
CHERRIES in Maraschino, imported in glass, per bottle, 50c.; per case	8.00	5.50
Niersteiner. Riesling, type of fine RHINE WINE, per dozen quarts	4.00	2.95
Hochheimer, an imported RHINE WINE from Burckhardt and Sohne, Deidesheim, a-R, per case	10.00	6.00
CASTLE A SAUTERNE, imported in glass	9.00	6.50
ST. JULIEN, a fine old California Claret, per dozen	3.50	2.50
MEDOC, imported in glass, from Bertal & Martin, Bordeaux, France, per case, quarts	8.50	6.00
PENNSYLVANIA RYE, per gal.	2.50	1.75
MARYLAND RYE, per gal.	3.00	2.00
JAMES E. PEPPER WHISKEY, per gal.	3.50	2.25
MT. VERNON RYE, per gal.	3.75	2.50
OLD CROW WHISKEY, per gal.	4.00	2.75
MONTICELLO RYE WHISKEY, per gal.	4.50	3.00
GUCKENHEIMER RYE WHISKEY	5.00	3.50
IRISH and SCOTCH WHISKEY, per gal.	4.00	3.00
CALIFORNIA CLARET, sound, old, bottle ripe, per gal.	.90	.60
Full Bodied CALIFORNIA PORT and SHERRY, 5 years old, per gal.	1.50	1.10

ROBERTS REPORTS ARE IN

Submitted to the House by the Majority and Minority.

BOTH WOULD KEEP HIM OUT

The First Would Bar the Utah Member-Elect from a Seat—The Other Would Admit and Then Expel.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—When the House met to-day Mr. Tayler, (Rep., Ohio,) Chairman of the Special Committee to investigate the case of Representative-elect B. H. Roberts, presented the majority report in favor of the exclusion of Mr. Roberts and gave notice that he would call the case up on Tuesday.

Mr. Littlefield (Rep., Me.) presented the minority report in favor of seating Mr. Roberts and then expelling him. The minority report was signed by Mr. Littlefield, Republican, and Mr. De Armond, Democrat. Five thousand copies of the reports were ordered printed for general distribution. Mr. Roberts was in his seat during these proceedings, but made no effort to address the House.

THE MAJORITY REPORT.

The majority report signed by Chairman Tayler and six of his associates is a voluminous document, and is accompanied by a summary of the law and facts. It gives the details of the hearings, the ample opportunities afforded to Mr. Roberts to present his case, his refusal to testify, and the unanimous findings of facts, heretofore published.

The full report of the majority in some parts uses strong language against Mr. Roberts. As to his plural marriages it says:

"Prior to 1882 B. H. Roberts had married one Louisa Smith. She has borne him six children and is still living.

"About 1885, when Utah was fairly ringing with the blows of the Edmunds act of 1882; while numerous prosecutions were going on, and after the Supreme Court had passed upon the validity of the act; when the American people supposed that polygamy had received its death blow; when no man of the many whose cases went to the United States Supreme Court pretended the provisions against polygamous marriages were invalid—with all these facts insistently before him, Brigham H. Roberts took another wife—his first polygamous wife—Celia Dibble by name, who in the following twelve years bore him six children.

"This second wife he married in defiance of the Edmunds law. He spat upon that law; he declared by his act that he recognized no binding rule upon him of a law of Congress; he declared by it that he recognized a higher law. The Congress of the United States was to him an object of contempt. The Supreme Court of the United States might declare the law for others, but not for him. He laughed at its futile decrees and spurned its admonitions. The Executive, which had declared in solemn messages its gratification that polygamy seemed gone forever, he defied and despised. Of what consequence were laws of Congress and declarations of the highest court and proclamations of Presidents, as against his sensual interpretation of a sensual doctrine?

"And all the time the Edmunds law declared not only polygamy but cohabitation with more than one woman unlawful. Roberts not only bigamously married a second wife, but he persisted in violating and defiantly trampling under foot every other provision of the act.

"But he had not yet sufficiently proclaimed his utter contempt for the Supreme Court, for Congress, and its most solemn enactments. A few years later he took a third wife.

"From the time of his second marriage to the third he lived with two women. From the date of his third marriage down to his election and, we doubt not, to the present time, he has been cohabiting with three women.

"As recently as Dec. 6, 1899, he defined his position as follows:

"'These women have stood by me. They are good and true women. The law has said I shall part from them. My church has bowed to the command of Congress and relinquished the practice of plural marriage. But the law cannot free me from obligations assumed before it spoke. No power can do that. Even were the Church that sanctioned these marriages and performed the ceremonies to turn its back upon us and say the marriages are not valid now, and that I must give these good and loyal women up, I'll be —— if I would.'

"In this statement he adheres to the audacious assumption that the law of 1882 did not speak to him, and that he did not recognize it as a rule of conduct to him. We assert before the House, the country, and history that it is absolutely and impregnably sound, not to be effectively attacked, consonant with every legislative precedent, in harmony with the law and with the text books on the subject.

"That Brigham H. Roberts's persistent, notorious, and defiant violation of one of the most solemn acts ever passed by Congress, by the very body which he seeks now to enter, on the theory that he is above the law, and his defiant violation of the laws of his own State, necessarily render him ineligible, disqualified, unfit, and unworthy to be a member of the House of Representatives. And this proposition is asserted not so much for reasons personal to the membership of the House as because it goes to the very integrity of the House and the Republic as such."

Summarized, the remainder of the report is as follows:

"The committee is unanimous in its belief that Mr. Roberts ought not to remain a member of the House of Representatives. A majority are of the opinion that he ought not to be permitted to become a member; that the House has the right to exclude him. A minority are of the opinion that the proper course of procedure is to permit him to be sworn in and then expel him by a two-thirds vote under the Constitutional provision providing for expulsion.

"Your committee desires to assert with the utmost positiveness at this point that not only is the proposition of expulsion as applied to this case against precedent, but that exclusion is entirely in accord with principle, authority, and legislative precedent and not antagonistic to any legislative action which the House of Representatives has ever taken. For convenience we present herewith, before proceeding to extended argument in support of the committee resolution, the following summary:

"Upon the facts stated, the majority of the committee assert that the claimant ought not to be permitted to take a seat in the House of Representatives and that the seat to which he was elected ought to be declared vacant.

"The minority, on the other hand, assert that he ought to be sworn in in order that if happily two-thirds vote therefor he may be expelled.

"Three distinct grounds of disqualification are asserted against Roberts.

"1. By reason of his violation of the Edmunds law.

"2. By reason of his notorious and defiant violation of the law of the land, of the decisions of the Supreme Court, and of the proclamations of the Presidents, holding himself above the law and not amenable to it.

"No government could possibly exist in the face of such practices. He is in open war against the laws and institutions of the country whose Congress he seeks to enter. Such an idea is intolerable. It is upon the principle asserted in this ground that all cases of exclusion have been based.

"3. His election as Representative is an explicit and offensive violation of the understanding by which Utah was admitted as a State.

CONSTITUTION IS DISCUSSED.

"The objection is made to the refusal to admit Roberts that the Constitution excludes the idea that any objection can be made to his coming in if he is twenty-five years of age, has been seven years a citizen of the United States, and was an inhabitant of Utah when elected, no matter how odious or treasonable or criminal may have been his life and practices. To this we reply:

"1. That the language of the Constitutional provision, the history of its framing in the Constitutional Convention, and its context clearly show that it cannot be construed to prevent disqualification for crime.

"2. That the overwhelming authority of text book writers on the Constitution is to the effect that such disqualification may be imposed by the House, and no commentator on the Constitution specifically denies it.

"3. The courts of several States in construing analogous provisions have with practical unanimity declared against such narrow construction of such Constitutional provisions.

"4. The House of Representatives has never denied that it had the right to exclude a member-elect, even when he had the three constitutional requirements.

"5. In many instances it has distinctly asserted its right so to do in cases of disloyalty and crime.

"6. It passed, in 1862, the Test Oath act, which imposed a real and substantial disqualification for membership in Congress, disqualifying hundreds of thousands of American citizens. This law remained in force for twenty years, and thousands of members of Congress were compelled to take the oath it required.

"7. The House in 1869 adopted a general rule of order, providing that no person should be sworn in as a member against whom the objection was made that he was not entitled to take the test oath, and if upon investigation such fact appeared, he was to be permanently debarred from entrance.

"8. The interesting proposition is made that the claimant be sworn in and then turned out. Upon the theory that the purpose is to permanently part company with Mr. Roberts, this is a dubious proceeding. Such action requires the vote of two-thirds of the members. We ask if such a vote is possible or right, in view of the following observations:

POWER OF EXPULSION.

"The expulsion clause of the Constitution is as follows:

"'Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.'

"No lawyer can read that provision without raising in his own mind the question whether the House has any power to expel, except for some cause relating to the context? The ablest lawyers from the beginning of the Republic have so insisted, and their reasoning has been so cogent that these propositions are established, namely:

"1. Neither House of Congress has ever expelled a member for acts unrelated to him as a member, or consistent with his public trust and duty as such.

"2. Both Houses have many times refused to expel where the guilt of the member was apparent; where the refusal to expel was put upon the ground that the House or Senate, as the case might be, had no right to expel for an act unrelated to the member as such, or because it was committed prior to his election."

The report concludes as follows:

"If there is any fact apparent in this case it is that the constituents of Mr. Roberts knew all about him before his election. Can there be room to doubt the proper action of the House? Is it prepared to yield up this salutary power of exclusion? Will it declare itself defenseless and ridiculous?

"Nor are those who assert that expulsion is the remedy necessarily barred from voting for the resolution declaring the seat vacant. He must, indeed, be technical and narrow in his construction of the Constitution who will not admit that if a vote to declare the seat vacant is sustained by a two-thirds majority the Constitution is substantially complied with. He may not agree with the committee that a mere majority can exclude, but he can reserve the right to make the point of order that the resolution is not carried if two-thirds do not vote for it.

"If the House takes the action which the minority of the committee insists it ought to take, it will for the first time in its history part with a most beneficent power which it has often exercised—a power that ought rarely to be exercised, but which the House has never declared it did not possess.

"Mindful of the gravity of the question and realizing the responsibility imposed upon us, we recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That under the facts and circumstances of this case, Brigham H. Roberts, Representative-elect from the State of Utah, ought not to have or hold a seat in the House of Representatives, and that the seat to which he was elected is hereby declared vacant.

"Robert W. Taylor, Charles B. Lamis, Page Morris, Romo H. Freer, Smith McPherson, Samuel W. T. Lanhan, Robert W. Miers."

THE MINORITY REPORT.

The minority report says in part:

"The undersigned members of the special committee appointed to investigate and report upon the prima facie and final right of Brigham H. Roberts to a seat in the House as the Representative from Utah, being unable to agree with the conclusions of the committee as to the Constitutional questions involved, very respectfully submit our views.

"Assuming that Mr. Roberts has been and is now a polygamist, unlawfully cohabiting with plural wives, and the House of Representatives is for that reason of the opinion that he ought not to be a member thereof, what course should it rightfully pursue under the Constitution, the supreme law of the land—exclude him or expel him? If he is to be excluded, it must be because he is for such reason legally ineligible or disqualified. The purpose is to consider the question of Constitutional right, not of power, as it is conceded that the House has the power to exclude with or without reason, right or wrong. The exercise of such a power, without Constitutional warrant, would simply be brute force, a tyrannous exercise of power, unreviewable by any tribunal."

After citing the Constitutional provision as to the qualifications of a Representative in Congress, the report proceeds:

"Is it seriously contended that this House can of its own motion, by its own independent action, create for the purpose of this case a legal disqualification? This House alone cannot make or unmake the law of the land. It is quite clear that the House, by its independent action, cannot, if it would, make for this case any disqualifying regulation that would have the force of law."

The report then exhaustively reviews the law and precedents bearing on the case. The main heads are as follows:

"First—It is a very grave question as to whether Congress can, by a law duly enacted, add to the qualifications negatively stated in the Constitution. There is no decision of the United States Supreme Court directly or indirectly construing this provision. There is no decision of any State court directly in point.

"Second—If the right to add a disqualification by law is assumed, the disqualification imposed by the Edmunds act does not apply to a member of Congress, and therefore does not affect Mr. Roberts.

"The only portion of the section that can be said to have any application to a member of the House of Representatives is that which declares that no polygamist, &c., shall 'be entitled to hold any office or place of public trust, honor, or emolument, * * * under the United States.' Unless a member of the House holds an office 'under the United States,' within the meaning of the Constitution and the law, there is no disqualification."

POWER OF THE HOUSE.

Continuing, the report says:

"This House, by its independent action, cannot make law for any purpose. The adding by this House, acting alone, of a qualification not established by law would not only be a violation of both the Constitution and the law, but it would establish a most dangerous precedent, which could hardly fail to 'return to plague the inventor.' You might feel that the grave moral and social aspects of this case allowed you to

Wrest once the law to your authority
To do a great right, a little wrong,

"But what warrant have you, when the barriers of the Constitution are once broken down, that there may not come after us a House with other standards of morality and propriety, which will create other qualifications with no rightful foundations, that, in the heat and unreason of partisan contest since there will be no definite standard by which to determine the existence of qualifications—will add anything that may be necessary to accomplish the desired result? Exigency will determine the sufficiency. It would no longer be a government of laws, but of men. To thus depart from the Constitution and substitute force for law, is to embark upon a trackless sea, without chart or compass, with almost a certainty of direful shipwreck."

The report concludes as follows:

"A small partisan majority might render the desire to arbitrarily exclude, by a majority vote, in order to more securely intrench itself in power irresistible. Hence its exercise is controlled by legal rules. In case of expulsion, when the requisite two-thirds can be had, the motive for the exercise of arbitrary power no longer exists, as a two-thirds partisan majority is sufficient for every purpose. Hence expulsion has been safely left in the discretion of the House, and the safety of the members does not need the protection of legal rules.

"It seems to us settled upon reason and authority that the power of the House to expel is unlimited, and that the legal propositions involved may be thus fairly summarized: The power of exclusion is a matter of law, to be exercised by a majority vote, in accordance with legal principles, and exists only where a member-elect lacks some of the qualifications required by the Constitution.

"The power of expulsion is made by the Constitution purely a matter of discretion, to be exercised by a two-thirds vote, fairly, intelligently, conscientiously, with a due regard to propriety, and the honor and integrity of the House and the rights of the individual members. For the abuse of this discretion we are responsible only to our constituents, our consciences, and our God.

"We believe that Mr. Roberts has the legal Constitutional right to be sworn in as a member, but the facts are such that we further believe the House, in the exercise of its discretion, is not only justified but required by every proper consideration involved to expel him promptly after he becomes a member.

"We recommend the following as a substitute for the resolution proposed by the committee:

"Resolved, That Brigham H. Roberts, having been duly elected a Representative in the Fifty-sixth Congress from the State of Utah, with the qualifications requisite for admission to the House as such, is entitled, as a Constitutional right, to take the oath of office prescribed for members-elect, his status as a polygamist, unlawfully cohabiting with plural wives, affording Constitutional grounds for expulsion, but not for exclusion, from the House.

"And if the House shall hold with us and swear in Mr. Roberts as a member, we shall, as soon as recognition can be had, offer a resolution to expel him as a polygamist, unlawfully cohabiting with plural wives.

"C. E. LITTLEFIELD.
"DAVID A. DE ARMOND."

BILL TO PUNISH LYNCHERS.

Congress to Make the Perpetrators Guilty of Treason.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Representative White of North Carolina, the colored Representative in the House, to-day introduced a bill "for the protection of all citizens of the United States against mob violence," &c.

It provides that all persons shall be protected from being murdered, tortured, or burned to death by mobs known as "lynching bees," whether spontaneous or premeditated, and all parties participating, aiding, or abetting in such affairs are made guilty of treason against the United States Government and subject to prosecution in the United States courts.

PUERTO RICO'S CLAIMS ARGUED.

Senate Committee Listens to Contending Interests.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Senate Committee on Puerto Rico and the Pacific Islands held a long session to-day and listened to arguments for and against free trade between Puerto Rico and the United States. The Puerto Rican Commission appointed by the Federal Party which recently arrived in this country was heard. These gentlemen were all for free trade with the United States, wanted a territorial form of government, desired United States currency as the standard, and wanted a loan authorized. Most of them favored an extended suffrage and believed that under the United States fair elections could be held.

Henry Oxnard of Nebraska argued against free trade because of the effect it would have upon the beet sugar interests. Mr. Hill of Louisiana, representing the cane sugar growers, took the same view.

Mr. Frye of Connecticut opposed free trade on account of the effect upon tobacco interests. Herbert Myrick made a general argument against free trade between the United States and Puerto Rico because of the effect it would have upon the agricultural interest of the United States. Major Ames, who was for a long time Sanitary Officer of the island, gave some information concerning health conditions there.

DR. WYMAN ON THE PLAGUE.

Surgeon General Writes of the History of the Disease.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—A pamphlet giving a complete history of the bubonic plague, together with means which have been adopted for its prevention, has been prepared and made public by Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine Hospital Service. It is shown that the plague, under various names, is a disease which has ravaged the several countries of Africa, Asia, and Europe almost from time immemorial. Pestilences supposed to have been the plague prevailed in Athens 462-429 B. C. One historian calculates that one-fourth the population of Europe, or 25,000,000 persons, died in all the epidemics in the fourteenth century.

An account is given of the origin and spread of the present epidemic of the plague, the first recorded instance of its occurrence in the Western Hemisphere being at Santos, Brazil, in October last. The opinion is expressed that in the light of experience in other parts of the world it seems reasonable to believe that, even were the disease introduced here, its spread would be very limited in cities where the sanitary conditions are good, and where precautions as to the isolation of patients and the segregation of those exposed to infection could and would be practiced.

The disease proceeds from place to place by leaps and bounds, often skipping large intermediate tracts, but usually following the beaten tracks of commerce. Dr. Wyman expresses the opinion that the quarantine methods of the United States are well adapted to meet emergencies, though the National laws should be strengthened. In speaking of the spread of the disease, Dr. Wyman says:

"It should not be forgotten that the epidemic is surely, though slowly, extending, and that for the first time in history it has invaded the Western Hemisphere. The necessity, therefore, of especial vigilance has been and is still being impressed upon quarantine officers by the bureau, and of equal importance is the provision which should be made by municipalities, especially those on the seaboard, to correct immediately unsanitary conditions, which are now so well known to favor the propagation of infectious disease."

The Plague in Honolulu.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The State Department has been informed by United States Agent Haywood, at Honolulu, that there have been five cases of bubonic plague since the last report, Jan. 9, and six deaths.

THE CENSUS OF INDUSTRIES.

Two Thousand Special Enumerators to be Employed for Thirty Days.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—An official statement has been issued by the Census Office with reference to the industrial census. It says:

"The Census act provides that the statistics of manufactures may be collected by enumerators or by special agents, at the discretion of the Directors. A careful estimate shows that all of the manufacturing establishments included in the localities to be withdrawn from the enumerators can be visited and returns from them secured within the brief space of thirty days, by the employment of 2,000 special agents, who will be paid by the day. The compensation which it is proposed to allow them is $4 per day, except in special cases, but it can in no instance exceed $6.

"In the collection of manufacturing statistics the Director proposes to utilize as far as possible the organization created for the general enumeration. The reasons for adopting the system here outlined are two, namely, economy in expenditures and the desire to meet the wish of Congress for a quick census."

Republican Contestant Favored.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The House Committee on Election No. 1 divided on party lines to-day and by a vote of 6 to 2 decided to recommend the seating of William F. Aldrich, Republican, who contests the seat now held by Gaston A. Robbins, (Democrat,) for the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama. The contest was based on alleged intimidation and racial prejudices growing out of appeals for white supremacy.

Would Make Mr. Olney a Regent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—In the House to-day the joint resolution for the appointment of ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney to the vacancy on the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution caused by the death of William Preston Johnston of Louisiana was adopted.

Would Buy Twenty Submarine Boats.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Mr. Cummings (Dem., N. Y.,) introduced a bill for the purchase of twenty torpedo boats of the Holland type, of which five are to be assigned for the protection of New York City.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

First Lieut. Thomas B. Lamoreaux, Second Artillery, when relieved from duty pertaining to the Quartermaster's Department at Baltimore, Md., will proceed to Governors Island, New York City, and report to the commanding General, Department of the East, for further orders.

Major Frank D. Baldwin, Fifth Infantry, now at Fort Slocum, New York, will report at the Headquarters of the Army for temporary duty.

Capt. Henry D. Borup, Ordnance Department, will make one visit in January, and two visits in each of the months of February and March, to Hilton Head, S. C., on official business pertaining to the mounting at that place of machinery, &c., for the dynamite gun in course of manufacture by the Pneumatic Torpedo and Construction Company for the Ordnance Department.

The following transfers are made in the Twelfth Infantry: First Lieut. William H. Oury, from Company F to Company D; First Lieut. John F. B. Mitchell, Jr., from Company D to Company F.

Capt. Charles H. Muir, Second Infantry, is assigned to Company F of that Regiment.

Capt. Beverly W. Dunn, Ordnance Department, will proceed from Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, to Fort Washington, Md., on official business pertaining to the manufacture of cartridge reloading machines for rapid-fire guns.

Capt. Orin B. Mitcham, Ordnance Department, will proceed from New York City to the works of the War Munition Company, near Bradford, Penn., on official business pertaining to the manufacture of smokeless powder.

Major James C. Merrill, Surgeon, is detailed as a member of the examining board convened at the Army Medical Museum Building, Washington, vice Col. Dallas Bache, Assistant Surgeon General, relieved.

Navy.

Lieut. Commander G. B. Harber is detached from the navy yard, New York, and ordered to temporary duty at the office of the Bureau of Naval Intelligence.

Lieut. J. E. Palmer is ordered to temporary engineer duty on the Pensacola, and then to the Asiatic Station for engineer duty only.

Lieut. H. M. Dombaugh is relieved from all duty at League Island Navy Yard, except that as Recorder of the Board of Labor Employment.

Movements of Transports.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—The transport and collier Scindia will sail to-day for Manila via Guam, with 8,000 tons of freight, including 5,000 tons of coal for Guam. The Scindia has 100 apprentice boys, all of whom were sent here from the East and who are to be distributed among the fleet at Manila. She carries a crew of 125 men.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Adjutant General has been informed that the transport Kilpatrick left Nuevitas this morning for Newport News with a squadron of the Eighth Cavalry, comprising five commissioned officers, one acting Assistant Surgeon, and eighty-two enlisted men, Major William Stanton commanding.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Detroit is due at Key West on the 22d inst., and probably will join the flagship New York on her cruise through the West Indies.

The Ranger left San Francisco for Panama to make an important survey. In addition to this, she has orders to drop into Magdalena Bay and deliver instructions to the Iowa, Marblehead, and Philadelphia, all of which are at that place at this time. These instructions are for the Philadelphia to come to San Francisco, and the Iowa and Marblehead to go to San Diego Harbor and there await orders from Washington.

Capt. Waring to be Retired.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The board of officers detailed to examine Capt. J. E. Waring has reported that officer as disqualified for military service, and he will be placed on the retired list. This action will relieve the block in promotions, many of which have been held up on account of the delay in action on the case of Capt. Waring.

Gen. T. M. Anderson Retired.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Brig. Gen. Thomas M. Anderson, commander of the Department of the Lakes, was relieved from active duty to-day, having reached the age limit, sixty-four years. Gen. Anderson has under consideration several offers to enter commercial business. He will remain in Chicago until April at least.

WILL CONSECRATE A BISHOP.

Mgr. Sbarretti to be Installed in Washington Feb. 4.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Papal Bull authorizing the consecration of the Right Rev. Mgr. Sbaretti, Bishop-elect of Havana, has been received at the Apostolic Delegation. The services will be celebrated with pontifical high mass at St. Aloysius Church Sunday morning, Feb. 4. Archbishop Martinelli will be the consecrator, assisted by Bishop Curtis, coadjutor to the Cardinal, and Bishop Monoghan of Wilmington.

This consecration will be the first ever performed in America by an Apostolic Delegate, and unusual and magnificent preparations are being made for the occasion. Mgr. Sbaretti expects to go to Havana the latter part of February.

GEN. WOOD ON INSPECTION TRIP.

Leaves Havana with a Party To-day to be Gone Two Weeks.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—Governor General Wood, accompanied by Gens. Lee and Chaffee, Col. Black, Gen. Rivera, and a number of others, including several ladies, will leave for Cienfuegos by rail at daylight Monday. Half a day will be spent at Cienfuegos investigating the condition of affairs there. The party will then proceed on the transport Ingalls for Lastunas, (the port of Sancti Spiritus,) going thence to Trinidad and Manzanillo. From the latter place Gen. Wood will ride to Santiago, visiting Boyamo and San Luis en route.

At Santiago the Governor General will meet the Ingalls, and will proceed for Guantanamo, Sagua, Baracoa, Gibara, Nuevitas, Caibarien, Matanzas, and Havana. The time occupied by the trip will probably be two weeks. Gen. Ludlow originally intended to go with Gen. Wood, but has decided that he is not able to spare the time.

CUSTOMS OFFICER DIES IN CUBA.

Jesse W. Smith Succumbs to a Wound and an Operation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn of the War Department received to-day from Col. T. H. Bliss of the Commissary Department, in charge of the customs service in Cuba, a report on the case of Collector Jesse W. Smith, at Gibara, who was shot on the 9th inst. by a Cuban named Cannidaty, editor of Las Clarides, a Gibara newspaper, and who died last night.

Col. Bliss says that on the 10th inst. he received a telegram from Collector Smith, giving an account of his trouble with the Cuban editor in the following words:

"Was shot in left thigh yesterday afternoon by editor of local paper in an encounter resulting from personal insults and lies published by him in regard to the management of Custom House. I was unarmed at the time, and disarmed him after being shot. Was operated on, and doctor thinks I will be able to return to my duties in about three weeks; meanwhile the interpreter is managing the affairs of the Custom House."

In his telegram to the War Department announcing the death of Smith Col. Bliss said that Smith's leg was amputated Jan. 18, and he died the following evening. Col. Bliss asked if he should send the remains to the United States. Mr. Meiklejohn replied to him, saying that the remains of a civilian could not be brought to this country at public expense.

Smith served in the Spanish war as Second Lieutenant of the Second United States Volunteer Infantry, was mustered out June 22, 1899, and resided at New Orleans.

Revenues Received in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The War Department gave out the statement to-day that the total receipts for the entire Island of Cuba for the month of December were $1,733,221. The receipts for the year by items were: Customs, $14,072,114; internal revenue, $757,285; postal receipts from July 1, 1899, to Dec. 31, 1899, $94,514; miscellaneous receipts from July 1, 1899, to Dec. 31, 1899, $293,584; total receipts, $15,217,407.42.

Cubans Expect to Vote.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—Civil Governor Nunez says the Cubans who have become American citizens expect to be allowed to vote at the coming election. He estimates their number at about 25,000, and says they took out naturalization papers in order to protect themselves against Spain.

Spanish Flag Flies in Havana.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—Gen. Maximo Gomez visited the Spanish Club at Remedios today and asked the members to hoist the Spanish flag over the club, which was immediately done.

Recreation Rooms at Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 20.—At a meeting of a number of university students last night an association was organized for the purpose of formulating a plan for ameliorating the condition of men and boys in town. The plan is to establish a reading room, a gymnasium, and other recreation rooms for Princeton men and boys not connected with the university. One thousand dollars has already been subscribed for the purpose, and a three-story building which has been leased for the association's headquarters will be opened in February.

Old Pennsylvania Employe Killed.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—David Murdock, assistant yardmaster of the Maryland Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Gray's Ferry, in the southwestern section of this city, was instantly killed to-day by a freight train near Lamokin, below Chester. Murdock lived at the latter place. He was about sixty years old, and had been in the employ of the company for forty years. A widow and three daughters survive him.

Aged Woman Burned to Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—Margaret Hearld, aged eighty years, was burned to death early to-day. She accidentally overturned an oil stove in her room and the flames filled the apartment. The aged woman occupied an attic. The family living in the lower portion of the house escaped in safety.

Clearance Sales.

All Cars Transfer to Bloomingdales 3RD AVE 59 & 60TH STS

Clearance Sales.

Furs from Our Clearance Sale.

The Fur Collarettes.

This is a special opportunity to secure a fine fur garment, in many instances at very much less than the cost of labor and material. They are all this season's latest styles, beautifully lined and well finished throughout.

Fur collarettes with long tabs and tails, also round collarettes with large storm collars and combination yokes: Just the sort of a garment for January, February and March weather.

Lot 1—Consisting of Electric and Electric and Chinchilla Combination, Black Marten, Gray Fox and Nearseal, Nearseal and Astrachan Nearseal and Krimmer, Nearseal and Black Marten, Genuine Seal and Persian, Nearseal and Persian, Krimmer and Mouffion, Nearseal and Mouffion. There are garments in this lot that sell as high as $15.00; we offer a choice at 7.65

Lot 2—Embracing Beautiful Combination Collarettes of Nearseal and Krimmer, Nearseal and Black Marten, Natural Lynx and Nearseal, Sable Fox and Nearseal, Genuine Krimmer, Nearseal and Persian Lamb, Mouffion and Krimmer, Nearseal and Mouffion, Alaska Sable, etc. Many garments in this lot worth $25.00; choice of the entire lot at 11.95

Lot 3—Embracing Mink and Nearseal Combination, Nearseal and Persian Combination, Blue Lynx and Nearseal Combination, Genuine Alaska Sable, Nearseal and Red Fox, Combination Alaska Sable and Persian Alaska Sable and Nearseal Combination, Genuine Beaver, Persian Lamb, Mink and Persian Combination, Mink and Seal Combination, Sable Fox and Nearseal. Many garments among this lot worth as high as $35.00; choice of the entire lot, 14.75

Lot 4—Including some beautiful models of rich and stylish garments, some of the finest manufactured this season, embracing Sable Fox and Persian Genuine Beaver, Persian Lamb Mink and Persian Lamb Mink and Seal Alaska Sable and Nearseal Alaska Sable and Persian Genuine Chinchilla, Nearseal and Stone Marten, Sable Fox and Nearseal. There are garments in this lot worth from $40.00 to $45.00; choice of the entire lot, 19.75

Lot 5—Finest model manufactured this season, embracing Alaska Sable and Persian, Sable Fox and Persian, Blue Fox and Seal, China Fox, Alaska Sable and Nearseal, Blue Fox and Persian, Silver Fox and Seal, Alaska Sable and Persian Alaska Seal and Mink, Genuine Mink, Sable Fox and Persian Lamb. There are garments among this lot that are worth from $50 to $60; choice until sold, 23.75

Second Floor, 59th St. Section.

Dress Trimmings, etc., 25% and 50% Discounts.

Spangled Fronts, Yokes, Bodices, etc.

Parisian bodices, fronts, also yokes, about 28 pieces altogether; some of the finest manufactured in Paris this season. Lace applique, turquoise, black and silver, black and steel and spangled effects in white and black; regular prices from $4.95 to $23.00, now offered at ½ price.

Black Spangled Birds and Butterflies, regular price from 15c. to 29c., until sold at half price.

Rich jewel and spangled effects, also satin and Renaissance, also chiffon, passementerie Collars, Shoulder Belts or Corsage Ornaments, beautiful combination effects of the most delicate shadings, regular price from $1.98 to $8.50, all to be closed out until sold at half price.

French Taffeta Silk Aiglovers.

Corded, embroidered, cut out and with lace effects, exclusive styles from $3.65 to $7.50 per yard, to be closed out at half price.

Also a discount of 25 per cent. from our entire stock of Dress Trimmings.

Main Floor.

The Black Dress Goods.

7,000 yards Black Fancy Armure; a very neat, serviceable, fabric; well worth 39c.; on Monday, your choice from 20 different designs, at only 19

45-inch all-wool silk finish Henrietta; a very handsome, lustrous finish; fast black and serviceable; a quality that cannot be duplicated elsewhere for less than 98c.; on Monday this ever-popular grade sells at 75

50-inch all-wool Black Cheviot—A fortunate purchase of 5,000 yards of this most desirable fabric enables us to quote a price that will insure rapid sale; only the best hard-twisted pure Australian wool has been used in the manufacture; this is very popular for tailor-made suits, separate skirts, etc., and will be found most reliable in every way; on Monday, on special counter, at 75

Main Floor, front, centre.

Specials in Black Silks.

2,000 yards Black Taffeta Silk, very strong and bright quality, would cost much more to make to-day; per yard, ... 42

1,500 yards Taffeta Silk, good grade; suitable for waists or petticoats; much under price; per yard, ... 52

1,200 yards Black Peau de Soie All Pure Silk, guaranteed to wear; this silk is very much in demand just now; worth regularly $1.00 yd. and more; at 89

1,000 yards Black Peau de Soie, a very fine, rich grade of pure silk; guaranteed in every particular . . 1.25

Main Floor, front, centre.

AMERICANS FALL IN AMBUSH.

Filipinos Surprise Soldiers of the Thirtieth—Insurgents Beaten in the Batangas Mountains.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The first untoward happening in the highly successful campaign now going on in Luzon is announced from Gen. Otis in the following dispatch:

"Manila, Jan. 20, 1900.

"Pack train twenty ponies transporting rations between Santo Tomas and San Pablo, Laguna Province, escorted by fifty men under Lieut. Ralston, Thirtieth Infantry, ambushed yesterday; two men killed, five wounded, nine missing; pack train lost; Lieutenant and thirty-four men returned to Santo Tomas with killed and wounded; affair being investigated.

"Doret, Forty-fifth Infantry, struck insurgents in Batangas Mountains, prepared in ambush to meet him; he killed eight, wounded three, captured seventeen, one Spaniard, six rifles. His casualties, two men slight wounded."

PROGRESS IN ZAMBOANGA.

Population Indulges in Pursuits of Peace—American Women Excite Curiosity of Natives.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

ZAMBOANGA, Mindanao, P. I., Dec. 10.—The arrival of Gen. John C. Bates aboard the Yorktown early in the past week was the sign that we had taken this place for keeps, and that Commander Very's hard vigil was receiving its proper recognition. Gen. Bates had some months ago been in charge of this district, where he had been remarkably successful in his dealings with the natives. Recently troubles having shown themselves above the horizon, he was again ordered here, with greatly enlarged territory and additional powers. His headquarters, although ultimately to have been at this place, could not be situated here when he first came, as Commander Very's plans were not quite matured, and our amigos were too few in number to assert themselves. Now, however, it has all been changed, and we are in full possession.

Among the first things the General did was to issue a general order designating Zamboanga as headquarters. Capt. Smiley is Acting Assistant Adjutant General, and Lieuts. Reeve and Cowan are members of the personal staff.

The Yorktown brought Commander Charles S. Sperry, the senior naval officer in these waters, thereby relieving Commander Very and the Castine, and giving them a chance to go north to Manila, and perhaps to Hongkong, a privilege they have sought these many weeks, but, owing to the important work on which the vessel was engaged, a change was not possible at an earlier date.

It was a surprise to the newcomers to find how much matters had quieted down, and in what good order the town was kept by Capt. W. A. Nichols and his officers and men of the Twenty-third Infantry. Steamers were in the roadstead, the wharf was piled high with bags of copra, and the huts about the market place were again becoming numerous, while the variety of their stores was tempting to eye and palate.

Another surprise was experienced on the 6th inst., when the City of Peking arrived with 1,000 men of the Thirty-first Regiment of Volunteers, to be followed a few days later by the remainder of the regiment, with a number of horses and stores on board the Brutus. This rather put out of joint the noses of the Twenty-third boys, who had hoped to be stationary at this post, but now they were forced to once again pack their kits and return to Jolo.

Among other delightful features of the coming of the City of Peking was the presence of several ladies who had come out in the vessel. The following day, when these ladies went on shore, they were followed everywhere by crowds of men, women, and children, all anxious and curious to see this first importation of America's fair ones. The natives themselves, decked out in all their picturesque arrangement of cloths and gaudy colors, were also of great interest to the visitors.

The coming of the additional troops permitted a detachment being detailed to occupy Port Isabella, which, Zamboanga having fallen, comes naturally to us as part of Commander Very's conquest. Company D of the Thirty-first was told off for this purpose, fifty men under command of Capt. Cabell being selected, the remainder of the company being left behind. Lieut. Reeve also accompanied the expedition as the representative of Brig. Gen. John C. Bates. The whole command was embarked on board the Manila, which vessel being always ready for any duty, finds her reward in being frequently selected for various expeditions about the different parts of the station.

When the arrangements for the landing were perfected the battalion formed in the principal street of the town of Port Isabella and marched with bugles sounding, drums beating, and colors flying to the Naval Arsenal, which was selected as the best temporary locality for housing the troops. Here, with a few remarks to the surrounding chiefs and people from the neighboring towns and villages, the colors were run up and the place was taken in the name of the United States. The Manila was appropriately and gayly decked out with bunting and her guns fired a National salute to the flag.

All of the equipments belonging to the Thirty-first are now ashore here, and the regiment is living in the tents. To-morrow the City of Peking leaves for Manila, and the usual routine of the garrison will be carried on. In the near future the regiment will pass through quite a number of subdivisions, as it is proposed to occupy all of the principal towns formerly held by the Spaniards, beginning at once with an expedition leaving this evening for Cotta Battu, where two companies, if not a complete battalion, will be stationed.

LENIENCY FOR DESERTERS.

Conditions Due to War in the Philippines Relieve Former Offenders from Punishment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—An unlooked-for result of the Philippine war is the mild treatment accorded to deserters whose offenses were committed before the war. Desertion is a crime which is treated with leniency by the War Department just now, and it is quite common for a self-confessed deserter to be captured and to go without punishment, and even without trial. One of the principal reasons for this is the short-handedness of the War Department, owing to the number of men who have been sent out of the country to fight the Filipinos.

When soldiers desert, they frequently return to the service, enlisting under a false name. The attraction of military life proves too much for them, particularly in the case of soldiers who deserted before the Spanish war, and who are now yearning for a chance to see real

JOHN RUSKIN PASSES AWAY

Author Dies of Influenza at the Age of Eighty Years.

HIS CAREER IN LITERATURE

A Life, at First Dedicated to Art, Devoted to Expounding It—His Marriage and Divorce.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—John Ruskin died this afternoon of influenza.

The announcement that Ruskin is dead may not create so great an excitement today as it would have twenty-five or thirty years ago, but it still possesses the power to give so much of a shock as naturally occurs on the death of a very distinguished man. Whatever may have been Mr. Ruskin's shortcomings, and however much calmer minds may object to things which he has done and words which he has written, there cannot be denied to him the title of genius. He may have been a defective genius, but a genius he was.

He is dead at the advanced age of fourscore, and since his twenty-fifth year his life had been one long series of exertions in the lines of thought which he considered himself elected by Divine Providence to pursue. Books, pamphlets, brochures, letters to the press, poems, and lectures attested his unceasing activity of mind, while continual excursions into Italy, France, Switzerland, and various parts of Great Britain bore witness to an equal energy of body. His books have penetrated to every part of the English-speaking globe, and his ideas have had an influence on most artists, whether they belonged or did not belong to the peculiar school called "Pre-Raphaelite." On the art-loving public as distinguished from professors of the fine arts in the different branches, his influence has been perhaps even greater than upon artists. The influence may have been intangible, owing to the peculiarities of the man, but it has, nevertheless, been real.

INFLUENCES OF CHILDHOOD.

Mr. Ruskin was always eager to let his fellows know just what he thought and did; it is part of his charm that he takes the reader into his confidence with a frankness almost rustic, and in his later years he completed the abundant material scattered through his other works by a number of chapters of autobiography issued after his usual unusual fashion. We learn, for example, what he did, thought, and read from his fourth to his seventh year, when he wrote his first book, a series in four volumes, of which only one and a quarter were completed with home-made materials and amateur binding. This little book was illustrated by the author. At seven he began to study Latin, and one of his playthings was a two-arched bridge, of which the stones were movable. "I was never weary of building, unbuilding, for was too heavy to be thrown down, but had always to be taken down,) and rebuilding it. This inconceivably passive—or, rather, impassive—contentment in doing or reading the same thing over and over again I perceive to have been a great condition in my power of getting thoroughly to the bottom of matters." Other passages from the chapters of this autobiography are instructive. Ruskin's fondness for Scott and Ruskin's Toryism are well known to all readers of his writings. The very first lines in his autobiography refer to these things. He says:

> I am, and my father was before me, a violent Tory of the old school. (Walter Scott's school, that is to say, and Homer's.) I name these two out of the numberless great Tory writers because they were my own two masters. I had Walter Scott's novels, and the "Iliad" Pope's translation for my only reading when I was a child on weekdays; on Sundays their effect was tempered by "Robinson Crusoe" and "Pilgrim's Progress," my mother having it deeply in her heart to make an evangelical clergyman of me. * * * Walter Scott and Pope's "Homer" were reading of my own election, but my mother forced me by steady, daily toil to learn long chapters of the Bible by heart, as well as to read it, every syllable through, aloud, hard names and all, from Genesis to the Apocalypse, about once a year, and to that discipline—patient, accurate, and resolute—I owe, not only a knowledge of the Book which I find occasionally serviceable, but much of my general power of taking pains and the best part of my taste in literature. * * * From my own chosen masters there, Scott and Homer I learned the Tyrtæan which my best afterthought has only served to confirm. That is to say, a most sincere love of Kings, and dislike of everybody who attempted to disobey them. Only, both by Homer and Scott, I was taught strange ideas about Kings, which I find for the present incredible, yet I perceived that both the author of the "Iliad" and the author of "Waverley" made their Kings or their King-loving persons do harder work than anybody else. * * * To my further great benefit, as I grew older, I thus (by travel with his father in a postchaise) saw from all the noblemen's houses in England; in reverent and healthy delight of uncovetous admiration—perceiving, as soon as I could perceive any political truth at all, that it was probably much happier to live in a small house and have Warwick Castle to be astonished at than to live in Warwick Castle and have nothing to be astonished at; but that, at all events, it would not make Brunswick Square in the least more pleasantly habitable to pull Warwick Castle down. And, at this day, though I have had invitations enough to visit America, I could not; even for a couple of months, live in a country so miserable as to possess no castles.

RECORD OF HIS LIFE WORK.

In order to place the life of Mr. Ruskin before the reader in a compact form, let us look at a list of his books, arranged according to the years of their appearance. For Mr. Ruskin's life was in his books. He had no other which the public is ever likely to hear about. There are rumors of a disappointment in love in his case, as in the case of so many other men of brilliant talents. But his long train of years will have to be chronicled for the most part by the dates on the title pages of volumes and pamphlets. Here, then, is a sufficiently accurate summary of his important publications and the few other events which constitute his life:

1819—Born Feb. 8, at London, of a rich merchant family of Scotch origin.
1834-9—Poems in "Friendship's Offering." Contributions to architectural and popular science magazines.
1839—Newdigate prize for poetry at Oxford; studied art with Copley Fielding and J. H. Hardinge.
1842—Pamphlet eulogizing Turner and the English landscapists. Took degree of A. M.
1843—Enlarged above to first volume of "Modern Painters."
1844—Went to Italy. Poems in "Keepsake" and "Friendship's Offering."
1846—Second volume of "Modern Painters." Third edition.
1847—Became a contributor to The Quarterly Review.
1849—"Seven Lamps of Architecture."
1850—"Poems by J. R.," in octavo.
1851—"The King of the Golden River; or, The Black Brothers. A Legend of Styria." Illustrated.
1851—"Stones of Venice." Letters to The London Times eulogizing the "Pre-Raphaelite" band of young English painters. "Notes on the Construction of Sheepfolds."
1853-4—Edinburgh Lectures on "Gothic Architecture." On "Painting."
1854—"Opening of the Crystal Palace."
1855—"Giotto and His Works in Padua."
1856—Text to Turner's "Harbors of England." Third and fourth volumes of "Modern Painters."
1857—"Notes on the Turner Gallery." "The Elements of Drawing." In three letters.
1858—"Cambridge School of Art." "Lectures on Art." "The Political Economy of Art."
1859—"Lectures on Art, Decorations and Manufactures," "Two Paths."
1860—Fifth volume of "Modern Painters," with illustrations by the author.
1862—"Unto this Last," four essays on political economy. "Ethics of the Dust"; ten lectures. "Sesame and Lilies."
1863—"Essays on Political Economy."
1865—"Study of Architecture in Our Schools."
1866—"Crown of Wild Olive"; three lectures. "Cestus of Aglaia." in Art Journal. "Lectures on Civilization."
1867—Appointed Rede Lecturer at Cambridge. Made LL. D., Cantab. "Time and Tide."
1868—Slade Professor of the Fine Arts at Oxford.
1869—"Queen of the Air. A Study of Greek Myths of Cloud and Storm."
1871—Offered Oxford £5,000 to pay for a drawing master.
1872—"Aratra Pentelici," six lectures on the elements of sculpture. Started a workingman's paper called Fors Clavigera. Began "Deucalion: Lapse of Waves and Life of Stones." Began "Mornings in Florence." Began "Proserpina, Studies of Wayside Flowers." Began "St. Mark's Rest; The History of Venice."
1873—"Love's Meinie," lectures on birds.
1874—"Val d'Arno," ten lectures on the Tuscan art.
1876—Re-elected to the Slade Professorship.
1877—"The Laws of Fesole."
1878—"The Three Colors of Pre-Raphaelitism."
1878—Retired from the Slade Professorship on account of a severe illness.
1880—"The Lord's Prayer and the Church; Letters to Clergy with Replies."
1881—"Our Fathers Have Told Us." (Sketches of the History of Christendom for Boys and Girls who have been held at its Fonts.)
1882—General Statement explaining the Nature and Purposes of St. George's Guild.
1883—Again re-elected to the Slade Professorship. "The Art of England," being the course of Lectures delivered at Oxford during the Spring and Autumn of 1883.
1884—"The Ruskin Birthday Book." "Caeli Enarrant," being studies of cloud form and of its visible causes.
1885—"On the Old Road," being more miscellaneous essays. Resigned the Slade Professorship for the second time. Permanent residence at Brantwood.
1886—"Notes on the Principal Pictures of Sir J. E. Millais, exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery."
1887—"Hortus Inclusus: Messages from the Wood to the Garden, sent in Happy Days to the Ladies of the Thwaite, Coniston, by their Thankful Friend, John Ruskin." "Dilecta; consisting of Correspondence, Diary, Notes, and Extracts from Books."
1888—"Praeterita: Outlines of Scenes and Thoughts perhaps Worthy of Memory in my Past Life; an Autobiography."

ASPIRED TO BE A PAINTER.

This does not pretend to be an exhaustive list, but it gives an adequate idea of the profusion of his thought, the versatility of his mind. In looking over the record, note toward the beginning three things: He was of Scotch ancestry, and, therefore, dogmatic by rightful national inheritance; he was wealthy, and, moreover, an only son; at Oxford, where he was entered at Christchurch, he took the prize for poetry. Gifted with a poetical mind and of a dogmatic temperament, he found himself practically free to pursue whatever path seemed best. His choice was soon made. It was to become a great painter, and to that end he began to study with Copley Fielding and J. H. Harding. There is the well-worn sneer common among artists that an art critic is a man who has failed in every branch of art which he has attempted. Ruskin is no exception to the rule, for his art work cannot bear comparison with his writing. It was a realization of that fact, or perhaps only an unconscious result of the impatience of his nature, which made him drop his brushes and take up the pen in defense of English artists.

His pamphlet on Turner, enlarged to a book, contended that English art was not only equal, but in many ways superior, to the work of the ancients. The bitter and contemptuous dissent which this first volume elicited—"Modern Painters: Their Superiority in the Art of Landscape Painting to All the Ancient Masters," by an Oxford graduate—sent young Ruskin off to Italy on what Goethe would have called his "wander jahrs." But it was in keeping with his impatient and dogmatic spirit that he wrote from the standpoint of a "master" before serving his wandering apprenticeship.

Notice next that after traveling in Italy and broadening himself by a number of years full of work, he wrote "Seven Lamps of Architecture" and "Stones of Venice," both consecrated to a deification of Gothic architecture and a depreciation of all other kinds. In 1853 he lectured on the same subject in Edinburgh. Two years before he had raised a great stir about certain young painters who proposed to go back to the days of artistic innocence before Raphael and Michael Angelo, and to paint things just as they are, detail by detail, with all the minutest accessories given their full value in the picture. His championship of these young "pre-Raphaelites" went hand in hand with a cultus of the Gothic in architecture. For just as the old Gothic architects loaded facades with niches, statues, pilasters, gargoyles, and fantastic traceries, imitating birds, beasts, trees, and grasses very closely in stone, so the pre-Raphaelites sought for a strong representation of every leaf, every hair, every grain of sand in a picture.

Ruskin was himself a Goth, using that term not in its bad sense, as a synonym with Vandal, but in the good, as a man mentally akin to that fresh mixture of races which produced the Gothic cathedrals. He had the vigor and combativeness, the contempt for the restrained and subdued in classic art which is seen in the builders of those great churches. He also had their capacity for great thoughts and religious impressions, and, more than anything else, he had their discursiveness. Following the train of Ruskin's thought through page after page, chapter after chapter, of elaborated, overdecorated, involved prose of that kind which comes almost to the limit of poetry, one is forcibly reminded of a Gothic cathedral, where the maze of buttresses, flying arches, and pinnacles, not to speak of the myriad digressions in the way of statues and ornaments, confuse and perplex the eye. This confusion and perplexity are not always unpleasant; they are positively delightful to many people and painful only to a few.

BEAUTY OF HIS STYLE.

But it would not be fair to omit making reference, though perhaps unneeded, to the actual beauty of John Ruskin's style, his matchless handling of the English language. No contemporary rivaled him in rhetoric. It often attains the elevation and creates in the reader the intellectual stir which the best German music produces. It does not convince, but it excites. It does not give actual arguments, just as that music does not give actual melody. But it gives endless suggestion, just as that music is full of recurring suggestiveness of melody. His marriage is the chapter in Ruskin's life which has formed the theme for much romance as well as unkind conjecture. When Ruskin was scarcely more than a youth he met one evening at a dance in London a most beautiful girl. The hostess is said to have pointed her out to him and said that she would make the most delightful art critic an adorable wife. Ruskin married the girl and gave her a magnificent home. Here she was introduced to her husband's friend, the then rising young painter, John Everett Millais. Ruskin asked him to paint his wife's portrait. While painting the artist fell in love with his model. Ruskin, it is said, viewed the unfolding of this romance with a remarkable power of self-restraint and gentleness. He neither accused nor blamed her. He permitted her to obtain a divorce, and then one morning walked into church and saw his late wife bound in wedlock to the painter, who in after years was to be known as Sir John Millais, the leading artist in England and the President of the Royal Academy.

From his retirement from Oxford in 1886 until ten years later the eccentricities of Ruskin, told throughout the world with every exaggeration, inclined the public to the belief that the great art critic was incurably insane. There were doubtless periods of hallucination, but to the friends who surrounded him at his estate in Brantwood he appeared naught but a gentle old man, who, having lived a full round life, was gradually slipping into the grave with mind and physique at strange variance.

There was great surprise when in May, 1893, it was announced that Mr. Gladstone had nominated Ruskin to succeed Alfred Lord Tennyson as Poet Laureate of England. As a writer of verse Ruskin had never had any recognized standing, as was then demonstrated by the volumes of his rhymes at that time most opportunely published under the editorship of William G. Collingwood, his neighbor and ardent admirer. It was not long before formal denial came of the Poet Laureate story.

LAST YEARS AT BRANTWOOD.

In 1896 report came from Brantwood that the clouds, which for a decade had obscured the mind of the great patron and critic of art, had rolled away. At last he seemed to be peacefully awaiting the end. But he lived nearly four years more. Much has been written in the magazines concerning these last days at Brantwood. On fine days Ruskin walked about his grounds or was wheeled around in his bath chair. Kind friends and faithful servants administered to his wants. Many tourists and pilgrims visited him, some merely to lift their hats to him, and then to go away. He dined alone at 8 o'clock in his own room, and sought his couch an hour later. Since last Summer he had been confined to his chamber, where, amid the keepsakes from friends and his own pictures and books, which it had been his life's loving toil to expound, he finally passed away.

Of Mr. Ruskin it may be said that his life obeyed the old saw, "Practice what you preach." In an age which is called sordid he actually did expend a large fortune in trying to ameliorate the condition his fellow-men aesthetically, morally, and mentally. His high planes of thought were not merely ligments of the brain; he lived to live up to them. Even the house in which he was born was sold to pay the cost of enterprises artistically philanthropic, and all of it that remained to Mr. Ruskin was the little nursery at the top of the house where he had passed his early days. This was always kept in the same state. Even the bars placed at the window to keep the small child from climbing out are said to be still in position.

Unhappily, Mr. Ruskin considered himself, among other things, a capital business man, and became involved in disputes with some of his best friends in regard to certain mutual charitable foundations. Mr. Ruskin defended his side with more vigor than consideration for his friends, and allowed the public to become partners in the squabble. This may be set down to weakness arising from increasing ill health and the worry attendant on undertaking too much work. His last years show a feverish haste to begin new books. Some of them are makeshifts to take the place of elaborate treatises and histories which his too fertile brain laid out years before and never succeeded in writing. It may have been one of those mysterious intimations of approaching death which caused him to begin so many fresh publications.

He is gone, and the world is the less for an idealist of a picturesque and suggestive type. The nineteenth century of railways and telegraphs which he so heartily detested, owes him a great deal; out of his bushels of straw much wheat can be thrashed, and it would be a graceful thing if the practical moderns, for whose civilization he expressed such a fine rhetorical contempt, should acknowledge the purity and disinterestedness of his life by a tablet in Westminster Abbey.

MUSIC HEARD YESTERDAY.

Mr. Paderewski's Last Piano Recital at Carnegie Hall in the Afternoon —Two Opera Performances.

At Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon Mr. Paderewski gave the last of his series of four piano recitals. The aspect of the auditorium and the demeanor of the audience were those which are now familiar to the attendants at these entertainments. The house was packed. Every seat was taken, and the standing room was so crowded that several women fainted. Mr. Paderewski might in time equal the regular weekly list at the Opera House matinées. The same rapt attention was noticed as has been in evidence at the previous recitals. And it would be strange if it were otherwise. Only those who are jealous, or those who dislike exhibitions of public enthusiasm, or those who are soured, can fail to be touched, at least at times, by the most poetic piano playing of our day.

The programme which the artist offered yesterday was one of uncommon attractiveness. It consisted of the Bach chromatic fantasia and fugue, Beethoven's sonata, Opus 111; Schumann's F sharp minor sonata, Chopin's ballade in F major, prelude, Opus. 28, No. 17; two études, the B flat minor mazurka, "Berceuse" and valse, Opus 34. No. 1, and Liszt's second étude de concert, and twelfth Hungarian rhapsody. It will be readily seen by those acquainted with piano music that this was a programme of exceptional interest. Mr. Paderewski's reading of the great Beethoven sonata is one of his noblest interpretations, and it was happily paired yesterday with his performance of the Schumann sonata, which might be heard oftener. Again, Mr. Paderewski showed himself to be the prince of Chopin interpreters. His marvelous singing tone, his wonderful command of gradation, and his profound feeling for the musical nature of every phrase were never exhibited to better advantage than they were in the Chopin list of yesterday afternoon.

The Liszt étude afforded the pianist an opportunity to achieve some wonderful effects by the employment of his unequaled smoothness of scale playing and his infinite resources in independence of fingers. He made of the little piece a bewitching color scheme and aroused the audience to great enthusiasm. At the close of the concert there was the customary procession to the front, and the unfailing demand for more. It was only when the piano was taken away that the audience consented to go home. The size of the audience and the nature of the appreciation of the recital indicated that it would not be very hazardous for Mr. Paderewski to stay on the Atlantic Coast instead of going West, as he intends to do. He might play here once a week for some time to come.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

"Lohengrin," "Pagliacci," and "Cavalleria Rusticana" Heard.

The audience at the Metropolitan Opera House matinée yesterday was one of the largest of the season. In fact, there might be food for thought in the fact that the amount of the receipts of the two musical performances of the afternoon, Paderewski's and the opera, were somewhere between $16,000 and $17,000. The opera was "Lohengrin," and for its performance Mr. Grau had arranged a new distribution of the parts. Mme. Nordica and Mme. Schumann-Heink were again respectively Elsa and Ortrud, and Mr. Muhlmann was once more the Herald. But the Lohengrin was M. van Dyck, the Telramund Mr. Bertram, and the King M. Edouard de Reszke. This gave a new aspect to affairs.

It cannot be said that the general effect of the performance was all that could be desired. Mme. Nordica once more demonstrated the fullness of her equipment for the Wagnerian music drama, and treated the audience to an Elsa of dramatic meaning and vocal beauty. But the Lohengrin of M. van Dyck will never be a convincing interpretation. He does not sing the music with lyric beauty or charm, and his acting of the part, especially in the first act, is without conviction. His Lohengrin is entirely too much a man of the world. One might suppose he had just arrived from Vienna by steamer instead of coming from sacred Monsalvat by swan boat.

Mr. Bertram was only a conventional Telramund. To be sure, it is a conventional part, but singing actors of skill manage to individualize it. Mme. Schumann-Heink was once more a vigorous Ortrud, and M. Edouard de Reszke sang the music of the King in the labored manner which has characterized his work all this season. M. de Reszke is still suffering from a cold in the lower part of his chest, and it is remarkable that he sings at all. To say that he sang laboriously is not censure, but a simple statement of a fact. The chorus sang fearfully and wonderfully out of tune in the first act, but the orchestra under the capable direction of Mr. Paur was as good as heretofore.

In the evening "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" were performed. In the former Mlle. de Lussan was the Nedda, Signor Scotti the Tonio, and M. Seligmac the Canio. The performance was notable for its general spirit, and especial mention is to be made of the work of M. Seligmac and Signor Scotti. The former sang in an impassioned style, while the latter gave one of the most admirable operatic impersonations ever seen on the Metropolitan stage. Vocally and histrionically it was worthy of the highest praise. In Mascagni's opera Mme. Calvé was the Santuzza, Mr. Dippel the Turiddu, M. Dufriche the Alfio, Mlle. Bauermeister the Lucia, and Miss Broadfoot the Lola. Mme. Calvé's reception was most enthusiastic, and after the first act she received what is sometimes called "an ovation." To her presence in the cast was undoubtedly due the immense audience. There was never before so large an audience at a Saturday night performance, and it was said at the box office that the number of persons in the audience was the largest in the history of the house. This is, after all, a pretty sound public, and it recognizes genuine dramatic art on the lyric stage.

MISS GARRETSON TO APPEAR.

Cast for Edna May's Part in "The Belle of New York."

George W. Lederer has engaged Miss Helen Bloodgood Garretson to appear in his production of "The Belle of New York" when the company is sent back to London and Paris next Summer. Miss Garretson will sing the rôle of the Salvation Army Lassie, in which Miss Edna May became prominent. It is probable that she will be seen in the part for the first time this week at the Casino.

Miss Garretson's engagement to Charles Van Valkenberg Gunther last Summer, and which was broken owing to her desire to go on the stage created considerable talk in the upper social circles of this city. She is a daughter of the late Dr. Eugene Garretson and a ward of A. F. Houghton of the firm of Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

Miss Garretson was graduated in 1897 from Miss Walker's school, and again in the following year from Mlle. Veltin's school. She made her début in society in the Fall of 1898. She is a young woman of considerable accomplishments, among which are a well-cultivated soprano voice and talented elocutionary powers. She is said to be a very pretty blonde, with brown eyes, and a figure similar to that of Miss May's.

Victory Bateman to Become a Bride.

Miss Victory Bateman has announced her intended marriage to Henry Mestayer, the son of Charles Mestayer of the well-known theatrical family of that name. Mr. Mestayer and Miss Bateman have been acquainted for a number of years, and for the last two months have played in "The Bowery After Dark" company, which has been appearing at the Metropolis Theater recently. They will continue with the present company during the remainder of this season, and next year they hope to appear as stars. Miss Bateman in private life is known as Victory Crese. She married Wilfred Clarke, a son of the late John Sleeper Clarke, and secured a separation from him in Philadelphia in June, 1897.

Jefferson MacDonald Engagement.

It was reported in theatrical circles yesterday that William Jefferson, the youngest son of Joseph Jefferson, is engaged to Miss Christie MacDonald, the young actress, who is appearing in Toronto, Canada, with "The Rounders" Company. Mr. Jefferson, who is twenty-two years old, was favorably commended last year when he went into a company organized by his brothers to continue his father's tour. In "Rip Van Winkle he played the part of Cockles, and in "The Rivals" that of Bob Acres.

MRS. FISH GIVES A SHOW

Take-Offs on a Number of the Hostess's Friends.

Society at a Unique Entertainment in Which a Circus Performance Is Introduced.

For the second of her three Saturday night entertainments Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish gave last evening at her large and beautiful house, 25 East Seventy-eighth Street, a unique, amusing, and enjoyable vaudeville entertainment, which was made up of an original skit entitled "A Fish Story," arranged by Mr. Frank Keeble, produced by a number of professionals, and in which a circus performance was introduced, and several selections, including songs and dances.

Mrs. Fish, who delights in the planning of original entertainments, particularly of a vaudeville nature, and who achieved deserved fame by her "Fermier du Jouoy," or barnyard party, at Newport in the Summer of 1898, has been diligently at work with the aid of clever advisers for some time past arranging the details of last night's affair. At first she projected an amateur minstrel show in which the parts were to be taken by well-known society men and women, but finding it impossible to get this up in a limited time, she called to her aid Mr. Frank Keeble, who with others consulted with Mrs. Fish as to last night's affair. She was especially anxious to poke pleasant fun at some of her friends, well-known members of society, and so there were takeoffs on Miss Daisy Post, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mrs. Townsend Burden, Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, Miss Fifi Potter, ex-Commodore Gerry, Mr. Stanford White, and others. These takeoffs and hits were perpetrated by the professionals in the skit entitled "A Fish Story."

The guests began to arrive about 9:30, coming from a number of dinners. A Hungarian band was stationed in the hallway and played as the guests took off their wraps on the lower floor and ascended the broad stairway to the second floor, where, at the entrance to the large drawing room on the left of the stairway, Mrs. Fish stood to receive them. At the west end of the large ballroom, which opens out of the drawing room, a pretty stage had been erected. There was a proscenium arch, in whose centre was a shield on a red velvet ground, on which were depicted the Fish arms—a golden porpoise with the motto "Deus dabit." Rows of camp chairs were placed in the ballroom and foyer, and these were all occupied before the curtain rose, soon after 10 P. M., while numbers of guests who came late were obliged to stand in the reception room. The programmes which were handed around were printed in coarse type on single sheets of linen paper, and resembled the handbills of a country circus, and, in fact, the whole entertainment was planned to resemble a backwoods country show. These programmes read as follows:

THEATRE RIGHTHERE,
JANUARY 20, 1900.
Will be Presented for the First Time an Original
FISH STORY,
Arranged by
Mr. FRANK KEEBLE.
TIME—Right Now.
CAST.

Mr. Frank Walsh	Poor Old Lobster Rowe
Lobster Rowe's Wife	Dinah Shad Rowe
Mr. John Saunders	Klondike Rowe
Mr. James Bradley	Tim Perch
Mr. T. Vale	Abe Pike
Mr. James Leahy	Catchem Crab
Little Ioling	Willie Rowe
Little Caroline	Boatie Rowe
A Society Queen	Mrs. Antique Hallmark
A Society Queen	Mrs. Up-to-Date
Miss Hattie Wells	La Petite Fhi-Fhi, a Dancer
Messrs. Wells & Co.	A Wandering Circus

Produced under the control of Mr. Frank Keeble.
Scenery Specially Painted by Mr. Walter P. Warren.
Stage and Effects by K. J. Collins.

Before the curtain rose and after the overture had been played "The Lone Fisherman," Mr. John Saunders, appeared on the stage fishing, and recited the following prologue, written by himself:

PROLOGUE.

We all know well that FISHES swim
In water, not on land,
From little fishes neat and trim
To WHALES and walrus grand,
But fishes who've always dumb
For your applause will seek,
While the OLD LONE FISHERMAN so glum
For once in his life will speak.

For this LONE FISHERMAN so grim
Once met a gold fish rare,
Who threw a GOLDEN SPELL o'er him
And caught him fast and fair.
This golden fish, with ways so fine,
Has opened my mouth to-day,
And made me quit my WORK AND LINE
To sing and dance so gay.

So now we will the play begin—
We hope that it will please—
And if we your attention win
Our minds will be at ease.
If it shall finish without JARS,
An prove all that you wish,
We all may thank our lucky stars
We met that GOLDEN FISH.

When the curtain rose it disclosed the stage set with a plantation scene, with a log cabin at the right. The drop curtain was painted to represent a plantation scene with mountains in the distance. A group of negroes were assembled in the centre of the stage. All were in typical "coon" costume, and all surrounded a young "dude" darky, who had just returned to the plantation from New York. An old daddy darky pesters him for the doings of high life in New York, and the young "coon" relates his experiences. In his description of New York fashionable life, which was bright and amusing, he got off the jokes on members of the audience. One of these take-offs, on Miss Daisy Post, was a "When is a post not a post?" Answer: "When it is a Daisy," and another was, "Why we should we always have these fusses?" Answer: "See Mrs. Oelrichs. She's always Fair," &c., &c. Toward the close of the skit a traveling circus comes on the scene, with its members dead broke. The negroes surround it, tells its members they are trespassers, and oblige them to give a performance. This brought in a trick pony, performing dogs, &c., &c. The act was well done, and was an excellent representation of a typical old-fashioned country circus.

After the curtain had fallen on the skit there was music by the orchestra. It rose again and a short dance and other selections were given, among them some plantation and comic songs by the Clipper Comedy Quartet. Miss Carol Birdsall, a daughter of the late Judge Henry D. Birdsall of Brooklyn, recited Kipling's "Absent-Minded Beggar," in a khaki costume.

Then followed a supper, and it was well toward 2 o'clock this morning before the guests began to depart.

Among those present were Mrs. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, Miss Burden, Miss Greta Pomeroy, Mrs. Burke Roche, Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, the Misses Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, Gen. Lloyd Bryce and Mrs. Bryce, Miss Clare Bryce, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, the Misses Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. W. Starr Miller, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. De Forest, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Berwind, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Travers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Oelrichs, Mrs. Storrs Wells, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frelinghuysen.

Mrs. Gouverneur Kortright, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Cutting, Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, the Misses Gerry, Mrs. Joseph Stickney, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Cary, Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Talley, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Baxter, and Mrs. Suffern Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sorchan, Mr. and Mrs. James Sneyer, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Breese, Mr. and Mrs. Pemproke Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Smith, Mrs. Earl Dodge, Miss Anna Dodge, Col. William Jay and Mrs. Jay, Miss Josephine Johnson, Mrs. Frederick Kernochan, Mr. and Mrs. Stanford White, Mrs. Fred Neilson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Bronson, Miss Bronson, Mr. Thomas Cushing, Miss Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Jr., Miss Anna Sands, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Paget.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Watts Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord, Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, the Misses Wetmore, Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan Winthrop, Miss Marie Winthrop, Miss Amy Townsend, Miss Atherton Blight, Mr. and Mrs. Lanfear Norrie, the Misses Barbey, Mrs. Walter Kane, Miss Kane, Miss Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown, Mrs. N. D. Clapp, Miss Clapp, Mrs. George Hoffman, Miss Emily Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. George Bird, Miss Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. L. Q. Jones, Mr. Bishop, Miss Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Kountze, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Miss Elsie Clews, Marquise de Tallevrand Perigord, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parish, Jr., Mrs. Levi P. Morton, the Misses Morton, Miss Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Post, Miss Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry McVickar, and the Messrs. J. W. Gerard, Jr., Elliot Gregory, Goelet Gallatin, J. Henry Smith, Henry W. Bull, Barclay Kountze, the Messrs. Grant, T. Sanford Beatty, Messrs. Lispenard and Rhinelander Stewart, Robert Gerry, Robert Van Cortlandt, David Bishop, J. de W. Cutting, and Creighton Webb.

NEW YORKERS IN THE SOUTH.

Many Residents of This City at Aiken for the Winter.

Special to The New York Times.

AIKEN, S. C., Jan. 20.—There is no doubt that Aiken has changed in the past few years and has settled down into an ideal family Winter resort. The consumptive is no longer in evidence. His place is taken by the golfer, the sportsman, and the man of leisure. The wealthy New Yorkers have become fascinated by the climate, have bought land and built pretty cottages, and fall naturally into the innocent pleasures of the place. Here the visitors hunt in the morning, shoot at quail, doves, or clay pigeons in the afternoon, dine together in the evening, retiring early to be fresh for the next day's sport, which may be a golf match or a game of polo.

The weather this year has been delightful, one day more beautiful than the other. Whatever other fault may be found with Aiken, it has a splendid climate.

The annual hunt breakfast, which took place Wednesday, may be said to have opened the season. The golf links are in good condition, and the afternoon teas at the golf club house will begin next Monday. Twenty-two ladies have already put their names on the list to serve tea to the golfers. Polo playing has also begun, and many polo ponies are expected from the West this week for the use of the players.

Among the New Yorkers here are Mr. and Mrs. W. Butler Duncan, Jr., Mrs. Perry Tiffany, Major and Mrs. J. C. Mallory, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Smith, Roland Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Valentine Mott, Mrs. Duncan Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Phelps Dodge, Mrs. Livingston Smith, Miss M. M. Kerr, Miss S. M. Odell, Mrs. Lee-Jones, Mr. and Mrs. C. Gray Dinsmore, and W. R. Travers.

MRS. E. V. LOEW'S RECEPTION.

Mrs. Edward Victor Loew gave yesterday afternoon at her residence, 25 West Fifty-seventh Street, a coming-out reception for her daughter, Miss Edna Goadby Loew. Mrs. Loew wore a costume of black velvet and point lace, and the débutante was in white lace over white silk, and carried a touquet of mauve orchids and lilies of the valley. The débutante was assisted in receiving by Miss Eleanor Swayne, who was gowned in pink crêpe de chine; Miss Lena Fanshawe, who wore gray crêpe de chine and chiffon; Miss Edith Hollins, who was in blue crêpe de chine and chiffon; Miss Helen Beadleston, who wore pale gray silk; Miss Edith Talcott, Nile green silk; Miss Marion Bourne, white silk, trimmed with white lace; Miss Catharine Dodge, Miss May Riker, and Miss Eleanor Thomas. The rooms were decorated with palms and smilax and pink and white roses. The table decorations were of pink.

Among those present at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. George E. Dodge, Miss Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. James Talcott, Mr. and Mrs. Barbey, Miss Barbey, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, the Misses Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Juilliard, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Loew, Dr. Wyckoff and Mrs. Wyckoff, Miss Wyckoff, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker, the Misses Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Riker, Mr. and Mrs. Lounsbery, Miss Lounsbery, Mr. Lispenard Stewart, Mr. A. H. Sands, Willis S. Paine, William H. Goadby, F. A. Juilliard, George W. Quintard, Miss Helen Gallatin, Miss Ella de Peyster, Miss Florence Stokes, Miss Julia Fanshawe, Miss Cecil Boardman, Miss Hope Atterbury, and the Misses Robert Goelet, Arthur Burden, Robert Maclay, Louis Iselin, Harry Peters, and George F. Baker, Jr.

SOCIAL NOTES AND DOINGS.

Mrs. Ogden Mills gave last night at her residence, 2 East Sixty-ninth Street, a large and handsome dinner of forty covers. The table was beautifully decorated, roses and smilax being used with artistic effect. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mr. Thomas Cushing and Miss Cushing, Miss Anna Sands, Mr. Worthington Whitehouse, Mrs. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Burden Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, and Mrs. Livingston.

***

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clinton Wilmerding, who were married on Jan. 22, 1895, have issued cards for a reception to celebrate their wooden wedding to-morrow evening at their residence, 72 West Eighty-seventh Street. Mrs. Wilmerding was Miss Katherine Bache. She is a grand niece of Mr. Henry Bedlow of Newport, and a niece of Miss Kate Rutgers Lincoln.

***

Mrs. William V. Brokaw of 825 Fifth Avenue will give a women's luncheon at her residence on Tuesday, Jan. 30. Mrs. Everett S. Culver of 175 West Fifty-eighth Street will give a dinner on Friday, Jan. 26.

***

The organization known as Mrs. Sedgwick's dancing class, and in which Mrs. Bradish Johnson and other women are interested with Mrs. Sedgwick, met last evening in the Metropolitan Club Annex. This class is composed of young men and women who, with few exceptions, are not yet out.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Erbelding—Loustau.

Miss Marie Loustau of Pau was married yesterday morning at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, West Twenty-third Street, to George Erbelding, who is the confidential assistant of Edwin Gould. A nuptial mass was celebrated by the rector of the church. After a wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Erbelding started for the South.

NEW YORK ATHLETIC CLUB.

Second Annual Dinner of the First Hundred Members.

The second annual dinner of the first hundred members on the roll of the New York Athletic Club took place last evening at the clubhouse, Central Park South. There were seventy-five members present. Walter S. Wilson presided. Among the guests were the newly elected President of the club, John R. Van Wormer, and ex-Presidents William E. Van Wyck, (1889-72.) George Moore Smith, (1873,) William B. Curtis, (1880-81,) Jennings S. Cox, (1889,) Bartow

BARNARD'S ADDED DIGNITY

A College in the University System, as Is Columbia.

Degrees of Equal Value with Those of Columbia—President Low's Statement at Wellesley Club.

An important change in the relations of Barnard College and Columbia University, by which the students and graduates of the former have been placed on a footing of absolute equality with the students and graduates of the latter, was announced by Seth Low, President of the university, at the seventh annual luncheon of the New York Wellesley Club, held at the Hotel Manhattan yesterday. The luncheon was declared to be the most successful function of its kind the club has held.

Mrs. George A. Plimpton, President of the club, presided. The guests were Miss Caroline Hazard, the new President of Wellesley College, Seth Low, James G. Croswell, Head Master of Brearley School, and Mrs. Frank North. Among others present were Miss Julia Buffington, Miss Bailey, ex-President of Wellesley Club; Miss Brown, President of the University Club; Miss Grace Andrews, and Miss Annette Finnigan.

Miss Caroline Hazard, who was introduced by Mrs. Plimpton, dwelt upon what had been achieved by Wellesley College, and said that the prospects of the institution were extremely hopeful.

"One coming to Wellesley after an interval of some years," she continued, "would be perhaps most struck by seeing the caps and gowns moving in the halls and grounds. Not only do the seniors wear them, but many of the professors and instructors give their lectures in these academic robes, and they certainly add impressiveness and dignity to their appearance."

The observatory, the gift of Mrs. Whitin of Whitinsville, was a beautiful little building of white marble, she said, and the appliances for it were nearing completion. Adverting to the needs of the college, she said the greatest need was, of course, the securing of the endowment fund. A gymnasium building also was greatly needed. The plans for the building comprise a large central hall, a swimming tank, and shower baths, a hall for the practice of medical gymnastics and a court for basket ball practice. A running track is not considered necessary, as cross-country running is very much in vogue at Wellesley and would seem to be everything that is needed in that direction.

President Seth Low, the next speaker, congratulated Wellesley on behalf of Columbia University on the college's choice of Miss Hazard for its President. He said he felt particularly interested in being present at the luncheon, as he himself had become President of a woman's college.

"It will interest you all to know," he continued, "that yesterday Barnard became a college in the university system just as Columbia is. By this new agreement the President of Columbia becomes ex-officio President of Barnard, and at the same time a Trustee. This means that he will perform precisely the same duty for Barnard that he does for Columbia College or the School of Law or Medicine.

"In financial matters the college must look out for itself, as in times past, but in future the college will not have to make its own arrangements with the university professors who teach there, but with the corporation. The professors will all be appointed by the Trustees of the university, and will be assigned to either Barnard or Columbia, as required. If some of the time of the professors who teach at Barnard is spent at Columbia, an equal amount of time will be given to Barnard by other professors. The college will be able to regulate its own curriculum, and members of the Faculty may be either men or women. The students will cease to be graduated as graduates of Barnard and will become graduates of Columbia on an equality with the men, and a degree will have the same value as a Columbia degree." [Applause.]

President Low said the change could not but work for the greatest benefit of both men and women.

Mrs. Frank M. North, in an address on "Our College Traditions," remarked, incidentally, that American scholarship does not exist. "What have our men done in comparison with what has been done across the ocean?" she demanded.

James G. Croswell also addressed the assembly, on "Woman and Her College Days."

EDUCATION BOARD'S NEW HOME.

Seeking to Collect the Portraits of Past Presidents of the Body.

The Board of Education, which is moving into its new building at Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue, has decided to have, if possible, pictures of all the past Presidents of the Board of Education in one collection. Of these pictures Secretary A. Elerson Palmer has been able to get all but those of Gerardus Clark, President in 1844; Isaac A. Johnson, in 1845, and Richard Warren, in 1859.

Mr. Palmer has sent word to various educational institutions and teachers throughout the city to try, if possible, to obtain the three portraits desired. It is expected that the new hall of the board will be opened Feb. 15.

THE STAHL FAMILY SPOOK.

Bertha, Who Is Believed to be It, Will Leave Home for a Time.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 20.—A large crowd stood around the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Stahl in Riverside to-day waiting for the sign of the supposed "ghost" that is said to have created so much excitement in the Stahl household. They had their wait for nothing.

No unusual sight was witnessed and not a sound other than that made by the Stahl children at play was heard. The superstitious still cling to the belief, however, that the daughter, Bertha Stahl, is not responsible for the numerous strange occurrences which are said to have been witnessed. Despite the weather the crowd increased in size to-night.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stahl, the mother, is almost insane over the excitement created by the story of the ghostly visits. She said to-day that Bertha confessed to being the culprit, but that her daughter did not have control over her actions. Mrs. Stahl said that her pastor, the Rev. C. Basth, will drive the evil spirits away if there are any, and she relies on him. Dr. Fliteroft was called in to-day to prescribe for Mrs. Stahl.

Jacob Stahl, Bertha's father, said they had decided to let Mrs. Barth have charge of the girl and take her away from home for a while. They hope her absence from the house will prove what many of the neighbors think to be the true cause of all the weird noise—that Bertha is inclined to be quietly mischievous.

This afternoon Mrs. A. J. Phillips, who says she is a Spiritualist, called at the house and examined Bertha. Mrs. Phillips questioned the girl for some time and said she had no medium power. She said, however, that Bertha had a great deal of mischief in her eyes.

THE PRESIDENT AT A DINNER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Gage entertained at a Cabinet dinner to-night in honor of President and Mrs. McKinley.

Covers were laid for twenty, the company including, in addition to the guests of honor, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hay, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Root, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Charles Emory Smith, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Hitchcock, the Secretary of Agriculture, the ex-Postmaster General and Mrs. Gary, Col. and Mrs. Herrick of Cleveland, and Mrs. Sheridan.

Burial of the Bergen Family.

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass., Jan. 20.—With many of the friends of the family in attendance, the funeral of Martin Bergen and the three members of the family, his victims, was held from St. Joseph's Church this afternoon.

Amateur Athletes' Decisions.

The Advisory Committee of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America met yesterday afternoon at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and decided to readmit the University of California to the association. It is reported that the next annual games of the organization will be held in this city on May 25 and 26. The committee decided that the constitution should not be amended. The Executive Committee will meet in this city on Feb. 23 and 24 and elect officers.

NEW CHALLENGE TENNIS CUP.

To be Open to All Competitors—Seventh Regiment Tournament.

It is announced that a new perpetual challenge cup for lawn tennis international competition has been offered by a well-known American expert. The name of the donor is not given, but it is believed he is Richard Stevens of Hoboken. The offer has been made to the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, and it will be formally accepted at the coming annual meeting next month, when an official announcement will be made of the gift and the conditions surrounding it.

It is already known, however, that the new trophy will be deeded to the United States National Lawn Tennis Association in trust for future competition, and it is expected to be the America's Cup of the lawn tennis world. It is also rumored that the officers of the National association are already in correspondence with the English authorities, and the first international match for the new trophy is expected to take place next Summer. On account of the Transvaal war next season will probably be an off year in English lawn tennis, so a team of visiting experts is pretty sure to come over.

The conditions of the new cup require that challenges for it must be issued through the governing body of the country whose players wish to try for it, and that the teams shall consist of two men in singles and one team in doubles, not necessarily different men. The majority of the five matches—four in singles and one in doubles—will decide the contest.

The Seventh Regiment Tennis Association has just announced that it will hold an open lawn tennis tournament in its armory, beginning Feb. 21, and lasting to the end of the week, for the indoor championship of the United States. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, and President James Dwight of Boston has been announced as referee.

Only singles will be held, but the armory has eight courts, good light, and a high roof, which offer the best of facilities for a big list of expert players. Among those expected to play are Hackett and Allen of Yale, Little of Princeton, Grant of Columbia, Paret, last season's winner of the All-Comers' at Newport; Bostwick, Cragin, Tallant, Thurber, and probably one or two experts from Boston.

Entries close Feb. 20 with W. B. Cragin, Jr., 330 West Seventh-seventh Street. The entrance fee is $1.50.

REGATTA FOR THE HARLEM.

New York Captures the Annual Event of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen.

At the annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, held at the Marlborough Hotel last night, it was decided that the next regatta should be rowed in this city, the date of which will be selected later by a mail vote of the members of the committee.

This event is of more than ordinary importance this year, as the winners will be sent to Paris to compete in the regatta at the Exposition, which will probably be held on the Seine on Aug. 26. The meeting was presided over by Walter Stimson of the Arlington Rowing Club.

The claims of this city were looked out for by a delegation headed by Frederick Vilmar of the Nassau Boat Club, who argued that Philadelphia had had the regatta five times, Saratoga the same number, Detroit three times, and Newark, Washington, Boston, and Troy twice each, while New York had not had it once in the twenty-eight years that the association had been in existence. Mr. Vilmar said the Speedway Course, from High Bridge to Two Hundred and Fifth Street, offered excellent facilities for the race, eight crews being able to row abreast, making it the finest course in the world.

He promised that New York would do its best to send the winning crews to the Paris Exposition, and said that $5,000 could be raised for that purpose. When it was explained that the Speedway course would not admit of turning it was decided the rule which calls for a race with a turn should be suspended for this year, particularly since the races at the exposition would all be straightaway.

The teams to be sent to Paris will be selected by the National Regatta Committee, and they will consist of a senior single scull, one four, and one eight. In case of a Canadian club being among the winners, its representative or representatives will be sent with the Americans.

SEVENTH REGIMENT MARKSMEN.

Unusually Good Shooting at the Class and Revolver Matches.

The class match last night at the Seventh Regiment Armory was marked by unusually good shooting. Seven shots were fired from the two-hundred-yard mark standing and seven prone at 500 yards. The best marksman in each of the five different classes received a prize. The winners, with their scores, follow:

	200 Yds.	500 Yds.	T'l's.
Private W. H. Hanley, Co. C	33	35	68
Private W. A. Palmer, Jr., Co. G	33	34	67
Sergt. J. L. Roberts, Jr., Co. I	33	33	66
Lieut. S. M. Carnochan, Staff	33	32	65
Sergt. A. Stevens, Co. F	33	31	64

The following qualified as sharpshooters: Private W. H. Hanley, Sergt. J. R. Stewart, Lieut. G. S. Towle, Sergt. B. B. McAlpin, Corp. S. M. Richardson, Corp. E. S. Coy, Private W. C. Relyea, and Private W. C. Meissner.

In the afternoon a contest was held for three prizes. It was a revolver match, open to commissioned officers of the regiment and to the non-commissioned staff. The conditions were five shots at ten yards, with deliberate aim.

The scores of the winners follow:

1—Capt. W. J. Underwood, Co. G.....24
2—Lieut. C. M. Carnochan, Staff.....23
3—Lieut. O. M. Beach, Jr., Co. B.....22

The following also made scores of 22: Lieut. H. V. D. Black, Co. B; Lieut. G. S. Towle, Co. D; Lieut. P. J. White, Co. E; Lieut. J. Wotherspoon, Co. H.

PRINCETON AGAIN SHUT OUT.

Easily Beaten by the New York Athletic Club Hockey Team.

The hockey team of the New York Athletic Club defeated the team from Princeton University last night at the St. Nicholas Skating Rink by a score of 5 to 0. Listless playing by the former team and clever blocking by Ford and Wilson of Princeton kept the score down to 1 point in the first half. Fenwick was hurt at the end of the half and compelled to retire. In the second half New York played rapidly and placed 4 more goals to its credit. The line-up follows:

New York A. C.		Princeton.
O'Donnell	Goal	Wilson
Koehler	Point	Ford
Hunt	Cover point	Little
Baird	Forward	Alexander
Hornfeck	Forward	Homans
Fenwick	Forward	Purnell
Tomlinson	Forward	Poe

Referee—E. Phillips, New York A. C. Umpires—Callender, St. Nicholas, and Mr. Sheffler, Goals—Fenwick, 1; Hornfeck, 3; Hunt, 1.

SCHAEFER'S LEAD REDUCED.

Ora Morningstar was in good form yesterday afternoon, and managed to reduce Schaefer's lead 36 points in their billiard match at the latter's academy. Schaefer started in on his unfinished run of 234 made on the day before, and did not stop until he had clicked off 34 more. In the next inning he added 85 to this, and followed it up with another run of 37. His playing then fell off considerably. Morningstar, who had been playing steadily, made a run of 56, which brought his total up to 126. The evening session was not played. The match will be resumed on Monday. The score:

Schaefer—34, 85, 37, 1, 0, 1, 12, 0, 1, 15, 3, 11. Total, 200. Average, 16 8-12. Grand total, 2,200. Grand average, 18 76-118.

Morningstar—0, 9, 2, 28, 0, 1, 4, 0, 3, 14, 9, 50. Total, 126. Average, 10 6-12. Grand total, 1,064. Grand average, 9 4-118.

Baseball Coach for Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 20.—F. B. Adams, manager of the Yale University baseball team, announces that arrangements have been made with Pitcher Nichols of the Boston baseball team to come to New Haven for several weeks during the coming Spring to coach candidates for the 'Varsity team. Mr. Nichols will devote his attention particularly to the pitchers.

Indoor Baseball League Contest.

The Twelfth Regiment played a hotly contested indoor baseball game against the First Naval Battalion at their armory last night and added one more to their unbroken record of victories which has placed them at the head of the league, the score being 18 to 5.

M'LAUGHLIN GOES SOUTH

Resents Challenge of Senator Coffey to Appear Against Him.

Asks Peace in Old Age and Evades Questions About the Senator's Alleged Vital Help.

Hugh McLaughlin, the veteran Democratic leader of Kings County, left for Florida yesterday morning to spend the remainder of the Winter. His departure settled the question as to whether he would accept the challenge of Senator Michael J. Coffey and appear before the committee which is hearing the charges of party disloyalty against the South Brooklyn leader. Isaac M. Kapper, chief counsel for Senator Coffey, sent the following letter to Mr. McLaughlin on Friday, inviting him to attend the meeting of the committee on Friday night:

"Hon. Hugh McLaughlin, No. 9 Willoughby Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"Dear Sir: Senator Coffey has observed the published statement in one of the daily papers this past week, wherein you are quoted as saying that he had better not cause you to be summoned before the committee now engaged in investigating charges of party disloyalty against him, as it would not be 'healthy' for him if he did so.

"As you are about to leave the city, and as Senator Coffey's counsel have, in the brief time allowable, been unable to communicate with Mr. Maguire, Chairman of the committee, for the purpose of having you officially invited before the committee, Senator Coffey directs me to now invite you before the committee at its session to be held this evening in the Thomas Jefferson Building, at 8 o'clock, where you will undoubtedly be afforded a courteous hearing and, in so far as Senator Coffey can demand it, a full opportunity to refer to the matters regarding him, the publicity of which would not be 'healthy' or otherwise for him. I beg to remain with deep respect, very truly yours,

"ISAAC M. KAPPER."

Mr. McLaughlin did not attend the meeting. He, in fact, ignored Mr. Kapper's letter. His friends say that the invitation for him to appear before the committee was merely a "bluff" on the part of the Coffey faction. The latter, however, insist that they were in earnest, and that they much regret Mr. McLaughlin's failure to appear.

It was said yesterday that the leader was very angry over Mr. Kapper's letter.

Mr. McLaughlin, according to a statement published in The Brooklyn Eagle yesterday, was told before his departure that Mr. Kapper had said on Friday night that he (Mr. McLaughlin) had been compelled to summon Senator Coffey to his assistance in order to get a proper recognition for the Brooklyn organization on the city ticket in 1897. Mr. McLaughlin, as alleged, asked what authority Mr. Kapper had for saying that, and when told that the lawyer had said that it did not come from Senator Coffey, is quoted as having replied:

"Well, then, he lies."

"But did Senator Coffey go to Mr. Croker at your request?" he was asked.

His answer was in part, as alleged:

"Now, if you have lived in Brooklyn long enough you know the circumstances of that campaign as well as I can tell them to you.

"I have lived to serve my day and generation as best I could. My only desire now is for peace and quiet, and I think I am entitled to it."

Mr. McLaughlin was accompanied South by Mrs. McLaughlin and a large party of friends, all of whom will be the guests of ex-Fire Chief Thomas F. Nevins, at his place on the Indian River.

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

The two-men team tournament of the Lithographers' Bowling Association began at the Arcade alleys, 8 St. Mark's Place, last evening. Dewes and Brown won two series, defeating Sinramm and Schnitzler, and Graul and Hackett. The latter team broke even in the series with Sinramm and Schnitzler. Scores:

FIRST GAME—FIRST SERIES.

Dewes ...14, 23, 40, 49, 66, 84, 101, 119, 128, 148
Brown ... 8, 37, 57, 74, 94, 114, 130, 130, 158, 188
Sinramm ..20, 39, 48, 57, 77, 93, 110, 130, 147, 154
Schnitzler .20, 37, 44, 61, 70, 78, 95, 112, 120, 129

SECOND GAME.

Dewes ... 9, 29, 49, 68, 83, 100, 120, 138, 146, 164
Brown 19, 28, 48, 64, 73, 90, 98, 115, 135, 154
Sinramm, ..8, 27, 42, 57, 66, 93, 113, 129, 138, 168
Schnitzler . 8, 17, 25, 39, 48, 57, 86, 106, 126, 144

FIRST GAME—SECOND SERIES.

Graul 19, 38, 52, 72, 99, 118, 127, 146, 165, 174
Hackett .. 8, 16, 24, 33, 53, 73, 92, 101, 121, 139
Sinramm . 7, 16, 29, 46, 55, 84, 103, 112, 121, 141
Schnitzler .20, 49, 69, 85, 94, 110, 119, 127, 136, 145

SECOND GAME.

Sinramm..19, 28, 48, 66, 85, 104, 121, 138, 158, 175
Schnitzler.20, 39, 58, 76, 96, 116, 133, 142, 150, 166
Graul 9, 18, 37, 46, 66, 82, 99, 107, 116
Hackett .. 8, 27, 44, 60, 76, 93, 113, 143, 172, 192

FIRST GAME—THIRD SERIES.

Dewes 27, 47, 64, 82, 91, 105, 121, 141, 170, 190
Brown 9, 17, 34, 43, 63, 76, 95, 112, 129, 136
Graul 17, 26, 34, 40, 48, 57, 77, 107, 134, 153
Hackett ..17, 30, 45, 53, 70, 90, 108, 116, 135, 144

SECOND GAME.

Dewes ...17, 35, 44, 74, 104, 131, 148, 155, 175, 194
Brown 9, 25, 45, 65, 82, 100, 120, 138, 146, 174
Graul 19, 28, 36, 56, 76, 94, 102, 111, 116, 125
Hackett .20, 40, 60, 79, 99, 117, 125, 142, 162, 182

The Mount Morris Bank team did the best work last night in the Bank Clerks' League at Reid's alleys. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Seaboard National—Jefferds, 154; Davis, 173; Fallon, 120; Barger, 163; Hodges, 135. Total, 745.
Hamilton—Crosby, 150; Ward, 129; Reilly, 98; Willis, 74; Mooney, 155. Total, 606.

SECOND GAME.

Mount Morris—McKever, 187; Wendell, 160; Benedict, 121; Hickinbothen, Jr., 121; Gross, 182. Total, 771.
Hamilton—Crosby, 167; Ward, 134; Reilly, 132; Willis, 96; Mooney, 156. Total, 685.

THIRD GAME.

Seaboard National—Jefferds, 113; Davis, 141; Fallon, 105; Barger, 141; Hodges, 149. Total, 649.
Mount Morris—McKever, 136; Wendell, 116; Benedict, 115; Hickinbothen, Jr., 163; Gross, 156. Total, 686.

The Germania team did splendid work in the Fire Insurance League at Reid's alleys last night, winning two games with good scores. Barber, of the Germanias, made the best average of the night. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Phenix—Dougherty, 138; Rushmore, 198; Swan, 103; Story, 169; Saddington, 126. Total, 676.
German-American—Schopp, 133; Barnett, 99; Markes, 117; Ormsbee, 120; Elston, 150. Total, 619.

SECOND GAME.

Germania—Palmedo, 103; Michels, 130; Huethol, 128; Hahnel, 212; Barber, 169. Total, 742.
Phenix—Dougherty, 147; Rushmore, 115; Swan, 131; Story, 116; Saddington, 185. Total, 697.

THIRD GAME.

Germania—Palmedo, 181; Michels, 193; Huethol, 129; Hahnel, 117; Barber, 200. Total, 820.
German-American—Schopp, 123; Barnett, 151; Markes, 120; Ormsbee, 144; Elston, 162. Total, 700.

The tournament of the Wholesale Drug Trade Bowling Association was continued at Read's alleys yesterday afternoon. Parke, Davis & Co. winning two games. Score:

FIRST GAME.

Dodge & Olcott—Howe, 181; Ely, 170; Ulrich, 135; Robertson, 135; Ruddiman, 189. Total, 810.
Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Company—Furgang, 111; Stepan, 150; Klahre, 109; Homann, 157; Malsch, 119. Total, 666.

SECOND GAME.

Parke, Davis & Co.—Blake, 156; Doran, 185; S. H. Carragan, 108; Brunn, 116; Carr, 138. Total, 703.
Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Company—Furgang, 145; Stepan, 83; Klahre, 83; Homann, 114; Malsch, 136. Total, 591.

THIRD GAME.

Parke, Davis & Co.—Blake, 159; Doran, 168; S. H. Carragan, 126; Brunn, 163; Carr, 150. Total, 766.
Dodge & Olcott—Howe, 176; Ely, 138; Ulrich, 157; Robertson, 117; Ruddiman, 173. Total, 761.

FOURTH GAME.

Merck & Co.—Darius, 181; Douth, 187; Stein, 101; Robertson, 143; Heins, 131. Total, 743.
National Lead Company—Kemble, 127; Saunders, 129; C. E. Meek, 160; Sidford, 139; R. P. Meek, 141. Total, 636.

FIFTH GAME.

National Lead Company—Kemble, 161; Saunders, 150; C. E. Meek, 183; Sidford, 139; R. P. Meek, 153. Total, 783.
Colgate & Co.—Barnes, 164; Chrystal, 108; Kennedy, 119; Faulkner, 164; Colgate, 184. Total, 739.

SIXTH GAME.

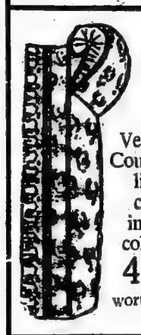
Colgate & Co.—Barnes, 179; Chrystal, 125; Kennedy, 132; Faulkner, 161; Colgate, 192. Total, 789.
Merck & Co.—Darius, 114; Douth, 140; Stein, 130; Robertson, 165; Heins, 148. Total, 697.

Sailors Win at Indoor Baseball.

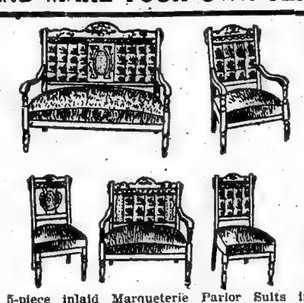
About 800 spectators witnessed the indoor baseball game between teams of the Seventy-first Regiment and the Second Naval Battalion at the regimental armory last night. The contest resulted in favor of the sailors by a score of 17 to 15. There were many visitors present.

S. BAUMANN & CO.

CALL AND MAKE YOUR OWN TERMS.



Velour Couches, like cut, in all colors, 4.98 worth $10.



5-piece inlaid Marqueterie Parlor Suits in silk damask and silk plush upholstery, worth $40.00..... 19.98

Best Plate Pier Mirror in Oak or Mahogany finish . . . 6.98

Cor. 46th St. & 8th Ave.

OPEN SATURDAY TILL 10 P. M.

RECORDS OF THE BOWLERS.

The Harlem and the Columbia Leagues will complete schedules during the week. In the Columbia League the Corinthians and Orientals, who are tied for first place, will meet and decide the championship. The following tables show the standing of the clubs in the various tournaments:

AMERICAN NATIONAL.

	W.	L.	H.S.		W.	L.	H.S.
Corinthian	13	3	936	Rosedale	8	10	973
Monarch	12	4	971	Doolittle	8	10	941
Germania	13	5	955	Oriental	6	8	935
Fidelia	12	6	959	Arlington	6	8	926
Empire	10	6	975	Golden Rod	8	12	969
Orchard	9	7	1005	Morningside	7	11	991
Spartan	12	8	994	Lotus	5	11	894
South Paw	10	8	964	Riverdale	4	10	897
Metropolitan	10	8	950	Glendale	5	15	894
Bleecker	8	8	935	Central	4	12	890
Columbia	10	10	959

HARLEM LEAGUE.

Washington	15	5	996	Lotus	8	8	924
Knickerb'k'r	15	5	995	Standard	8	10	961
Belvidere	11	5	965	Audubon	8	10	950
Empire	12	6	1103	Colonial	8	10	910
Oriental	12	6	994	Grove Hill	7	11	938
Phoenix	13	7	956	Central	7	11	978
Riverdale	10	6	934	Premier	5	11	933
Morris Wh.	10	8	1004	[illegible]	5	11	[illegible]
Morningside	10	10	941	Harlem R. C.	4	16	909
Corinthian	10	10	914	Friendship	3	13	[illegible]
Boulevard	8	8	935

COLUMBIA LEAGUE.

Oriental	17	1	1023	Village	8	10	882
Corinthian	17	1	908	Boulevard	7	11	837
Empire	13	3	994	Mercury	7	11	891
Standard	16	4	942	Audubon	6	12	823
Riverdale	13	5	928	Oerell	6	14	897
Belvidere	14	6	922	Empire City	5	13	853
Morningside	14	6	904	Enterprise	5	15	832
Owl	13	7	961	Puritan	4	14	877
Columbia	11	9	870	Mephisto	3	17	826
Hamilton	9	11	905	Diamond	1	17	740
Premier	9	11	869

ARLINGTON NATIONAL.

Bleecker	17	3	888	Holschen	10	10	793
Alco	15	5	890	M. M. & M.	10	12	887
Edison	16	6	913	Linwood	7	13	763
Gotham	16	6	881	Homestead	6	16	817
Oradell	16	6	873	Manhattan	5	13	840
Welcome	7	7	904	Black Bass	4	18	783
Glendale	11	11	855	Amity	0	22	722
Straggler	11	11	830

NEW YORK ROYAL ARCANUM.

Our No. 1	12	1	951	Our No. 2	7	7	844
N. Y. No. 1	12	2	890	Americus	7	7	829
Lenox	9	3	890	De Vinne	5	7	804
Harlem	8	4	893	Manhattan	3	13	739
Yonkers	10	5	842	Stanley	2	11	700
Empire City	5	5	900	Defendam	2	12	764
Citizens'	7	5	830	N. Y. No. 2	1	7	741
Colfax	8	6	832	Knickerb'k'r	1	10	589
Colonial	8	6	800

BROOKLYN ROYAL ARCANUM.

Philadelphos	13	1	940	Nassau	8	8	883
East N. Y.	13	3	960	Welcome	8	8	838
J. F. Price	14	4	922	Washington
Bushwick	12	4	915	Irving	9	11	825
Bedford	12	4	884	Fulton	7	9	880
Gilbert	10	4	904	Brooklyn	7	9	875
Fraternity	10	4	885	Atlantic	7	9	816
De Witt Clinton	9	6	870	De Forest	5	9	866
Fort Greene	10	6	911	Commonwealth	5	9	902
Burnside	10	6	868	Iolanthe	5	13	922
De Long	11	7	890	Brevoort	5	13	879
Long Island	9	9	934	Alert	5	13	868
Fern	9	9	882	Oxford	2	14	751
Lefferts	8	8	892	Gramercy	1	11	760
				Ridgewood	1	15	815

BROOKLYN R. A. SUB-TOURNAMENT.

East N. Y.	14	6	860	Brevoort	8	8	780
Gilbert	11	4	890	Philadelphos	5	7	773
Bedford	11	4	856	Bushwick	0	9	466
Long Island	11	4	788	Brooklyn	4	9	763
Fort Greene	11	6	836	Fulton	5	12	773
Fern	10	5	865	Nassau	4	10	746
Lefferts	8	5	777	J. F. Price	3	9	736
De Long	7	5	869	Fraternity	4	12	723
De Witt Clinton	9	8	763	Burnside	2	15	769

ATHLETIC LEAGUE.

Roseville A.				Columbia	6	12	898
A.	13	5	958	Elizabeth	6	12	859
N. Y. A. C.	12	6	913	Knickerbocker A. C.	6	12	885
Jersey City	10	8	941
North End	10	8	944

ARCHDIOCESAN LEAGUE.

Loyola	8	2	759	Columbus
Spalding No. 1	6	2	871	No. 2	3	5	744
St. Monica				Holy Cross
No. 1	5	2	767	No. 1	2	4	756
St. Mary's	5	3	803	Columbus
Cathedral	5	3	776	No. 1	2	5	741
Holy Cross				Harlem C. C.	2	6	732
No. 2	7	5	824	Leo C. C.	2	6	733
Spalding No. 2	4	4	756	Holy Rosary	1	4	655
St. Monica
No. 2	2	3	713

LIFE INSURANCE LEAGUE.

Fidelity and Casualty	10	0	838	John Hancock Mut'l.	5	6	933
Metropolitan	5	2	829	Prudential	3	4	852
Equitable	7	4	806	Germania	1	7	830
Mut. Benefit	4	3	849	Mutual	0	9	856

MORNING NEWSPAPER LEAGUE.

Journal	4	0	1296	Tribune	2	2	1156
World	4	0	1182	Bulletin	0	4	1136
Herald	2	2	1248	Times	0	4	1156

WHOLESALE DRUG TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Colgate & Co.	13	3	915	National Lead Company	8	8	796
Dodge & Olcott	11	5	845	Parke, Davis & Co.	8	8	754
Merck & Co.	8	8	769	Gen'l Chemical Co.	7	9	751
R. W. Robinson & Son.	8	8	791	Roessler & Hasslacher Chem. Co.	1	15	698
Seabury & Johnson	8	8	783

TO START A BREEDING FARM.

C. W. Williams, Owner of Allerton, Buys Noted Stallions.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 20.—C. W. Williams has bought the following noted trotting stallions, and will establish with them and Allerton, 2:09¼, a breeding farm at Ashland Park, in this county: St. Vincent, 2:13½, br. h., 16, by Wilkes Boy, dam Aller, purchased of A. G. Danforth, Washington, Ill.; Expedition, br. h., 11, by Electioneer, dam Lady Russell, bought of Woodburn Farm, Spring Station, Ky.; Belsire, 2:21¼, br. h., 9, by Electioneer, dam Beautiful Bells, bought of Miller & Sibley, Franklin, Penn., and Mazatlan, 2:26¼, b. h., 10, by Electioneer, dam Rosamond, by Piedmont, bought of William Russell Allen, Pittsfield, Mass.

St. Vincent is the sire of Lord Vincent, 2:08¾, winner of the Transylvania Stakes and the largest winner on the trotting turf last season.

Mr. Williams, who has been living at Galesburg, Ill., will remove to Lexington.

San Francisco Races.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—Tanfaran results.

FIRST RACE.—Seven-sixteenths of a mile. For two-year-olds. King Steele, 104 pounds, (Sullman,) 8 to 5, won; M. F. Tarpey, 111, (Spencer,) 2 to 1, second; Grafter, 108, (E. Jones,) 12 to 1, third. Time—0:42. Gaffer, Brideale, St. Rica, and Carolinan also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Mile and a half; selling. Daisy F., 104 pounds (T. Walsh,) 3 to 5, won; Topmast, 107, (J. Martin,) 6 to 1, second; Chimura, 100, (Vittatoe,) 3 to 1, third. Time—2:32½. Meadowthorpe, Billy McKloskey also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Three-fourths of a mile, selling. Sly, 111 pounds, (Spencer,) 2 to 1, won; Ben Ledi, 110, (Ross,) 3 to 1, second; Wyoming, 109, (T. Walsh,) 7 to 1, third. Time—1:13¾. Socialist, Rosalabra, Orion, Yaruba, Good Hope, and Maud Ferguson also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—One mile; Turf Congress Stakes. Bannockburn, 124 pounds, (Bullman,) 3¼ to 1, won; Geyser, 121, (Spencer,) 7 to 5, second; Zoroaster, 116, (Piggott,) 5 to 1, third. Time—1:39, which equals track record. Benoran, Flower of Gold, Sardine, Advance Guard, Olintus, and Yellow Tail also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—One mile, selling. Scotch Plaid, 109 pounds, (Jenkins,) 6 to 5, won; Montalbe, 105, (T. Walsh,) 7 to 1, second; Red Pirate, 107, (Ross,) 9 to 1, third. Time—1:41¼. Grady, Toribio, Ping, Espionage, and Antoinette also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Five-eighths of a mile, selling. Maxello, 112 pounds, (Spencer,) 3 to 1, won; Gold Baron, 112, (Jenkins,) 6 to 1, second; Carter H. Harrison, 112, (T. Walsh,) 25 to 1, third. Time—1:02. Mafada, P. F., Romany, Lulu W., Delecta, and Lona Marie also ran. Lady Heloise left at post.

Dubuque to Have Trotting Races.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Jan. 20.—It was decided to-day to have trotting races here next Fall.

FLORIDA'S GOLF SCHEDULE.

Games

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

EMPIRE THEATRE. B'way and 40th St. Evenings, 8:30. Matinées, 2:15.
Charles Frohman.....Manager
—2nd Week.—
"ANOTHER EMPIRE SUCCESS."
—CHARLES FROHMAN.
CLEMENT SCOTT, IN HERALD:
"A play that touches hearts and dims eyes—A human, touching story."
"Another Empire success."—Mail and Express.
Charles Frohman's EMPIRE THEATRE COMPANY
In a new comedy entitled
BROTHER OFFICERS
By Captain Lee Trevor.
"A success."—Herald.
"Success away beyond doubt."—Sun.
Matinees Wednesday & Saturday.

CHARLES FROHMAN'S
CRITERION THEATRE, Broadway and 44th St.
Evenings, 8:30. Matinées, 2:15.
MONDAY — 716th PERFORMANCE.
WEDNESDAY MATINEES
BEGIN THIS WEEK.
"A TRIUMPH FOR PURITY IN THEATRICALS."—HERALD.
CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS
MAUDE ADAMS
—IN—
The Little Minister
By J. M. Barrie.
"MISS ADAMS'S ART IS UNIMPEACHABLE."—HERALD.
Editorial in Evg. Journal:
"Miss Adams's theatre is packed. Men and women are glad that they took their daughters there. They go again and again."
Matinees Wednesday & Saturday.

GARRICK THEATRE, 35th St., near B'way. Evgs., 8 o'clock. Matinées, 2:15.
Hoyt & McKee, Lessees. Charles Frohman, Mgr.
3D CROWDED MONTH.
CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS
William Gillette
in the four-act drama entitled
SHERLOCK HOLMES.
By Wm. Gillette and A. Conan Doyle.
Only Matinee Saturday.

GARDEN THEATRE 27th St. and Mad. Av.
Charles Frohman.....Manager
2d Week.
ENGAGEMENT OF
MRS. LANGTRY
AND HER LONDON COMPANY.
Presenting Sydney Grundy's comedy
THE DEGENERATES.
Mrs. Langtry's engagement is for four more weeks. Seats for any performance now on sale.
Only Matinee Saturday.

MADISON SQUARE THEATRE. 24th St., nr. B'way.
Hoyt & McKee, Lessees. Charles Frohman, Mgr.
Evenings, 8:30. Matinées, 2.
LAST TWO WEEKS.
THIS SEASON'S COMEDY TRIUMPH.
THE MESSRS. FROHMAN PRESENT
WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS
Hilda Spong and John Mason, Grant Stewart, Grace Elliston, Eva Vincent, and Robert Hilliard.
"Cast far above the usual production of modern comedy."—Evg. Sun.
Matinees Wednesday & Saturday.
MONDAY, FEB. 5TH,
CHARLES FROHMAN'S COMEDIANS
In the great Palais Royal, Paris, success,
Coralie & Co., Dressmakers.

HUBER'S 14TH ST. MUSEUM 10C. TO ALL.
Continuous Show for Ladies and Children.
LOOK AT THE FEATURES IN THIS WEEK'S BILL!
Grand Bill. American and European Novelties.

Grand Carnival or Ole-Fash.oned Minstrelsy.
J. M. MOORE'S COLORED MINSTRELS.
Troupe of genuine Southern Darkies, including Unique Four, Marguarite Taylor, the colored "Nightingale"; concluding with a Grand Creole Cake Walk.
COL. SHULTS' GREAT DANES.
12 largest performing canines in the world; Mexican 40 ft. high jumper; 4 Neapolitans, Porello's illusions, Joe Cramer, "Rubber-Neck"; Murillo, hand balancer; Ferreri's Trained Rats; Young Americus; Lottie, orang-outang.
THEATRE: 20 Stars, 2 Co's Continuous Show. Negro Minstrels, Allen & Kingsbury, Ada Jones, new illustrated songs; Edison's Projectoscope, the Bohomes, Barney Lubin and others.
SUNDAY CONCERTS. SPECIAL BILL.

AMERICAN 42ND ST. AND CASTLE SQ. OPERA CO. 8TH AVE
3d Year. 100 People. Box Office Opens at 8 A. M.
TO-MORROW NIGHT,
650TH TIME. SOUVENIRS. VIOLET VASES.
FIRST TIME HERE OF EUROPEAN SUCCESS
Nicola Spinelli's Tragic Opera,
AT THE LOWER HARBOUR ("A BASSO PORTO.")
Misses Kronold, Linck, Carrington; Messrs. Stewart, Pruette, Davies, Belcher.
Preceded By THE MAGIC MELODY (Always in English.)
Misses Morgan, Quinlan, Lambert; Messrs. Roberts, Casavant, Monlan.
CHORUS OF 60. AUGMENTED ORCHESTRA.
EV'GS. 8:15 SHARP. 25, 50, 75, $1 NOTHING HIGHER.
Matinées Wed., Sat., 2:15. 1,100 Seats, 25c.

BIJOU B'way & 30th St. Eve., 8:15. Matinée Saturday only.
—TELEPHONE NO. 2224 MAD. SQ.—
The Woman who makes you laugh. MAY IRWIN The Biggest Hit of All.
and her company in her new delicious funny comedy,
SISTER MARY.
Best Orchestra seat only $1.50.
FOURTH CROWDED MONTH.

MANHATTAN THEATRE, 33d & B'way. Evgs. at 8:15. Sat. Mat. only.
Wm. A. Brady & F. Ziegfeld, Jr., Props. & Mgrs.
MR. F. ZIEGFELD, JR., PRESENTS
Anna Held in Papa's Wife
Smith & De Koven's Musical Comedy, with CHAS. A. BIGELOW and Great Cast.
ENTIRE ORCHESTRA AT SAT. MATS., $1.50.

CASINO! BEGINNING TMRRW (MON.) NGT!
MATINEES ON WEDS. & SATS. AT 2.
The Belle of N. Y. LIMITED ENGMNT! 2 WKS ONLY!
Geo. W. Lederer's LONDON
N. Y. Casino Co.
Orig. Cast & Chorus.
In preparation—New production, The Casino Girl.

PROCTOR'S 23d ST. Cont. Perf. Marie Dressler
15, 25, 50c. 20 Min. in Shirtwaists
Sims & Graham, Leo Dervalto, Kenno, Welch, o'rs.

PALACE 58th St. & 3d Av. Cont. Perf. Montgomery & Stone
15, 25, 50c. Duncan's Choilers.
Halladay & Ward, McPhee & Hill, Moving Pictures, &c.

DALY'S B'way & 30th.....Begins 8:30
Daniel Frohman, Manager.
Matinées: Wed. & Sat., 2:15.
LAST 2 WEEKS
LAST 2 WEEKS
of Henry Arthur Jones's merry comedy,
THE MANEUVERS OF JANE.
 Monday, Feb. 5, Daniel Frohman will present the new comedy of modern society, by "John Oliver Hobbes," (Mrs. Craigie,) with the full strength of his company, (including Hilda Spong, John Mason, Edward Morgan, and Mary Manning.) The play is entitled:
THE AMBASSADOR.
Orders for seats received and filed.

LYCEUM 4th Av. & 23d St. At 8:30.
Daniel Frohman, Mgr.
Matinées Thursday & Sat. 2.
TO-MORROW (MONDAY) EVENING
Charles Frohman Presents
A NEW PARISIAN COMEDY, entitled
The Surprises of Love.
By Paul Belhaud and Michael Carre.
Cast will include: Elsie De Wolfe, H. Reeves Smith, Charles Abbott, Eric Hope, Charles Bowser, Clayton White, Frank Lea Short, Margaret Robinson, Olive May, Helen Keating, Ellen Gall, and others.

KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE, B'way & 38th.
AL. HAYMAN & CO.....Proprietors
Evgs. at 8:15. Matinées Sat. only, 2:15.
SECOND CROWDED MONTH.
MR. N. C. GOODWIN
MISS MAXINE ELLIOTT.
POSITIVELY LAST TWO WEEKS,
THE COWBOY AND THE LADY.
MONDAY, FEB. 5TH.
Mr. GOODWIN and Miss ELLIOTT
in a new play by Henry V. Esmond, entitled
WHEN WE WERE TWENTY-ONE.
SEATS READY THURSDAY, FEB. 1.

BROADWAY THEATRE. 41st St. & B'way.
Evs. at 8. Wed. & Sat. Mats. at 2.
JACOB LITT.....Proprietor
ALL ROADS LEAD TO THE BROADWAY
EXTRA MATINEES LINCOLN'S AND WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAYS, FEB. 12TH AND 22ND. SEATS ON SALE.
9th WEEK
KLAW & ERLANGER'S STUPENDOUS PRODUCTION. GEN. LEW WALLACE'S
Ben-Hur
Arranged for the stage by WILLIAM YOUNG.
Music by EDGAR STILLMAN KELLEY.
Under Stage Direction of BEN TEAL.

Murray HILL THEATRE. Lex. Av. & 42d St., One Block East Grand Central Depot. Mats. at 2. Evgs., 8:15.
SECOND YEAR. HENRY V.
SECOND YEAR. MATINEE 25c. EVERY DAY DONNELLY
SECOND YEAR. STOCK
SECOND YEAR. CO.
NEVER AGAIN
THIS WEEK.
The Screaming Farce Comedy Success.
EVENING PRICES 25-35-50 EVENING PRICES.
SUBSCRIBERS' SEATS RESERVED EACH WEEK WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE.

CARNEGIE HALL.
Tuesday Evening, February 6th,
GALA CONCERT
The entire proceeds to be donated to the
Dewey Arch Fund
Among the distinguished artists who have kindly volunteered their services are MADAME NORDICA
and
MADAME GADSKI
MR. EDOUARD DE RESZKE
and
MR. EVAN WILLIAMS
AND OTHER SOLOISTS
MR. EMIL PAUR
and
MR. WALTER DAMROSCH
CONDUCTORS
THE FULL CHORUS OF THE ORATORIO SOCIETY and an
ORCHESTRA OF SIXTY
Prices $3, $2, $1.50, and $1. Boxes, $50. Seats and boxes can be obtained at the box office, Carnegie Hall; also at Tyson's.

WALLACK'S.
B'WAY & 30TH ST. Tele. 2,000 Mad.
MONDAY NIGHT, JAN. 22,
OLGA NETHERSOLE
Direction of Marcus R. Mayer.
Will appear as FANNY LE GRAND in SAPHO.
Dramatized from Daudet's Novel by Clyde Fitch.
FIRST MAT. SAT. AT 2:00

KEITH'S
14th St., bet. Broadway & 4th Av.
Continuous Performance. 12:30 to 10:45 P. M.
MINNIE SELIGMAN & CO.
Second Week—in "IN PARADISE."
WALTER LE ROY & FLORENCE CLAYTON in "Hogan of the Hansom," by Geo. M. Cohan.
MR. & MRS. CHAS. T. ELLIS, CHARLIE CASE, JOHN BOKER: Illustrated Talk on Transvaal.
LOUISE GUNNING. ADAMS'S SEA LIONS.

THE NEW YORK TUESDAY EVE., JAN'Y 23D.
Positive production of the new magnificent spectacle,
BROADWAY TO TOKIO.
Tickets bought for Jan. 20 good for 23d.
 On account of the elaborate preparations for the new production, the Sunday night concert will be abandoned this Sunday only.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.
JANUARY 20 TO 27.
OPEN 9 A. M. TO 11 P. M.
5TH NATIONAL EXHIBITION OF CYCLES, AUTOMOBILES AND ACCESSORIES.
50c. ADMISSION 50c.

14TH ST. THEATRE, near 6th Av. Mats Wed. and Sat. Res. orch. circle or bal, 50c.
LAST WEEK of the best of all rural plays,
The Village Postmaster.
Next week—CHAUNCEY OLCOTT.

COMIQUE B'WAY 29TH ST. THE HOUSE THAT MAT EVERYDAY 25&50 JACK BUILT
GAY MASQUERADERS. 2 Burl sques and Vaudeville.

WEBER & FIELDS' MUSIC HALL, B'way & 30th St. Matinées Tues. & Sat.
WHIRL-I-GIG AND BARBARA FIDGETY

5th Ave THEATRE, BROADWAY AND 28th STREET.
EDWIN KNOWLES.....Sole Manager
Evgs at 8:15. Matinées Wed. & Sat.
LAST TWO WEEKS.
"EQUALS 'A RUNAWAY GIRL.'"—SUN.
THE LATEST MUSICAL COMEDY SUCCESS,
THREE LITTLE LAMBS
Company of 65, including Miss Adele Ritchie, Miss Nellie Braggins, Miss Marie Cahill, Miss Clara Palmer, Mr. W. E. Philp, Mr. W. T. Carleton, Mr. Raymond Hitchcock, Mr. Edmund Lawrence. Mon. Feb. 5th, THE COUNTESS CHIFFON.
A DRAMA OF SERIOUS SOCIAL INTEREST.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA
Eves. at 8:30. Mat. Saturday at 2:15.
No Smoking or Drinking at Matinées.
EXTRA MATINEES LINCOLN'S AND WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAYS, FEB. 12TH AND 22D.
4TH WEEK! GREAT HIT!
Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger & B. D. Stevens Present
Jerome Sykes & Edna Wallace Hopper
Chris and the Wonderful Lamp
Sousa's Music. Book by Glen MacDonough.
CAST AND ENSEMBLE OF 100.
Under Stage Direction of Ben Teal.
Only Mats. Sat. Mat. Prices, 50c., 75c., and $1.00.

THE DEWEY 14th St. Between 3d & 4th Aves.
TO-NIGHT Another Great Bill.
JAMES THORNTON, YORKE & ADAMS, GERTRUDE HAYNES & her choir Celestial of 20 voices, GILBERT & GOLDIE, HASTINGS & WRIGHT, WALZ & ARDELL, RAE & BESCHE, BARNEY REYNOLDS, Kitty Gilmore Gardner, RHORER & HALSTERN, (Illustrated Songs.) Robt. Recker's Harmonists.
Com. to-morrow, Mon., Mat., & all week, Great Burlesque, Victoria Burlesquers. "A High Ball."
Juan de Caiceda, wire king, The Nawns.

THE CHARITY BALL
for the Nursery and Child's Hospital, will take place on Thursday evening, Feb. 1, at the WALDORF-ASTORIA.
Boxes from 11 to 1 at 2 East 35th St. Tickets at 16 West 11th St. and 19 West 56th St.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC, 14th St. & Irving Pl.
E. G. Gilmore & Eugene Tompkins, Props. & Mgrs.
10TH WEEK AND STILL CROWDED.
WAY DOWN EAST.
Prices 25-50-75-1.00. Mats. Wed. & Sat. 2. Ev. 8:10.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE. Mat. Sat.
LAST 2 NIGHTS SCHWEIGHOFER.
Monday, the great hit, 'S NULLERL, (a nobody.) Tuesday, Schweighofer's Benefit and Farewell, Scheu before the Secretary, 2d act "BLITZMADDEL," "OTHELLO'S SUCCESS," Wed., (Liederkranz,) "TWO HAPPY DAYS." Thursday and bal. of week, "IM WEISSEN ROESS'L."

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN. Jan. 1 to Jan. 27. 75TH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF OIL PAINTINGS at THE FINE ARTS SOCIETY, 215 West 57th St.
Open 10 A. M. to 6 P. M., and 8 P. M. to 10 P. M.
Admission.....25c.

HERALD SQ. THEATRE Chas. E. Evans, P'r. B'way & 35th St.
Evenings, 8:20. Matinées Wed. & Sat. at 2:15.
The Hoisery Model Play. David Belasco's Naughty Anthony.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. A STRANGER in a STRANGE LAND
Popular Prices! Wed. Mat., 25c. & 50c.

Koster & Bial's
THE GREAT LAFAYETTE,
Marvelous Mimetique Imitator,
Presenting his wonderful Travesties on CHING LING FOO AND SOUSA.
First appearance in a long, long time, MARION MANOLA
The QUEEN of COMIC OPERA, MARIE JANSEN.
Ritchie, the Tramp Cyclist; Binns & Binns, Musical Comedians; the Five Cornallas, and a Host of Other all-star acts.
TO-NIGHT'S CONCERT, BANDA ROSSA.
EUGENIO SORRENTINO—Conductor.
NINA FARRINGTON.
Will Recite Rudyard Kipling's Famous Poem, "THE ABSENT-MINDED BEGGAR."
Fred'k Hallen & Mollie Fuller, Haines & Pettingill, Goldin, Illusionist; Tim Cronin, Eva Mudge, Ethel Tillson, Maud Nugent, Binns & Binns, Effie Huested.
IN PREPARATION—THE GORGEOUS BALLET SPECTACLE, "PROGRESS."

ADMISSION 25c. SUNDAYS.
WORLD IN WAX.
EDEN MUSEE
NEW TO-DAY
SPECIAL GROUPS AND FIGURES.
CINEMATOGRAPH
TO-NIGHT AT 9.
STORY OF CINDERELLA.
NEAPOLITAN TROUBADOUR ORCHESTRA
This Afternoon and Evening.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL & 7TH AVENUE. 125TH-ST.
LADIES MATINEES — EVE. PRICES.
WED. & SAT. RES. ORCH. 50c. BALCONY 25c.
TO-NIGHT MINNIE PALMER & CO.
JOHN KERNELL—VESS OSSMAN.
Lewis & Ryan, Watson, Hutchings & Edwards, Florence Moore, Jessie Millar, & Oth's.
NEXT WEEK KATHRYN OSTERMAN & CO.
JOHN KERNELL—LEW HAWKINS.
Ward & Curran, Three Livingstons, Stanley & Wilson, The Eldridges, Mlle. Flora, Deaves' Marionettes, etc.

CHICKERING HALL,
Tuesday Evening, January 23.
A. Henry Savage Landor.
Subject: IN THE FORBIDDEN LAND. Illustrated.
Thrilling story of his Journey in THIBET. Capture by the Lamas, Imprisonment, Torture, and ultimate release.
Tickets, $1.50, $1, and 75c.
J. B. POND, Manager.

MENDELSSOHN HALL.
Third Concert Tuesday Evg., Jan. 23 at 8:15.
THE KNEISEL QUARTET OF BOSTON.
assisted by Mme. Szumowska, Piano.
Programme: HAYDN, Quartet D major, Op. 76, No. 5; FAURE, Sonata for Piano and Violin, A major; BEETHOVEN, Quartet, E minor, Op. 59, No. 2.
Tickets, $1.50, at Schuberth's, 23 Union Square.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.
JOHN DREW
IN THE TYRANNY OF TEARS.
Jan. 29—"MAKE WAY FOR THE LADIES."

MENDELSSOHN HALL. SNELLING.
SONG RECITAL. Monday Afternoon, Jan. 22, at 3.
Mrs. Granville Snelling.
Reserved Seats, $1.50, at Schuberth's, 23 Union Sq

ARION SOCIETY,
GRAND MASQUERADE BALL,
MADISON SQUARE GARDEN,
FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1900.

THIRD AVE. THEATRE. Monday Matinée
Sensation—NIGHT IN CHINATOWN.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.
GRAND OPERA SEASON 1899-1900.
Under the direction of Mr. MAURICE GRAU.
AT
TO-NIGHT, 8:15 O'CLOCK.
FIFTH GRAND SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERT.
Soloists: MMES. GADSKI and ZELIEDE LA'SSAN; MM. SALEZA, CAMPANARI, and VAN ROOY. Entire Opera Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. EMIL PAUR.
Mon. Ev'g, Jan. 22, at 8, LE PROPHETE. Mmes. Schumann-Heink and Suzanne Adams; MM. Alvarez, Plançon, and Ed. de Reszke. Conductor, Mancinelli.
Wed. Ev'g, Jan. 24, at 7:30, DIE MEISTERSINGER. Mmes. Emma Eames and Schumann-Heink; MM. Van Rooy, Bertram, Friedrichs, (début,) Breuer, and Dippel. Conductor, Paur.
Fri. Ev'g, Jan. 26, at 7:45, Double Bill—DON PASQUALE. Mme. Sembrich; MM. Scotti, Pinicorsi, and Saligmac. Conductor, Mancinelli. Followed by CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA. Mmes. Calvé and Mantelli; MM. Campanari and Dippel. Conductor, Bevignani.
Sat. Aft., Jan. 27, at 2, TANNHAUSER. Mmes. Ternina, Olitzka, and Nordica; MM. Van Dyck, Bertram, and Plançon. Conductor, Paur.
Sat. Ev'g, Jan. 27, at 8, at Popular Prices, FAUST. Mmes. Emma Eames and Mantelli; Mm. Ocellier (début) and Pringle. Conductor, Bevignani.
WEBER PIANOS USED.

CARNEGIE HALL
PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY of New York.
1899—FIFTY-EIGHTH SEASON—1900.
EMIL PAUR.....Conductor
FRIDAY, JANUARY 26TH, at 2 P. M.
SATURDAY, JANUARY 27TH, at 8:15 P. M.
PROGRAM.
Overture, "The Flying Dutchman".....Wagner
"Ganymed," (Contralto & Orchestra)..L. V. Saar (Composed for and sung by
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK
Symphony, No. 4, B flat major.....Beethoven
Songs.....Schubert, Schumann, Franz
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK
Overture, "Prometheus Bound".....Goldmark
Tickets at Carnegie Hall and Tyson's. Seats 75 cts. to $2; Boxes $12 and $15. Admission $1.
AUG. ROEBBELEN, Secretary.

PADEREWSKI
and
ADAMOWSKI QUARTET.
Only Recital at Sherry's.
TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 23, AT 4.
Mr. Paderewski will play Soli by Chopin, Schumann, Liszt, and Paderewski.
Tickets now on sale at SCHUBERTH'S, TYSON'S, all principal hotels, and at Sherry's.

MENDELSSOHN HALL, Jan. 23, at 3 P.M.
SONG RECITAL
BY
MR. PERRY AVERILL
With the assistance of
MISS ANNA OTTEN, Violinist.
MR. ORTEN BRADLEY, Pianist.
Res'd Seats, $1, at Schuberth's. L. M. Ruben, Mgr.

CARNEGIE HALL.
Tuesday evgs., January 23 & February 27.
Pittsburgh Orchestra
Victor Herbert, Conductor. Soloist, First Concert, MARIE BREMA First N. Y. reappearance
Seats, 75c. to $1.50. Boxes, $12 & $15. Now on sale at Schuberth's, Tyson's, Ruilmann's, & box office.

MENDELSSOHN HALL
Thursday evening, January 25th, at 8:15.
Mr. David Bispham's
REQUEST RECITAL
POPULAR PROGRAMME Comprising songs most frequently asked for.
Res. seats $1.50. Now on sale at Schuberth's.

CARNEGIE HALL. Thurs. Aft., Feb. 1, at 3:30.
SONG RECITAL BY
Madame Nordica and
Madame Schumann-Heink
Tickets $2.50, $2, & $1. Boxes $50 & $30. Now on sale at Schuberth's and Box Office.

Two Piano Recitals MENDELSSOHN HALL, THUR. AFT., Jan. 25; WED. AFT., JAN. 31, at 3 o'clock.
Hambourg
Tickets, $1.50 & $1, at Schuberth's, 23 Union Sq. Direction VICTOR THRANE. Knabe Piano Used.

CONSOLIDATED GAS FIGHT

Dissatisfied Stockholders May Have Recourse to the Courts.

Lively Meeting Expected—New Amsterdam Director Charges Unfair Tactics by Standard Oil Interests.

There was much gossip yesterday in the financial district about the local gas situation and it was evidently stimulated by the prospect of a lively meeting of Consolidated stockholders to-morrow. The opinion appeared to be general that if the interests represented by George A. Lamb of Lamb & Voss do not carry their point at the meeting, they will have recourse to the courts. On this point Mr. Lamb had nothing to say. He said that his statement on Friday contained all that was necessary to supplement his advertised appeal to the stockholders. The success of this appeal, he added, was astonishing. "I really believe," he continued, "that if I had another week I could stampede Monday's meeting."

Mr. Lamb called yesterday morning at the office of the Consolidated Gas Company and saw President Gawtry and David McClure, of counsel for the company. Mr. Lamb asked to be permitted to examine the by-laws of the company, and was refused. He will be present at the meeting to-morrow and expects that the interests that have been considered dominant will be represented by counsel, that an endeavor will be made to rush every measure through, and that technicalities will govern the proceedings.

Mr. Lamb will continue his advertising appeal up to the day of the annual meeting. This will cost about $12,000. It is understood that the expense will be borne partly by dissatisfied Consolidated stockholders and partly by New Amsterdam interests.

There does not appear to be any foundation for Wall Street gossip which hints that Consolidated and New Amsterdam have a perfect understanding, while apparently hostile. On this point a Director of New Amsterdam said yesterday that the hostility between the two companies could not be more bitter. He continued:

"The attempt to get control of New Amsterdam by unfair means is as clear as could be. Two bank Presidents and the Standard Oil interests represented by H. H. Rogers and William Rockefeller had the idea that by ordering the Directors of Consolidated, whom they dominate, to keep the price of gas down to 65 cents they could take away the customers of New Amsterdam and depreciate the value of its stock until they could get a controlling interest cheap and turn it over to Consolidated at a paying figure, and so effect a consolidation, with a basis for controlling the local gas situation through New Amsterdam's Long Island plants and its tunnel under the East River. But they haven't got a controlling interest yet in New Amsterdam.

"As to Standard stock, I believe that Consolidated has not only the Sage and Andrews holdings, but has picked up enough beyond this one-fifth to give a control. I do not think the tactics of those who have been dominant in Consolidated affairs, those who order President Gawtry around, will succeed always. Under the present administration, Consolidated stockholders lose from $1,800,000 to $2,000,000 a year."

The Protective Committee of the Standard stockholders claimed, several days ago, to have control of 41,000 out of the 47,000 shares necessary to a majority control. The statement that Consolidated had picked up enough stock to give it control was repeated to Mr. B. McAlpin, counsel for the committee. He said:

"So there is a report to that effect, is there? Well, if they've got a majority of the stock, I don't know where they got it. As for the committee, I will not confess to our having or not having acquired control of a majority of Standard stock."

Russell Sage was not disposed to talk about gas matters yesterday. "Nothing new, nothing new," he said, in evading a discussion. "So dull that I accept your visit as a social call."

INJURED IN POWER HOUSE.

Engineer Escapes Big Cable Wheels, but Is Badly Hurt.

Bert Edson Sherman, the Assistant Chief Engineer of the power house of the Lexington Avenue Railway, at 147 East Twenty-fifth Street, lies in Bellevue Hospital with a couple of fractured ribs on the left side, some scalp wounds, and a possible fracture of the skull. His condition is very critical.

Sherman had a narrow escape from an instantaneous and horrible death at the power house yesterday afternoon. There are narrow planks or platforms about the big wheels which move the cables. These platforms are used to oil the machinery and for inspection. Sherman was on one of these when he fell to the floor. Had he fallen the other way he would have been caught by the flanges of the immense wheel and cut to pieces.

Sherman is twenty-eight years of age and lives in Greenpoint Avenue, Woodside, L. I. He was discovered lying on the floor of the power house shortly after he fell, and was sent to Bellevue Hospital unconscious.

NEW CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions Rendered on Lace Window Curtains and Crude Tartar.

The Board of Classification of the United States General Appraisers yesterday announced a decision in what is known to the wholesale dry goods trade as the Nottingham goods case. The goods affected are lace window curtains made on Nottingham warp machines, into which a fine cord is sewed, giving the effect of embroidery. Paragraph 340 of the Dingley Tariff Act provides that lace curtains made on Nottingham warp machines shall be assessed not less than 50 per cent. ad valorem.

The Collector of Customs at Philadelphia assessed the goods for duty at 60 per cent., under Paragraph 339, as lace window curtains, not elsewhere provided for. J. W. Smith, one of the importers, protested, on the ground that the goods should be classified under Paragraph 340. The board sustained the Collector.

Another decision announced yesterday was on a protest made by the Tartar Chemical Company against the decision of the Collector at this port in assessing the regular duty of 1½ cents a pound on crude tartar imported from Marseilles. The importers claim that the goods should come in at a lower rate, as provided in the reciprocity agreement with France. This was conceded as to a portion of the goods, but as to another portion, which came from Algeria, via Marseilles, the board decided against the protestant. By a decision rendered some time ago, it was settled that the reciprocity agreement does not include the colonies of France. The board maintains that Algeria has always been regarded as a colony.

Death of Thomas Kennedy.

Word reached the city yesterday of the death in Dublin, Ireland, of Thomas Kennedy, private secretary to Lord Mayor Tallon, who recently visited this city. Mr. Kennedy accompanied the Lord Mayor while he was in America and became well acquainted with such public officials and private persons as had to do with the reception of Mr. Tallon. He was a barrister and was regarded as an authority on affairs affecting the financial relations of Ireland.

THINKS POPE HER GRANDFATHER

Mrs. Mathilde E. Samuel Adjudged Insane by a Sheriff's Jury.

Mrs. Mathilde E. Samuel, who believes the Pope is her grandfather, was yesterday adjudged insane by a Sheriff's Jury. She is the widow of R. H. Samuel, who left her a large estate. She has been confined in Bloomingdale Asylum since November, having been taken there from another institution for the insane in Brussels, Belgium.

The jury found her incompetent to manage either herself or her affairs on the testimony of Dr. S. B. Lyon of Bloomingdale, who declared Mrs. Samuel is incurable. The chief delusion which affects her is, he said, that she is the granddaughter of Pope Leo XIII.

Mrs. Samuel's property consists of about $30,000 in the hands of a banker in London, and a trust estate which yields her an income of over $5,000 a year. An application will now be made to the Supreme Court for the appointment of a committee of her person and estate.

TO WORK AN OLD COPPER MINE.

Boston Syndicate Has Purchased the Property at Arlington, N. J.—Five Million Tons in Sight.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 20.—George Bayless, Mayor of Arlington, to-day confirmed the report of the sale of the old Arlington copper mine to a Boston syndicate. Mayor Bayless and Anthony W. Schuyler have turned over their interests to men interested in the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Bayless said: "These same men are largely interested in the Amalgamated Copper Trust and the corporation known as the Arlington Copper Company, recently formed, with a capital stock of $2,500,000." He said it is estimated there are about 5,000,000 tons of ore in sight and the new company figures upon handling 500 tons per day.

Operations in the old mine were discontinued forty years ago on account of the water in the tunnels and because the facilities then at command made the work unprofitable. Several attempts have been made since then to free the mine of water, but they had been unsuccessful, until about six weeks ago, when powerful pumps were put at work. The deepest shaft, the "Victoria"—240 feet—has been pumped out so that men will be able to work in it.

The Arlington copper mine was first worked in 1720 by Henry Schuyler. He was born in Albany, N. Y., on June 25, 1662, and settled at Pompton, in this State, in 1697. Later he removed to the "New Barbadoes," which included all that land between the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers in Hudson County, and a large portion of Bergen County. In 1710 Mr. Schuyler purchased a tract of land on the old Back Road, now called Schuyler Avenue. It was there that copper was found.

Official records exist which show that 80,000 tons of copper have been shipped from the North Arlington property. Most of this was transported to Swansea and the British Lead and Iron Works of England.

The officers of the company have not yet been decided upon, but the organization will be effected, Mr. Bayless says, at a meeting to be held in New York next week. It is said to have been practically decided that the office of Treasurer will be filled by C. Amory Stevens of 39 Broad Street, New York.

Murderer Oswald Convicted.

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 20.—Edward Oswald was found guilty of murder in the first degree in Judge Garrison's court to-day. Oswald killed his wife and child. His defense was insanity.

A TRIP ON CHICAGO'S CANAL.

Effort Will Be Made to Change Ditch to Deep Waterway.

SUMMIT, Ill., Jan. 20.—To demonstrate the practicability of the drainage canal as a link in the deep waterway between the lakes and the gulfs, the Sanitary Trustees to-day, aboard their private yacht Juliet, made the first trip between Chicago and Lockport over the new water course in a steam propelled craft.

The twenty-five feet depth of the canal afforded ample room for the yacht, and the voyage was made in quick time. In addition to the Drainage Trustees and other sanitary officials, there were aboard Mayor Harrison, Commissioner of Public Works McGann, and other men prominent in official and business life. The feasibility of changing the canal into a deep waterway was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the party aboard, and the matter will be pushed.

During the trip Trustee Jones authorized Mayor Harrison to tender the Juliet to Admiral Dewey for a trip down the canal during his coming visit to Chicago.

Boy Held Up and Chloroformed.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 20.—George Hammerlin, fourteen years of age, a newsboy, was held up last night, chloroformed, and carried over to Bergen County, where he was found unconscious this morning on Farmer Bayfield's doorstep. The boy could only remember that he was overpowered on Church Street and taken into a carriage by two men. He was robbed of $1.65.

Gas on Chautauqua's Grounds.

CHAUTAUQUA, Jan. 20.—The Chautauqua Association struck a heavy vein of gas to-day while drilling a deep water well on the assembly grounds. The well was at a depth of 600 feet, and the pressure of gas is estimated at 1,000 pounds to the square inch.

WOMAN VANQUISHES A BURGLAR

Bents Him with a Broom and Gives Him a Push That Wrecks Stairs.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Jan. 20.—The wife of Harry Babbitt had an exciting encounter with a sneak thief last night. She heard a noise in an adjoining room, and on entering was startled to see a man with a bundle of clothing under his arm about to go into her husband's bedroom. She screamed, and the man made a dash for her, at the same time telling her to make no further outcry.

Mrs. Babbitt seized the man and, grabbing a broom, brought it down upon the thief's head. She repeated this performance until the man finally got away and attempted to escape through the hallway. Mrs. Babbitt followed and used her weapon with effectiveness.

As the man reached the stairs Mrs. Babbitt pushed him, and he fell, wrecking the stairway. The man, apparently uninjured, however, managed to reach the door and made his escape.

BRIDGEPORT FIRE LOSS $125,000.

Barnum & Bailey Circus May Lose More on Account of Delay.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 20.—The damage wrought by the fire at the Winter quarters of the Barnum & Bailey Circus here last night was fully $125,000. An inventory of the stock, which is being taken to-day, already shows a loss of more than $100,000, and Superintendent Hutchinson says the total amount surely will be $25,000 more.

The fire is believed to have originated from a lamp left in the car shed by roofers, who had been putting a tin roof on the building. It is supposed that some of the varnish, oils, or paint, of which there was a great quantity in the shed, took fire from the lamp.

Orders for the construction of new cars to take the place of the thirty destroyed were given this morning. It is now thought that the departure of the Buffalo Bill show on its Spring trip will be delayed by reason of lack of cars and that a loss of business will be felt as one consequence of the fire.

ALLEGED BANKRUPT A FRAUD.

Ogdensburg Clothier Conceals Goods Taken from His Stock.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 20.—A large amount of clothing belonging to the stocks of Louis I. Hoffman, who went into voluntary bankruptcy last week, was found secreted yesterday. Hoffman conducted clothing stores in Ogdensburg and Massena, and placed his liabilities at $14,500, with nominal assets at $9,000, though they are hardly half that amount.

E. P. Lynch, representing New York and Syracuse creditors, while dining in a restaurant Thursday night overheard men talking in a booth near by, one saying he saw boxes of clothing being carried from Hoffman's store a few nights before it was closed and taken away in a grocery sleigh. On Lynch's petition, Hoffman and others were taken before the referee in bankruptcy yesterday and admitted taking the goods away. On the court's order they were returned, and when the cases were opened they were found to contain the best goods of the entire stock.

A clue has been secured to other goods sent by Hoffman to his friends. Before the referee he said he knew of no other goods sent away, but would not swear he hadn't sent goods to others. The case is held open while further search is made.

Connecticut Insurance Men Sued.

WATERBURY, Conn., Jan. 20.—The New Haven Trust Company, receiver of the defunct Connecticut Life Insurance Company of Waterbury, formerly the Connecticut Indemnity Association, has brought suit against Lewis A. Platt of this city, a former President of the company, and Col. John B. Doherty, a former Secretary of the company, to recover $37,000, which, it is alleged, they unlawfully transferred from one department to another. The suit is similar to that brought some time ago by former Insurance Commissioner Betts against the Aetna Life Insurance Company of Hartford.

New Haven Police Make a Find.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 20.—In searching for $14 worth of goods which, it was suspected, were stolen by Joseph Powell, the police came upon nearly $2,000 worth of articles, alleged to have been stolen from merchants in this city. The goods were found in Powell's house. The man, his wife, and a daughter were arrested. It is thought this capture will explain numerous recent thefts from stores here.

GEN. F. V. GREENE OUT.

Ex-Adjt. Gen. Andrews Succeeds Him as President of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company.

Much comment was caused in business circles yesterday when it became known that Gen. Francis V. Greene had resigned the Presidency of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company and that Gen. Avery D. Andrews, who was elected Vice President of the corporation last year, and who had before that been its counsel, had been elected as his successor. Although the change was nominally made on Jan. 1, it did not become public until yesterday.

It was considered strange that Gen. Greene should have given up the position which he had held for six years when he had but a short time ago refused to accept the post of State Super

PROPOSED MORTGAGE TAX

How the Bill Reported at Albany Is Viewed by Experts.

SOME FOR, SOME AGAINST IT

Consensus of Opinion that the Tax Would in the End Be Paid by the Mortgageor.

The bill to impose a tax of one-half of 1 per cent. on all mortgages, as reported by the Joint Committee on Taxation at Albany, is a matter of considerable discussion among lawyers and others directly interested in mortgage loans. The consensus of opinion is that the tax, if it should be imposed, would in the end be paid by the mortgageor.

Savings banks and their attorneys are, as a rule, opposed to the enactment of such a law, while on the other hand some lawyers who are largely interested in handling loans for estates and individuals believe that the law would be generally beneficial. As yet none of the lawyers has had the opportunity to carefully study all the details of the proposed bill, so their criticisms of it are based entirely on its general policy.

The provisions for the collection of the tax are not generally known, especially those relating to the collecting of the tax due from mortgages held outside of the State. Whether the mortgageor would have to pay this tax and deduct it from the interest due is a question which, according to lawyers, may cause some complications if the law goes into effect.

Many large investors in mortgages have for several years been providing for such a law as the one proposed by the Joint Committee, and they have inserted a clause in all their mortgages which protects them against paying the tax. This clause provides that if any bill taxing mortgages is passed the mortgageor shall pay the tax. The clause also provides that the loan can be called in on three months' notice if the borrower does not agree to pay the tax.

A number of lawyers who are closely identified with mortgage loan transactions, either as counsel for banks or large estates making such loans, were asked their opinions on the proposed law. Their opinions, together with that of Tax Commissioner Feitner, are briefly as follows:

Benjamin Wright, counsel for the Dry Dock Savings Institution, said:

"In my judgment it will result in an injustice. It will end in the mortgageor paying the tax. Take outstanding mortgages which are bearing 4½ per cent. interest. If the mortgageor would not consent by an agreement to pay the proposed tax, it would mean that the mortgage would be called in and a new rate of 5 per cent. would be charged the owner of the property if he wanted to obtain a new loan.

"For several years all savings banks have been putting conditions or covenants in their mortgages, requiring the mortgageor to pay any additional tax that might be levied by the State. This clause provides that the mortgage loan can be called in in three months if the mortgageor does not arrange to pay the additional tax. I am now preparing covenants to be used in our mortgages, providing that the mortgageor pay the tax if the law is passed. There are large holders of unrecorded New York mortgages outside of the State, and it will be difficult to get at them. The only way will be to put the property owner under oath and have him make affidavit as to who holds the mortgage. Then comes the problem as to how to collect the tax on these outside loans. The Legislature may have some difficulty in settling that question."

George F. Butterworth, with the firm of Strong & Cadwallader, said:

"Until I see a copy of the proposed bill I can give nothing more than a general opinion of the proposition. The eventual outcome will be the payment of the tax by the borrower. It will also result in the calling in of many mortgages, particularly second mortgages and mortgages on farming property.

"The only way to reach the outside holders of mortgages will be to allow the owner of the equity in the property to pay the proposed tax and deduct it from the interest due the mortgagee. This would of course bring a protest from the person who loans the money, and he will eventually increase the rate of interest. The plan has been tried in California with the result of increasing interest rates. Many wealthy people who have residences in Newport now loan largely on New York realty. As it is they pay no tax. Under the proposed law they would either have to pay the 5 mills, withdraw their loans, or make the mortgageor agree to foot the bill."

James Punnett, of Schenck & Punnett, observed:

"I think that such a law would be a mistake, and the burden of it would fall entirely on the mortgageor. It would make it much more difficult to get loans on real estate. There is burden enough on real property now, and this law would mean a higher rate of interest to the property owner."

Augustus S. Hutchins, attorney for the Metropolitan Savings Bank, expressed his views as follows:

"I think the legislators are working at the wrong end. They should try to reduce expenses instead of increasing the rates of taxation. Every time they increase the income of the State they devise some way of spending the money by creating new offices. The only result of such a law as is proposed would be to stiffen the rates of interest. The payment of the tax would have to be made by the owner of the real estate. Supposing he now had a loan at 4 per cent., he would find that when he wanted to renew it he would have to pay the tax in addition to the prevailing rate of interest."

David Thomson of the law firm of Foster & Thomson remarked:

"It seems to me that such a law would put an additional burden on the real estate owner. Few loans have been made in recent years without a clause providing that if such an act should be passed the borrower would pay the tax. It is a hardship to tax mortgages and the real estate at the same time. The result would be that the real estate owner, who is taxed at present on its assessed value, would under this proposed law inevitably have to pay the tax on the mortgage as well. This would mean that he would be compelled to pay tax on 25 to 50 per cent. more than the actual cash value of his realty."

Louis B. Rolston of the firm of Turner, McClure & Rolston, counsel for the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, said:

"As a general proposition we believe that the taxes already imposed are sufficient. I have not seen a copy of the proposed bill, so I do not care to discuss it."

B. Aymar Sands of Bowers & Sands, said:

"I am inclined to favor the bill. I have always felt that a small tax on personal property that would be paid would be better than a large tax which, as a rule, is not paid. We do a large mortgage business for estates and individuals, and we are thrown in direct competition with life insurance companies and savings banks which are not taxed on their mortgage loans. If they were compelled to pay taxes on these loans it is probable that they would not invest so much in them, and individuals and estates would have better opportunities.

"Again, there is a large class of investors who will not venture to invest in mortgages on account of the publicity of the records. They are afraid of being caught in the tax list. If they knew that they would only have a fixed tax of one-half of 1 per cent. to pay on their investment they would be willing to loan on mortgages. As an illustration of the present situation, take the experience of a fire insurance company, a meeting of whose Board of Directors I attended to-day. The company has a large portion of its funds invested in certain bonds and stocks, which it could just now sell at an advantage. They have increased greatly in value since they were purchased by the company. If it did sell them and invest the proceeds in mortgage loans the result would be that it would have to pay a tax of 2½ per cent. to the city. This would reduce the earning capacity of the money to too low a margin for any fire insurance company. If there was one definite tax on mortgage loans, the company would be able to dispose of its bonds and stocks at a handsome margin, then invest in real estate loans, and later, if it saw that an advantage could be gained, reinvest in the other securities when they were lower.

"As a matter of fact, there is very little tax now paid on mortgages in this city. Under the proposed law this might be remedied."

Asked for an opinion as to the proposed mortgage tax, Commissioner Feitner said that he had as yet given the matter but slight consideration. "In general, however," he said, "it seems to me that a rather cumbersome method has been hit upon for accomplishing the desired result. If the taxation of mortgages is to be the way in which cities and towns are to contribute to the State treasury, would it not be better for each municipality to collect its own taxes under this method, and then turn them over to the State?

"No, I do not think there is anything impracticable about the scheme. A very large percentage of mortgages are on record, making it no very difficult matter to get at the names of mortgagees and to compel payment by making the tax a lien against the property."

President Hicks of the Bowery Savings Bank said that the lending institutions were materially opposed to the new plan for raising State funds on the general ground that nobody likes to be taxed. In reply to an inquiry as to what course the Bowery Savings Bank would take in the event of the proposed mortgage tax measure becoming a law, President Hicks said:

"We will not cross the bridge before we get to it, so I shall not undertake to say what we will do. This is what we can do, however: We can compel the mortgagors to pay the proposed tax. How? Simply because about 75 per cent. of our mortgages are past due, and there is nothing to prevent our calling these loans if the mortgagors refuse to stand an advance of one-half of one per cent. in the interest rate.

"It is also a fact," added President Hicks, "that a considerable number of our mortgages contain clauses protecting the bank against any such adverse legislation as that proposed."

ELECT THE TAX COMMISSIONERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While the subject of taxation is being discussed, will you permit me to present an idea that will, in my opinion, be of value to New York real estate owners?

The great injustice done in the collection of taxes from real estate arises from an unequal assessment imposed for purposes of taxation. No man, or set of men, can in one, two, or three years equalize these assessments. Such an undertaking is monumental, requires careful inquiry, knowledge of existing conditions in different localities, and untiring and constant attention. If assessments on real estate can be equalized, the result will be a lower tax rate and universal satisfaction. No good citizen owning real estate desires to shun his fair share of the burden of taxation. But when the assessments on his property are of a higher percentage of value than that assessed on other property, he naturally rebels, and such relief as is at present offered to property owners is insufficient and unsatisfactory.

As a relief I would respectfully suggest the following: That a bill be passed making the Tax Commissioners elective officers; that the said Commissioners be elected for a period of from eight to ten years, and receive a salary sufficiently large to compensate them for their entire time; that they be given the powers of a court, with the right to subpoena witnesses and engage experts. That the said bill contain a clause that all property shall be assessed at 80 per cent. of its real value; that the property owner shall have the right to go before such court of Commissioners with witnesses and be heard, and where assessments are shown to be in excess of 80 per cent. of the true value of the property assessed, they shall receive relief; that from time to time, as the Commissioners are informed of an undervaluation, they shall act upon such information, and shall increase the valuation on any property shown to be assessed for less than 80 per cent. of its true value; that the bill shall contain a clause requiring the assessed valuation of all real estate in Greater New York to be published in one or more daily papers, at least once every three years.

Such a bill, in my opinion, would ultimately bring about what is most essential to New York real estate owners, viz., equal assessments throughout the city, a lower tax rate, and confidence of the people in real estate investment, through the protection and rights that they would receive and enjoy under such a measure.

P. W. KINNAN.

New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

CRITICISES A LIBRARY.

Sharp Complaint of Management of that of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For some time I have had in mind the writing of a letter to you to call attention to the management of the library of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen, now at 18 to 24 West Forty-fourth Street. I have refrained until to-day, not knowing what were the resources of the society and thinking they were perhaps unable to do any better. But THE TIMES of to-day announces Mr. Andrew Carnegie's gift of $25,000, so that lack of means for the future at any rate need not impede the usefulness of the library. The two most serious causes of complaint are, first, the inefficiency of the service, and, second, the deficiency of the catalogue. Without using any strong language about the first, I would ask all interested in the subject, and especially members of the committee, to go and see it for themselves. As to the second point, the catalogue follows the antiquated subject method, with appendices for recent additions, so that if the book required has been added within the last few years, as many as ten supplements must be searched through in order to discover if the book is in the library. The assistant refuses all aid. There is no card catalogue, or any list of authors' names.

Besides the Columbia Library I use five different free libraries in the City of New York. I have used libraries also in various places in this country, and have never seen one so badly managed as that of the Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen. There appears a certain ungraciousness in finding fault with that for which one pays nothing, but surely in receiving benefactions the library incurs responsibility, and I am well assured that the prominent men whose names are on the committee desire to extend the usefulness of their library as far as possible through the community.

New York, Jan. 7, 1900. GRADUATE.

A visit to the library of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen was made by a reporter for THE TIMES. It was found that the catalogue used is a printed one, made in 1887, and the books are indexed in nine different parts according to subject matter. The parts are again subdivided into sections ranging from four to nine in number. Each section is devoted to one rather restricted subject. The part devoted to fiction contains both titles and authors alphabetically arranged, and the biographical works are listed by subjects, but in the other parts of the catalogue the sections contain only the authors' names alphabetically arranged. Reference is facilitated, however, by a general index of subjects giving pages of sections.

The additions to the library since 1887 are indexed in yearly supplements, arranged by subjects. The books purchased during 1899 are catalogued in a separate volume in monthly lists, divided into subjects.

This printed notice appears in the catalogue:

"Readers will promote their own convenience and facilitate the work of the library by purchasing a catalogue, which will enable them, at their leisure, to make lists of such books as they may desire. By having a catalogue at home they will be better able to make an intelligent selection, as they will have an opportunity of familiarizing themselves with the resources of the library on any subject."

There is no index to magazines in the library.

In regard to the catalogue, Librarian Jacob Schwartz said:

"It is as good a catalogue as we can afford. A card catalogue would be better, I will admit, but we can't afford to hire the staff of cataloguers which that would involve. Nor can we afford to print a new complete catalogue every year. This library is not intended for investigators or those who are doing research work. It is for the general reader of ordinary education, and many prefer a printed catalogue to one of cards.

"As for the assistants, all we require of them is the ability to get the books asked for on the written slips—a purely mechanical act."

Montefiore Home for Invalids.

The fifteenth annual report of the Directors of the Montefiore Home for Chronic Invalids, Broadway and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth and One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Streets, has been issued. The Treasurer's statement shows receipts from Oct. 1, 1898, to Sept. 30, 1899, of $104,146.63, and expenditures, $74,872.22, leaving a balance on hand of $29,274.41. The number of inmates admitted during the year was 310. In the course of the year a laboratory was established, which has already been found of the greatest value. The President of the Home is Jacob H. Schiff, the Vice President Louis Gans, the Treasurer Lyman G. Bloomingdale, and the Honorary Secretary Raphael Ettinger.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

The new term of the free evening educational classes of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, 861 Lexington Avenue, will begin Feb. 1. Enrollment may be made now.

TEMPORARY HELP SUPPLIED.

Establishment Up Town Provides Cooks and Waitresses for Receptions and Dinners.

"This has been a late season in some respects, but teas and receptions and dinners seem to have commenced earlier than usual, and we have been about swamped in our orders for cooks and waitresses," says the woman up town, who can supply a first-class cook, at almost a moment's notice, to cook a dinner and an equally good waitress to serve it. "Our busy season usually commences about the first of January," she went one. "The orders may come in some time before, but that is the time the real work begins, but this year we were hard at work by the first of December.

"Yes, it is quite a business to send out cooks and waitresses to dinners, receptions, and teas, where a larger force is required than the regular servants in a house, or where, perhaps, they require, if it is a dinner, a more elaborate bill of fare than the home cook is capable of preparing. The women who will go to do this work are first-class servants who are obliged or prefer to live in a home of their own and take occasional work to living out regularly.

"Some of them are married and feel that it is a very good thing to get a little extra money. Or perhaps, it is a woman who has a mother to take care of, and she lives at home with her and makes a fair income doing this emergency work. Some cooks have saved enough money to be able to hire a little apartment. It is easier to do this work and they are more independent. It is the cook more often than any other house servant who saves money. Perhaps being in kitchens all the time they do not have the temptation to buy clothes. The cook spends more of her time at home than the other maids usually. Anyway, she does save money very often, and then she goes into business in this independent way when she is middle aged. You very seldom find a young cook going out. Cooks sometimes, we find, start these little homes and have a little apartment, even when they are living out regularly. They may have some relative in it or they may not, but they like to have the feeling that they have a real home of their own somewhere that they can go to when they please and where they can keep a few belongings. The cooks who are doing the independent work frequently accept positions for a month, acting as substitutes.

"We like to have at least two days' notice before we send a cook, and sometimes we have them engaged a week or so in advance, but it is more often that people call in at 4 o'clock one day and say that they want the cook for the next, and we have to fly round to get one. The way we do when the order comes in is to send for the cook we think will be best suited to the place, and send her around to the house to see the woman who is to give the dinner. She usually has a menu made out, and knows about how much she wants to spend for the dinner. Frequently, as in most things one plans, she spends a good deal more money than she expected to in the first place. A good cook will make many suggestions. She will say such and such a thing will be very nice, and such and such a thing is being served for dinners just now. The cook who has the best ideas is usually the best liked.

"After the menu has been decided upon the cook will give a list of the things she will need. Sometimes the woman who is to give the dinner will order them, sometimes she will order part and tell the cook to supply the rest or she will tell the cook to take the whole responsibility and order them all. The cook is sure to understand marketing. On the morning of the dinner she goes to the house and prepares such things as must be prepared beforehand. Or she may make the entrées at home. If we have a good woman who is an excellent cook, who always prepares as much as she can at her own house, and takes it over to the house where she is to cook the dinner. It is difficult to get this woman now, and when we send for her she most frequently sends an understudy. A cook will not go usually for less than $3 a dinner, and for most dinners she will get $5 or $6.

Our cooks and waitresses are of all nationalities. A good many of them are Swedes. The Swedish women usually have been well trained in some of the schools of cooking or domestic science in Sweden. Many of the cooks take their own cooking utensils and things for garnishing. A Swedish cook is very particular, too, to give the dinner the appearance of being served in a well ordered private house. She will not hesitate to say to some of the suggestions offered that they would do very well for hotel service, and resemble that, but it would not do for a private house. Swedes are being employed largely for cooks now. There are not so many chefs and Frenchmen as there were some years ago. There are a good many colored cooks employed, the cooks who are paid $30 or $40, but those whose wages will run up to $70 are more apt to be Swedes.

"The waitresses we supply are also first-class servants who are living at home. They are women who have worked as high as $30 a month. You do not find waitresses often who get more than $35. People who are willing to pay more than that sum prefer to get an inferior butler. Women who come to us for waitresses say at first that they are going to try an experiment, that they have always had men, but they want to see if women will not give the affair a more to have a more homelike air. They always come back and say they are delighted with the result.

"There is one woman in a Long Island town who lives well and gives a number of handsome entertainments every year, who comes to us regularly for waitresses, and has usually the same ones. Her husband is a clubman and exceedingly particular about the service in his home. He was a little doubtful about women at first, but he is entirely reconciled now. Every year they have a large Christmas dinner, to which some twenty-five people sit down, and they have for it a head waitress and four assistants. It is such a relief, Mrs. Blank says, to know that the same woman will be there every year and take all responsibility off her hands. Besides the head waitress this year there will be three of the four others who have been there before. With well trained women it does not make much difference to the head waitress who they are.

"That is a good place for the emergency workers to go, for there are excellent house servants who treat the extra women well, their meals are served to them—at some houses they only have what they can get themselves—and when they reach the house they find the silver cleaned and ready, and the cut glass and china out ready for use. Things are cleared away after them, too, but the waitresses usually like to see that everything is put away before they leave, for they feel a responsibility for the fine china.

"The head waitress takes entire charge of everything, sees that the table is ready and decorated, prepares the salads, the radishes, celery, fruit, and such things, has the wines on ice or warmed, and then serves everything with her assistants. Everything goes like clockwork, and if there are orders given to the assistants no one ever knows it. The waitresses dress as the waitresses do in restaurants, in black dresses with white caps and aprons.

"The most frequent order is for a cook and one waitress, but we send many waitresses to afternoon teas and receptions. We ask always if the waitress to be sent shall be one who will take charge or only one who will do as she is told. But the one to take charge is usually required, for as the woman who engages her will say: 'It will be such a relief to have some one who knows how to do everything and relieve me of all the care.' We send dishwashers, too, but they are not the ordinary class of dishwashers, but waitresses who are careful of fine china and who are intelligent and know the order of the courses, so that they are ready with the dishes.

"We have all kinds of people coming to get help. One day such a scared little woman came in. She looked all around when she walked in, and finally whispered: 'I thought perhaps you might help me.'

"Well, it took me an hour and a half to find what that woman wanted. She seemed to be a little doubtful about me and suspicious, as if she expected me to go straight off and tell her dearest friends. She was a plain little woman, who had married a professional man it seemed. She had lived a very quiet life evidently, and didn't know how things should be done, though she had an idea that there was a right way. She had been an invalid, but now that her health was improved she and her husband wished to pay some of their social debts, and it was the first attempt about which she wished help. I told her to come in the next day and I would see what I could do for her. In the mean time I dropped a note to a clever housekeeper to drop in to see me. She came, and I had just told her something of what was wanted when my little woman came in.

"My housekeeper took her over in a corner, and there they talked for a solid hour or so. She drew a table, put the silver and china on it, told the little woman about wines, how much of different things would be required for so many people, and even wrote out recipes. With that the little woman went off. She must have made her first attempt something of a success, for she came back again some time after and asked for Miss Blank, the housekeeper. I proposed writing and making an appointment, or having Miss Blank write her, or something of the sort; but no, she seemed afraid to have that done, and insisted that she would drop in to see if Miss Blank was not here. Of course, she never was, and finally I directed my little lady to the establishment of a cooking teacher whom she would be likely to find at home always, and we have not seen her since.

"How do we get good servants? Oh, that is a question. Of course, some of them come to us through women who know us here, and servants who come here have their relatives and friends whom they send to us. Sometimes the servants of the wrong kind mistake us for another place not far off, but we usually know them the minute they come in, and direct them to it. Sometimes they are clever enough to think they are in a good place and won't go off without being registered. 'You don't have 'em sit in the office!' they exclaim, looking around, and that seems to give them a good opinion of us. We don't want any one without good references, which we have verified."

A PENSION FRAUD EXPOSED.

Venerable Witnesses Come from the South to Washington to Unmask a Negro Impostor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The investigations of the Pension Bureau into frauds on the Government frequently result in the trial of interesting cases. There was concluded recently in the Criminal Court a quaint, dramatic trial, which brought up a vanished phase of American life and history and filled the courtroom with figures from ante-bellum days.

The man who had been run down by Commissioner Evans's agents was a negro who gave the name of William H. Taylor. There was nothing of the ante-bellum flavor about him. He was distinctly a modern negro, one of the coarse, commonplace type so familiar in the slums of Northern cities. He has secured a pension on account of a gunshot wound in the hand, received at Petersburg.

Taylor had a glib tongue and the smartness of the city negro. He told his story fluently, with plenty of touches to give his war experiences versimilitude. He was a Marylander, brought up a slave, he said. He ran away during the war and went to Boston, where he enlisted in the Fifth Massachusetts Cavalry. The regiment went to City Point and thence to Petersburg, where he participated in a good deal of the fighting, and in one of the assaults received a wound in the hand, for which he was drawing a pension. He showed his hand, which bore a long, irregular scar. He talked along confidently and answered every question promptly. Sometimes his answers betrayed a monumental ignorance of the subject, but he never hesitated. Once he testified that he was on board the Tallapoosa. He was asked where he slept, and replied, "In a hammock in the Captain's cabin."

"What is a hammock?" asked the Judge.

"A shelf built into the wall," answered Taylor, without a moment's hesitation.

"Do you know Jack-o'-the-Dust?" asked the prosecutor, referring to the sailors' name for the Paymaster's clerk.

"There was not a man on board named Jack," replied Taylor.

But his story about his army experiences was as straight as a string, and he had a score of witnesses. Two of them swore that they served with Taylor in the Massachusetts regiment, and were with him when he was shot. The first witness against him was a venerable colored man of the old house-servant type of the days "before the war." He swore that he himself was William H. Taylor, the soldier of the Fifth Massachusetts, who fought at Petersburg. He is now a servant in a Southern family living at Frederick, Md., and before the war he was a slave, working as a house servant.

As the two men faced each other it seemed like the contrasting of two periods of American history. The old negro spoke softly, gravely, in the deliberate speech and with the unconscious dignity on which Southern writers of plantation days delight to dwell. He had still something of a soldierly bearing, and looked venerable with his white mustache and beard. His mild, serene speech and mellow Southern dialect contrasted wonderfully with the aggressive modernity of the claimant.

Then came an old woman from King George County, Va., whose striking appearance and reverberant voice riveted attention the moment she appeared. She was the typical "mammy" of the South. She was very tall and her carriage was unconsciously majestic. She wore a mammoth headdress, and her figure was swathed in an immense kerchief, wound over her shoulders and around her waist. She was nearly eighty years old and half blind, but her voice was deep and ringing, and rich with the lost eloquence and pathos of the old South, past and gone. She was Jane Coakley, the prisoner's aunt, and she testified that his name was Matt, and that when the war broke out he was a little boy.

"Can you identify the defendant?" asked the prosecutor.

She remained silent. The high-sounding words were meaningless to her. The Judge, to help her, asked her kindly: "Look around and see if there is any one you know here."

She raised her stately figure and slowly walked toward the prisoner. Halting, she looked at him attentively until she could be sure that her failing sight had not deceived her. Then the gracious dignity she had worn forsook her, and suddenly throwing out her arms, she cried, in a voice so ringing as to charge with grief that it fairly thrilled her hearers:

"Matt! Matt! My sister's boy! How could you do it, Matt? How could you lie and swear what's false and bring disgrace on folks that's good and true?"

Then she turned and tottered away with bowed head. The prisoner's nonchalance had deserted him, and he was cowering in his chair. There was not a man in the courtroom who was not affected, and tears stood in the eyes of some.

"It seemed," said an official of the Pension Bureau afterward, "like a Shakespearean denunciation." It was like an outcry from the grave of the buried negro life of the past, at the discredit brought upon the race by a modern and degenerate type.

Finally, to complete the dramatic portrayal of historic types, the typical old Virginian slaveholder took the stand. He was the man who was supposed to have been Matt Taylor's owner, and he was called by the defense to rebut that allegation. He surprised them by testifying that he had been Matt's owner, and that when the war broke out he became an officer in the Confederate Army and went to the front, leaving Matt one of the slaves in his household. Matt was a child at the time. The witness was a very old man, with hair and beard as white as snow, and deep lines in his face. He had all the haughtiness, impetuosity, and unreasonableness of the Southern Colonel of fiction, with all the dignity of an old officer and slaveholder and an accent purely Southern.

The prosecution proved beyond a doubt that the old ex-slave from Frederick was the real Taylor and that the prisoner was an impostor. He was convicted, and the soldier-slave, the old "mammy," and the slaveholder-soldier went back to their Southern homes after their short mingling with the modern world.

YALE READY FOR "PROM." WEEK

The Juniors Prepare for Their Big Social Event.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 20.—Next week will be Yale's gala season of the year from a social standpoint. The junior promenade, bringing with it a score or more of minor events, such as germans and teas, has tended to make "Prom" week the gayest of the college year.

The week of festivities will be ushered in with the Glee Club concert in the Hyperion Theatre on Monday night. Immediately after the concert the three upper classes will hold their germans in the various halls in and about the campus.

The junior german will be held in Alumni Hall, and led by F. S. Curtis. One hundred couples will attend. F. B. Adams will lead the senior german, which will be held in Lenox Hall, and attended by fifty couples. The sophomores will hold sway in Warner Hall under the leadership of J. W. Burdick. Favors for 150 have been provided. These events, brilliant in their way, are expected to be but a mere trifle in comparison with the promenade of the juniors, to follow on Tuesday night in the armory. The dancing will be in progress from 9 o'clock until 4 in the morning. P. L. Mitchell, of Cincinnati is Chairman of the "Prom" Committee.

In the afternoons of Monday and Tuesday teas will be held by the college set all over the city. The largest will take place on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry L. Hotchkiss, in Hillhouse Avenue. She will entertain, according to her annual custom, a host of out-of-town girls and their student friends. At the houses of the leading secret societies teas will be held in addition to private dances at intervals during the week.

At this time of the college year the florists usually reap a harvest in the violet business by charging exorbitant prices. This year the flower vendors have been outwitted by two students with business inclinations. The young men have secured from out of two 50,000 violets, which they are offering for sale at $1.75 per hundred. This is a great deal cheaper than the florists can sell them, and the flowermen expect a loss rather than the handsome profits they usually make during "Prom" week.

STEAM YACHT DESIGNING

Possible to Produce as Good Vessels Here as Abroad.

A PAPER BY W. A. FAIRBURN

He Declare that It Is Time for the Patriotism of American Yachtsmen to Assert Itself.

Steam yacht designing in America has been the topic of endless comment among those who profess to believe that British naval architects are immeasurably in advance of Americans. While it is true that up to a year ago the average steam yacht from the board of an American designer was anything but a thing of beauty, the result shown in the late additions to the New York Yacht Club fleet is such as to warrant the statement that, if given an opportunity, the native designer can turn out as creditable a steamer as his sailing craft has proved speedy.

The current number of Marine Engineering contains an interesting paper on the subject by Mr. William A. Fairburn, chief draughtsman of the Bath Iron Works. He says in part:

"Considerable controversy has appeared of late in a few yachting papers, criticising the general appearance of various American steam yachts. The writer will not here make any plea for American-designed and built steam yachts, but he will say, and this most forcibly, that there are men in America to-day capable of designing steam yachts which, in appearance, accommodation, and sea-going qualities will be equal to the best production of foreign designers. It is about time for the patriotism of American yachtsmen to assert itself so that we can build American-designed steam yachts for American owners. Many yachts on both sides of the Atlantic could without doubt be classed as failures. The design of a steam yacht by the majority of shipbuilding firms is not given the strict attention and careful consideration which it is entitled to, and that is why there are so many naval architects to-day who make a specialty of yacht design.

"The most skillful naval architect cannot design a truly handsome, successful steam yacht if he is not thoroughly in sympathy with his work. He needs to schooled to the work. His judgment must be good and his taste such that all lines of the vessel harmonize with each other. Many a pleasure craft to-day has graceful endings—bow and stern very pleasing to the eye when viewed separately, but when placed on the same vessel they lack harmony and fail to balance. The combination of sheer, bow and stern is generally what determines the appearance of the yacht, but much also depends on the location and rake of spars, stack, &c., and the arrangement of the deck work. On a steam yacht much has to be sacrificed to get a fine appearance."

On the subject of the steam yacht as an auxiliary to the vessels of the regular navy Mr. Fairburn says:

"In time of war the ful-powered steam yacht will undoubtedly prove an acquisition to the navy, acting as a dispatch and special service vessel. The high-speed yacht built for Sound and coast work has been and may continue to be a very popular vessel in America; and these vessels having fair accommodation, high speed, light draught, good manoeuvring qualities, and ability to rapidly get up steam, could probably with little expense be converted into torpedo or patrol vessels in case of an emergency, provided they are not too small; for the general dimensions, the model, and the motive power are about the same for the fast yacht as for the torpedo boat. Nevertheless, well-designed pleasure yachts will not make first-class war vessels, and these vessels should only be thought of as auxiliaries, being used only when war vessels cannot be procured."

The subject of the conversion of yachts into war vessels is far better understood at the present time than it was a year ago, and although some of the yachts that were transformed into warships did good work during the war with Spain, it cannot be gainsaid that such conversion is costly, comparatively ineffective, and undesirable. It should only be done under circumstances similar to those that existed in 1898, when the Navy Department was practically crippled for small craft. In making them fit for war vessels, thousands of dollars' worth of valuable fittings were destroyed, and even then the vessels, on account of the defective arrangements for war service, both as regards crew space, storage, lack of distilling plant, etc., were but little better than makeshifts.

Mr. Fairburn gives some details as to the cost of steam yachts. He says in part:

"A small steam yacht like the Oberon costs about $7,000, and this vessel is no larger than many a launch. A yacht fit for fair weather coasting is very cheap at $18,000, and the majority of this class exceed this figure by a good deal. It is said that the Ilsa, 90 feet long and of 12 knots speed, cost about $60,000; the Peregrine, 131 feet long and 14 knots, $85,000; the Electra, $125,000, and the builders of the Atalanta, Eleanor, and Corsair II. received about $200,000 each for the construction of these vessels. It is said that John Jacob Astor (the late William Astor) paid $240,000 for the Nourmahal; the Varuna cost Eugene Higgins about $300,000, and the Aphrodite has cost Col. Payne about $360,000. These prices are for the boats complete, without the fittings and furnishings and equipment furnished by the owner. The largest yachts afloat to-day, similar to Howard Gould's Niagara, are probably worth from $400,000 to $600,000 complete, with all furnishings on board. But initial cost is not all that must be considered, for it costs a fortune every year to keep any of these large pleasure craft in commission, the running expenses of the larger vessels varying from $8,000 to $15,000 per month, and sometimes, when there is much entertaining, even more."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A. L.—A receipt for a debt is prima facie evidence of payment in a court of law. It need not be supported by any other evidence. If the other side disputes the payment the burden of proof remains with that side.

NEWARK.—The movement of the sun is certainly perceptible in much less than a thousand years. Accurate measurements are difficult to obtain in the nature of the case, but it is known that the sun is traveling toward an angle of the Milky Way, near the star Vega, dragging the planetary system with it, at an enormous rate of speed. The manner in which observations of the sun's movements have been, and are being, taken, is by repeated observations of the positions of the fixed stars, which are merely other suns. The anbles obtained are, of course, exceedingly minute, but are within the scope of modern astronomical instruments. The path in space traversed by the sun is called the sun's way. The rate of motion is said to be 150,000,000 miles a year.

CONSTANT READER AND DR. HOCHKEIMER.—The stations on the underground rapid transit road will be located as follows: City Hall, (express,) Canal Street, Spring, Bleecker, Astor Place, Fourteenth Street, Eighteenth Street, (express,) Twenty-third Street, Twenty-eighth Street, Thirty-third Street, Forty-second Street, Grand Central Station, (express,) Forty-second Street and Broadway, and thence on the West Side Branch, Fiftieth, Fifty-ninth, Sixty-sixth, Seventy-second (express,) Seventy-ninth, Eighty-sixth, Ninety-first, Ninety-sixth, (express.) One Hundred and Fourth, One Hundred and Tenth, One Hundred and Sixteenth, Manhattan Street, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh, One Hundred and Forty-fifth, One Hundred and Fifty-seventh, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth, One Hundred and Eighty-first, Inwood Street, Two Hundred and Fifteenth Street, Canal, and Bailey Avenue. From One Hundred and Fourth Street on the west side, the road will branch off to Lenox Avenue, the first stop being at One Hundred and Tenth Street, then One Hundred and Sixteenth, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, One Hundred and Thirty-fifth, One Hundred and Forty-first Street, then under the Harlem River to Mount Morris Avenue, Third and Melrose Avenues, Westchester and Jackson Avenues, Westchester and Prospect Avenues, Southern Boulevard and Westchester, Jennings Place, One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street and Boston Road to Bronx Park.

A READER: The sanitary officials in the Borough of the Bronx are rather irregular in reporting deaths in the borough to the office of the Health Department. They send the records to the latter office once or twice a week. The deaths are published in THE NEW YORK TIMES as soon as recorded at the Bureau of Vital Satistics.

P. DOWNING: It is desirable but not obligatory to stamp or permanently mark every patented article with the word "Patented" or "Pat." and the date of the patent. If the patented article put on the market or sold be not so stamped no damages can be recovered for infringement prior to the date of serving notice on the infringer.

A. MORGENSTEIN.—In 1876 Samuel J. Tilden was accredited with a plurality of 250,935 over Rutherford B. Hayes, who was elected President. At this time there was some dispute as to the votes of Florida, Oregon, Louisiana, and South Carolina. Since 1876 the Presidential candidate elected has received a plurality of all of the popular vote, but not a majority over all of his opponents.

AUCTIONEERS AND THEIR WAY.

Some of the Tricks and Jokes with Which They Sustain the Interest of Their Audiences.

"You couldn't put down in a category any particular traits required to make up a good auctioneer," said a man of many sales yesterday, "for there are as many different methods of auctioneering goods as there are men who do it. There are two general qualifications that a man must have, a quick wit and a ready tongue, and your real auctioneer is born, not made. It's as much a profession as is the stage, and in some ways it is not so different. The auctioneer is always playing to a large audience, which he must keep in good humor and entertained. How he entertains the people depends upon circumstances, and he never knows beforehand what he is going to say. The best things come to him on the spur of the moment, as they often do to a man playing on the vaudeville stage.

"The way I happened to go into the business was rather peculiar. I had a dream in which I was an auctioneer. My father had met with reverses about that time, and that dream settled me in a profession. I went down to the Mayor's office and applied for a license, got it, and I have been in the business ever since. I am not superstitious, but that dream gave me a suggestion which happened to be the right one.

"The first thing I did was a big sale of Japanese goods down town. I was a little nervous—something in the nature of stage fright, I should say—then and for the next two or three times. But I got along all right and made enough of a success of the first sale for the man to give me seven months' work some time after.

"One thing that I do sometimes to get up an interest is to give away money. I offer a dollar to some one who needs it. I have given away a good many dollars in that way. One day a very gentlemanly man said: 'I will take a dollar.'

"There was no one in the room who looked needy and I gave it to this man and he went off. But he came back later and bought from $75 to $100 worth of goods.

"Then when things are a little dull sometimes I put up a dollar at auction and auctioneer it off. The bids will begin small, and finally when some one bids 90 cents I knock it down to him. Then I put up 90 cents and sell it for 80, and 80 cents and sell it for 70, and so on. It gives the people an idea that you are a pretty good sort of a fellow, that there is nothing mean about you, and they will bid better.

"Some time ago there were a good many fake auctions, and the entire business got a black eye. At that time I inaugurated the custom of giving back the money if people were not satisfied with their purchases, and a good many other auctioneers have taken up the practice. Any one who wants to come back and bring any article bought at one of my auctions can do it and get the money, though the law allows us to keep any deposits made in such a case. This is announced several times during the sale, and it gives people confidence. We do it, too. For instance, there was one man who bought a bill of goods that amounted to about $800. Then when he got them home his wife found that she could not place some $225 worth, and the man had them loaded on a wagon and sent back and we refunded the money. It pays, for the man has been back again, and he has bought $3,000 or $4,000 worth of goods since.

"Another man brought back a clock and said the regulator would not work. He had paid $2.50 for it. We didn't make any investigation or try to explain. 'Give him back the money,' I said to the cashier. He said he was much obliged and went off. I had never seen him before, but have sold him some $2,000 worth of goods since.

"One funny thing that happened in one of these cases—and I give you my word for it that there is no exaggeration—was with a man who bought a little painted comb and brush tray for which he paid 10 cents. When he got it home he found that there was a little defect in it, and that man brought that tray all the way back to New York from Stamford, Conn., to get his money refunded.

"One thing that is a great annoyance to an auctioneer is a mean bidder. A mean bidder is one who will bid 5 cents at a time. More women do that than men, for as a rule they have less money. You will find the big buyers among men. There is a reason for that. If a man spends $200 or $300 and buys a lot of things and takes them home to his wife she is very apt to be pleased. But if the wife thinks that the husband is pretty apt to make a row about it.

"Then some people will bid small sums for a valuable article. A man will bid $1 for something that is worth $100. Now, people who go to auctions are supposed to have some idea of the value of things, but they sometimes display very little judgment. When a man starts a thing in that way I say:

"'Oh, you don't want this; you want the

COTTON AND THE SOUTH

Great Changes Have Been Wrought by Manufacturing.

PROGRESS OF COLUMBIA, S. C.

New Mills Have Developed It Into a Modern, Wideawake City, Full of Business Activity.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 20.—A few years ago the chief boast of the people of this city was of its glorious past before the ravages of war and the blighting experience of reconstruction had flung it in the dust, oppressed by the incubus of black domination, and arrested in development by a debt of a million dollars imposed by a newly enfranchised race that appreciated the opportunities of power rather than their responsibilities. Like a monument to its own inability, the Capitol of the State, begun many years ago, stood unfinished, as a confession that what had been attempted could not be done. There was a little straggling business in the streets, next to no building, a palpable deficiency of public spirit, and a hopelessness of the future that was concealed behind a typical Southern resolution and grit that was as touching as it was apparent.

Columbia has changed. The atmosphere of dejection has been dissipated. The people who were hopeless ten years ago have taken heart. Instead of standing still, the population has increased and is increasing. The streets are alive all day with the activity of business. Public spirit is awakening, and will yet become fully aroused; will throw off the burden imposed by ignorant and reckless extravagances, and will yet make of a naturally handsome town one of the most attractive and comfortable of cities. Columbia has about stopped dating everything from the fire that followed Gen. Sherman's occupation in 1865, and dates its new epoch from the beginning of cotton spinning and weaving that has served to set everything in Columbia in motion as a natural result of the extensive manufacture of the raw product that Columbia formerly sent away to be developed elsewhere at a profit in which the town did not share.

It is very difficult to write about the prospective development of the cotton manufacture in this Piedmont district without falling into the use of superlatives and incurring the reputation of being visionary. After journeying about among the cotton mills, in company with a man who has dry-nursed the interest for years, and who now coddles it without apology, as something his very own, it is not easy to adopt critical language in speaking of a situation that at first glance looks more like the result of magic than the logical outcome of the application of capital and common sense to advantages held out years ago by nature and only grasped within the last five years to really great purpose. It is but a year or two ago that Columbia was a cotton-shipping point; drawing its supply from plantations, great and small, all around its limits. Now it ships next to no cotton, and next year it will ship in instead of shipping out. Every industry shares the impulse given by the operation of cotton mills that cannot produce enough cloth by daylight, but must run day and night to meet the demand.

BEGINNING THE NEW ERA.

The beginning of the new cotton manufacturing movement here is not yet five years old, if the experiment of one company be excepted. The first mill was an Eastern plant moved down to Columbia, with the idea of utilizing it in a country where labor would be cheap enough to compensate for antiquity of machinery. The later development is attributed in good part to the energy and confidence of W. B. S. Whaley, an engineer, to whom great enterprises present no alarming features, and who possesses the faculty of inspiring capital with some of his own lack of timidity. He first, in 1895, directed the construction of the Richland, a steam mill, begun to be built with a capital of $150,000, and finished with $300,000 capital. Then he went into the scheme for developing the Granby mill property. At first that had $200,000 capital. From time to time it was increased, large buildings taking the place of small ones, the most modern machinery displacing that which was older, and economies enforced during depression were continued with the dawning of prosperity. While the Granby was thus furnished, it seems, the Olympia, which is to be the greatest of Columbia's mills, was projected, and it is now going up. Its capital is $1,500,000, two-thirds of which has been subscribed.

Mr. Whaley started out to demonstrate to would-be cotton manufacturers that cotton could be economically manufactured with steam power. This, in a community that had cherished the idea that it must rely upon the power to be derived from the Congaree River needed confirmation. The Richland steam mill proved the correctness of the claim. This was also a very important thing to the owners of a canal, by which the waters of the Congaree, at great expense and by the construction of elaborate works, were brought into service to develop electrical power. This power was for sale, a great deal of it, and it possessed many advantages over steam. Using steam fixed the price of electricity at $15 per horse power per year. At the time that rate was fixed it was the lowest rate ever made for electricity as power in manufactures. To meet needs that seemed to go beyond the ability of the canal company, the Olympia mill is constructing a steam plant to generate electric power to the extent of 5,000 horse power, and expects to supply not only its own mill, but the Richland, which is to be converted from steam, and a street railway under construction, besides lighting the city streets. The canal company's plant supplies 10,000 horse power, and Whaley's plant will increase the total supply by 5,000.

CHARACTER OF BUSINESS.

To get away from statistics for a moment and deal with the picturesque aspects of the industrial development here, it may be said that a very good idea of the character of the business doing here may be gathered from notes of a visit to two leading mills. In the Columbia Duck Mill and the Granby Cloth Mill for the manufacture of brown sheetings one may get an idea of the mill work here. The duck mill is a fine structure, close to town, and near the canal company's power house. It has made its name in the trade with its brand of "Arctas," and is more than 100 different kinds of goods go everywhere that duck is consumed, some of it having been shipped to South Africa. The labor employed in this mill dwells beyond the Congaree River, in another county that contributes not to the taxable valuations of Columbia, and so vexes Columbia with impossible suggestions of the wisdom of annexation. The labor is white. It lives comfortably in rows of monstrous frame houses, with differences as to thrift and neatness found even among millionaires. This duck mill eats up 30,000 bales of cotton a year, as the use of the heavy yarns required for most duck calls for a greater supply of the cotton than is necessary to make the goods of lighter thread.

There is some secrecy about the Columbia Mill. A cotton manufacturer may not enter it. The Columbia people have secrets they do not care to divulge to rivals, and so the ban is on the door against all visitors. It was suspended to let in your correspondent, and the weaves of the Columbia looms were displayed with pride. As to profits, the answer to an inquiry was a comfortable smile. Over at the Granby, at present the greatest mill in operation at or near Columbia, there were no secrets. The mill was open. So was the history. Some of it has been related. In the great brick building, securely constructed, something like 1,000 persons were operating 65,000 spindles and 1,500 looms, 800 of them Draper looms. The product, one unvarying sort of brown sheeting, was being shipped out as fast as produced, either for export as it came from the looms or for conversion at other points into printed cloths. The labor, all white, as it is everywhere in Southern mills, was described as efficient. Looking down the long rows of spindles it seemed to the writer as if there were too many infants at work tending them. Many of them were so small as to be scarcely fit for any but baby clothes. The manager of the mill, when asked how much the children earned, said that they made "as much as 50 cents a day." For small children, this may have been tempting, but I was sustained by a Columbia man in my opinion that the operatives included too many immature South Carolinians.

THE PRINCIPAL MILLS.

The two mills looked at were the principal ones, and typical only of the five in operation in Columbia of near it consuming upward of 50,000 bales of cotton. Next year the consumption in present and added mills will reach 75,000 bales. The gain to Columbia in manufacturing that cotton, instead of shipping it to other States or to foreign countries, is not told when one hears of the percentages of profit reaped by the stockholders of the mills. Trade of all kinds has developed wherever the working population has been enlarged and furnished with the means of indulgence in better food, better clothes, more articles that were formerly considered luxuries, and something to save besides. These may seem ordinary occasions for rejoicing, but in Columbia and some other Southern localities they are a boon, and not only a present blessing, but a promise of future improvement and prosperity. To conduct commerce railroads must be provided.

Columbia is already pretty well supplied with railroad transportation, the far-reaching Southern Railway system tapping it and enjoying much business. Faith in the future is exhibited by the enterprise backed up by capital of the Seaboard Air Line, which is making a plateau of a wide ravine at one side of the city, and will before long occupy it with its yards and erect a fine station for its passenger service. This location is considered advantageous, and Columbia delights to watch hundreds of men with grading implements and horses hurrying the work toward completion. It suggests a reason for the increasing number of wholesale and retail stores, the erection everywhere of new houses, and the talk that persists in being heard of municipal improvements to make the city look as if its most active men were at last on the way to success.

Columbia, confident of her ability to hold on in the future to her share of the important lead that South Carolina has already established as a Southern manufacturing State, keeps her eyes open to follow the statistics that tell the story of her solid advancement. Some of the latest figures are eloquent. During the year ending Aug. 31, 1899, South Carolina manufactured nearly 444,000 bales of cotton, or 65,000 more bales than during the year preceding. The increase in North Carolina was about 50,000 bales; that in Alabama 31,600 bales; that in Georgia 13,000 bales. The whole South manufactured 1,380,399 bales, an increase of 170,079 bales. South Carolina, far behind Georgia in undertaking the manufacture of her chief crop, stands fully 172,000 bales ahead of that State in its consumption of cotton. The mills of the State worked up 31.7 per cent. of all the cotton consumed in Southern mills. Of the increased consumption in the South the State of South Carolina consumed 38.7 per cent.

If in 1899 South Carolina consumed 43.9 per cent. of the amount of cotton grown in the State, as appears to a careful observer of the consumption of the mills, it is evident, with a continuance of the present demand for cotton goods of the sort made in the State that a much larger part of the crop will be spun and woven at home than before. Senator Tillman says she will manufacture her whole product in ten years. On September, 1899, there were under construction in the South mills with a capacity of 823,000 spindles. To feed these spindles will increase the Southern consumption of cotton, it is estimated, 20 per cent. This will mean about 1,600,000 bales of cotton kept at home, and, added to the amount required during the last year, it will make the Southern consumption something like 6,000,000 bales, or an amount equal to more than two-thirds of the crop of 1899. Those who estimate the crop of South Carolina in 1900 at 720,000 bales say that the mills will require from 525,000 to 550,000 bales for home use. This is hurrying Tillman's prediction at an amazing rate.

DEMAND FOR COTTON GOODS.

There is confidence in a continuance of the demand for cotton goods. Everywhere one hears accounts of dividends that justify the effort of new capital to share in profitable business. During the year there have been chartered here and fully organized twelve new cotton mills, capitalized at $3,375,000, with fully 20 per cent. of the capital paid in. In 1898 but six mills were organized, with but $510,000 capital. In addition, sixteen mills in operation have increased their capital $2,420,000, and fourteen mills have applied for incorporation during the year and promise an increased capitalization of $2,275,000. The grand total makes up a prospective and actual investment in cotton mills in a year of $9,070,000, according to Hester of New Orleans, one of the most highly respected authorities, with a record of forty-one mills.

Little concern does Columbia give itself about its Legislature and the conceits of the Tillman party that occupies it a few short days in each year to squabble over the question of rum selling by the State. The State is the common barkeeper, and here, as elsewhere, the private citizen who fancies he ought to be allowed to buy strong drink wherever he may choose to do so feels daily the supervision of the officers who monopolize the sale of liquors, and yet make but $300,000 of income from a business that Gov. Tillman expected would yield $1,000,000 a year. Making allowance for the volatility of whisky and the carelessness of dispensary officers, it is openly suspected that there are leaks otherwhere than at the spigot. It is admitted that the dispensary law has curbed drunkenness, by keeping liquor out of the reach of the poorer classes, who cannot buy it in the quantities sold at the dispensary, but who could get it from dramshops when those conveniences were lawful. Columbia will find ways to spend money when her riches become so abundant that a portion of them may be expended in improving her streets. For the city was laid out magnificently for the paver. They are mostly of great breadth, certainly not less than 100 feet between curbs, and now a good many of them are chiefly grass plat, with worn tracks on each side of the central rows of trees that in Summer arch over the double highway. Its main street is a dirt road, and business demands its paving as an economic necessity. It will gladly take up the work, and in a liberal spirit, when the task of setting the mills in operation is a bit more advanced. "It's a good old town," said Mr. N. G. Gonzales, of the State, who has seen it rise out of its own dust, and become one of the busiest of hives, "and one of these days we'll make it the handsomest town, not only in South Carolina, but in the whole South. You see, what we have done in five years. Come again five years later, and you'll scarcely recognize the place." E. G. D.

TEXAS AIMS AT CORPORATIONS.

Legislature to Meet Soon to Consider a Radical Change in the Taxation Laws.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 20.—The Texas Legislature will convene on Jan. 23 in special session, for the purpose of amending the tax laws of the State. The last Legislature passed a law creating the State Tax Commission and imposing upon it the work of revising the present tax laws. The commission has issued its report. All corporations doing business in Texas are made the special objects of the proposed tax measure.

It is proposed to tax the gross receipts of express companies 2 per cent. Sleeping car, dining car, and palace car companies are taxed 2½ per cent. on gross receipts. The proposed bill taxes wharf companies 2 per cent. on gross receipts; telephone companies, 2 per cent.; telegraph companies, 2 per cent.; life and accident insurance companies, 2 per cent.; fire insurance companies, 1 per cent.; marine, health, and live stock insurance companies, 2 per cent.; accident insurance companies, 2 per cent.; tornado insurance companies, 2 per cent.; surety and guaranatee companies, 2 per cent.; railroads, 1 per cent.; street car, gas, electric light, and water companies, one-half of 1 per cent.; oil companies, 2 per cent.; text book companies, 2 per cent.; stock car, refrigerator car, coal car, tank car, and furniture car companies, 1 per cent.

The railroad companies, telephone companies, and many of the other corporation interests sought to be affected have signified their opposition to the measure and their legal representatives will be here in full force during the session of the Legislature to demonstrate the injustice of the provisions which tax their gross receipts before the proper legislative committees. It is claimed by the telephone companies doing business in Texas that a tax of 2 per cent. on their gross earnings would mean a decrease of about 10 per cent. in their present net earnings. The same thing is claimed by the telegraph companies. The insurance companies have announced that they will not offer any opposition to the bill, but that should the provision taxing their gross receipts become a law they will protect themselves against loss by raising the insurance rate throughout the State.

This proposed tax on gross receipts hits the railroads harder than any other corporation interest. In addition to taxing the gross receipts the railroad companies are also to be taxed on their franchises, bonds, and all other property. Under the existing law the railroads are taxed 1 per cent. on their gross passenger earnings. The total amount of passenger earnings of Texas railroads for the fiscal year ending Sept. 1, 1899, was $5,143,055, and the tax paid on this amount of earnings was $51,430. The proposed bill fixes a tax on freight, passenger, and all other gross receipts of railroad companies. It is reliably estimated that the total amount of gross freight earnings of Texas roads for the year 1899 was not less than $45,000,000, and that during the present year the total gross freight earnings will exceed $55,000,000. Should the provision taxing the gross earnings 1 per cent. become a law the revenue to be derived by the State from that source alone will exceed $500,000. The railroad companies claim that this excessive taxation would virtually amount to confiscation of their property.

The Railroad Commission stands between the roads and any raise in freight rates and there is no way of protecting their interests, except to make a desperate fight against the passage of the bill before the Legislature. The traffic officials and general attorneys of the Texas roads are now preparing statistical statements to be presented to the Legislature showing the ruinous effects the proposed increase in taxation would have on the net revenues of the lines.

Several of the influential and prominent members of the Legislature have already announced that they are opposed to many provisions of the proposed bill, and it is clear that its passage will not be accomplished without a hard fight. The largest lobby even seen at a Legislature in this State will be here.

NEW JERSEY DELEGATES.

Men Likely to be on the Republican National Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Jan. 20.—A majority of the members of the Republican State Committee have expressed the opinion that the Republican State Convention, which will elect delegates at large to the National Convention, will be held about the second Thursday in May. There has been no formal conference on the subject, but individual members express that opinion. This will leave about four weeks between the State and National Conventions.

There is some incidental talk as to who will be the delegates at large to the National Convention. Three men are positively known. They are United States Senators Sewell and Kean and State Chairman Franklin Murphy. The fourth will be either Foster M. Voorhees, Attorney General Griggs, or Barker Gummere of Trenton. There is a disposition among the prominent Republicans to follow the plan that some of the Western States are adopting, in connection with the selection of the "Big Four," and that is to name two United States Senators, the State Chairman, and the Governor.

Those who claim to know all that is going on along the line of politics say that there will be more or less contest for district delegates all over the State, because it is incumbent on the delegation to select a successor to the late Garret A. Hobart as the New Jersey representative in the National Republican Committee. At the present time that place is temporarily filled by United States Senator John Kean. It is stated on good authority that United States Senator Sewell and other prominent leaders favor the selection of State Chairman Franklin Murphy, but others say that there is a number of Republicans who favor the selection of Barker Gummere, the County Clerk of Mercer.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES.

In referring yesterday to the recent disciplining of Capt. Washington Willcocks by Col. Morris, a high officer of the Guard said: "While Capt. Willcocks may not have made a direct and open refusal to obey an order to furnish a detail of men from his company to fill up others, the fact that he delayed or quibbled over the matter is tantamount to a disobedience of orders. Military regulations require a prompt and unhesitating obedience to all orders, and discipline can only be maintained by an arbitrary enforcement of this cardinal rule. If an officer or man thinks he has a grievance, he should obey an order and kick afterward, if he wishes to avoid trouble. He has no right even to make a suggestion when a specific order is given to him. I consider it very lucky for the Captain that he was not sent before a court-martial."

***

Brig. Gen. McCoskry Butt of the First Brigade, when asked as to the disciplining of Capt. Willcocks, said: "The matter has not come before me officially, but I have every confidence that Col. Morris will administer the affairs of his command for the best interests of the service. If Col. Morris requested a court-martial I should certainly approve it."

***

Major Newbold Morris, Inspector on the staff of Gen. McCoskry Butt, First Brigade, who resigned a short time since, will be succeeded by Lieut. Tyson Romaine, ex-Captain in the Twelfth Volunteers. Major Romaine is a close student of military matters and well qualified, it is said, to fill his new position. At one time he served in the tenth company of the Seventh.

***

Col. A. L. Mills, United States Army, on duty at West Point, has accepted a review of the Seventh Regiment for Tuesday evening, Feb. 6. The war veterans of the regiment have just elected the following officers for the ensuing year, the elections being unanimous in each case: President—Major Theodore K. Gibbs, Vice Presidents—Gen. Charles G. Bartlett, Col. William E. Van Wyck, and Major George P. Edgar; Secretary—Capt. Richard H. Greene; Treasurer—Paymaster William Lee Darling.

***

Gov. Dyer of Rhode Island, father of Col. Dyer of the Twelfth Regiment, has been invited to review the command at the armory on Thursday, Feb. 1. A reception will follow the military exercises. Company G will hold a ball at the armory on the evening of Saturday, Feb. 3. The suggestion in this column several weeks ago that the winners of the Governor's Cup should receive some recognition for their success has been acted upon by the Board of Officers of the Twelfth Regiment, who have voted to present Ordnance Sergt. John Corrie with a gold bar to be added to the team badge for each year he has won the cup, namely, 1893, 1896, and 1897; Sergt. W. S. Lamb, who won the cup last year, is also to have a gold bar. The officers of the volunteer regiment at present in the Twelfth who were on the team which won the championship of the Third Division, First Army Corps, in 1898, will be presented with a suitable badge. Pistol practice has begun with good results, Lieut. Col. Seiter leading off with five straight pulls at twenty-five yards. The team match of seven men from the different companies, which was to have been shot on Jan. 22, has been postponed to Jan. 29. Sergts. C. M. Smith, T. C. Ott, and Private A. B. Van Heusen, and Corp. D. J. Coughlanhave presented John A. Opel with a very handsome clock as a wedding present. Company I, Capt. Smith, gave a dance at the armory last Wednesday, and will hold a similar entertainment next month. Lieut. Col. C. J. Seiter, Capt. T. W. Houston, and Capt. T. C. Bueck have been appointed delegates to the National Guard Association. Capt. T. C. Bueck has been elected Major of the regiment. He served as Captain of Company F in the Twelfth Volunteers, and has risen from the ranks from private to his present position. The Veterans of the regiment will hold their annual meeting at the armory to-morrow night, when plans for the annual dinner will be discussed and officers elected for the ensuing year. The First Battalion, Lieut. Col. Seiter commanding, will have a dance after the battalion drill on Feb. 21. Commissary Sergt. Thomas J. Dolan, after twenty-six years' service, has applied for a discharge. The non-commissioned staff now have the use of a larger room for their quarters, through the kindness of Col. Dyer, who, it is said, intends to see that the staff's room is furnished comfortably.

***

Brig. Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins, United States Army, will review the Seventy-first Regiment next Tuesday. The detail for guard will be as follows: Officer of the Day, Capt. Bleecker; Officer of the Guard, Lieut. Gallagher. Immediately after the parade there will be presented to Company D the trophy given by the Veteran Association of the regiment for the highest average percentage present at all drills and parades during the year 1899. The following shows the percentage attained by the companies: Company A, 59 per cent.; B, 61 per cent.; C, 65 per cent.; D, 70 per cent.; E, 55 per cent.; F, 44 per cent.; G, 72 per cent.; H, 52 per cent.; I, 57 per cent.; K, 60 per cent. The war colors carried by the volunteer regiment in Cuba will be presented to the Veteran Association of the regiment. Company H will hold an entertainment in February. Quartermaster Sergt. McMahon, who has been in Florida on a furlough, has returned to duty. Company I has unanimously elected Harrison K. Bird Second Lieutenant. He was formerly Lieutenant in the One Hundred and Seventy-first Regiment. The company has decided to hold a stag outside the armory on Jan. 27. It still holds the record as the athletic company of the Seventy-first, and thus far retains all the athletic trophies. The Hospital Corps will hold an entertainment at the armory on Wednesday evening, Feb. 14, and will secure the services of some first-class performers. Company F has nominated Private Emil Hoffman for Second Lieutenant. The members of Company F are highly pleased to learn that Capt. Wells does not intend to resign.

***

The strength of the Twenty-second Regiment on Jan. 1 last is officially reported as 618 officers and men. This is not a padded roll, but represents practically the duty-doing strength of the command. Company E has decided to hold its annual dinner on Jan. 27, and among the invited guests are Col. Bartlett, Lieut. Col. Treadwell, Majors Hotchkin and Hart, Capt. Lilienthal, and Col. Thurston of Gen. Roe's staff. The dance given by Company K, Capt. Barbar, after the battalion drill last Friday was a very successful event. Private F. G. Ritchie of Company F has been promoted to Corporal. The field music has decided to hold a stag on Feb. 27 at Arion Hall, 341 West Forty-seventh Street. The corps has only been organized three months, but has made most excellent progress. In Company K Capt. Barbar has been elected Treasurer, First Sergeant Grief Recording Secretary, Sergeant Merritt Financial Secretary, and Private Kronenberger Sergeant at Arms. The Regimental Board has re-elected Col. N. B. Thurston Treasurer, and Capt. E. W. Dayton Secretary.

***

In the Thirteenth Regiment a number of changes have been made on the non-commissioned staff. Private James B. Bateman of Company A has been appointed color bearer; First Sergeant John G. Jenkins of Company A has been appointed Batallion Sergeant Major, and Quartermaster Sergeant Alfred I. Easson and Private George C. Curtis of Company G have been appointed Battalion Quartermaster Sergeants. Company L of the Thirteenth Regiment has unanimously elected Second Lieut. Charles M. Reid First Lieutenant.

***

The active and veteran members of Company D, Fourteenth Regiment, have decided to hold a concert and reception in the armory on Feb. 21.

***

Companies I, G, B, and F of the Forty-seventh Regiment will drill by battalion next Tuesday, and Companies A, K, E, and D will drill next Friday. The resignation of Lieut. M. B. Andelfinger of Company F has been sent in. The Athletic Association of the regiment will hold a stag entertainment at the armory on the evening of Feb. 2. Company E will give an exhibition drill and entertainment at the armory Tuesday night. Delegates to the National Guard Association are Majors W. H. Eddy and H. H. Quick, and Capt. E. E. Jannicky. Ex-Second Lieut. Frederick H. Stevenson of the One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment, who is at present a member of Company A, Twenty-third Regiment, has been elected a Second Lieutenant in Company E. Company B has decided to hold its annual dinner on Feb. 21.

***

Veterans of the Ninth Regiment have elected the following officers for the current year: Commandant—John H. Cochrane; Vice Commandant—Samuel Berry; Junior Commandant — Valentine Marsh; Surgeon—Dr. Solomon F. McFarland; Chaplain—the Rev. Dr. Roland S. Nichols; Quartermastser—William J. Kirkland; Adjutant—George A. Hussey; Historian—Thomas L. Hanna; Trustees—William Scott, Jacob Ritschy, John H. Van Wyck, John T. Pryer, and Horace M. Graff; Color Bearers—Benjamin F. Bowne and Frank C. Martin; Sergeant at Arms—Augustus W. Mead. In the active regiment Company H, Capt. Young, will give a stag at the armory next month. Recruiting in Company H is actively proceeding. One night last week six recruits were taken in. Capt. Young is jubilant over the fact that his company is leading in the table of percentages of attendance. On Feb. 17 Company I, Capt. Kohlberger will give a ball and reception at an outside hall. Company K held its annual meeting last week and elected the following civil officers for the ensuing year: Treasurer—Capt. Byrne; Financial Secretary—Corp. Ketcham; Recording Secretary—Corp. Diamond; Finance Committee—Sergt. Cornelius, Chairman; Private Holme, Private Lund; Armory Committee—Sergt. Damseaux, Privates Gray and Kimler; Recruiting Committee—Corp. Lynch, Privates Lesourd and Specht. A committee consisting of Sergt. Regus, Corps. Ketcham, Diamond, and Privates Spanton and Lund, has been appointed to nominate a candidate for Second Lieutenant. On Jan. 30 the company will give a stag at an outside hall.

***

Capt. Wendel of the First Battery has ordered a new schedule of drills. The Second Platoon, Lieuts. Esper and Seyfried, will drill on Tuesday evenings; the First Platoon, Lieuts. Hathaway and Muller, will drill on Friday evenings; officers and non-commissioned officers will receive practical and theoretical instruction on the first and third Thursdays in each month. Recruit drills will be held on Monday evenings. Revolver practice will be held on Wednesday evenings.

***

Companies E, H, and G of the Eighth Regiment will shortly hold elections for Captains. The Board of Officers of the regiment have re-elected Major David P. Arnold Treasurer, and Lieut. W. Frost has been elected Secretary. The annual mess dinner of the officers will be held the first week in February. Company G and the Pastime Athletic Club anticipate a very large meeting at the games to be held in the armory on Jan. 31. The music will be furnished by the regimental band, and a reception will follow the games.

***

Brevet Major David Wilson of the Second Battery has started his command in battery drills, and the vim with which the artillerymen execute the heavy work in manoeuvring the field pieces brings many spectators to the armory. The stentorian voice of the Major in giving his commands excites the attention of passers-by, many of whom find time to watch the drill a while through the windows looking out on the sidewalk at Thirty-fourth Street. Recruiting in the battery is very brisk.

***

The members of the First Signal Corps express much gratification over the success of the command under Capt. Erlandson, the past year, both militarily and socially. The corps is now recruited to almost its full strength, and has made marked progress in its various duties. The following have recently been elected members: Charles F. Collyer, A. C. Eagleson, F. Holmes, W. H. Elliott, George W. Steele, and G. W. Weeden.

Adjt. Gen. E. M. Hoffman will review the First Naval Battalion on the evening of Feb. 10 at the armory of the Seventy-first Regiment, and during the evening's ceremonies the sharpshooters', marksmen's, and 100-per-cent. medals will be presented. The review will be followed by a dance. The Third Battalion drill of the season will be held to-morrow night, at the Second Battery Armory. The following members of the battalion have performed 100-per-cent. duty for the season of 1898-9: First Division—M. C. Boyd, W. J. Buzzini, S. O. Chase, J. A. Cherry, F. Culyer, G. W. Dauler, A. K. Fox, L. G. Fowler, H. F. Hedden, N. W. Jarvis, L. Jones, W. T. Knight, J. C. Knowles, W. H. Law, W. T. R. Leigh, G. C. Moon, A. R. C. Muller, H. MacKean, J. W. Grant, A. L. Wilson. Second Division—W. B. Brigham, W. B. Brown, H. A. Clark, E. Clark, E. Crawford, C. H. Cottrell, M. R. Dyett, E. C. De Kay, L. B. Elliman, J. Tart, H. Guion, T. L. Kellogg, T. M. Minton, J. D. O. Murray, J. M. Mitchell, H. D. Rogers, E. V. Stebbins, H. Slack, W. B. Wait, Jr., R. Weed. Third Division—C. A. Bill, H. L. Day, W. L. Durant, C. S. Folsom, G. T. Gilmore, H. M. Magie, H. S. Masterton, G. H. Kauffeld, C. Pents, L. E. Rafi, D. L. Renne, C. E. Rockhold, J. A. R. Roby, J. H. Skillen, F. L. Townsend. Fourth Division—G. A. Conover, C. R. Carter, H. P. Bissell, H. L. Despard, W. W. Ferguson, G. W. S. Fearing, G. Sawyer, C. D. Sinclair, and C. Sturdevant. The Naval Reserve Association will hold a smoker at their clubrooms early in February, which will be the second of the series. The Second Division has elected the following civil officers for the ensuing year: President—Macdonough Craven; Treasurer—Henry A. Clark; Secretary—William B. Wait, Jr.; Chairmen of Committees: Finance—Charles S. Langdon, Jr.; Membership—E. C. De Kay; Rifle—E. Vail Stebbins; Library—T. M. Minton; Boats—H. L. Maddox; Entertainment—Richmond Weed; Athletics—James M. Mitchell; Uniforms—Charles N. Fairchild; Division Room—Charles B. Hayward.

***

The annual ball of the Old Guard of New York, to be held at the Metropolitan Opera House on Thursday evening, Jan. 25, is now one of the foremost topics of discussion in the military and social worlds. Invitations have already been sent to prominent officers of the army, navy, National Guard, and Naval Militia. Several Governors, including Gov. Roosevelt, have already accepted invitations. The decorations will be of the most elaborate description, while the music will be fully up to that of past entertainments. The several committees have been appointed, and the Chairmen of these are the following: Reception, Major S. E. Briggs; House, C. H. Hjestis; Floor, Adjt. R. P. Lyon; Press, J. G. McMurray; Honorary, Adjt. Gen. E. M. Hoffman.

BROOKLYN ADVERTISEMENTS.

1860 1900

40 years of unparalleled Success. More than 127,000 Sterling Instruments in use.

Annual Clearance Sale OF New Pianos

from our

Three Factories

including all sample pianos from our factory exhibition rooms, and all DISCONTINUED STYLES THAT WILL NOT APPEAR IN OUR 1900 CATALOGUE. Also several fancy pianos in natural woods of unusual beauty, a few trimmed pianos with Candelabras, handles, etc., and a few special designs that will not be duplicated.

In Fact

A General Clearance

of a half year's accumulation from the factories of the largest piano manufacturers in America.

Price Reduction of ¼ to ½. (Every piano fully guaranteed and kept in tune free for one year.)

Nearly every STYLE, QUALITY, SIZE and PRICE is represented in this clearance sale.

In Our Exchange Department

there are about 20 second hand upright pianos of various styles and qualities that have been taken as part payment in exchange for STERLINGS. All have been thoroughly repaired and refinished.

PRICES RANGE FOR GOOD ONES from $100 to $150. Small and medium grades for $60 to $90. Also, several good Square Pianos at about half usual prices.

$30 instead of $50 — $65 instead of $100
40 instead of 65 — 75 instead of 125
50 instead of 75 — 90 instead of 150

(Terms on square pianos $3, $4 and $5 per month.)

The STERLING Piano Co.

Manufacturers,
Wholesale and Retail Warerooms
(Entire building, four floors),
536 FULTON STREET,
BROOKLYN,
Opposite Montauk Theatre.
OPEN MONDAY & SATURDAY EVENINGS.
Look for the name STERLING.

BROOKLYN ADVERTISEMENTS.

SILK SELLING UNEQUALLED

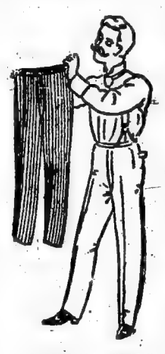
MATTHEWS

MEN'S and BOYS' CLOTHING

All the Good Things from All Lands Are Ours, the Bad We Try to Avoid.

Clearing Prices on Ready to Wear Clothing.

MEN'S SUITS. At $6.85 and $8.75, we're offering our regular $10.00 and $15.00 grades of fine suits, suitable for dress or business wear; an assortment remains.



MEN'S TROUSERS. At $3.85, we've marked all our $5.00 and $6.00 Pure Worsted Trousers at this price, a good assortment of handsome striped effects, made by custom tailor, sizes 30 to 40 waist.

ODD COATS AND ODD VESTS. Here are about 150 odd Coats and Vests, accumulated during the season, some match; we've marked them low enough any way. Coats, $1.75; Vests, 98c.

BOYS' SUITS, REEFERS AND OVERCOATS.

VESTEE and SAILOR SUITS, $2.98, regular $4.00 and $4.50 grade.

Double-breasted Suits, $1.98, $2.98 and $3.98, at a saving of $1.00 and $1.50 on each; ages 8 to 15.

OVERCOATS, $4.48— Of all wool frieze and kersey, worth $6.50; ages 4 to 15.

REEFERS, $3.98— Of all wool chinchilla and frieze, $2.00 under price; ages 8 to 15.

An Excellent Shoe Bargain.

Women's $3.00 Shoes at $1.75 a Pair.

This is an offering of 900 pairs of Women's Best Dongola Cloth Top Button Shoes, direct from one of our best manufacturers. Fine Vici kid vamps, round and medium opera toes, patent leather tips, stitched extension soles, just the proper weight for present wear and are perfectly flexible. No better shoes for style, beauty, fit or service have ever been placed on sale anywhere: They are a combination of the best materials and most skillful workmanship.

Widths A and B, broken sizes only. Widths C, D and E, every size, 3 to 7. $3.00 is a fair value of any pair of them, but the retiring of a large New York manufacturer makes possible the offering of them to you Monday at, a pair $1.75

BOOKS. Just a few special items from our complete book department. ANIMAL KINGDOM, 2 vols, in box, illustrated, a set . . . $1.25

Bulwer Lytton's "Last of the Barons," 2 vols. in set, stamped in gilt, uncut edges, usually sold for $1.25 a set; our price, 69c.

"White House Cook Book," bound in oilcloth, usually sold for $1.25; our price, 69c.

Funk & Wagnalls' Standard Dictionary, bound in sheep, publishers' price, $12.00, our price, with index, $7.25; without index . . . $6.50

"Tom Burke of Ours," by Charles Lever, etc., two volumes in set, publisher's price $1.50; will close these sets at the very low price of 75c.

EPISCOPAL HYMNALS. Revised version on Indian paper, bound in best leather, large and small sizes, from 25c. to $1.39; publisher's price $1.00, $2.00, $3.00 and $4.00. Children's Sunday School Bibles, for 25c.

STATIONERY. Cabinet writing paper, fine vellum finish, 5 quires in box, with envelopes to match . . . 39c

Old English and Royal Finish Writing Paper, former price 12c. per quire, closing out at 6c. per quire; envelopes to match, 6c. per package.

Large Commercial Envelopes, 250 in box, 25c.

Playing Cards, special, 9c. a pack.

Pinocle Playing Cards, 12½c. a pack.

Tally Cards, 10c. per dozen.

Ebony Desk Sets, such as erasures, letter openers, seals, 12c. each.

Sterling Silver Pencils, 25c. each.

Diaries for 1900 closed out at greatly reduced prices.

Special lot of Art Calendars, illustrations of Stevenson's works and scenes from California and Spain, suitable for framing, 19c.

ENGRAVING DEPARTMENT. Visiting Cards and Business Cards Engraved, Wedding Invitations and Announcements Engraved at short notice.

OPERA GLASS

Opportunity of More Than Usual Interest.

Commencing Monday we will sell 40 DOZEN FRENCH OPERA GLASSES, each pair is in a PLUSH BAG, they are fitted with fine lenses and well finished, usually sold for $1.75, or more, but as a sample of January selling, make price . . . 98c

LACES. Dressmakers' demands for Lace Trimmings and Overdresses argue a prosperous season.

Allovers of Mousseline de Soie, embroidered and tucked, from $1.25 to $4.50 per yard.

Allovers in Swiss, with lace and embroidered insertion and tucks, from 69c. to $3.98 per yard.

Allovers with spangles, black, silver, and gold, from 98c. to $7.48 per yard.

Venise Applique Insertion and Edgings, 12½c. to $2.50 a yard.

Cluny Edgings and Insertions from 35c. to 98c. per yard.

Real Russian Edging and Insertions from $1.39 to $2.25 per yard.

Large assortment of allovers to match, from 98c. to $10.00.

FINE EMBROIDERIES. You can choose about 1,000 designs.

BARGAIN NO. 1—One lot of heavy Cambric Edgings, made of the best grade of cloth, embroidered in the best manner, our 10c. quality; for this sale, while they last, 5c. per yard.

BARGAIN NO. 2—8,000 yards of Embroidery Edgings and Insertions, seconds, in an immense assortment of openwork patterns, with medium and unusually wide margin; actual selling price of this lot of embroidery ranges from 12½c. to 22c. per yard; our price, sold by the strip only, at 9c. per yard.

BARGAIN NO. 3—Edgings of flounce widths in a selection of neat patterns, worth from 25c. to 45c. per yard, while they last, at 15c. per yard.

Fulton St., Gallatin Place, Livingston and Smith Sts., Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN ADVERTISEMENTS.

JOURNEAY & BURNHAM.

Flatbush Av., Junction Fulton St.
BROOKLYN.

Wash Fabrics.

The First Showing To-morrow of the Styles for 1900.

Switzerland, Scotland, England and America each contributes to the new designs and weaves in the materials that will soon be transformed into the airy gowns and stylish shirt waists for the season of 1900. There are fancy Linen Shirtings, stylish Madrases, lovely Swisses, silk Mousselines, dotted and plain, stylish Cheviots, in all the new colorings, and whites in abundance; also, Nainsook Raye, Organdie Raye, Nainsook Pekin, Nainsook Brilliant, Nainsook Virginia, and Printed Sublime—at prices ranging from 25 cts. to $1.75 per yard.

Printed Satin Liberty

And

SITUATIONS WANTED—FEMALES.

Chambermaids.

CHAMBERMAID, &c.—BUTLER, &c.—By a couple; French couple; wife as chambermaid, good seamstress; husband as butler and several years' worker; best city reference. V., 116 West 59th st., second floor.

CHAMBERMAID, &c.—As chambermaid or parlormaid, with sewing or waiting, by intelligent French girl; strong woman; excellent reference. Nathalie, box 761 Times Office.

CHAMBERMAID, &c.—By a respectable girl as chambermaid and waitress in private family or boarding house; best of city reference. 942 1st Av.

CHAMBERMAID, &c.—By a West Indian girl as chambermaid and seamstress; personal references. Seamstress, care Clark, 5 West 42d St.

Companions.

COMPANION.—A lady of refinement to go abroad as companion to lady or children; have crossed the ocean, and am not subject to seasickness. Voyage, Box 961 Times Office.

Cooks.

COOK.—By a first-class cook in private family; excellent bread, pastry, soup, entrées, desserts, ice creams; city reference. 425 West 56th St., two flights up.

COOK.—First-class cook; thorough English, French, and German, in many branches; also waitress; good city reference. Selmer, Box 269, 1,269 Broadway.

COOK.—By a Protestant woman as cook in a private family; would go short way in country. 106 East 52d St.

Day's Work.

DAY'S WORK.—By a respectable colored woman; day's work or washing to take home. Taylor, 260 West 47th St.

DAY'S WORK.—By a reliable woman to work by day or take work home. L. C., 448 6th Av.

Governesses.

GOVERNESS.—By a highly recommanded trustworthy North German governess; experienced; takes entire conscientious charge of small children; primary teaching, kindergarten; personal references. 123 East 28th St.

GOVERNESS, &c.—By young French lady, speaking English, as governess or lady's companion; no objection to traveling. Miss A. Mayor, 81 Adams St., Hoboken.

VISITING GOVERNESS.—By a French visiting governess; engagement as companion or reader to lady wishing to acquaint herself with French literature; or as teacher to growing children; first-class references. Translator, 2,126 8th Av.

VISITING GOVERNESS.—By a French visiting governess; additional engagement; children preferred; hour daily; $12 monthly. E. N., 2,126 8th Av.

Housekeepers.

HOUSEKEEPER.—A well-educated New England lady, widow of a professional gentleman, desires position as housekeeper where servant is kept; city or country; highest testimonials given. Address Mrs. H. G. B., Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HOUSEKEEPER, &c.—By a worthy, kind, and efficient woman as housekeeper, or any position of trust; personal references. Brown, care of Matthew, 374 Columbus Av.

Kitchenmaids.

KITCHENMAID.—By young French girl as kitchenmaid; reference. D., 116 West 26th St., ground floor.

Lady's Maids.

LADY'S MAID.—By a young woman as lady's maid; good dressmaker; cut, fit; excellent hairdresser and packer; fine needlework; five years' city reference; personal from last place, N. K., 1,242 Broadway.

LADY'S MAID.—By competent French maid; good hairdresser; experienced seamstress; best references. A. L., Box 271, 1,269 Broadway.

LADY'S MAID.—Middle-aged; seamstress, hairdresser; like to travel through Europe; best reference. Elise, Box 364, 1,269 Broadway.

MAID.—A lady desires to place a good, faithful woman as maid to an invalid or elderly lady; willing to travel or live in country. Apply Monday, from 10 to 12, at 309 West 88th St., or by letter to Mrs. D. H. Gregory, Cooperstown, N. Y.

MAID.—By a Swedish girl as maid to a lady who requires massage; understands also manicuring and hairdressing; no objection to the country. Call, Monday, at 114 East 53d St. Ring Thunstrom's bell.

MAID.—By a competent maid; good packer, hairdresser, and dressmaker; best city reference. Care McCabe, 591 Park Av.

Laundresses.

LAUNDRESS.—By a first-class laundress; all kinds of fine work done with care; flannels and laces a specialty; open-air drying; references from the best families. 140 West 52d St.

LAUNDRESS.—By a young woman as first-class laundress in private family; city references. 438 West 35th St., ring Brennan's bell.

Seamstresses.

SEAMSTRESS.—By a thoroughly competent seamstress; does all kinds of family sewing, repairing dresses, finishing, alterations, and also curtains and cushions. Seamstress, 773 Amsterdam Av.

Washing.

WASHING.—By respectable German woman to take family washing at home. Janitor, 941 Home St., near Boston Road.

Miscellaneous.

STENOGRAPHER.—Thoroughly competent; 7 years' experience in law and other work; agencies please don't answer. J., 40 Wall St., Room 69a.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALES.

Butlers.

BUTLER and VALET.—German, 26, desires position now or the 15th of February, with a gentleman; bachelor apartments or private family; thoroughly competent and reliable; best of references; wages, $45 to $50. M. Vanpel, 416 East 15th St.

BUTLER.—By sober, steady, experienced Englishman; lived in good family; age, 38; city recommendations; wages, $55. D. W., Box 273, 1,269 Broadway.

BUTLER and VALET.—By trained North German competent man; aged 40; single; Protestant; tall; highest city reference. Steady, 1,530 6th Av.

Miscellaneous.

NURSE and VALET.—Disengaged; 6 years' city reference; understands massage; English; age, 38; used to traveling. E. B., Box 73, 1,242 Broadway.

PLUMBER.—First-class; steady position; wages moderate. J. Brook, Box 272, 1,269 Broadway.

YOUNG MAN WOULD LIKE POSITION AT his trade, silver or brass polisher on small work. Louis Schleh, 345 East 18th St.

THE TRADES.

MATTRESSES REMADE AT CUSTOMERS' residences in three hours a specialty; new tickings and hair supplied; sole users of own patented oscillating hair carding machines and collapsible benches. THE MAUBORGNE METHOD, 646 9th Av., 55th and 56th Sts. Telephone 967 Columbus.

HELP WANTED—FEMALES.

DESIGNER.—WANTED, EXPERIENCED DESIGNER ON LADIES' MUSLIN UNDERWEAR. SIEGEL BROTHERS, 65-67 WOOSTER ST.

UMBRELLAS.—Forewoman; thoroughly competent and experienced forewoman for New London, Conn., factory. Amasa Lyon, 814 Broadway.

UMBRELLAS.—Experienced help wanted in all departments of our New London factory. Amasa Lyon, 814 Broadway.

WANTED—A competent Protestant cook for a short distance up the Hudson; must have best personal references. Apply Monday, between 11 and 12, at 12 East 22d St.

WANTED—A refined Protestant person as working housekeeper for an old couple and daughter; other help; reference required. Call, Monday, at 6 West 71st St.

WANT NAME AND ADDRESS OF EDUCATED ladies wishing to earn money in their own homes; no fake business. Bowden, 38 Centre St., Newark, N. J.

WOMEN TO DO PLAIN SEWING AT HOME; $1.50 per day; four months' work guaranteed; send stamped addressed envelope for particulars. R. W. Hutton & Co., Philadelphia, Penn.

HELP WANTED—MALES.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE ONLY GENUINE AND AUTHORIZED Life of D. L. Moody, written by his SON and Ira D. Sankey; this is the book the people want; don't waste time with imitations; a million will be sold; agents make $10 to $20 daily; big profits; credit; freight paid; outfit free; write quick before territory is gone. Address Bible House, 135 N. 12th St., Phila.

COACHMAN-COOK and LAUNDRESS.—Steady, reliable; city references. Desenbes, 163 East 32d St.

FOREMAN.—Experienced; to manage five-machine, modern wall paper plant; experienced as printer and colorist. West Mills, Times Office.

UMBRELLAS.—Experienced help wanted in all departments of our New London factory. Amasa Lyon, 814 Broadway.

WANTED—A young man as second and useful man in private family; satisfactory personal references required. Address I. M. H., New York P. O. Box 3,043.

WANTED—Thorough, experienced wall paper printer, non-union, to take up residence in the West; long contract; good wages. O. E., Times Office.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS

SHIPPERS DEMAND RELIEF.

Freight Commissioners' Association on Rates and Classification—Inter-State Commerce Law Unavailing.

A meeting of the National Association of Freight Commissioners was held in this city at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon, with W. P. Trickett of Kansas City as President and L. B. Boswell of Quincy, Ill., as Secretary, they being the new officers elected at the session held Friday. The meeting was largely attended by representatives of shippers.

Mr. Boswell offered the following resolutions, which, after discussion, were adopted:

Whereas, Conditions at present existing and those arising from time to time in matters pertaining to railroad rates, the classification of various articles, and incidental questions, require and justify some fair and equitable method of meeting the wants of both shippers and the railroads, and,

Whereas, The powers of the Inter-State Commerce Commission have been so limited and curtailed by decisions of the United States Supreme Court as to reduce it to simply a body for inquiry and without effect in its rulings and decisions, and its decisions cannot be enforced; and,

Whereas, Shippers require an intermediate court or commission with sufficient powers conferred upon it by Congress to make its decisions respected by all parties concerned; therefore be it

Resolved, That the National Association of Freight Commissioners and other shippers' organizations represented here indorse and concur in Senate Bill No. 1,439, introduced by Senator Cullom Dec. 12, 1899, and respectfully petition Congress to enact said bill as the best plan now under consideration to bring about the desired ends.

Resolved further, That failure on the part of Congress to speedily enact such legislation will justify subsequent petitions to dissolve and abolish the Inter-State Commerce Commission, by reason of its inability to serve the public interests as originally intended under the Inter-State Commerce act.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this meeting is hereby instructed to transmit copies of these resolutions to the proper committees of both houses of Congress.

N. B. Kelly of Philadelphia offered a resolution, which was adopted, to the effect that a committee of three be appointed to appear before the Official Classification Committee Jan. 22 to protest against widening the difference between the classification of carload and less than carload shipments.

The Chair appointed N. B. Kelly of Philadelphia, J. J. Waite of Chicago, and L. B. Boswell of Quincy as such committee.

The meeting was then adjourned, subject to call of the President.

To-morrow is the date set for the joint meeting of shippers and railway officials at the headquarters of the Trunk Line Association, 143 Liberty Street, to consider complaints against the new freight rate schedule which went into effect on the first of the year. Commissioner Goddard, who expects that representatives from Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, and other cities will be present, says that all the complaints will receive careful consideration, and if it be proved they are well founded redress will be made.

EFFECT OF DIFFERENTIALS.

Mr. Callaway's Views as to Their Influence on Commerce.

The benefits which New York City is to derive from the practical unification of the Eastern trunk line roads through the carrying out of the plans of W. K. Vanderbilt have been discussed from various points of view. President S. R. Callaway of the New York Central, in talking yesterday of trunk line policy and differentials, said:

"The attitude of the New York Central and its allied lines has naturally always been favorable to the protection and building up of the Port of New York, as against the influences which have been at work to foster other of the Atlantic seaports. Differentials were only agreed to at first because they were forced by such competition, which it was thought might be checked to some extent by such means. The Vanderbilt lines have always claimed that the differentials were too high, and as a consequence of this, in a great measure, they have been constantly reduced. The differential on ex-lake grain was done away with last year, and in other cases cut in two.

"It is a mistake to think that the granting of a small differential to ports less favored naturally than New York is going to ruin or even seriously affect New York's pre-eminence as an Atlantic seaport. The natural terminus on this side of the Atlantic for any sound and well-established line of vessels is the harbor of New York, and it is generally conceded that something more than a differential of a few cents this way or that is required to attract such lines to less favored ports. The trouble has not been so much with the differential as in the fact that all sorts of schemes have been put into effect, some of the roads terminating at other ports, even having gone so far as to practically subsidize steamship lines.

"Notwithstanding the differentials and other so-called disadvantages under which New York is said to labor, the fact remains, and is shown by the statistics, that the Port of New York gets a very large share of the business. In 1899, for instance, the railroads carried to New York over 36 per cent. of all the grain of the country that came to Atlantic tidewater, while the canal carried over 4 per cent., making a total of 40 per cent., and leaving but 60 per cent. of the entire business to be divided among the seven other Atlantic ports of export."

NEW LINE IN WEST VIRGINIA.

West Virginia Central and Pittsburg Will Build an Extension.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—Contracts have been awarded by the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg Railroad Company for an extension forty-three miles long, from Elkins to the forks of the Green Brier River, in West Virginia, there to meet a line being constructed by the Chesapeake and Ohio. There will be two tunnels, one 1,600 feet long and the other 950 feet.

Besides developing coal, iron, and lumber interests the line furnishes the connecting link in a new route from the Chesapeake and Ohio to Pittsburg and the great lakes, and will be the only north and south line, excepting those close to the Atlantic seaboard, east of the Ohio River. It will be substantially built in order to handle through traffic. The maximum grade will be about 100 feet to the mile.

The West Virginia Central has been after the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and also the Western Maryland Railroad for a tidewater outlet and terminals in this city.

PENNSYLVANIA'S STOCK ISSUE.

Indications Are that $13,000,000 Increase Is Over-Subscribed.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—This was the last day for taking advantage of the new $13,000,000 stock issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, declared and authorized by the Board of Directors Dec. 13 last, and if the amount had been twice as large it would have all been taken.

Assistant Treasurer Hunter has had all requests referred to him. He said:

"I don't know how much is taken, but there are very many applications for any that is left over."

It was learned further that from 5,000 to 10,000 letters delivered Monday were in the big back vault, to say nothing of the rest of the days in the week not yet touched, and plenty are still coming in. A force of twenty-five clerks has been at work day and night ever since the new issue of stock was declared. This is the first stock issue since the year 1880.

The American end alone has been heard from. Stockholders in London can deposit their subscriptions with the Pennsylvania's financial agent abroad until to-day, and advices are that these amount to millions. The London mail is yet to come.

FITCHBURG LEASE DEAL IS OFF.

Opposition Compels the Boston and Maine to Withdraw.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—In a letter to E. D. Codman, President of the Fitchburg Railroad, to-day, President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston and Maine Road expresses a desire to withdraw all proposals which he has made looking to a lease of the Fitchburg by the Boston and Maine.

Mr. Tuttle states that his action is due to the knowledge that the stockholders representing the holdings of the State of Massachusetts in Fitchburg Railroad stock are opposed to the lease; and the belief that the enterprise could not be successfully undertaken in view of the possibility of a conflict between the private interests involved in the transaction and the Commonwealth. This ends the lease negotiations between the roads.

Bondholders Buy In a Road.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Jan. 20.—The Zanesville and Ohio River Railway was sold today by Master Commissioner McDermott for $260,000 to the old bondholders, who recently incorporated the Ohio and Little Kanawha Railway Company at Charleston, West Va., and who will now merge the Zanesville and Ohio River and the Little Kanawha lines. The bonded debt of the Zanesville and Ohio River Road was $2,000,000.

New Chicago and Alton Coal Road.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The Chicago and Alton has purchased the Quincy, Carrollton and St. Louis Railroad, according to information given out at the Alton general offices to-day. The Alton, it is said, will soon extend the line from Kampsville, Ill., to Quincy on the route already surveyed. This extension will run through the coal fields of Southeastern Macoupin County and Northern Madison County, taking in a part of the territory now covered exclusively by the Wabash and Big Four, and reaching some rich coal fields not touched by any road at the present time.

Western Road May Build.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Jan. 20.—A telegram from Lincoln says that a certificate increasing the capital stock of the Omaha Northern Railway Company to $3,750,000 has been filed in the office of the Secretary of State. It is believed here that it is a preliminary step toward the early commencement of construction operations.

Pullman Salaries to be Maintained.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—General Manager Brown of the Pullman Company denies the report that the palace car organization has decided to reduce the salaries of its conductors and porters.

Resigns from the Central.

BUFFALO, Jan. 20.—E. F. Van Hoesen, Chief Engineer of the Western Division of the New York Central, has tendered his resignation, to take effect Feb. 1.

WALL PAPER COST $10,000.

Col. W. N. Amory Has a Room in His Home Papered with Bonds of an Unsuccessful Company.

The multi-millionaire who wants a house suitable in structure, size, and luxuriance of equipment to his means usually pays a good deal of attention to his wall paper. If he be a man deficient in the indefinable something that is called "taste," he may pay some one to select his papers for him. At all events, he knows that a wall paper of the wrong sort will do a good deal to nullify the effects of soft, thick, expensive carpets, rich curtains, and handsome furniture, and is willing to spend a handsome sum in seeing that his interior walls are properly treated.

If, therefore, one were asked to guess the room the walls of which were covered with the richest, most expensive paper in this city, he would be apt to run over in his mind some of the splendid mansions on upper Fifth Avenue and pick out the dining room or drawing room of one of these. If he should be of an investigating turn of mind and should pursue the subject so much further as to visit by chance 127 East Sixty-second Street, a brownstone house of moderate size, he might come to change his view. He would see there a little study about 18 feet long, 14 feet high, and 10 or 12 feet wide, the walls of which are covered with paper having a face value of about $412,000. If the owner, however, should take it from those walls and try to sell it he would have to accept a good deal less for it.

The owner and occupant of the house is Col. W. N. Amory, who was on Gov. Black's staff, and is now Secretary of the Third Avenue Railroad Company. He had this remarkable wall paper for some ten years before he moved in, last year. It consists of derelict securities, which were meant to command the respect of investors. They are, as a matter of fact, 6 per cent. bonds, each of the par value of $1,000, of the Consolidated Jellico Coal and Iron Company, which is still alive because the Attorney General of the State of Kentucky has never taken the trouble to wind up its affairs. The bonds figure in a neat pattern on the walls, each promising to pay the holder, on April 1, 1919, the sum of $1,000 in United States gold coin, and explaining that a deed of trust regarding them has been made to the Metropolitan Trust Company of this city. The frieze which runs around the room just under the ceiling is composed of the semi-annual coupons, each of the par value of $30.

Jellico, Ky., is a town almost on the border line between Kentucky and Tennessee, and it possesses several flourishing coal mines. It occurred to Col. Amory and some others about 1889 to consolidate four of these mines, and, acquiring some iron lands in their vicinity, form a corporation which should do both coal and iron mining. So the Consolidated Jellico Coal and Iron Company was formed. Col. Amory and his friends undertook to float the company's $2,250,000 worth of thirty-year bonds and $4,500,000 worth of stock among New York capitalists. After a good deal of negotiating and extending of the time limit on options, however, the whole thing fell through. The stock not having been taken or the bonds floated, the company did not acquire anything, and Col. Amory and his associates had to surrender all idea of the handsome profits they were to have had for carrying the scheme through and apply themselves to "settling up" for the expenses which the venture had involved. At this juncture Col. Amory's associates failed to appreciate their obligations, and when the whole affair was over he found that it had cost him, directly or indirectly, about $10,000.

But he had the securities—those securities which were to have ranked so high. They had been engraved by the New York Bank Note Company, then at 1 Broadway, at a cost of some $2,200 and sent South. When he was conducting his negotiations here they had been shipped to him in this city. After the collapse of the scheme no one cared to ask him for those nicely engraved securities and he has them yet. He owns the entire Consolidated Jellico Coal and Iron Company and will sell a minority interest cheap.

ANOTHER BRIDGE JUMPER.

Charles McEnroe's Alleged Purpose—Arrested on Cabman's Charge.

A disciple of Steve Brodie was foiled yesterday afternoon in an alleged attempt to jump from the Brooklyn Bridge. He is Charles McEnroe, forty-three years of age, of 264 First Avenue. It is reported that the police of the Fourth Precinct of Brooklyn were informed in time to enable them to have an extra force on the bridge to watch for the jumper. He did not get further than the Park Row entrance to the bridge, however, where, owing to a dispute with a cab driver, John H. Kelly, of 91 Cherry Street, he was arrested and locked up in the Oak Street Station.

McEnroe arrived at the bridge entrance, accompanied by a man who, he said, was Joseph Webber, life saver, attached to the station at Atlantic City. Kelly drove up to the curb and demanded his fare, which was refused, and Policeman Touhey of the bridge squad, believing McEnroe to be the expected bridge jumper, arrested him on the driver's charge.

At the station house last night McEnroe denied that he had attempted to evade paying his fare, and said that he had already paid it when he hired the conveyance at Dryden's livery stable, at Thirty-sixth Street, near Broadway. He also denied that he intended to jump from the bridge yesterday, although he was sure that he could do it, and would at the first opportunity.

Navy Yard Chaplain Parks Resigns.

The Rev. Father Charles H. Parks, Chaplain at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, has resigned from the United States Navy after a service of nearly ten years. He has acted as Chaplain aboard the Essex and other warships, and at various navy yards. His resignation was caused by ill-health. The Rev. Father Parks was the first Catholic Chaplain to be appointed in the United States Navy. It is rumored that he will be assigned to the pastorate of the Church of St. Thomas Aquinas, at West Farms.

Indiana Coal Troubles Adjusted.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 20.—President Van Horn of the Indiana district of the United Mine Workers, sent word from Hazelton to-day that Cable & Co., operators at Hartwell, had decided to sign the mine workers' scale. This firm has waged a very bitter fight against organized labor, and is the strongest of the four Indiana firms that have stood out against the miners' organization. It is believed here by officers of the mine workers that the action of Cable & Co. will mean the close of the two-year fight in this State.

THE PHILIPPINE PROBLEM

President Schurman Discusses It Before the Patria Club.

Suggests a Legislature with Power to the Filipinos to Elect Members of One House.

The Patria Club met at the Hotel Savoy last night and heard President Schurman of Cornell University, who was one of the commission which visited the Philippines for this country, discuss the problem of those islands.

President Schurman said that after the cessation of hostilities the United States would probably be able to withdraw to a large extent the garrisons of American soldiers now in the Philippines, substituting therefor native guards, officered by Americans. "When the Filipinos," said he, "come to realize the blessings of liberty and home rule which Americans carry with them, they will accept the situation, and if not they, their children will bless us for going there.

"The thing which impressed me most was the existence in Manila and the other principal towns of a considerable number of highly educated men. When I went there a year ago I thought the people barbarians. I was greatly surprised at the respectable number of educated men who in their various professions, law, medicine, or what not, compare favorably with men in similar professions in America or Europe. These are the real leaders of the people.

"There are no chiefs, Sultans, and datos in Luzon. They existed there 300 years ago, at the time of the Spanish invasion. But they have all been extinguished. The civilized portion of the archipelago has no recognized leaders, but these educated men will undoubtedly be the real leaders. When we get them attached to us they will be able to secure for us the loyalty of the people. They have been educated in France, Germany, and Spain, and you can converse with them in the languages of those countries.

"The masses of the people are ignorant. The aim of Spain in the Philippine Islands was to provide one school teacher for every 3,000 natives, but in practice they fell far below that. The masses, being illiterate, are superstitious, credulous in the extreme, and believe the most absurd stories which their leaders tell them. They believe that the Americans have enslaved the negro—that is as late a date as they have got our history down to—have exterminated the Indian, and have now gone out to the Orient to exploit the Filipino. The natives have an instinctive dread and suspicion of white men. They knew no white men but Spaniards before we came. We inherit no worse legacy in the islands than this latent hatred of the white race. The wise policy of our Government is, immediately after the suppression of the war in the Philippines, to establish at once American justice and let them see what white men can do. With civil government let us confer on them all the home rule they are capable of exercising."

THREE GREAT RACES.

President Schurman then took up the subject of the "wonderful heterogeneity" of the islands. "In the matter of races," said he, "for instance, there are three great races. The great majority of the Filipinos belong to the Malayan race. There are eighty-four different tribes, each speaking a different language, absolutely incomprehensible to men of another tribe. To those who say 'Let the Philippine country, the Philippine nation, govern itself,' the reply is, 'There is no Philippine country or nation.' There are simply a number of different tribes, six or seven of which contain over 300,000 or 400,000 people. The Viscayans number 2,000,000. They all speak one language. Next come the Tagalos, about 1,600,000 in number. These tribes don't understand each other's tongues.

"They have some admirable qualities. They are a very clean people. They roll about in the Bay of Manila, and if they didn't get water enough there, you will find them in the streets washing under pumps. They are very temperate. No Filipino would take over a small glassful of wine on any occasion. I never saw a people so conscious of their ignorance and so anxious to escape from it. They keep before them the example of Japan, and say, 'If the Japanese became a nation through education, why may not the Filipinos?

"The Filipinos have had exceedingly limited experience of self-government, we must confess. They did enjoy a little municipal government under Spain, but practically no provincial government. Against the grant of absolute self-government the conditions I have described are an insurmountable obstacle as things now stand.

"The civilization of the different parts is various. Luzon is really the civilized portion. The people there have absorbed as much of Spanish civilization as they were capable of taking in, and they have been thoroughly Christianized. They are all good Roman Catholics. They have, to be sure, complaints against the friars, who have managed to acquire a good deal of land, and who, they say, make oppressive landlords. But, even after having poured out the vials of their wrath on the friars, they will turn around and say, 'But remember, we are all good Catholics.'

"Going further south to the Island of Mindanao we find conditions entirely different. There are some Christians here, a good many barbarians in the interior, and the rest Mohammedans. The different tribes in the Island of Mindanao or the Sulu Archipelago, all have their hereditary chieftains. The same government which is adapted to Luzon will be ill-suited to these tribes, who must be dealt with through their chieftains.

"I was down there in June, and I recommended to our Government to make an agreement with these chieftains or Sultans and not try to reach the people save through their leaders. I am glad to say this policy was followed. I look for a settlement of the question in this southern part of the archipelago without any fighting whatever. It is simply a question of diplomacy."

QUESTION OF A PROTECTORATE.

Prof. Schurman then took up the question of a protectorate, and pointed out that one could not exist without a definite government to protect, a condition which did not obtain in the civilized part of the Philippines. "Some one will say," he continued, "that we would better have recognized Aguinaldo and his so-called Philippine republic.

"In the first place, Aguinaldo is not a hereditary chieftain, but a politico-military adventurer, who was up yesterday and is down to-day, and for whom his subjects cannot feel real reverence or loyalty. In the second place, Aguinaldo never exercised authority over the Philippine Islands. His men and resources were drawn from one tribe, the Tagalos, and portions of other tribes which that tribe coerced, and he is the chieftain of the Tagalos. To establish a protectorate over the Tagalos in the archipelago, over the whole of which we have assumed sway, would be the grossest anomaly. The condition suitable to a protectorate outside of the hereditary chieftains of certain tribes is certainly not existent. Great as the responsibilities are involved in raising our flag over the Philippines, we can't escape them in that way.

"While we are working at a plan for taking care of those responsibilities we must retain our sovereignty over the islands, and assume responsibility for their government. It is best to give them a considerably larger measure of home rule than ever Spain did. I do not mean to let them set up a separate Government. The people are not fit for that. But we should give them a larger franchise, so that every Filipino who could read and write any language and had amassed a certain amount of property would be allowed to vote. We could give them the management of their own personal affairs. They will never learn to govern themselves without experience just as one does not learn to swim without going into the water and trying. I would give the Filipinos some representation in the management of the general archipelago.

FILIPINOS IN A LEGISLATURE.

"If we established there a Legislature, with two houses, why should we not allow the Filipinos to elect the members of one house? The existence of a house elected by themselves would have two very conciliatory effects. It would give the ambitious and educated men a chance to take part in the Government. Then it would give the masses an opportunity of voicing their wants to the central government, which would have to take account of their needs and not ignore and trample on popular government as Spain did.

"If some such thing were set up, in my judgment in a short time the Filipinos themselves would be delighted with the change and welcome the Americans.

"I was much struck with the fact that what the Filipinos wanted, the yearnings of their hearts, were the very things which are the practice and tradition of the American people. They want schools for the people, participation in the general Government; they want to manage their own local affairs. The more I dwell upon the demands of the Filipinos the more clearly I see how it lies in the nature of American administrators to fill them.

"The responsibility has come, and, heavy as it is, we can't shut our eyes to the bright side—the pre-established harmony between the Filipino aspirations and yearnings and American institutions. If I should call myself an expansionist it would be because I believe the potentiality and vitality in American institutions ought to expand out in the Orient. Knowing the American people as we do, we may be sure that however arduous may be the duty, it will certainly be done without shrinking."

After President Schurman's speech, there was a discussion in which Prof. Franklin H. Giddings took part. He eulogized President Schurman, and said: "If we were to withdraw our forces and let the Filipinos set up a government of their own the immediate and inevitable result would be a war to the death between these different and antagonistic tribes."

NEW BABY A MERE MITE.

At Birth Weighs Less Than Two Pounds, but Is Healthy.

A boy whose parents believe he is the smallest healthy infant who ever came to the city reached the home of John Murray, at 457 West Fiftieth Street, last Tuesday. The child at birth weighed only one pound and seven ounces, and is eleven inches tall. At first it seemed as though such a little mite of humanity could hardly live, but the child displayed a good appetite and a strong voice, and now seems just as lively as any other baby of his days could be. His two-year-old brother Charles addressed him as "Uncle John" when he first saw him, and John therefore will probably be the new baby's name, though his parents have not yet made their final decision.

The latest arrival is the third of the children in the family, all boys, but the others were of normal weight and size when they first saw the light. The father is a bartender, and the mother is a rather delicate young woman. The midget calls for his food with all the vigor of a baby six times his weight, but three small teaspoonfuls of warm water, one of milk, and a little drop of cordial constitute a full meal for him. The child has yet no nails on hands or feet.

"Uncle John" is the wonder of the neighborhood, and the house is besieged with callers all day long. Wallace Jackson, who lives in the same house, says the child is one of the greatest of living curiosities and his word is taken by the neighborhood, for he traveled with Barnum's circus as head blacksmith.

Georgia Jail Break Frustrated.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 20.—Edward Flanagan, a murderer, led fourteen prisoners today in an attempt to escape from jail at Decatur, five miles from Atlanta. Flanagan felled the jailer to the floor with a heavy piece of iron, but the injured man, drawing his pistol, fired into the gang of prisoners. Flanagan was shot through the thigh and fell. The shots attracted the attention of the jailer's family and with their assistance he overcame the prisoners, and all were locked up. Flanagan's wound is not dangerous.

Brings Bodies of Soldiers.

The United States Transport McClellan arrived yesterday from Santiago with the bodies of seventy-six soldiers who died in Santiago Province last Summer and Spring from yellow fever, and a cargo of 375 metallic caskets. The caskets were sent to Santiago when there was a large force of troops there and are no longer needed in Cuba. Among the passengers on the McClellan was Capt. J. A. Emery of the Eleventh United States Infantry.

An Actor Dies of Lockjaw.

WICHITA, Kan., Jan. 20.—Lewis J. Monroe, a member of the Paul Gilmore Dramatic Company, died at the St. Francis Hospital here to-day of lockjaw, the result of an accidental shot in his hand a week ago. Within the last week three members of the company have been accidentally shot, among them Paul Gilmore himself.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

The Vogt Optical Company of Rochester; capital, $15,000. Directors—John E. Morey, L. J. Vogt, and S. B. Truesdale, Rochester.

Fort Schuyler Knitting Company of Utica; capital, $15,000. Directors—Charles P. Clarke, Ezra R. Pugh, and W. J. McQuade, Utica.

Sinclair Park Land Company of Rochester; capital, $9,600. Directors—Nicholas Brayer, John F. Brayer, and C. F. Martz of Rochester.

International Engineering Company of Yonkers; capital, $200,000. Directors—Rudolph C. Smith, R. C. Smith, Jr., and James Cruickshank of New York City.

The Oneida County Loan Association of Utica, N. Y.; capital, $5,000. Directors—Willis E. Hibbard of Utica and C. S. Hibbard and Cora E. Hibbard of Elmira.

The Riverdale Land Company of New York City; capital, $25,000. Directors—Joseph H. Matthews and Thomas S. Miller, Brooklyn; H. E. Thomas, Haworth, N. J.

Home Security Company of New York City, to make money loans; capital, $5,000. Directors—Hannah Leerberger, Joseph Leerberger, and Samuel Eckstein of New York City.

FINANCIAL.

U. S. PNEUMATIC HORSE COLLAR CO.

are open for negotiations regarding

VALUABLE STATE RIGHTS and EUROPEAN PATENTS ON ROYALTY BASIS.

The company is now prepared to fill orders for their improved collar.

AS PROOF OF THEIR MERIT they have been thoroughly TESTED, ACCEPTED, and INDORSED by the Best-equipped FIRE DEPARTMENTS in the UNITED STATES, and

Orders for the following cities are now being filled, viz.:
New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Milwaukee, Providence, New Haven, and others of lesser note.

HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS from veterinary surgeons and others indorse their humane application to the horse and their practical result in general use.

Over 10 millions of Horse Collars in use in this country alone.

Agents wanted. Address
Main Office,
52 Broadway, New York.
Branch, 21 Palace Arcade, Buffalo.
Factories { 10 Clinton St., Brooklyn, N. Y., 108 Greenwich St.

TEACHERS.

PRIVATE TUTOR—Experienced in collegiate instruction and recommended by well-known families. Address YALENSIS, Times office, up-town.

LOST AND FOUND.

LOST.—On the Sixth Avenue Elevated, soon after eight P. M., Thursday, OPERA BAG, containing glass, pocketbook, and other articles. Finder will be suitably rewarded by returning property to 36 West 92d St.

WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

LINDO BROS., Broadway, Corner 29th St.—Diamonds, Watches, and Jewelry bought and sold; old Gold bought.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

LADIES' DRESSMAKING AND IMPORTING establishment for sale. Fashionable dressmaker leaving U. S. A. will sell good will with list of customers of successfully established fashionable trade. Price very reasonable. Cash. Address C. M., Box 350, 1,269 Broadway.

GOOD OPENING FOR RELIABLE MAN, CAPABLE OF HANDLING agents; manager wanted for Greater New York; business already established. Address COLUMBIA REGISTRY COMPANY, Glens Falls, N. Y.

MAIL ORDER MONTHLY.—$600 will purchase outright excellent periodical, with unlimited possibilities. BARGAIN, Box 213, Times Office.

WHO WANTS TO BUY OR EXPLOIT NEW Patented Advertising Novelty? UNIQUE, Box 193, Times Office.

MONEY TO LOAN ON SALARIES, LEGACIES, and other securities. Room 729, 150 Nassau St.

DRY GOODS.

FACTS TO REMEMBER.—The Gants Duchess, Albert, or Lavallière are glove perfection. Our Parisian Jewelry has no equal. Our Perfumes cannot be found elsewhere. Our corsets unbreakable and most pleasant to wear. JAMMES, 4 West 37th St., near 5th Av.

EUROPE.

PARIS.—Country seat and city residence for sale or to let. Apply 148 East 71st St.

AUCTION SALES.

Knickerbocker

AUCTION ROOMS, 8 WEST 28TH ST. C. E. SMITH, AUCT'R.

NOW ON EXHIBITON

BOTH GALLERIES.

GRAND UNSURPASSED HISTORICAL SALE OF THE INCOMPARABLE COLLECTION OF

GENUINE

ANTIQUES, FURNITURE, &c.,

FORMED BY THE

Hon. John Eager Howard,

of Revolutionary Fame,

Governor of Maryland 1789. U. S. Senator 1796.

Removed from the Old Homestead at Claremont, Calverton Heights, near Baltimore, Md.

COMPRISING MANY QUAINT AND INTERESTING SPECIMENS

in Antique Mahogany of the Colonial and Chippendale

Periods, High and Low Boys, Sideboards, Cellarettes, Side Tables, Work Tables, Dressing and Toilet Tables, Bookcases, Corner Closets, Hall Settles, Wardrobes, Corner Chairs; any number of odd Chippendale Chairs, Chests, Sofas, &c.

TWO CARVED HIGH POST BEDSTEADS, HALL, MANTLE AND CHIME CLOCKS.

The Dining Room Table and China used by Gen. George Washington.

The Bedstead used by Gen. Lafayette.

ANTIQUE GOLD WATCH USED BY HON. JOHN EAGER HOWARD.

RARE MINIATURE PAINTING OF GEN. LAFAYETTE, BY TRUMBULL.

A RENOWNED COLLECTION OF

Old Blue and White, including Dr. Syntax painting a portrait and returning from his tour, anti-slavery, Lafayette landing at Castle Garden, Rhode Island Arms, Octagon Church, Fairmount Park, McDonough's Victory, Erie Canal, Buffalo (N. Y.) Almshouse, City Hall, &c., &c.

OLD LOWESTOFT CAPO DI MONTE, SPODE, STAFFORDSHIRE, &c.

A NUMBER OF MIRRORS OF REVOLUTIONARY TIMES; COLLECTION OF RARE BRONZES, COPPER, BRASSWARE, PEWTER, PLATE, STERLING SILVER, CURIOS, POTTERIES.

RICH CRIMSON DRAPERIES AND HANGINGS.

Gems of the Orient in Antique Rugs.

Library of Rare Books, Old Engravings,

PRINTS, ARMS, ANDIRONS, FENDERS. A SUPERB COLLECTION OF COLONIAL LAMPS AND CANDELABRA.

Antique Paintings, including Portraits of Renowned Personages.

ALSO THE PAINTED PORCH CHAIRS, SETTLES.

Unquestionably the most INTERESTING DISPLAY OF GENUINE ANTIQUITIES OFFERED THIS SEASON.

Illustrated catalogue on application.

AT ABSOLUTE SALE

Wednesday, January 24, and Three Following Afternoons.

AT TWO O'CLOCK PROMPT.

What is Home without a Piano? Wire.

Standard Auction Rooms,

19 and 21 West 125th St.

BENJ. S. WISE, Auctioneer,

Has the honor to

OPERA PATRONS OVERCOME

Heat and the Crowded Condition of the House Prostrate Men and Women.

The weather conditions yesterday caused the atmosphere in the Metropolitan Opera House to become almost unbearable for those who were crowded into the space allotted to patrons without seats. Several times ushers were called to the assistance of men and women who had been overcome by the heat. The victims were carried in a fainting condition to either the Thirty-ninth or Fortieth Street corridors.

Treasurer Max Hirsch always has in readiness a small hospital equipment, consisting mainly of smelling salts and brandy, which were frequently brought into use yesterday. Six women and two men were prostrated during the afternoon.

At the evening performance these conditions were even worse as the quarters in the rear of the orchestra circle were crowded to suffocation almost. Many who were unable to purchase seats were prostrated and were borne out into the corridors. As many as twenty sufferers were cared for by the ushers at one time.

Some were courageous enough to venture into the auditorium again when sufficiently revived, but most of the victims were too thoroughly frightened by the crush and their own unfortunate experience to attempt this, and took cabs and carriages for their homes.

BROOKLYN PASTORS DISAGREE.

Revival Movement Engenders Controversy—Unitarians Find a Champion in an Episcopalian Divine.

The ministers who have entered upon a combined revival movement in Brooklyn are alleged to be not in harmony as to the methods to be employed. There is, in fact, said to be discord in the recently organized Executive Committee over the religious ideas of the Rev. Dr. L. G. Broughton of Atlanta, Ga. This has already resulted in the resignation of the Rev. Dr. Lindsay Parker of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church from the committee. Dr. Parker is quoted as saying that while he did not ask that the Unitarians, against whom Dr. Broughton inveighs, be asked to co-operate in the revival movement, he did not want them debarred.

"We are all with Dr. Broughton," said the Rev. Dr. David Gregg, Chairman of the Executive Committee, yesterday. "His is sensationalism of the right kind. It is the kind that is needed to keep people from going to sleep in the churches; it is the sort of sensationalism that St. Paul used in his preaching."

Dr. Parker in his letter of resignation said that he resigned because he disagreed with Dr. Broughton on account of the latter's strong anti-Unitarian views. As Dr. Parker is not a Unitarian, and as an orthodox Episcopalian could not be in sympathy with Unitarian tenets, I am at a loss to know why he objected to Dr. Broughton's opinion of the Unitarian Church. I suppose he was opposed to any one making an attack on another Church.

"Of course, we did not expect the Unitarians to join in our movement, for we are believers in the truth, and they do not believe in the truth any more than the men who crucified Jesus Christ."

"All sinners are Unitarians, and all Unitarians are sinners," said Dr. Broughton in speaking of Dr. Parker's withdrawal. "We want to convert the Unitarians; we want them to come to our meetings. Of course, we do not want them to help us preach there, because they do not preach God's truth."

AFTER JUVENILE OFFENDERS.

Sheriff Walton to Have Special Deputies for New Reform Movement.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Brooklyn has appealed to Sheriff William Walton to give his aid in a newly projected scheme of charitable work. The movement has for its object the suppression of evil and criminal practices among children. It is supported by many of the local churches.

The Sheriff is asked to appoint Special Deputy Sheriffs, whose duties shall be to ferret out and, if necessary, arrest juvenile offenders, in order that the work of suppression and reclamation may be effective. Sheriff Walton has promised to assist in the movement in the way suggested.

The promoters of the movement believe that gambling in the streets, disorderly conduct, and like offenses, which prepare children for more serious crimes may be overcome through a system of espionage which will warn them that their acts are contrary to law and order.

PENNSYLVANIA ALUMNI DINE.

Members of the New York Society Hear Songs and Speeches.

About seventy-five alumni of the New York Society of the University of Pennsylvania held their annual dinner last night at the Waldorf-Astoria. Before the dinner a business meeting was held, at which the following officers were elected: President—W. B. Boulton; Vice President—W. C. Hill; Secretary—Clement A. Griscom, Jr.; Treasurer—Harry Bowers Mingle. Plans were made to secure suitable rooms and for the formation of a closer organization. The New York society expects eventually to possess a clubhouse similar to the Houston Club at the university.

During the evening a double quartet from the University Glee Club and members of the Mask and Wig Club, the university dramatic organization, added to the general fun with songs and sketches.

Among the diners, and the oldest alumnus, was Thomas Dunn English of the class of '38, and the author of "Ben Bolt." Of the other alumni present were graduates of classes from Mr. English's time up to '99. Among the speakers were Provost Charles C. Harrison, "The University"; Dr. J. M. Da Costa, "The Medical School"; George M. Dallas, "The Law School"; William W. Porter, "The Alumni."

Infernal Machine for a Witness.

NEW ALBANY, Miss., Jan. 20.—To-day while the janitor was clearing the Criminal Courtroom he found an infernal machine, primed and ready for discharge, ingeniously arranged under the chair provided for witnesses. It is presumed that it was intended to assassinate in this manner an important witness in one of the big trials scheduled for this term of court.

Striker Fatally Shoots a Deputy.

WELLSBOROUGH, Penn., Jan. 20.—William J. Thomas, a leader among the miners on strike near here, to-night shot and fatally wounded a member of Sheriff Johnson's posse, which was guarding one of the mines. The name of the Sheriff's Deputy is unknown. Thomas succeeded in making his escape to Roaring Branch, and is being pursued.

Western Insurance Order Fails.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 20.—The supreme lodge of the fraternal insurance order known as the Knights and Ladies of the Fireside made a voluntary assignment in the Circuit Court to-day. The total assets of the order listed only $2,769. Nothing is stated in the documents filed in court as to the number of creditors or the amount of the order's liabilities.

Alleged Plague Preventive.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine Hospital Service has dispatched 1,500 bottles of a new prophylactic to Honolulu and the same quantity to Manila. This fluid has been used as a plague preventive in India, and has proved quite effective. He has also sent a quantity of curative serum to Honolulu.

American Society of Allied Arts.

The American Society of Allied Arts held its annual meeting last Thursday and elected the following officers: President, Miss E. B. Shields; First Vice President, Mrs. L. W. Holcombe; Second Vice President, Mrs. R. N. Dishow; Treasurer, Miss C. A. Hopkins; Recording Secretary, Miss S. E. Beach; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. T. Nelson, 149 East Thirty-ninth Street.

Society for Ethical Culture.

"Pseudo Scientific Charity" will be the subject of an address to be delivered by Miss Mary E. Richmond at the regular meeting of the Woman's Conference of the Society for Ethical Culture at the Tuxedo, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, on Monday at 2:30 P. M.

CASE OF ROUNDSMAN ROHRIG.

Report that "Bob" Nelson, the Bondsman, Was Behind His Transfer Causes Gossip.

The transfer of Frank Rohrig, who was for some time a Roundsman in the Tenderloin precinct under Capt. Price, to the West Forty-seventh Street Station was a topic of general conversation in Capt. Thomas's new precinct last night. The transfer, which was made by Chief Devery on Friday night, was unexpected, and it is asserted by those who pretend to know the inside workings of the department that "Bob" Nelson, the professional bondsman, was the moving cause.

Rohrig, who had been a precinct detective under Capt. Thomas, was at once detailed when the new commander took charge to rid Seventh Avenue of the badger thieves, white and black, that infested that thoroughfare. He went to work with a will, and soon had the colony of thieves either locked up or on the run. It is asserted that this class is a fruitful source of income to Nelson, both from the fact that he furnishes bonds for them when they are in trouble and that they liberally patronize his saloon, at Thirtieth Street and Seventh Avenue.

It is alleged that he remarked in the West Thirtieth Street Station House one night last week that Rohrig was getting altogether too active, and close upon the heels of this alleged assertion came the Roundsman's transfer.

When the Chief was under indictment Nelson was one of his bondsmen, and the two men are acknowledged friends. It has also been stated in various quarters that Capt. Price's removal from the Tenderloin to the charge of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau can also be traced to Nelson's displeasure, but details in this regard are lacking, and the only persons who know about it positively decline to talk.

Chief Devery, when seen last night, dismissed the whole subject with the assertion. "Nobody tells me whom to transfer. Whatever is done in the department is for the good of the service," a statement which the Chief has made in reference to other upheavals.

Nelson refused to even hear anything on the subject, and Capt. Thomas said that he knew nothing of the matter except that Rohrig had always been a good officer. Capt. Price refused to talk, as did also Rohrig.

ACCUSED OF BURNING A WOMAN.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 20.—George Rife, a railroad man, was placed under arrest today charged with having attempted to burn to death Mrs. Susie Brobst, with whom he boarded. Mrs. Brobst, who is expected to die of her burns, made a sworn statement to-day that Rife had quarreled with her and that he had knocked her down, saturated her clothing with gasoline, and set fire to it. Her screams, she claimed, frightened him, and he tried to smother the flames and was himself burned slightly.

Rife claims that he was in bed and was awakened by Mrs. Brobst's screams, and rushed to her assistance. Rife is in a hospital, but in the custody of an officer.

MILLARD R. JONES DEAD.

Once Well Known as a Lawyer, Was Declared Insane Last Fall.

The death of Millard R. Jones, once attorney for and a Director in the North River Bank, which failed in 1890, was reported to the Health Department yesterday, where it was said that he had lived at 19 East Eleventh Street. Mr. Jones was forty-eight years of age.

At 19 East Eleventh Street it was said last night that Millard R. Jones had lived there, and that he went away from there three weeks before he was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he was adjudged insane. At the hospital it was stated that Millard R. Jones was brought there Oct. 24, 1899, by his wife, and after examination was pronounced insane by Drs. Fitch and Wildman. On Oct. 27 he was taken to the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane.

Ten years ago Mr. Jones was well-known as a lawyer and financier. A few years after the failure of the North River Bank he went abroad and remained in Europe until less than a year ago. He was interested in various financial schemes in England, none of which, it is believed, was particularly successful, and he returned to this country very much broken in health. A long-continued illness of his wife added to his indisposition.

SIGHTING SMOKELESS FLASHES

A London Chemist Tells How to Prepare Ordinary Glasses for the Battlefield.

To the Editor of The London Times.

Sir: So much has been said and written of late, in relation to the difficulty of "locating" such of the Boer guns as are loaded with "smokeless" powder, that a word of explanation may not be out of place. Except at night time, the "flash" of the explosion of such powder is practically invisible at the usual distances, the pale mauve-tinted flame of each discharge being effectually stopped or masked by the yellow color of sunshine or ordinary daylight. The flame-color itself is chiefly due to the presence of the metal potassium in the powder, and is most powerfully exhibited when picrate of potassium, or a nitrated guncotton (pyroxiline or trinitro-cellulose subsequently treated with a solution of nitrate of potassium—i. e., nitre or saltpetre) is an ingredient in the powder.

But such explosion flames can be readily seen if care be taken to cut off all light proceeding from the red and yellow rays of the solar spectrum, (and especially those of or near the so-called D line of the sodium flame.) This can be accomplished by looking through a piece of blue glass of a certain shade.

The blue glass of commerce is of two kinds, but only one of them—viz., that colored by oxide of cobalt—is of any practical utility for the present purpose. It is of a beautiful blue-violet tine, and a disk of it hung in front of a good field glass will enable a "smokeless" flash to be easily "located" at the longest ranges yet employed. There is, moreover, no occasion—as I note has been suggested in one quarter—to "send to America for violet glasses," there being plenty of excellent cobalt-glass in this country. Most of the blue bottles in which poisonous preparations are put up by druggists are made of the cheaper kind of glass, which is of little use; but sometimes a clear cobalt-colored bottle can be met with in a dispensary, and a broken piece of one might thus come in handy. Failing cobalt glass, there is yet—as the cookery books would put it—"another way."

Among the ordinary coal tar coloring matters is one commercially known as "Hofmann's violet." This is soluble in spirit, and with such a solution it is easy to color a thin sheet of gelatine or mica. But a better plan is to take out the "front combination" lenses of your field glass and to "paint" the posterior surface with the transparent dye, and then replace it. The instrument will then show the "invisible flash" of a potassium flame perfectly without the trouble of adjusting a separate piece of cobalt glass, and being inside the film of color is not liable to be wiped off when dusting the exterior before using it.

Trusting that these little practical hints may be of service, I remain, Sir, yours obediently. W. LASCELLES-SCOTT.

Lecturer on Chemistry and Physics, late Public Analyst for the Counties of Derby, North Stafford, Glamorgan, &c. Chemical and Physical Laboratories, Little Ilford, Essex, Jan. 2.

Car Crashes Into a Truck.

A north-bound Third Avenue electric car struck a truck in charge of Joseph Mulvey of 41 Bethune Street, at Forty-sixth Street, last night. The truck was almost demolished and the car had one side partly crushed in and a number of the windows broken. The half dozen passengers in the car were thrown from their seats, but none of them was hurt. Mulvey was thrown into the gutter. He was bruised and cut slightly, but was able to go home. James Smith, the motorman of the car, was arrested.

Mexican Anti-Plague Precautions.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 20.—The Government is taking strict means to prevent the introduction of the bubonic plague, and has forbidden vessels from Brazil to enter any Mexican port. A strict watch also will be kept over vessels arriving from the Orient or Hawaii at Pacific Coast ports.

Fatal Stabbing Affray in Boston.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—Jeremiah Long, sixty-two years old, was stabbed and killed to-night by Thomas Bicati in a quarrel over money in the West End. The murderer was locked up.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The Week's Large Transactions Point to Renewed Activity.

BROADWAY DEALS THE FEATURE

Sales by Brokers—Poor Results at Auction—Broadway Parcel to be Sold This Week—Other Offerings.

Judging from the conditions of a week ago, few, even the most optimistic, would have dared to predict any such succession of sensational transactions as has been developed within the last few days. From now on it is almost inevitable that every movement of the real estate market will be associated by a more or less direct course of reasoning with the building of the rapid transit road. To do this with last week's business would be, indeed, straining a point, but even though the letting of the tunnel contract and the suddenly increased activity in real estate have happened to come in the same week, there is nevertheless ample basis for a feeling of satisfaction throughout the real estate fraternity.

Broadway from one end to the other furnished as great a variety of deals as could well be expected from one thoroughfare. The transfer of No. 13 to William H. Mairs brings the erection of a modern structure on the Stevens House corner one step nearer, although a new building at that point need not be looked for in the immediate future, according to Mr. Mairs's representative.

The sale of the southwest corner of Broadway and Walker Street to Henry Corn and his intention to put up a new building on that site became known through the filing of a building loan contract on Monday. Improved renting conditions and the consequent attractions for investors, as shown in James B. Haggin's purchases of new buildings at Broadway and Broome Street and Broadway and White Street, have done much to strengthen values along that section of the city's main thoroughfare, and Mr. Corn's building on Walker Street is only one of several similar operations which will undoubtedly be under way before the year has passed.

In many ways the most interesting deal of the week, because, perhaps, it was wholly unexpected, was the trade between James McCreery and Flake & Dowling, by which the former becomes the owner of the Nevada apartment house, giving in exchange the Fifth Avenue block front between One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Seventh Streets, five lots on the latter street, just east of Fifth Avenue, and two lots at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Ninth Street. Heretofore confining their operations to down-town parcels and to property on the upper west side, Messrs. Flake & Dowling have occasioned no little comment by going east of Central Park. In taking this step they were influenced, it is said, by the fact that the Mount Sinai Hospital's block, Fifth and Madison Avenues, One Hundredth and One Hundred and First Streets, is in the market, and that, with this property out of the hands of an institution, the development of the entire stretch of Fifth Avenue between say Ninety-fifth and One Hundred and Tenth Streets, will go on much more rapidly.

In regard to the position of the Mount Sinai Hospital in the matter, one who is closely in touch with any real estate dealings of that institution said: "In a sense it is true that that block is in the market, but in looking about for another site, none has as yet been found available, and under these conditions I do not think that anybody could offer the Trustees enough profit to induce them to part with the block."

Charles T. Barney's sale of the Broadway block front between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth Streets was another transaction not generally looked for. Mr. Barney owned all four corners at Broadway and Eighty-sixth Street, and there was every reason to suppose that he would hold them. The price paid for the block front, however, $365,000, was effectual in breaking his corner in corners.

A down-town deal, interesting as the forerunner of improvements, was the trade between John T. Williams and Alfred Wagstaff, by which the former gets the old buildings 114 and 116 Liberty Street, running through to 117 to 121 Cedar Street and gives in payment 274 and 276 Church Street, a modern six-story structure.

Latest Sales by Brokers.

George A. Bowman has sold for William T. Moore, for about $80,000, the five-story building 103 West Forty-second Street, north side, 40 feet west of Sixth Avenue, 20 by 75.5.

Frank A. Seitz has sold the plot at the northwest corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, 118.5 by 63.5 by 100.11 by 125, to an operator, who has resold the property to Felt & Livingston for improvement with a seven-story apartment house.

The Globe Realty Company has sold to Benjamin F. Luyster the plot, 50 by 99.11, on the south side of One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, 375 feet west of Seventh Avenue.

It is reported that Louis F. Weissmann has sold the seven-story apartment house known as the Lancaster, at the junction of Broadway, West End Avenue, and One Hundred and Sixth Street.

George W. Spitzer is the buyer of 11 West Twentieth Street, sold recently by Mayer S. Auerbach.

G. Brettell & Son have sold for Dimock & Fink the business building 220 and 222 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, 50 by 100; also, for Margaret L. Haughey to Harry Schloss, the five-story flat 172 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, 26 by 75.

The Ernst-Marx-Nathan Company has sold to Edward Joyce the plot of nine lots, 300 by 75 by 200 by 77 by 25 by 100, being the northwest corner of Broadway and One Hundred and Ninetieth Street and the northwest corner of Wadsworth Avenue and One Hundred and Ninetieth Street.

Max Marx has bought from Peter J. McCoy the building at the northeast corner of Church and White Streets, 25 by 55, giving in exchange the following vacant parcels: King's Bridge Road, west side, 25 feet south of Hawthorne Street, 75 by 100; King's Bridge Road, east side, north of Sherman Avenue, 100 by 202 by 106 by 165; One Hundred and Eighty-sixth Street, southeast corner of Audubon Avenue, 85 by 100.7; One Hundred and Eighty-third Street, northwest corner of Wadsworth Avenue, 50 by 75; Audubon Avenue, west side, 25 feet south of One Hundred and Eighty-ninth Street, 75 by 100; One Hundred and Eighty-fourth Street, south side, 200 feet west of Eleventh Avenue, 25 by 100; Hawthorne Street, corner of Post Avenue, 200 by 150 and irregular. The deal was arranged by Broker David Stewart.

Max Marx has also sold through Charles Griffith Moses to Mark Ash the plot of twelve lots at the northeast corner of Hawthorne Street and Sherman Avenue. Mr. Marx has also bought, through Bernard Smyth & Son from Dr. Louis A. Queen two lots on the east side of the Boulevard, 25 feet south of One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, 50 by 100.

Weil & Mayer have sold the three-story building 139 Attorney Street, 18 by 75.

Samuel Langer has bought for improvement the plot at the southeast corner of First Avenue and One Hundred and Tenth Street, 50.11 by 95.

The Auction Room.

Business in the salesroom is remarkably light for this season of the year, and this week's schedule, with sales announced for only three days, would look better in the middle of August than it does in the latter part of January. The list has a few redeeming features, however, in the partition sale of 652 Broadway by Auctioneer Meyer on Wednesday and the voluntary offering of 6 Park Place by Bryan L. Kennelly on the same day. Auctioneer Kennelly also announces for Wednesday an executor's sale of 30 West Forty-sixth Street, and that at public auction of 256 West One Hundred and Thirteenth Street. A voluntary sale by James L. Wells, down for Tuesday, covers the two flats, with stores, at the southeast corner of Park Avenue and One Hundred and Tenth Street.

The effect of the letting of the tunnel contract upon auction-room business will be watched with no little interest. It has been pointed out that the effect of rapid transit upon values in the upper end of Manhattan and in the Bronx has been in a large measure discounted. The rapid transit agitation, extending over a period of several years, has undoubtedly had a strong tendency toward such a result, but on the other hand it is doubtful whether any assurances that the rapid transit railroad was to become a reality would have the same effect as will the actual letting of the contract making the construction of the road as nearly a certainty as anything can be. No lot sales of any importance in the sections to be affected by the new road have been announced as yet, but the first offering of this character should give an opportunity for some instructive comparisons in values.

There were recorded last week 326 mortgages for $4,175,548, of which 101, for $1,288,472, were at 5 per cent.; 150, for $1,329,776, were at more, and 75, for $1,557,300, were at less. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 320 mortgages for $6,677,300, of which 118, for $2,100,792, were at 5 per cent.; 136, for $1,700,338, were at more, and 75, for $2,867,170, were at less.

AUCTION SALES THIS WEEK.

To Take Place at 111 Broadway, Unless Otherwise Specified.

TUESDAY, JAN. 23.—By James L. Wells, foreclosure sale, Robert O'Byrne, referee, 3,760 and 3,762 Vanderbilt Avenue East, 280 feet south of One Hundred and Seventy-first Street, 20 and 15, respectively, by 150.5, two three-story frame flats. Due on judgment, on 3,760, $4,901; on 3,762, $3,791.

By James L. Wells, public auction sale, 100 and 102 East One Hundred and Tenth Street, southeast corner of Park Avenue, 39.9½ by 75, two four-story brick and brownstone flats, with stores. To be sold as one parcel, subject to a mortgage for $14,000.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Charles S. Davison, referee, 55 to 61 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, north side, 90 feet east of Madison Avenue, 120 by 100.11, four five-story brick flats. Due on judgment, $14,971; subject to another mortgage for $23,500.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Frederick G. Wetterau, referee, 10 Leroy Street, north side, about 325 feet west of Bleecker Street, five-story brick tenement, with three-story brick tenement at the rear. Due on judgment, $5,672.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Francis V. S. Oliver, referee, 26 East One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, south side, 310 feet east of Fifth Avenue, 25 by 99.11, three-story frame dwelling. Due on judgment, $3,828.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Emanuel S. Cohn, referee, Lot 57 on the map of the Kingsland estate at Morris Heights, being on the northwest side of Tremont Avenue, 37.6 by 138.10 and irregular. Due on judgment, $4,313.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 24.—By Bryan L. Kennelly, public auction sale, 6 Park Place, south side, 122.7 feet west of Broadway, 25.1 by 81.9 and irregular, five-story brownstone-front building, with a two-story extension covering the lot.

By Bryan L. Kennelly, executor's sale, 30 West Forty-sixth Street, south side, 408 feet west of Fifth Avenue, 20 by 100.5, four-story brownstone-front dwelling.

By Bryan L. Kennelly, public auction sale, 256 West One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, south side, 325 feet east of Eighth Avenue, 17 by 100.11, three-story brick dwelling.

By William M. Ryan, foreclosure sale, Messmore Kendall, referee, Lorillard Street, northwest side, 176.3 feet east of Third Avenue, 50 by 100, vacant. Due on judgment, $900.

By William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, George H. Hart, referee, 135 West Eighty-third Street, north side, 325 feet west of Columbus Avenue, 25 by 102.2, five-story stone-front flat. Due on judgment, $8,778; subject to another mortgage for $22,000.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., partition sale, Edward Jacobs, referee, 652 Broadway, east side, about 87 feet south of Bond Street, 29 by 130, extending through to Cross Lane, five-story stone-front building.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Charles Putzel, referee, 230 and 232 West One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, south side, 355 feet east of Eighth Avenue, each 34 by 100.11, two five-story brick flats. Due on judgment, on 230, $5,796; on 232, $5,824; subject to other mortgages, on each, for $35,000.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., sale by order of the Sheriff, 116 West Seventy-ninth Street, south side, 125 feet west of Columbus Avenue, 25 by 102.2, four-story stone-front dwelling; all title and interest of Charles L. Buckl on May 29, 1895.

By John T. Boyd, foreclosure sale, Sylvester L. H. Ward, referee, 62 Grand Street, north side, 100 feet west of Wooster Street, 25 by 100, seven-story brick building. Due on judgment, $56,956.

FRIDAY, JAN. 25.—By Philip A. Smyth, foreclosure sale, Eugene H. Pomeroy, referee, Third Avenue, east side, 138.2 feet south of One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Street, 100 by 100, vacant. Due on judgment, $11,594; subject to another mortgage for $26,000.

By McVickar & Co., foreclosure sale, George R. Carrington, referee, 591 Engle Avenue, west side, 276.8 feet south of Westchester Avenue, 25 by 120, four-story brick flat. Due on judgment, $8,317; subject to another mortgage for $11,000.

By Strong & Ireland, partition sale, Clifford W. Hartridge, referee, 8 Christopher Street, south side, 103.6 feet west of Greenwich Avenue, 20.7 by 88.8 by 40.3 by 54.5, three-story brick building.

By Strong & Ireland, foreclosure sale, Nelson Smith, referee, 8 and 10 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, south side, 175 feet west of Fifth Avenue, 44 by 100.11, two five-story brick flats. Due on judgment, $12,413.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Edmund J. Tinsdale, referee, Brook Avenue, west side, 195.3 feet south of Wendover Avenue, 100 by 39.7, vacant. Due on judgment, $6,886.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., sale by order of the Sheriff, 198 Fulton Street, south side, about 90 feet west of Church Street, 22 by 70, five-story stone-front building; 38 Dey Street, north side, about 75 feet west of Church Street, 25 by 77, five-story stone-front building; all title and interest of Harry E. Phyfe in the foregoing parcels on Dec. 4, 1899.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., sale by order of the Sheriff, 321 and 323 East Third Street, north side, 120 feet west of Avenue D, 40 by 96, seven-story brick building; all title and interest of Neuberfer & Genowitz, on May 26, 1898.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., sale by order of the Sheriff, 219, 221, and 223 East Forty-fourth Street, north side, 305 feet west of Second Avenue, 75 by 100.6, three five-story brick tenements; all title and interest of Jesie Folsom on Oct. 31, 1899.

THE BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

The only plans filed yesterday were for the following alterations:

Nos. 439 and 441 Seventy-seventh Street, for a two-story brick stable, 16.4 by 27; John Sanders, premises, owner; Edward Wenz, architect; cost, $1,000.

Greenwich Street, southwest corner of Jane Street, to a three-story brick dwelling and store; estate of Susan Baldwin, owner; C. A. Jackson, architect; cost, $300.

No. 1,443 Broadway, to a five-story brick theatre, store, and office; M. Sebriska, Hotel Waldorf, owner; A. Boge, architect; cost, $500.

No. 58 Eldridge Street, to a three-story brick store and lofts; Peter McCormack, owner; C. H. Fox, architect; cost, $5,000.

One Hundred and Sixty-first Street, north side, 175 feet east of Courtlandt Avenue, to a one-and-a-half-story frame workshop; Gustav Buehler of 624 East One Hundred and Sixty-second Street, owner; C. F. Lohse, architect; cost, $300.

Nos. 186 to 190 Eleventh Avenue, to three two-story brick stables, 65 by 75; American Ice Company, owner; Watt & Sinclair, architects; cost, $4,000.

One Hundred and Twelfth Street, southwest corner of Lexington Avenue, to a four-story brick dwelling and store; H. Reiners, owner; B. Finkensieper, architect; cost, $75.

No. 429 West Thirty-ninth Street, to a four-story brick tenement; L. and K. Ungrich of 375 West One Hundred and Forty-fourth Street, owners; Neville & Bagge, architects; cost, $200.

No. 667 Third Avenue, to a five-story brick tenement and store; estate of James Kelly of 610 Third Avenue, owner; Brogan & Reid of 119 East Twenty-third Street, architects; cost, $400.

Recorded Real Estate Transfers.

Saturday, Jan. 20.

BROADWAY, e s, 77.10 ft s of 108th St, 25.7x88x25x93.9; Le Grand K. Pardt and wife to Herbert Dongan..... 1

BROADWAY, n w s, 35, s w corner of Goerck St, 25.3x100; Thomas F. Donnelly, referee, to Bernhard Rosenbach..... 39,000

HOUSTON ST, s s, 50 ft w of Wooster St, 25x95; Frieda Hart to John J. Houlahan..... 1

LYSE AV, n w s, 500 ft s w of Charlotte Place, 25x100; Marie Toelberg to Tenants' Co-operative Building and Loan Association..... 1

WEBSTER AV, e s, 268 ft s of 183d St, 120.4x90x123.11x89; Mercantile Co-operative Bank to Sylvester R. Murphy..... 1

3D AV, 1,761, e s, 25x83.9; Jacob Horowitz to Ross W. Tripp..... 100

11TH AV, 562, e s, 16.8x82x16.8x81.4; George H. Hart, referee, to City Real Company..... 1

5TH ST, n e corner of Bronx Terrace, 105 x259.6; Henry H. Meese to Frank Ledogar..... 1

16TH ST, n s, 375 ft w of 8th Av, 24.10 x92x irregular; Hans Lumbye to John C. Kluber..... 1

64TH ST, 152 and 154 West, 50x100.5; Minnie Schmidt to Alexander Spiro..Exchange

87TH ST, n s, 162.6 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 31.3x100.8; Thomas Allen to Rachel Axelrod..... 1

89TH ST, n s, 96.8 ft w of Columbus Av, 103.4x100.8x100x100.10; George H. Hart, referee, to Alexander Walker..... 11,000

136TH ST, s s, 165 ft e of Willis Av, 15x 100; E. D. Bertine to Sophia Bertine.. 1

140TH ST, n s, 195 ft w of 5th Av, 32.10x 162.2x23.6x99.11; Sallie M. Bethune and others to Charles E. Tilton..... 1

171ST ST, n s, 175.3 ft e of 3d Av, 19x 143.2x19.1x141.9; George Nungesser to Cook & Bernheimer Company..... 1

226TH ST, n s, 245 ft w of Katonah Av, 40x100; Grace S. Baird and another to Clara D. Vreeland..... 5,500

Recorded Leases.

BACHARACH, Joseph, to Howard Brothers; Lexington Av, s w corner of 121st St, 3 3-12 years..... $1,200, 1,500

BARRON, John C., to Farbenfabriken; 25 and 27 South William St; 41 and 43 Stone St, 9 years..... $7,000

FITZPATRICK, Catherine, to Thomas Smart and another; Amsterdam Av, w s, 74.11 ft n of 129th St, 5 years..... $720, 960

SCHWARZ, Julia, to August F. Schmidt; 2,241 Broadway, n w corner of 80th St, 4 years..... 2,500

Recorded Mortgages.

ALTIERI, Jerry, to Emanuel M. Cline; 112th St, n s, 200 ft w of 1st Av, 110.6x 100.11, 6 months..... 6,000

ASINARI, Helena L. G., to Augustus T. Gillender, committee; Park Av, w s, 50.5 ft s of 64th St, 1 year..... 28,500

CARRINGTON, Augustus B., to Columban J. Kelly; Lots 410 and 445, map of Section A, Ysc estate, 3 years..... 1,300

HOWARD, Michael A., and another to Bernheimer & Schmid; Lexington Av, 1,976, s w corner of 121st St, demand.. 8,125

LEO, Leopold, to the Irving Savings Institution; 520 West 182d St, 3 years.... 4,000

MEAGLE, Joseph, and wife to Thomas M. Keely; Madison Av, w s, 52.9 ft n of Samuel St, 3 years..... 2,000

MISHKIND, Isidor, to Ruth Livingston; Madison St, s s, 104.6 ft e of Rutgers St, 5 years..... 45,000

MURPHY, Sylvester R., to the Mercantile Co-operative Bank; Webster Av, e s, 238 ft s of 183d St, installments..... 13,500

ROSENSTOCK, Bernhard, to Charles Lanier, trustee; 35 Broome St, 5 years.. 30,000

ROSENSTOCK, Bernhard, to Charles Lanier, trustee; 35 Broome St, 2 years.. 14,000

SCHMUCK, Herman, and another to the American Mortgage Company; Courtlandt Av, w s, 150 ft n of 162d St, 50x123.1x 50.6x41; 158th St, n s, 361.9 ft w of Courtlandt Av, 97.7x29.11x83.7x28.6, demand..... 2,000

TRIPP, Ross W., to Jacob Horowitz; 1,781 3d Av, 2 years..... 4,000

VREELAND, Clara D., to Grace S. Baird; 229th St, n s, 245 ft w of Katonah Av, widened, installments..... 3,200

WALKER, Thomas, to John J. Colleran; Convent Av, n w corner of 150th St, 108.11x98.5x96.11x25, demand..... 10,000

WOODWARD, Marie H., to John T. Dooling; 418 Madison Av, 3 years..... 2,500

Assignments of Mortgages.

ETTINGER, Caecilie, to Fred T. Nesbit.. $1,500

RANKIN, William, to Rachel Axelrod... Nom.

ROGERS, William H., to Caecilie Ettinger..... 2,272

ROSENSTOCK, Bernhard, to Charles Lanier, trustee..... 14,000

TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST COMPANY to the North River Savings Bank.. 12,000

TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST COMPANY to the North River Savings Bank... 7,000

TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST COMPANY to the North River Savings Bank... 18,000

ZORN, Charles H., to Charlotte J. Ellisgott..... Nom.

Mechanics' Liens.

BEACH AV, w s, 142.6 ft s of 156th St, 75x96.6x54.7x78.5; William J. Brandt against Malo & Marcantonio, owners and contractors..... 145

IRVING PLACE, 78; Mansfield Garrie Company against Dr. E. Gorton, owner; Herman Probst, contractor..... 1,047

MANHATTAN AV, e s, whole front from 117th to 118th St; —x100; H. E. Steevens & Son against the Hyne Construction Company, owner and contractor..... 6,317

WALKER ST, s e corner of Elm St, 27.6x 62x31x61.6; Bernard Schmalacker against Samuel Phillips estate, owner; Peter Schaeffer, contractor..... 358

WATER ST, 161 and 163; E. M. Pritchard & Son Company against Lichtenstein Brothers, owners; Archibald Campbell, contractor..... 1,962

36TH ST, 257 and 259 West; G. A. Pratt & Co. against James Clarke, owner and contractor..... 520

99TH ST, 35 West; Bernard Bogatzky against Peter G. Arnot, owner; Slaten & Schrednitz, contractors..... 70

99TH ST, 44 and 46 West; Bernard Bogatzky against Peter G. Arnot, owner; Slaten & Schrednitz, contractors..... 100

118TH ST, 31 and 33 West; Philip Macobsohn against Max Klotz and Morris Abelman, owners and contractors..... 350

118TH ST, 13 to 19 West; Philip Jacobsohn against Sebastian Sanders, owner and contractor..... 650

160TH ST, n e corner of Clinton Av, 50x 100; Schachne Friedman against — Strize, owner; Henry Schroeder, contractor..... 92

BUILDING LOAN CONTRACT, UNDER CHAPTER 418, LAWS OF 1897.

20TH ST, 11 West; Mayer S. Auerbach with George W. Spitzer, 10 payments... 40,000

Lis Pendens.

LEROY ST, 66 and 68; Ida M. W. Lentilhon, trustee, &c., against Blooma De Frece and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, H. Odell.

STANTON ST, 34; John H. Cole, executor, &c., against John G. Morris and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, G. S. Hubbard.

84TH ST, s s, 118.6 ft e of Amsterdam Av, 29x 102.2; Edmund S. Whitman and others, executors, &c., against Mary W. Hempel and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, H. P. Wilds.

90TH ST, s s, 156.3 ft e of 9th Av, 18.9x100.8; United States Trust Company of New York, executor, &c., against Maggie E. Porter, individually and as administratrix, and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, E. W. Sheldon.

183TH ST, s s, 318.6 ft w of Lenox Av, 28x99.11; John T. Terry and another, trustees, against Thomas Moloney and others (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Lord, Day & Lord.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

BRYAN L. KENNELLY, Auctioneer
WILL SELL AT AUCTION
WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24TH, 1900,
at 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway,

No. 6 Park Place,
Adjoining Broadway,
(Rogers's Restaurant,)
The 5-story basement and sub-cellar, with vaulted sidewalk, brownstone business building; in good order; size of lot 25x81.
Maps and further particulars at Auctioneer's office, No. 66 Liberty St.

SAME DAY.
EXECUTOR'S SALE
of the estate of Lewis Radford, deceased,
30 West 46th Street.
4-story high-stoop brownstone dwelling, containing 14 rooms and bath; handsomely decorated; size of lot 20x100.5.
JAMES E. CARPENTER, Esq., Attorney for Executors, 289 Greenwich St.
Maps and further particulars with attorney or at auctioneer's off

NATIONAL CAPITAL TOPICS

New Post Office Building Is Not a Great Success.

WEBSTER UNVEILING BUNGLED

Statue of Oliver P. Morton of Indiana Criticised—Wainwright May Be Judge Advocate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—A few months ago the Post Office Department, which had been sheltered for many years in a marble building on F Street, one of the semi-classical type which the Government favored when it began to build department buildings, was moved over into Pennsylvania Avenue and into a structure put up at a cost of something like $3,000,000, chiefly for the use of the city Post Office, but incidentally to provide for other Government bureaus then and now conducted in buildings rented from private owners. This Post Office building, which is large, but not otherwise impressive, unless the impression made upon Senator Hawley, that it is "a cross between a cathedral and a cotton mill," may be mentioned, was believed to be ample for the accommodation of the Post Office Department.

The city Post Office occupies but the main floor and the mezzanine floor. From that floor seven stories up it is the general Post Office. Postmaster General Smith, who came out of a cramped little apartment in the old building, now occupies a very handsome and spacious room in the southeastern corner on the fifth floor. The Assistant Postmasters General are near him on the same floor. Their rooms are fitted up with a solid magnificence that is assurance of the liberality of the Government and the Superintendent of Buildings. The room that was considered to be so ample seems already to be more than fully occupied. Some of those on the floor with the Postmaster General have as many as five desks in them, and that is too many. The halls facing the great glass-covered court are all finished with marble wainscoting and floors and rails, and at a glance the interior seems to suggest nothing to add to the comfort or security of the building. But now and then, and so recently as this week, the building is criticised by a careful local newspaper that has found occasion for scolding ever since the first spade was used in the work of construction. The Star's repeated condemnation of the imperfections in this vast structure ought to contribute something to the cause of better buildings for the Government. It finds the skylights insecure, the floors badly laid, the window frames imperfect and a menace in their leakiness to the health of the occupants, and much of the work that appears to be sound to be little better than veneering, which would not have been allowed if the precautions taken by private owners in building had been observed.

***

Whatever may be the defects of the Post Office Building, of one thing everybody may be certain, and that is that it will be protected with greater care than formerly was taken of the Treasury. One night in the Spring of 1833 a fire broke out in what was then the Treasury Building, situated on about what is now the site of the Treasury. It occurred after midnight, and it seems to have attracted a small crowd, including the Secretary of the Treasury and some other public officers. Even the Secretary contributed to the great exertions put forth to save the structure, which was ruined. Mr. Clark, the Clerk of the House of Representatives, was among the witnesses of the fire, and he braved the smoke and flames to rescue from the office of the First Auditor some papers having for him a high value. Emerging from the burning building he held them up to the view of the Attorney General with the boast: "Yes, here they are; they are my vouchers for more than $100,000 of Government money expended, and I shall sleep comfortably to-night."

As soon as the fire was extinguished search was made for the watchman, who was supposed to have perished in the building. But the watchman was safe at home, sick abed. He had appointed a youthful substitute to take his place, and this youth had been awakened by those who early broke into the building. This story provoked great wrath in Washington. An investigation was ordered, and members of the Cabinet served on the committee. They made the amazing discovery, as it seems now, that up to a few years earlier there had been a watchman on duty at the Treasury each night. This number was decided to be excessive, and at the time of the fire there was only one night watchman for the entire Treasury, and he was permitted to go to sleep after 10 o'clock.

***

Things are different now, sixty-eight years after Livingston, McLane, Cass, Taney, and Barry, four of whom were members of the Cabinet, endeavored to ascertain how it was that the Treasury should have been permitted to burn because, perhaps, it was not properly watched. Now there are three shifts of seventy-five watchmen, about twenty-five of whom are on duty every eight hours during the day and night. But these men watch a very different building, with a great deal more in it. It was Jackson who went out of the White House one morning and, stamping his cane on the present site, opposite what was then called "President's Square," instructed Robert Mills, the architect, to put the Treasury "there." It has taken pretty nearly $7,000,000 to make it what it now is. The original intention was to make it of freestone, or white sandstone. It was begun in the Spring of 1835, and when the first architect died, in 1854, the east front, with its colonnade of thirty columns, had been completed. Mills intended to make the west front correspond with that on the east. T. U. Walters of Philadelphia was empowered to modify the plans and complete the building. He took up the work with granite, and with the aid of Ammi B. Young, the first supervising architect, completed the south wing. Isaiah Rogers following him in 1862 and finishing the west front. A. B. Mullett succeeding him and finishing the north wing in 1869. The colonnade, which impresses everybody, is 340 feet long, and the thirty columns are still the wonder of visitors. The granite shafts are of 75,000 pounds weight each, and each cost $3,780. When the building was completed it was used in part as a ballroom to make merry in over the inauguration of Gen. Grant. Everybody was merry except Horace Greeley, who lost his overcoat in the dreadful crush and disorder that accompanied the ball.

***

Rather elaborate arrangements were made by the Senate for services held in the Lafayette Square Opera House on Thursday to properly mark the unveiling of a statue to Daniel Webster, made by Trentanovey and presented to the city by Stilson Hutchins. There should have been a theatre crowded with people. As it was, there was a double row of distinguished guests on the stage, including the President and the members of his Cabinet, a few Senators, a few office holders of prominence, and several rows of empty chairs. The front row was a brave one, and concealed the empty chairs behind, but the emptiness of the theatre could not be concealed. The fact is that the Senate had been over-cautious about admitting the public. Then the Senate had been a bit reckless in seating itself on the stage and putting the House in the pit. A very sacredly managed drawing of seats gave each Representative two places to use or to give away, and it was publicly announced that after 10:10 the house would be free of access to all comers. When the proceedings opened, with Senator Chandler's speech, it would have been possible to seat all the people who were in orchestra, mezzanine boxes, and both galleries within the orchestra rail. Neither the Representatives nor their friends had come. One devoted worshipper of Webster, who had come all the way from Massachusetts to attend the unveiling ceremonies, and who had almost despaired of getting in, occupied the only utilized seat in the mezzanine row of boxes on the left of the President's seat. Senator Tillman insisted that the House had "boycotted" the Senate by keeping the people away, and fretted about his eminence, saying that he felt that he should be with the "hoi polloi." As a case of rank bad management, it was a gem. There would have been a full house if there had been a simple broad invitation, first come to be first served.

***

Oliver P. Morton did not die so long ago that there are not survivors about capable of criticising the statue of Morton recently unveiled in the old Hall of Representatives at the Capitol. The sculpture of Niehaus introduces the spectator to a man of more thin average height, of very distinguished presence, of noble bearing, good clothes, and not a little self-consciousness. This makes a very interesting statue, but not a representation of Oliver P. Morton. It is of small consequence to repeat the criticism made by one observer, a day or two ago, who expressed his amazement to discover that the sculptor had creased Morton's trousers. It was not the fashion to wear a crease in the trousers in Morton's day, and if it were it is considered highly improbable that Morton would have had time to keep the creases alive. Then he was not a tall man; or, at all events, he did not give the impression that he was a giant, except in intellect. As he appeared at the Cooper Institute during the war to make a political speech, he was rather stoop-shouldered, somewhat careless about his dress, with a shock of hair quite unlike the trimmed suit shown in the statue, and with a beard of a quite different cut. An old Republican and admirer of Morton ventured the opinion that a more faithful likeness of Morton, as most people knew him, would have been produced by propping him up on one crutch, and by ironing the creases out of his trousers. Morton was surely, according to all accounts, in the habit of wearing longer hair than Niehaus has given him. The mistake seems to be that he has been made too fine. Morton was strong; his best friends do not pretend that he was fine in dress or bearing.

***

Commander Richard H. Wainwright, the gallant officer who commander the Gloucester when she destroyed the Spanish torpedo-boat destroyers Pluton and Furor, off Santiago, is about to be presented with a sword by many of his admirers who desire to express their appreciation of his services. The ceremony is to take place next Wednesday afternoon at the Columbia Theatre. It is intimated that recognition of Wainwright is not to stop here. The office of Judge Advocate General of the Navy, which it is customary to fill from the line or staff, has now been held a long time by Capt. Lemly, who has been deprived, by prolonged service on shore, of the opportunity that a line officer needs to prepare him for the examinations necessary to be met in order to gain promotion. If the report is correct that he desires to have sea duty, that will fall in with the inclination of the Secretary of the Navy to afford Commander Wainwright the chance to serve a tour of duty in the office of Judge Advocate. Wainwright is a lawyer, having taken a course here at one of the law colleges, and has repeatedly been of great service when his legal acquirements were needed to help out the naval service. Some effort has been made to provide a permanent law officer for the navy. If that proposition had met with favor, and the Secretary had intended to pick out a naval officer who would most usefully occupy the position, possibly Capt. Lemly could be prevailed upon to accept it. If changes are to be made in that bureau, as in others of the Navy Department, from time to time, and there is a desire at headquarters to show some appreciation of gallant services, Commander Wainwright's friends are confident that he will be selected as Capt. Lemly's successor.

E. G. D.

LEGAL NOTES.

LIABILITY FOR ELEVATOR ACCIDENTS.—An important decision in reference to extent of the responsibility of landlords of office buildings for elevator accidents was announced by the Appellate Division of the First Department yesterday. Walter H. Griffen, who was Secretary and one of the Directors of the United States Fire Insurance Company, after a meeting of the company's Directors on Dec. 6, 1898, on the eighth floor of the building in which, on the first floor, it had its offices, entered an elevator car to descend to the first floor. The car, which was operated by electricity, descended at a rapid rate. It was not stopped at the level of the first floor, but continued some inches lower, and there struck something under it, and rebounded. Before the persons in the car could leave it, and almost simultaneously with the rebound, there fell into the car pieces of iron weighing about forty pounds each, called the counter-balance weights, one of which struck Mr. Griffen, killing him almost instantly. The Appellate Division has affirmed judgment given in favor of Mrs. Anna S. Griffen, as administratrix of her husband, on the trial of her action against William F. D. Manice, the owner of the building, for damages. The Trial Judge charged the jury that the owner was bound to use the utmost care as to any defect which would be liable to occasion great danger or loss of life, and he was in that respect subject to the same rule that applied to a railroad company in regard to its roadbed, engine, and similar machinery. The appellant contended that this rule, which was tantamount to saying that the liability of the owner of an elevator for negligence would be the same as that of a common carrier of passengers, was erroneous, and that the liability of the owner of the elevator was only that of a landlord to his tenants, or others upon the premises by his invitation, and using common appurtenances, and that before liability for negligence in maintaining such appurtenances in safe and proper condition could be established, it must be shown that the landlord had notice of some defect in or want of repair of such appurtenances. "If such an elevator as that operated and used by the defendant," Justice Patterson said, "were not a dangerous thing in itself, it is quite apparent that it was something that was constantly liable to become dangerous, and the testimony shows that inspection, general attention, and observation were required in order to keep it operating properly, and that such an elevator, even when perfectly adjusted and set in operation, will not keep in that perfect adjustment and continue to operate properly for an indefinite period of time. There is just as much reason for holding the proprietor or owner of such an elevator to the highest degree of care in the maintenance of the operating and controlling machinery of the apparatus as there is in holding the carrier of passengers to the same degree of care. The passenger in the elevator can know nothing of the state of the machinery." The Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to rest on the presumption of negligence in this case, arising out of the fact of the occurrence of the accident in the manner, and from the specific cause shown in the proofs. As to the covenant in the insurance company's lease that the landlord should not be responsible for any loss or injury arising from or during the operation of the elevator, or the carelessness or the negligence of any person, the Court holds it was not binding on the decedent so as to relieve the defendant from liability for the negligent maintenance of the machinery used in operating and controlling the elevator.

***

A MORTGAGE GIVEN UNDER DURESS.—Among other defenses set up by Martha L. Cox to an action by the National Bank of the Republic of New York to foreclose a mortgage made by her, was that she gave the mortgage to the bank to compound a felony committed by her son, William R. Cox, and that she was induced to execute it by duress of threats of the imprisonment of her son. A judgment given for the plaintiff at Special Term of the Supreme Court was yesterday reversed by the First Appellate Division. It appeared that this son of Mrs. Cox had forged checks on the bank under the name of a Mr. Minor, in whose employ he had been, and had drawn over $20,000 upon them. In a suit by Minor, the bank admitted its liability for the money paid out on these checks. After negotiations on behalf of Cox, who had left the State, with the attorneys for the bank, it was concluded that if Mrs. Cox would make the mortgage in suit, and another mortgage to Mr. Minor, the bank would give Cox a general release. Justice Rumsey, giving the opinion of the Appellate Division, holds that, though there was no agreement or arrangement which reached the dignity of an understanding, to the effect that the parties to the action would not prosecute Cox criminally if the mortgage was given, it could not be denied that the object had in view by Mrs. Cox was to prevent a criminal prosecution of her son, and it was quite apparent that this object was carried out. The defense that the mortgage was given to compound a felony was therefore disposed of, but in respect to the defense that it was given under duress, the facts shown were held to be material. At the time her son's crimes were disclosed to Mrs. Cox she was confined to her bed by illness, and as the result of the disclosures she was made very much worse. The Court reaches the conclusion from the evidence that the consent of Mrs. Cox to the execution of the mortgage was obtained by the threats of imprisonment which were made to her by her brother-in-law, one Fisher, that she would not have executed the mortgage except for them, and that the Justice below therefore erred in concluding that that defense was not established.

***

AN IMPROPER COUNTER CLAIM.—When Arthur, Duke D'Auxy, sought in a suit in the Supreme Court to have Lawyer Ovide Dupre account for moneys the latter received under an assignment which the Duke claimed he had been induced to make to Dupre through the latter's false representations, a counter claim was set up by Dupre for services which he had rendered to the Duke. The First Appellate Division yesterday reversed an order of the Special Term which had overruled the Duke's demurrer to this counter claim. Justice Rumsey, giving the unanimous opinion of the Court, holds that the demurrer was well taken and should have been sustained, because the counter claim set up was not a cause of action arising out of the transaction sued upon or connected in any way with it, but was an independent cause of action existing in the defendant at the time of the beginning of the suit. Even then the counter claim could be interposed only in an action upon contract, and not in one such as this to set aside an instrument procured by fraud, and to obtain an accounting of the proceeds of that fraud.

***

SEAWORTHINESS AND MARINE INSURANCE.—A suit involving the question of the seaworthiness of a vessel as affecting liability under a marine insurance has just been passed upon for the fourth time by the First Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The action was brought by William H. Starbuck, upon a time policy of insurance issued by the Phenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn, which insured the steamer Queen of the Pacific for one year, from August, 1887, "against all perils, losses, and misfortunes that have or shall come to the hurt, detriment, or damage of the said ship, or any part thereof." It appeared that the ship sailed from San Francisco for San Diego April 29, 1888, and that about twelve hours later a leak was discovered, which the crew were unable to stop, and in consequence of which the vessel was run ashore, where she sank. When she was raised, it was discovered that the water had entered through an open porthole communicating with an alleyway. There was evidence to show that the vessel was in a seaworthy condition when she sailed; that the porthole was provided with a proper dead light, which was closed at that time, and there was nothing to show how it subsequently became open. A verdict for the plaintiff on the first trial was reversed because the trial court erred in charging the jury. Mr. Starbuck having died after the first trial, Matilda E. Starbuck, as executrix, was substituted as plaintiff. A dismissal of the complaint on the second trial was reversed on appeal, as was the judgment rendered on the third trial. The principal question upon the appeal now decided was whether the insured vessel was seaworthy at the inception of the voyage. Justice Barrett, giving the opinion of the court, says that if she was then seaworthy, there could be no doubt that the loss was occasioned by "perils of the sea," within the meaning of that expression as used in the policy. The question whether the presumption of unseaworthiness resulting from the entry of water through the open porthole shortly after sailing, and without the vessel encountering any storm, was rebutted by the plaintiff's evidence, was held to have been properly left to the jury, and its verdict in favor of the plaintiff should not be disturbed.

***

BUILDING LOAN AGREEMENTS.—By a building loan agreement made in September, 1898, Joseph N. Campbell was to receive $14,500 from the New York Investment and Security Company, in fourteen payments, as the construction of a building at 18 Morningside Avenue, in this city, progressed, and he gave a mortgage on the premises to the company to secure repayment of these sums. The thirteenth installment of $1,100 was to be paid when the plumbing work was fully completed. Last March Joseph J. Cosgrove and George J. Simons made a contract with Campbell to put in certain plumbing materials, commonly known as plumbers' fixtures. The title was to remain in them until full payment had been made, and in case of any default it was provided they might enter and remove the property. They filed their contract to that effect in the Register's office, as provided by statute. Upon substantial completion of the work, the investment company, without actual knowledge of the agreement between Campbell and Cosgrove and Simons, made the payment agreed upon. Then the company sued the plumbers and Campbell to restrain the removal of the plumbing work from the premises, Campbell having defaulted in the payments. The Appellate Division has now unanimously affirmed a dismissal at Special Term of the company's complaint, holding, against the claim of plaintiff, that the vendors of plumbing materials by their own act made them a part of the realty, the trial court having found that these materials could be removed without injury to the freehold. It was held to be well settled that the rights of the mortgagee of the realty were dependent upon the character of the materials as determined between the vender and vendee, and regardless of his knowledge or ignorance of that agreement. This right was curtailed by the lien law of 1897, which provides for record notice substantially as in the case of chattel mortgages. The personal character of the chattels having been retained by special agreement, it was held that the conditional vendors here had done all that the law required of them to preserve their rights.

***

DEVISE FOR THE PRINGLE HOME SUSTAINED.—Samuel M. Pringle, who died about two years ago, unmarried and childless, by his will, after giving his residuary estate to his brother-in-law, David W. Fenton, for life, gave the remainder over to a corporation to be known as the Pringle Memorial Home, as an institution for respectable, invalid, aged, or indigent men, within this State, which he requested his executors to cause to be formed after his death and within a period not exceeding the lives of two persons, whom he named. Such corporation was formed after the death of Mr. Pringle and his brother-in-law, and within the period prescribed. In an action brought by Henry W. Jessup, as guardian of an infant heir at law of the testator, for the construction of the will, Justice Beekman, at Special Term, held that the devise to the home was valid, and that the title to the property was now vested in it. The Appellate Division of the First Department has just affirmed that decision in an opinion by Justice Barrett. It was claimed by the appellant that the life estate given to Fenton was something more than the usual life estate, he having the power to use the corpus as well as the income. "The language used," Justice Barrett says, "imparts enjoyment and disposition of the life estate, and nothing more. The power of disposition of the fee is not to be lightly implied—certainly not from language entirely consistent with special reference to the life estate. That intention cannot be inferred from such a mere formal expression as the 'remainder existing after the death' of the life tenant, following the devise to the latter 'to have, hold, and enjoy' during the term of his natural life, especially as the remainder is in terms 'in fee simple absolute' to the corporation to be formed."

SHOT HERSELF IN THE HEAD.

Mrs. Aarons Left Instructions for the Disposition of Her Body.

Esther Aarons, a widow thirty-seven years old, living in a furnished room at 272 West One Hundred and Seventeen Street, killed herself yesterday by sending a bullet through her head. The woman rented the room from Jacob Green and wife, who live on the second floor of the house.

Mrs. Aarons's husband died three years ago and Mrs. Aarons seemed to be unable to recover from the shock and several times said she would kill herself. Several weeks ago she sent Dr. Louis Cohen of 1,242 Madison Avenue, a friend, a package containing her will and instructions for the disposition of her body after death.

Water Games at Sportsmen's Show.

The swimming competitions and water games to be held in connection with the Sportsmen's Show at Madison Square Garden will include championship events under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union, competitions for the metropolitan championships, and possibly a series of events open only to members of the Interscholastic League. Special events will be a series of water polo games and relay races open to college teams only, and a 100-yard race open to members of the Police and Fire Departments, and the letter carriers. The competitions will take place at night. The afternoon exhibits will include fancy swimming, life saving, and similar features.

Cossack Dies from His Injuries.

Adam Cossack, the porter employed at 52 Broad Street, who was crushed between an elevator and the floor at that building Friday night, and had to be chopped out, died yesterday in the Hudson Street Hospital.

Hundreds have been cured of dangerous Lung and Throat troubles with JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. For names, residences, and dates, see Jayne's Medical Almanac. Free, at your druggist. —Adv.

Stern Brothers

Special Sales

For To-morrow, Monday,

Ladies' Shirt Waists

Exclusive styles and materials,
of Imported Linens, Scotch Ginghams, Batiste Brilliants,
Lace and Embroidered All-overs,
Mercerized Cottons, Cheviots, Madras and Lawns.

And in addition will place on sale

Fine Percale Waists at 75c
new striped and figured effects,

White Lawn Waists at 93c
with hemstitched Fronts and Box plaited backs,

Exceptional Values in

Ladies' House Gowns

Cashmere, at $3.95, $5.25, $6.50
Regular value $6.00 to $10.00

India Silk at $9.25
elaborately trimmed with lace and ribbon,
Real value $13.50

Fur Departments

Final Reductions in Prices of

Fur and Fur-lined Garments, Neck Scarfs and Collars

Also

Ladies' Persian Lamb Coats, extra quality, at $114.50
With Collar and Revers of Blended Baum Marten, at $135.00
Alaska Sealskin Coats, London dyed, at $159.50
Cloth Capes, Fur-lined and trimmed, at $18.50

Dress Goods Sections

Another collection of 15000 Yds. All-wool French Printed Challies at 23c
in desirable designs and colorings, Value 50c a yard

3000 Yds. Double width Cheviots, at 45c in Navy Blue and Black, sponged and shrunk,

And the remainder of their
High Cost Paris Novelties
Striped and Plaid Zibelines,
Velvet and Chenille Effects,
Fancy Venetians and Poplins, at 95c, $1.39, $1.95
Former Prices $2.00 to $4.75 yd.

Great Reduction of Prices in

Lace Departments

Ecru and White Point Venise Laces
3 to 9 inches wide, per yard 23c, 35c, 48c

Cream Silk Applique Laces
4 to 10 inches wide, per yard 15c, 20c, 25c, 32c

Ecru and White Net Top Laces
4½ to 9 inches wide, per yard 25c

Platte Valenciennes and Point de Paris Laces and Insertions to match,
1¾ to 6 inches wide, per yard 10c, 12c, 15c, 19c, 25c

Corset Department

Genuine French Hand-made P. D. Corsets in all sizes
White Coutil trimmed with embroidery, at $1.25

White and drab coutil, stripped with sateen and trimmed with lace, at $1.65

Black Sateen trimmed with lace, at $1.95
Values $2.25, $2.75, & $3.50

Infants' Outfitting Dep'ts

Short Dresses at 35c, 55c, 63c
sizes 6 months to 3 years,

Long Nainsook Slips, at 37c, 58c, 65c

Nurses' & Maids' Aprons, at 15c, 23c, 39c

Annual Sale of Boys' Wash Suits

5500 Sailor Suits
English Galateas, French Piques, Irish Linens and White Duck, new materials,
3 to 12 years, at 95c, $1.38, 1.95, 2.35
Value $1.75 to $5.00

Kilt Suits
of Percales, Creoles, Madras and Linens, 2 to 4 years, at 95c, $1.59, $1.98

Third Floor

Special Values in Curtains

Irish Point Lace, $3.75, 4.95, 7.50

Renaissance Lace, $4.95, 7.75, 10.50

Ruffled and Fluted Muslin, $1.05, 1.25, 1.65

Tamboured Sash Muslins, 12c, 15c, 25c, 30c
Value 15c, 20c, 35c & 40c yd.

West Twenty-Third Street.

John Daniell Sons & Sons

IN CLOAK DEPARTMENT

Will place on sale to-morrow 150 Ladies' Tailor Made Suits originally sold at $15, $17.50, and $20. All reduced to the uniform price, to close out at - - - - $7.25 each

CLEARING SALE IN UPHOLSTERY DEPT

100 Pairs Tambour Muslin Curtains, Embroidered, 3½ yds. long, value $2.00, to close out at - - - - 98c Pr.
Odd Pairs Nottingham Curtains, value $1.25 to $3.00 Pr., at 75c and $1.50 Pr.
Bagdad Stripe Couch Covers, 50 in. wide, 3 yds. long; fringed all round; value $2.75, at - - - - - $1.75 ea.
Shades, 36 x 72 in., with good roller; a special lot at 25c ea.
Oak Screens (3 Folds), filled with Silkoline, all colors, at $1.75 ea.
Estimates given on Shades and Slip Covers at lowest prices.

Broadway, Eighth and Ninth Streets.

DR. HARSHA'S MONEY AFFAIRS.

Witnesses Testify Regarding His Resignation and the Payment of His Salary.

The Rev. Dr. Joachim Elmendorf, senior pastor of the Collegiate Reformed Church of Harlem, and Thomas Crawford, the Treasurer of the church, testified yesterday in supplementary proceedings in the case of the Rev. Dr. William J. Harsha, held in Part II. of the Special Term of the Supreme Court.

Dr. Harsha was formerly pastor of the church. The Board of Publication of Sabbath School Work, a Philadelphia corporation, holds a judgment against him for $4,706.82 for money borrowed on promissory notes. The Consistory voted to continue Dr. Harsha's salary to his wife, Mrs. Sadie H. Harsha, during the first six months of 1900, and the proceedings were brought in the hope of diverting this money to his creditors.

After Dr. Elmendorf had read from the minutes of the Consistory the resolution accepting Dr. Harsha's resignation on Nov. 17 last, and authorizing the payments to Mrs. Harsha, Mr. Harding, the counsel for the publishing firm, asked: "Was Dr. Harsha's resignation requested or suggested?"

Edward S. Clinch, counsel for the church, exclaimed: "You needn't answer this question at all. It is none of their business. I am here on behalf of this church, and I purpose to limit the inquiries of the publication society. We produced this book of minutes, not under any compulsion to do so."

Both lawyers then ran over to Part II. to ask for a ruling on the question from Justice Fitzgerald. The objection was sustained.

"What is the custom of the Presbyterian Church in regard to payment of salaries after resignation?" Mr. Harding asked.

"I don't belong to the Presbyterian Church," said Dr. Elmendorf. "I don't know. I belong to the Reformed Dutch Church in America."

"Well, what is the custom in your Church?"

"There is no custom. I have never had any salary myself after resignation," Dr. Elmendorf answered.

Thomas Crawford, the Treasurer of the church, furnished a statement showing that Dr. Harsha had received his last monthly salary instalment of $416.67 on Nov. 16 last, and that on the following day Mrs. Harsha had received $500. On Nov. 28 a check for $100, the witness said, had been sent to the Twelfth Ward Bank to meet a note which Dr. Harsha had issued to a publishing concern. On Dec. 14 Mrs. Harsha had received $50, and on Dec. 20 William P. Uhler of the Consistory drew from the church funds $108.60 to pay the premium on a policy on Dr. Harsha's life. On the same day Mrs. Harsha received $74.73.

Mr. Harding asked Mr. Crawford why he had not paid Dr. Harsha his salary for December.

"Because his services ceased from Dec. 1," he answered.

"When did his resignation take effect?"

"According to his resignation on Jan. 1."

"Was he pastor of the church until Jan. 1?"

"I cannot tell whether he was or not," Mr. Crawford answered. The lawyer then asked if Dr. Harsha had demanded his salary for December, and Mr. Crawford said he had not, and when asked whether he usually demanded his salary he answered: "Sometimes he did, when he felt short." The examination was adjourned until Feb. 3.

THE DEWEY ARCH CONCERT.

Preliminary Programme for the Carnegie Hall Affair Announced.

The preliminary programme for the concert in aid of the permanent Dewey Arch at Carnegie Hall was made public yesterday. The soloists and other performers have all promised to assist. It is also announced that Admiral Dewey and Gov. Roosevelt will be present.

Among those who will appear are Mme. Nordica, Edouard de Reszke, H. Evan Williams, Mme. Gadski, Emil Paur, Walter Damrosch, the full chorus of the Oratorio Society, and an orchestra of sixty pieces. Box seats will be $50, and reserved seats in other parts of the house will cost $5, $3, and $2. Seats will be on sale at Carnegie Hall after to-morrow.

The Concert Committee of Women, which was organized by Louis Windmüller, will have charge of all social features at the concert, and will aid in entertaining Admiral Dewey and Gov. Roosevelt while they are here. The committee is composed of Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Chairman; Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. Robert Abbe, Mrs. Lloyd Bryce, Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, Mrs. J. Kennedy Tod, Miss de Forest, Miss Callender, Miss Laura J. Post, and Miss Hewitt.

The Executive Committee for Perpetuating the Dewey Arch has received subscriptions during the week amounting to $6,000.

NEW BATTERY BREAKWATER.

Stone Structure to Replace the Wooden One South of Pier A.

The Dock Commissioners have decided to build a stone breakwater in the place of the present wooden one south of Pier A, North River, and adjacent to Battery Park, in accordance with plans approved by the Secretary of War and the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

The new breakwater will inclose a basin about 220 by 150 feet, the structure itself to be of concrete and granite. There will be openings for the access of small boats from the various merchant ships and launches from men of war and yachts. Inside of the basin there will be a floating pontoon, which, adjusting itself with the tide, will admit of a ready landing place for the various boats after they have entered the basin.

The present wooden breakwater, which was built about three years ago, has proved inadequate for the purpose, owing to the large number of boats that land in the vicinity of Battery Park during the Summer. The city maintains this landing place free of charge, and it is to be used by any small boat desiring to land or take on men or supplies.

Palestine Commandery Reception.

Arrangements for the reception of Palestine Commandery, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Tuesday evening, Jan. 30, have been completed. The entire second floor of the hotel and the large dining room on the ground floor have been reserved for the guests. A selected corps of knights will give an exhibition drill. The reception of invited guests will begin at 10 o'clock, and dancing will follow. The Reception Committee will consist of Commander Edwin H. Hammer, Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, Captain General James T. Clyde, and Horace Brockway. Frank W. Goodwin is Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Date for the Poultry Show.

The New York Poultry and Pigeon Association will hold its eleventh annual show in Madison Square Garden from Tuesday, Jan. 30, until Saturday, Feb. 3. In addition to the poultry and pigeons, rabbits, guinea pigs, and cats will be included in the exhibition. The meetings of the various breeders' clubs will be held during the week.

WATERS PIANOS

Have been known for FIFTY YEARS as standard high-grade pianos.

They are famous for their FINE TONE and are warranted to be DURABLE.

Let us send you our catalogue with REDUCED PRICES and TERMS on our new 3-YEAR SYSTEM, giving you THREE YEARS' time without interest.

No pianos so celebrated as the WATERS are sold at such LOW PRICES and on such EASY TERMS. Call and see them or send postal for a catalogue.

HORACE WATERS & CO.,
134 Fifth Ave., near 18th St.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

Oriental Carpets

For Libraries and Dining-Rooms,
Averaging from 9.4x10.6 ft. . . $39.50
to
15.3x10.6 ft. . . $85.00
(Former prices $65.00 to $140.00.)
Including Hamadia, Osmania, Demerdjic, Masulipatan and Bahadur.

Library furniture worthy to be hugged tight to ease-loving and beauty-loving hearts. In the so-called "dull months" we dispose of leftovers, discontinued designs, at reduced factory prices, to make room for new goods, so no one can afford not to

BUY OF THE MAKER

GEO. C. FLINT CO.
43, 45 AND 47 WEST 23rd ST
NEAR BROADWAY.
FACTORY 54 AND 156 WEST 19th STREET

Birds Mate now; breeding pairs, singer, according to voice, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00; female, $1.00. Holden's New Book on Birds; all about mating, food, care, and how to keep bird singing, with full price list of all birds and cages by mail, 25 cts., stamps. Song Restorer by mail, 25 cts. Free list all birds.
G. H. HOLDEN, 240 6th Ave., N. Y.

STEAMER BETWEEN TWO FIRES.

Red D Liner Arrives in Port After an Exciting Experience at Maracaibo.

The steamer Maracaibo of the Red D Line, Capt. Hopkins, came in from Maracaibo yesterday. While in that harbor in December she happened to lie in the path of fire from the revolutionists and Government forces, and was hit about fifty-seven times. Bullets pierced her funnels and penetrated into the saloons. Capt. Hopkins was struck in the finger, and the first mate was wounded in the arm.

When at Curacao the Maracaibo took on board Gen. Yebara, who was on his way to Maracaibo to take command of the Government forces there. On entering the harbor of Maracaibo the Captain saw a Government boat and a schooner with Government troops, among whom were a number of women soldiers. The steamer got up to the Custom House wharf on the right side of the crescent harbor, and Gen. Yebara donned his uniform, preparatory to landing.

Just then the revolutionary soldiers of Gen. Hernandez, who is called El Mocho, appeared, and wanted to take Gen. Yebara prisoner. Capt. Hopkins, however, defied them to take anybody from his ship, and pointing to the American flag dared them to come on board.

This was on Dec. 1, and the revolutionists did not molest the steamer, and withdrew, but in the evening they opened fire in the city upon the Custom House. The Government forces replied, and at 11 o'clock they seized the Venezuelan steamer Progresso, formerly of the Red D Line, and sent it to San Carlos to bring up the reserves from the schooner.

The firing continued through the night, and at 8 o'clock in the morning the Progresso appeared with the reserve soldiers. Several of them were landed, and the others were sent by the Progresso to be landed back of the city, so as to take the revolutionists in the rear. For some reason or other these did not reach their destination, and by 11 o'clock the Government forces that were defending the Custom House began to give way. The head officers, however, took all the money and valuables away in barges, and when the enemy came into possession they found nothing to loot.

In the afternoon Gen. Yebara landed and surrendered the Government forces to the enemy, after which he returned on board the Maracaibo. Several Government soldiers ran down to the water, threw away their guns, and uniform caps, put on ordinary hats and rejoined the crowds as citizens.

Rutgers Alumnae Meet.

The annual reunion and luncheon of the Alumnae Association of Rutgers Institute and College, held at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday, was attended by about forty members and guests. Mrs. John Vanderpoel, President of the association, presided. At the guest table also were Dr. Charles E. West, who was the first Principal of Rutgers; Mrs. D. T. S. Dennison, Mrs. J. De La M. Lozier, Mrs. Hattie C. Osbon, Mrs. Bernard Peters, Miss Marie West, Mrs. Eleanor McCullom, and Mrs. Dr. Stuart.

Thirteenth Regiment Review.

Controller Coler has accepted an invitation from Col. Austen of the Thirteenth Regiment, National Guard, to review the regiment at its armory in Brooklyn on the evening of Jan. 30. The occasion will be the first public appearance of Col. Austen with the Thirteenth Regiment since his re-election to that command. Dancing will follow the review and parade. Illustrated souvenir histories of the regiment will be given to the ladies present.

Sunday
January 21-1900

Daily, 1 Cent. The New York Times. Sunday, 3 Cents.

Part Two
Pages 15-28

RECENT EVENTS IN PARIS

Costs of Conspiracy Trial to be Paid by the Condemned.

THE ACADEMY DEGENERATING

Career of M. Bertrand—Rejane Honored by European Sovereigns—M. Loewy's Plan to Prevent Strikes.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The High Court proceedings are finished at last, and everybody has been acquitted except MM. Buffet, Déroulède, and Guérin. A. M. Luc Saluce is sentenced as a runaway, but there appears to have been nothing against him, and had he put in an appearance he would certainly have been let go. Déroulède gets ten years' banishment, an anodyne sentence which the next 14th of July will probably sponge out. Guérin, the Anti-Semite, was more severely punished. He is to have ten years' imprisonment as a first-class misdemeanant. M. Buffet is banished for ten years.

The cost of the prosecution is 800,000f., and of this one-third will have to be paid by each of the condemned. It is rather hard that it should be so, for M. Déroulède and his two comrades in misfortune are thus made liable for the expenses entailed by the prosecution of a large party of people with whom they had nothing to do, and who have since been proved to be innocent. One would think that the Government ought to pay at least for its own errors. But the French law says no. M. Buffet is very wealthy. He owns a magnificent mansion near the Arc de Triomphe, where his father, the famous old Orleanist Senator, used to give magnificent and, indeed, royal receptions in honor of the Comte de Paris. Déroulède is also fairly well off. He has two beautiful country houses, one of which he inherited from his uncle, the great dramatist, Emile Augier. Most probably these will have to be sold in order to pay his heavy costs, which exceed $50,000. There is talk of a national subscription to defray these costs, to buy in the two estates, and present them to Déroulède's sister. I have very little doubt as to the result. It will confirm what I have already said in THE NEW YORK TIMES about the waning influence of all these popular agitators.

WRESTLING MATCHES POPULAR.

Wrestling matches are now greatly à la mode in Paris. Every music hall and circus has had or is having its "world's championship," and the Parisian public does not seem to get tired of these exhibitions of big fat men, or "Poids Lourds," as they are called here. One of the latest matches, which has now lasted considerably over a fortnight, and seems likely to last forever, is that between a Turkish wrestler, Kara-Ahmed, who won the "glorious" title of the world's champion at the Casino de Paris a few weeks back, and Paul Pons, a Frenchman who is also "world's champion." These two men have been wrestling regularly for several hours every day for the past week without arriving at any final result, and the public is beginning to see that there is a good deal of "chiqué," to use an appropriate French slang word, in these international contests. The latest wrestler to appear on the scene has been Jack Carkeek, who arrived from America a few days back, and has defeated several French wrestlers at the Folies Bergères this week.

THE NEW ACADEMICIAN.

Paul Deschanel, the President of the Chamber, who was elected a member of the French Academy last year, will be formally received on Feb. 1 next. Sully Prudhomme will reply to the speech of M. Deschanel, who is the successor of Edouard Hervé. The ceremony of the reception will not be a brilliant affair, and little interest is being taken in the new Academician, apart from the fact that he is President of the Chamber and would like to become President of the Republic. As a man of letters, he is quite beneath notice. It is a sign of the times that he should have been elected an Academician at all.

The Academy has degenerated enormously of late years, and Deschanel's election is a clear proof of this. His style is the Parliamentary style "in all its horror," as the late Francisque Sarcey said of de Freycinet's inaugural speech.

THE LATE EUGENE BERTRAND.

The death of Eugene Bertrand, one of the two Directors of the Opéra, following as it did so quickly on that of his friend, M. Lamoureux, whose funeral he attended but a week or two ago, has removed another interesting figure from the musical and artistic world of Paris.

Having passed through the Conservatoire of Paris, Bertrand started in life as an actor. He made his début at the Odéon in the year 1857. Two years later, at the head of a dramatic company, he started for America, giving performances in New York and Rio de Janeiro, and in Mexico. On his return to France he played for a while at the Grand Theatre de Lille, and there it was under his direction that Adelina Patti sang for the first time in France. In 1867 Bertrand removed to Paris, becoming Director of the Variétiés, in succession to M. Coignard. The years 1869 to 1892 may be regarded as the golden age of this most popular and boulevardian of Paris theatres. Turn by turn there were represented on its boards plays by Henri Meilhac, Ludovic Halévy, Sardou, Labiche, Hennequin, Albert Millaud, Offenbach, Hervé, and many others. "La Belle Hélène," "La Grande Duchesse," "Les Brigands," "La Petite Marquise," "La Cigale," "Mam'zelle Nitouche," "Les Trente Millions de Gladiator," "Décoré," "Ma Cousine"—to mention but a few titles—were those of which the success was most complete and conspicuous. A complete list of all the well-known actors and actresses who came under Bertrand's sway would be far too long to give here. Suffice it to mention the names of Schneider, Aimée, Réjane, Judic, Chaumont, Jeanne Granier, Baron, Lender, and Brasseur.

After having been for twenty-three years director of this theatre, Bertrand abandoned the place to his friend Fernand Samuel, assuming, in 1892, and on the nomination of M. Bourgeois, the post of Director of the Opéra. His success here was just as great as that enjoyed by him at the Variétés. He it was who mounted Reyer's "Salammbo" and Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalilah," two works, each entirely French, which became great favorites. In his public as in his private life Bertrand was deservedly popular. Shortly before his death he had been elected President of the Association of Dramatic Artists, in succession to Halanzier and Baron Taylor. Had he lived but two days longer he would have been promoted officer of the Legion of Honor.

The place left vacant at the Opéra by Bertrand's death has naturally raised the question as to his successor. Since 1894 Bertrand had been associated in the directorship with M. Gailhard. It was thought by many that M. Gailhard would at once have a collaborator, as the work of direction during the exhibition will be unusually heavy. This is not so, however, for M. Gailhard will remain sole director throughout the year and until January, 1901. The question of division of the yearly profits has had much to do with this decision, as it is expected that they will reach a record figure this year. At the last exhibition the profits of the Opéra for the year amounted to over 800,000 francs.

THE REVIVAL OF "MA COUSINE."

It would appear that the supply of new plays here is not so great as the demand, as many of the managers are falling back upon revivals. The latest is that of "Ma Cousine," at the Vaudeville. It is just ten years ago that the Variétés produced this piece, one of the few that Meilhac wrote completely by himself and with which Halévy had nothing to do. It had a great success. "Ma Cousine" is a society comedy, in which society manners and habits are satirized. In style the work is gay and light. An undercurrent of healthy feeling pervades it, and prevents it from degenerating, at any moment, into license. The principal character is played by Mme. Réjane, whose sole presence in the piece is enough to insure it, as of old, a lengthy success.

MME. REJANE'S TOUR.

By the way, Mme. Réjane has only just returned from a long tour in Europe. She has played "Madame Sans Gêne" in all the principal capitals and has had the honor of being presented to the Emperor of Germany, the Queen of Spain, and the Queen of Portugal. She has carefully noted everything of interest in her diary, the most interesting pages of which she has published. It was her first visit to Berlin, and she was asked to play "Madame Sans Gêne" before the Kaiser, who complimented her and after the performance presented to her a handsome bracelet. At Madrid she was invited to the royal palace three times and presented to the young King by the Queen Regent herself. The Queen of Portugal was not less gracious toward her. She has done a good work in breaking down the barriers of Chauvinism in the French theatrical world, which ever since the late war have converted the French actor and actress into political marionettes with parliamentary wirepullers behind them.

A SUIT BY OTERO.

A curious action is being brought in the French courts by Mlle. Otero, the actress, against an Englishman named Bulpett, for the recovery of the price of a diamond necklace. The interest of the affair lies in the fact that both parties to the suit being foreigners the French courts cannot judge it. Mlle. Otero is playing every night at the Folies Bergères, where she has been specially engaged to rival Loie Fuller as a popular attraction. She never seems to grow older than the portrait of her which the American artist, Dannat, painted several years ago, and by which, I understand, he will be represented at the forthcoming exhibition.

A REMARKABLE LABOR PROPOSAL.

The extraordinary increase in the price of coal and the coal strikes in the Loire are again attracting attention to M. Loewy's scheme for an international regulation of the output of coal by an agreement between miners and owners. There is no doubt that if this scheme could be realized, the entire social conditions in Europe would undergo a radical change. It would be possible to fix a "living wage" for the collier, and strikes and lockouts would be at an end.

M. Loewy is looked upon as a visionary in many economic circles, but he is a singularly clear-headed man, who began life as one of Baron Rothschild's secretaries, and after that was one of the largest coal owners in Belgium. He was ruined by a long-continued slump in the price of coal, and set himself to solve the problem of his own discomfiture. He has been to see me once or twice of late, to report progress. He already has on his side all the coal mining organizations of Belgium and France. The Scotch, Welsh, and Lancashire coal miners have also joined him. He is to express his views at the next coal mining congress at Cardiff, and if he can get the English coal miners to side with him there is no doubt that he will be master of a most interesting situation, perhaps the most remarkable situation in the labor world which has existed since Socialism was first talked of.

M. Loewy has with him many of the principal labor leaders in England, more particularly Mr. Keir-Hardy, the former member of Parliament. R. S.

THE HEIRESS A CHAMBERMAID.

Adventures of Two Lovesick Men in a Hunt for $85,000 Through a Matrimonial Agency.

The adventures of Adolph Klein of 125 East Seventy-seventh Street and Max Masheimer of 152 East Ninety-fourth Street, two young men who have been in pursuit of a beautiful young woman with a fortune of $85,000 since last June, were related in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday morning. According to their statements, they found that the course of true love was very rough, for after paying $5.20 each to a matrimonial agency and spending a great deal of their leisure time in making useless efforts to see the object of their affections, they finally discovered that she was a chambermaid instead of an heiress, and now have nothing to show for their time and money but a circular describing the personal charms of the young woman and a few gushing love letters written on scented pale-blue notepaper.

Klein told Magistrate Brann that he and Masheimer, who are fast friends, though rivals in love, had seen an advertisement from a Miss A. Berger, who runs a matrimonial agency at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-third Street, on May 22, 1899, which promised a beautiful bride with a fortune of $85,000 to any eligible young man. Both men answered the advertisement and paid 20 cents each for a description of the young woman and then $5 more each as the initiation fee into a club composed of her admirers. After this they were introduced to the young woman, who had previously been referred to under the pseudonym of "Ideal," but said her true name was Anna Woodford.

Both men called upon her at the matrimonial agency several times, but neither had gained any apparent advantage, when she told them that she was going to leave the whirl of the town for her palatial villa in Massachusetts. Klein thought she liked him the better because she had admired his graceful figure, but Masheimer thought that a remark she had made on his distinguished appearance was a true indication of her feelings.

"Both of you write me nice, long, sweet letters," she said. "Miss Berger will send them to me and my replies will be the natural outpourings of an innocent maiden's heart."

"Here are the outpourings, Judge," said Klein, handing over a big bundle of letters, "read them for yourself."

The Magistrate looked through the letters with a sick expression on his face. "Why, anybody can see," he said, "that these were written by a man."

"I can see it now," said Masheimer bitterly, "but love is ever blind."

The two friends became anxious to see their charmer again, and paid repeated visits to the matrimonial agency in search of her. Masheimer even went so far as to make an offer to Miss Berger to take another heiress with as small a fortune as $50,000 in place of Miss Woodward. "I thought," he said, "that a fifty-thousand-dollar heiress in the hand was worth an eighty-five-thousand-dollar one in Massachusetts."

The young men received no satisfaction from the matrimonial agency, and soon the love letters were discontinued, leaving them both disconsolate.

One day last week Klein, while riding on a Lexington Avenue car, saw Miss Woodford walking briskly along the street. In his eagerness to see her he tumbled off the car, but got up again in time to catch another glimpse of her. He followed her to the Navarro flats, at Fifty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue. Inquiring there concerning the young woman, he found out that, instead of being an heiress, she was a chambermaid.

He rushed out, told Masheimer of his discovery, and then secured a summons for Miss Berger to appear in court. "It is bad enough," he said, "to suffer all the pangs of an unrequited affection without having to pay $5.20 for the privilege."

Miss Berger told the Magistrate that Miss Woodford could marry neither of the young men. "Besides," she said, "they haven't proved that she hasn't $85,000."

"Nonsense!" said the Magistrate. "A young woman worth $85,000 could have eighty-five suitors without going to a matrimonial agency. You must pay back $5.20 to each of the complainants."

ARION MASQUERADE BALL.

Members of the Society to Represent Carnival Characters.

More than ordinary interest is manifested in the Arion masquerade ball this year because of the fact that a number of prominent members of the society will represent characters in the carnival. The ball will be held at Madison Square Garden on the night of Feb. 9.

Charles Vollmer and August F. Sippel will appear respectively as Prince Carnival and Arion. They will occupy the last of the six floats that will pass around the hall in the grand procession.

Fully five hundred persons will take part in the procession, among whom will be scores of girls, dressed in costumes, as Indians, as cowboys, and as representatives of the various foreign nations.

The Garden will be transformed into a great floral show for the occasion. A roll of gold netting will circle the big hall, and floral streamers will radiate from the centre of the ceiling to the sides of the building. The dancers will be hedged in by green plants and flowers.

A point of interest will be the temple, octagonal in shape and about thirty feet across, which will occupy the centre of the floor.

Horner's Furniture.

Advantages in Buying It.

By patronizing our establishment you will reap a double benefit—firstly in the merit of the articles, and secondly in paying the lowest possible price at which such high-class goods can be made and sold.

Another important advantage is that our assortments in all lines are fully double to any shown elsewhere.

Throughout our warerooms will be found many articles marked down to make room for incoming goods.

R. J. HORNER & CO.,
Furniture Makers and Importers,
61, 63, 65 West 23d Street
(Adjoining Eden Musee.)

CURRENT TOPICS IN ROME

Italy's Great Prima Donna to Visit the Paris Fair.

WILL BE BERNHARDT'S GUEST

Friendship of the Italian Government for Great Britain—Automobiles in the Eternal City.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Jan. 3.—It is reported here, on trustworthy grounds, that Sarah Bernhardt has invited the famous Italian singer, Bellincioni, to be her guest for some time during the coming exposition at Paris, and to give a series of performances of Verdi's "La Traviata" and Umberto Giordano's now celebrated "Fédora," at the Theatre Sarah Bernhadt.

Bernhardt's admiration and liking for the great Italian prima donna, whose powers as an actress are perhaps even superior to those as a singer, are by no means of a recent date, and the great French actress has on more than one occasion expressed her feelings in regard to Bellincioni's remarkable talent. Victorien Sardou, the celebrated dramatist, has warmly congratulated Mme. Bernhardt upon her action, and has proposed that several prose performances of Dumas's "Dame aux Camelias" and his own "Fédora," with Bernhardt in the title rôles, should be interspersed among those of Bellincioni, an idea which will undoubtedly be carried out.

The Italian singer will be supported by artists of her own nationality, while the orchestra will be Parisian.

Judging from the tremendous success that has always greeted Bellincioni on one and all of her rare artistic journeys outside of her own country, and the high esteem in which she is held by critics and public alike, Mme. Bernhardt's scheme is certain of a well-deserved success, and both Italians and foreigners will have her to thank for such a propitious initiative.

The commission for the performance of Italian music at the coming Paris Exposition has decided to represent this country by four of its principal orchestras—that of Milan under the direction of the celebrated Toscanini; that of Rome, under Giovanni Sgambati or Ettore Pinelli; that of Naples, under Russomani, and that of Bologna, under Martucci.

A special concert of choral music will be given at the Trocadero by the Roman Choral Society, under the leadership of Stanisloa Falchi.

In case of an international band contest Italy is to be represented by her famous Roman band, already so well known throughout Europe, directed by Vessella.

The list of Italian operas to be given has not yet been made up, and the same may be said of the programmes of modern Italian instrumental music. However, in following the decision of the choice of the above-mentioned commission, the Italian public will be secure of worthy representatives of her famous musical traditions.

Reports are still insistent here as to the alleged negotiations of the past few days between England and the Italian Government concerning the temporary substitution of the British forces at present in Egypt by Italian troops. The latest rumors have it that Great Britain has offered pecuniary and other more important remuneration to Italy for the said substitution of forces, but that, up to the present moment, all such offers have been refused. Notwithstanding the partial denials of the British Embassy and the Italian authorities, several of the leading Italian papers claim to have information from reliable sources that negotiations to the above effect have been and are still being carried on. At all events, the temptation is no small one for Italy, or, at least, for a certain number of her statesmen.

Although popular sentiment here would be against any such transaction, it is almost impossible to predict any set decision or reply in these days when popular sentiment plays so small a part in affairs of state, strictly speaking. More than one circumstance in support of the truth of the reports at present circulating here, Italian occupation in Egypt would certainly be invaluable to the British Government at the present moment, and it is a well-known fact that Italy would willingly use an opportunity of showing the friendly feeling which she entertains toward Great Britain.

Following upon the recent introduction of electric cars, the Eternal City, in its efforts to keep abreast of "modern progress," has decided to adopt a service of automobile cabs. Although the introduction of this latest novelty has met with the same opposition as that opposed by many to the electric cars some time ago, the new vehicles are to commence running this year.

F. M. P.

BANKRUPT'S BIG WARDROBE.

C. W. Tracy Owes $15,264, Has Assets of $5,565, and Many Clothes.

Charles W. Tracy, manufacturer of paper goods, novelties, and folding boxes at 812 Greenwich Street, yesterday filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $15,264 and nominal assets of $5,595, consisting of machinery, $2,530; stock in trade, $150; accounts, $585, and forty-six shares of stock of Michaels & Co., $2,300.

There is a chattel mortgage on the plant to secure Ruth A. Wallace of Amesbury, Mass., for her claim of $1,710. The largest creditor is F. D. Beard of Lakewood, N. J., $7,350, for borrowed money. Mr. Tracy used the style of the United States Paper Novelty Company, and has been in this line for nine years. He enumerates an elaborate wardrobe in the schedules, among other things, 14 suits of clothes, 6 waistcoats, 4 overcoats, 1 ulster, 5 hats, 10 pairs of shoes, 60 pairs of socks, 40 shirts, 40 neckties, 8 pajamas, 1 gold ring, 1 matchbox, 1 scarfpin, and a military uniform.

TWO FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Stone Cutters, It Is Thought, Turned the Gas On Accidentally.

Lorenzo Borgomost, thirty-eight years old, and Battista Rodeschi, thirty-five years old, stone cutters, were found dead in bed in a hotel at 92 West Houston Street yesterday. The two gas burners in the room were turned on full.

The two men had been working in the country for some months and returned to New York Friday afternoon. During the evening the men staid in the barroom, and when they retired they were both intoxicated. It is thought they turned the gas on accidentally.

Le Boutillier Brothers

70,000 yards

FIGURED INDIA SILKS

20-inch FIGURED PONGEE . . .	39c.
23-inch FIGURED HABUTAI . . .	69c.
24-inch FIGURED FOULARD . . .	85c.
24-inch FIGURED SATIN FOULARD	$1.00
24-inch FIGURED FOULARD . . .	1.25

These Figured Foulard and India Silks are all new goods of standard makes, in choice designs and colorings, and fully guaranteed. Many patterns are exclusive and an early selection is suggested.

Also,

A complete assortment of Japanese Corded Wash Silks, Stripes, Plaids and Checks, in White and Colors.

West Twenty-third Street.

Arnold, Constable & Co.

Lyons Silks.

Fancy Crèpes.

Printed Foulards, Satins, &c.

The Novelties of the Season for Spring, 1900.

Dinner and Reception Dress Silks and Satins.

White Silks and Satins

For Wedding Gowns.

Novelties for Bridesmaids' Dresses.

Rich Panne Velvets.

Broadway & 19th Street.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

As a lover of Americana, he naturally went to the Grolier Club to see the collection of portraits of George Washington. As a collector, he was pleased; as an idealist, he was puzzled. "I have had a very distinct idea of what George Washington looked like," said he, "and it was not the Stuart portrait that filled the bill. After my study of the portraits, I am in doubt as to his nationality, my ideal is wrecked, and I am puzzled as to whether Washington was Jew or Gentile, English or German, French or Hessian. He was there as all these, and even more. If one had a predilection in any direction as to type, it could be satisfied in that lot of alleged portraits. I have been thinking that a composite of them all would make a picture really worth while, but it would hardly realize the ideal of anybody, for of course every man has an idea of how Washington looked. Yet such a picture might result in a truer likeness than any single picture in existence. More than half the pictures make Washington of a more distinctly foreign type than does the Stuart portrait, which is, to my notion, Frenchy. Yet those pictures were made either when Washington was at the height of his fame or immediately after his death, and some of the most impossible of them are the work of engravers and artists who were of note in those days. The distinctly German, French, Italian, Dutch, and English types were made abroad by artists who were guided by the racial characteristics of their own countrymen in their portraiture. Of course, they had never seen Washington, but they made pictures of him, and here they were in a bunch that was amusing. Some of the prints are the only samples known to be in existence, and so, of course, have a great monetary value. Possibly the less reliable they are as portraits the greater their value. Paul Revere, he of the 'midnight ride,' made a picture of Washington, but it was not shown, as there is known to be but one in existence, and that its Philadelphia owner values so highly that he would not loan it for this show. It is probably the one that, if offered for sale, would bring more than any other half-dozen pictures in the lot."

***

Among the buyers who visited the jewelry district down-town yesterday was Mr. Hattori, a Japanese merchant, whose headquarters are at Tokio. He is here buying American watches, in which quite a trade has been built up in Japan. Mr. Hattori speaks English perfectly, and thinks that there is a great future for American manufacturers in his country, if they take the advantage of the opportunities that seem to be opening with a decided inclination among Japanese to buy American goods of all kinds, as they now do our cotton goods, clocks, and watches.

***

Gould and golf are doing wonders for Lakewood this Winter, for visitors there say the hotels have never been so well filled as at this season. The Gould residence is about the only thing for the casual visitor to look at there, but there are odorous pines, good hotels, a fine bracing air, and skating and hockey when the ice is good on Carasaljo Lake. Bicycle riders who have been in the habit of riding to the golf links in the park are deprived of the short cut across the Gould lands this Winter, for an iron fence now incloses the polo field and the intervening patch of woods.

***

Miniatures of their pet dogs is the very latest affectation among society women, and artists who can do the sort of work required are reaping quite a harvest in consequence. Recently one of the members of the National Academy, who makes a specialty of portraits, was appealed to to paint a picture of a very fashionable woman's pet dog because, as she said, he had succeeded so well with a portrait of herself that she was "sure he would be able to get the expression" of the smug face of her Yorkshire terrier. She is the same woman of whom it is told that a year or so ago she sent post haste to a surgeon of National reputation to set the leg of her dog, who had had the worst of it in a collision with a bicycle rider. She thinks it strange that her liberal offers did not secure the services of either surgeon or painter.

***

"Admiral Bunce, Paymaster 'Trum' Stancliffe, and a few other naval men who came from Connecticut knew all about it," said a naval officer who was gossiping with a party of Connecticut people in the Murray Hill Hotel lobby yesterday, "and so did a few of us who had served on the old Hartford when it was Admiral Farragut's flagship. Whether it was known to the people who had charge of her recent overhauling, it is hard to say. It was on her the last time I was aboard, but that was several years ago." It was a coat-of-arms of the City of Hartford that they were talking about, and it was presented to the ship when she was launched in 1859 by the city authorities of Hartford. It was cleverly carved from a block of the old "Charter Oak" that figured so prominently in the early history of the State, for the Hon. Isaac Stuart, who owned the tree, gave it to the city for the purpose to which it was put, and guaranteed its authenticity. In those days the history of the tree was more familiar than it is now, so that it was highly prized and carefully guarded for a time at least. Recently the story came from the Mare Island Navy Yard to Hartford that the block of wood had been found, the coat-of-arms of the city deciphered, and a query was made from Hartford's Mayor as to its history. After some trouble the City Fathers found out what the block of wood was, and how it came to be on the Hartford, and now they would like to get hold of it if the Navy Department is no longer willing to care for it. Whether the old ship carried the Charter Oak seal with her on her present trip down the South American coast, or whether the block of wood has found a lodging place in the junk heap at the Mare Island Navy Yard is now a question Hartford people would like to solve.

***

Some of the politicians at the Fifth Avenue Hotel were having a quiet little laugh yesterday at the expense of George P. Schryver of Port Jefferson, Long Island. His appointment as Postmaster was sent in on Tuesday, and as he knew nothing about it except that he had filed an application for the place, he was hard at work at the time trying to get the indorsement of his County Committee. That committee turned him down and refused to indorse his candidacy. So he went to his home from Riverhead very much depressed and pretty well satisfied that the prize he wanted was beyond his reach. When he picked up his evening paper he found that he had been nominated, and his grief was turned to joy. Now he is hustling about trying to get some sort of an indorsement that will offset the black eye his County Committee gave him before they learned that he had been nominated.

***

Fame for the Dewey Arch has now certainly been achieved. A big down-town dry-goods firm has prepared for the market a printed cloth intended for use in the making of bed quilts, sofa pillows and cushions, containing a reproduction of the arch, surrounded with enough spots in gaudy colors to catch the eye of the rustic. So Summer boarders may have to lie under or on reproductions of this famous arch during the coming season if they are of the sort who patronize the seaside or mountain farmhouses where that sort of high art is sure to meet with high favor.

***

Marketmen on the west side are hearing with some alarm of the vigorous prosecutions in Connecticut and on Long Island of people who are selling or using oleomargarine in place of the butter that it is supposed to be. Boarding-house keepers in Connecticut have been prosecuted and fined $25 each by one Judge for the use of the stuff on their tables, one of the victims being, so it is said, the mother-in-law of one of the most prominent officers of New York's City Government. Over in Jamaica an itinerant vendor of this imitation butter was fined the limit, $200, and several other prosecutions in that vicinity have rather interfered with the business. "Heaven help us," said one of the butter and egg men, in a burst of confidence, "if they get after people here who sell butter that is chiefly oleo. It would force about half the grocers and marketmen into bankruptcy if the Jamaica-sized fine should be inflicted on violators of the law here. Fully half the dealers and nine-tenths of the consumers are unable to tell whether they are selling or using the real thing or the imitation, for the latter seems the better butter very frequently. Has any one heard when they are going to prosecute the 'honest farmers' who buy oleo and mix it with their home-made butter?"

SIMPSON, CRAWFORD & SIMPSON

A WEEK OF GREAT BARGAINS PRIOR TO STOCK TAKING.

We aim for brief stock sheets and quick accounting. The greatest Spring Stocks we've ever known are pouring in and demand undivided attention. For a release from winter responsibilities we are willing to pay handsomely—as this handful of peerless specials will amply show.

Closing Sale of Curtains and Portieres.

During the past four months many lines of Curtains and Portieres have come and gone here, leaving their inevitable residue of broken two, three and four pair lots. These hundreds of pairs, substantially desirable as when first loomed, are now brought forward, subdivided into bargain lots, and offered marvellously under current New York prices.

Real Renaissance Lace Curtains.

$11.95 per pair. Reduced from $16.00.
$6.48 per pair. Reduced from $9.00.
$4.75 per pair. Reduced from $6.75.

Irish Point Lace Curtains, extra wide and long.

$6.25 per pair. Reduced from $8.00.
$7.75 per pair. Reduced from $9.75.
$9.65 per pair. Reduced from $12.50.

Nottingham Lace Curtains, reproducing the high grade laces.

98c. per pair. Reduced from $1.35.
$1.38 per pair. Reduced from $1.75.
$1.98 per pair. Reduced from $2.48.

Ruffled Muslin Curtains, suitable for bedrooms, servants' halls and general utility, per pair, 68c. and 98c.—two unmistakable bargains.

Tapestry Bagdad Portieres, extra heavy quality, full length and width, heavily fringed; value $5.00 per pair, at $3.98

Mercerized Silk Portieres, fringed top and bottom, perfectly reversible; value $11.50 per pair, at $8.98

Real Bagdad Portieres, 5 stripes, heavy quality, each $4.48

Now Comes the Turn of Odd SILK PETTICOATS To Furnish Price Surprises.

Who is to say what styles will hold over and what disappear? Here, scattered among ten big lines are the best sellers of to-day, in the very front of present demand. By simply doubling lots and cutting prices with a free hand we make

Five Bargains of Pronounced Attraction.

$3.39—With corded ruffle and Spanish flounce.
$4.75—With 2 and 3 bias ruffles.
$7.50—Knife pleatings, tucked ruffles, cordings.
$12.50—Imported model petticoats—luxuries.
$18.50—For carriage and reception wear—our most elaborate kinds.

Figure the values from $4.98 to $32.50.

Safely count on finding your color choice.

Some Short Steps to STOCK TAKING In Coats, Suits, Capes, Etc.

Two Great Jacket Bargains.
Two Great Cape Offerings.
Two Great Dress Skirt Items.
Miscellaneous Cloak Special.

73 Jackets, each $7.50.—To close up several lines in black and colored Kerseys, and some few Cheviots, silk lined throughout and finely tailored. $7.50—how long will only seventy-three $12 and $15 coats last?

96 Jackets, each $10.00.—To close up high grade Kerseys, in tan, navy and black; also unfinished Worsteds and Cheviots. Are silk lined, and went through the season marked $16.50 and $18.00.

Handsome $10 Golf Capes, plain or flounced, Embroidered Plush Capes, Thibet trimmed, $7.50

Persian Cloth Capes, plain black Kersey Capes, a new assortment of Golf Capes. $10.00 for choice of the combined assortment.

Dress Skirts, fine cheviot serge, new pleated back, stitched taffeta straps on plaits, percaline lined $7.50
Dress Skirts of good black Venetian, tunic effect, trimmed with taffeta silk $8.75

CHEVIOT SUITS—Highly tailored, this season's fabrics, silk lined throughout, single or double breasted, tight fitting, $29.75.

Fur Prices Reduced.

Balance of our $100.00 Persian Coats . . $75.00
Balance of $32.00 Electric Seal Coats . . 25.00
A considerable lot of $16.00 Collarettes . . 10.00

19th Street. Sixth Avenue. 20th Street.

CAB HORSE ON A WILD RUN.

Passengers Jump Out Before Rig Is Wrecked—Man and Woman Hurt.

A one-horse cab driven by Thomas Connors, in which were two men and a woman, caused considerable excitement and more damage on lower Fifth Avenue yesterday morning. The cab was bound down town, and between Ninth and Tenth Streets passed a hansom. The driver of the hansom was swinging his long whip, and the lash caught the cab horse on the nose, frightening him so that he got the bit in his teeth and bolted.

Connors turned the animal into Ninth Street, hoping he would be able to stop him. Just after he turned the corner the two men jumped out, and the woman followed. The woman slipped on the wet pavement and fell, cutting her lip and nose.

Near Sixth Avenue the wheel of the cab struck the curb, and Connors was thrown out, receiving a severe cut on the head and contusions of the body. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital. At Sixth Avenue the horse ran into Mrs. Kate Pfaffuer of 44 Grove Street, and knocked her down. The front wheels of the cab passed over her legs, fracturing them. A hurry call for an ambulance was sent in, but before it arrived Mrs. Pfaffuer had been carried to a cab and taken home.

The horse then turned his attention to an elevated railroad pillar, and so managed to strike the cab against it that the cab was wrecked and he was freed. He then bolted up Sixth Avenue until at Tenth Street he was caught by Thomas McGlynn, the janitor of Jefferson Market.

TO SAFEGUARD PASSENGERS.

Bronx Residents Ask for a Hearing on Proposed Ordinances.

Residents of the Borough of the Bronx have asked the Railroad Committee of the Board of Aldermen to give a public hearing on two ordinances introduced at the last meeting by Alderman Geiger, and which they say will add to the comfort and safety of passengers on transit lines, both surface and elevated. One of the ordinances provides that hereafter no franchise, or extension of franchise, shall be granted to any street railway company unless such company shall provide adequate waiting accommodation at all terminals and points of transfer where such waiting accommodations are needed, or where passengers are required to wait longer than two minutes for a car.

The other ordinance prohibits railroads from permitting passengers to ride on platforms of cars while in motion. A fine of from $10 to $25 may be imposed on any railroad company which permits infractions of the ordinance, and persons persisting in standing upon the platforms after being warned not to do so are made liable to arrest and punishment by a fine of from $10 to $25, if a hearing is granted on the proposed ordinances, a large delegation of Bronx people have promised to appear in their behalf.

French Cooks' Exhibit and Ball.

The thirty-fourth annual French Cooks' ball is to be given at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 6, and the principal chefs of this city are already engaged in making plans for their exhibits of culinary creations. The exhibition of these elaborate specimens of the cooks' art is always a feature of the ball, and rivalry among the contestants for the first prize is keen. The exhibits are to be on view from 2 to 6 and from 8 to 10 P. M. The proceeds of the ball will be devoted to the fund for widows and orphans.

Hudson River Institute Alumni Dinner

The twelfth annual dinner of the New York Alumni Association of the Hudson River Institute will be given at the St. Denis Hotel, Broadway and Eleventh Street, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 30. A stereopticon exhibition will be given after the dinner.

William Dean Howells to Lecture.

William Dean Howells will lecture on "Heroes and Heroines of Fiction" in Association Hall, Brooklyn, on Friday evening, Feb. 2. The lecture will be under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Entertainment at West End Synagogue.

A "Landseer" entertainment by the Shaaray Tefila Young People's Association, connected with the West End Synagogue, will be given in the synagogue on Monday evening, Jan. 29.

At the Play and With the Players

In the comparatively few performances of the prose plays of Henrik Ibsen, which have been given in this city thus far, his symbolism has not gained admiration or even comprehension. "A Doll's House" received some small measure of favor in various German, French, and English acting versions, because of the novelty and charm of the heroine's character and the odd outcome of her experiences, and also because the character has been employed by some actresses of extraordinary skill to exhibit their virtuosity. "Ghosts" has drawn a few audiences because it is nasty and horrible. "Hedda Gabler," too, is a tainted and morbid work. One excellent performance given by Beerbohm Tree of "An Enemy of the People," which is at least a wholesome piece, preaching intelligible doctrine, did something to increase the small understanding here of Ibsen's fame, but not much.

The directors of the series of performances of modern dramas at Carnegie Lyceum might better have tried "Little Eyolf," which, obscurely symbolical as some of its scenes, including that of the Rat Wife, may be, is erotic and horrible enough to cause blushes and shudders. "The Master Builder" turned out to be another of their mistakes. Some of its symbolism is only comprehensible to the initiated, and the rest of it is uninteresting after the first act, which tells all the story there is to tell. It is needless to lead slowly through two more acts to the fall from the tower of Solness, and with such acting as the drama received Wednesday night the performance was little short of an infliction.

Even in an English translation "The Master Builder" reads much better than it acts, because in this the Norwegian's stagecraft amounts to nothing. Once more he is preaching his doctrine of individualism, but in his prosiest vein. One gathers the idea that, as whatever a purposeful man wants very much to do in his life or to have done for him will be done sooner or later, it would be well for him to do it, good or bad, without hesitating and by the most direct means. Thus will he best work out his destiny. Perhaps it would be unfair to imagine the application of this doctrine to the incidents narrated in the first of the long dialogues between Hilda Wangel and the architect, but one never knows how far Ibsenism dares to go. Master builders, we learn, would be more masterful and would build more strongly, whether they incline to churches or homes for men and women and little children, if they had fewer qualms of conscience. But it is well not to venture too far into these quicksands of symbolism.

Inferior actors are always inclined to act Ibsen in a monotone. The rôle of Halvard Solness, with its abrupt changes of mood, its wild flights of imagination, its suggestion of a disordered intellect, of a tremendous will going to ruin, ought certainly to be acted, if it is to be acted at all, by an artist of great eloquence, with a firm command of technic, a voice of unusual compass, a countenance of rare expressiveness. The gentleman who endeavored to give the form and semblance of life to this master builder looked like a nonchalant politician, carried one hand in his trousers pocket, and spoke in one monotonous strain.

Yet perhaps that made little difference in the general result. The audience was largely composed of folks who had not paid for their tickets, and there is evidently no life left in this latest scheme to awaken public interest in the "advanced" drama. And the experiment with this particular Ibsen play turned out to be as futile as the earlier experiments with translations of Echegaray and Hervieu.

As obscurely and depressingly symbolical as "The Master Builder" is the latest "social drama" of the Norwegian, the "epilogue," as he calls it, to the series begun with "A Doll's House," which is now finished. Its cheerful title, "Naar vi dode vaagner," means in English "When We Who Are Dead, Awaken." It is said, by those who have read it, to be generally dull and dreary. Yet the hand of a master of stagecraft is in it.

The story is all about Prof. Rubek, his young wife, Maia, and another woman, Irene, who was his model in a work of statuary he once made of the Resurrection. He and the woman loved, she inspired him, he deserted her. Now his wife is tired of living in the lowlands, and, as the professor is not much of a climber himself, he permits her to go to the mountain with a bear hunter who is very strong and brutal, and, rejecting the philosophy of Shylock, loves only that he can kill. And presently, Irene, awakening from her symbolical death, arouses the professor, and they too set off for the mountain, and are having a sociable time when an avalanche happens along their way. Pretty play, isn't it?

It is now a dozen years since the translations of Ibsen's plays began to be circulated here, and the first performance in English of Archer's version of "A Doll's House" was given a year or so later. In all that time there has been no measurable growth of interest in Ibsen, and no healthy development of the Ibsen cult. The merit of his studies of social life is not appreciated by any but a few students of the drama. For his philosophy and symbolism nobody cares a rap. He is regarded only as a cross-grained old curmudgeon who likes to think the nastiest things of his fellow-beings and impute the worst motives to all their acts.

That he is something much more than this is perfectly true. That a larger understanding of him is likely to be disseminated in the next century is very likely. He teaches some lessons, aesthetic if not moral, worth heeding.

But these occasional incompetent performances of his works serve no other purpose than to increase "the lodged hate and certain loathing" many well-meaning folks entertain for the Scandinavian because of his cheerless pessimism, his bitterness, his fondness for unclean subjects, and the shadow they think they detect on all his works of

"* * * The owlet Atheism, Sailing on obscene wings athwart the noon."

Florence Kahn was once more the centre of attraction in the performance of "The Master Builder." A singular mixture of clumsiness and grace, of gleaming artistic intelligence and the utter lack of it, of poetic weirdness and conventional melodrama was her portrayal of the personification of the Nemesis and the salvation of Halvard Solness. In outward semblance an unsophisticated country girl, Hilda Wangel, has nevertheless the insight of a seeress and the judgment of a woman of the world. Any accepted notion of consistency in the acting of the character is out of the question. But much more technical expertness is required by this singular young actress before she can excel in a rôle so difficult.

As it was, she was interesting in Act I., did not utterly fail in Act II., and was momentarily impressive in the catastrophe. She has a strange, almost uncanny personality which fits such a rôle better than that of a discontented Parisian wife. She has a voice of various melody. Her career should be very interesting.

For many years, yes, many, Mrs. Langtry has been a better actress than nine-tenths of her critics have been disposed to admit. Long ago she had acquired a style which served her well, and her artistic intelligence was always in evidence. She has no broad gamut of expression. She could never sound the note of tragedy. When she did the sleep-walking scene of Lady Macbeth she was clearly walking in her sleep. The superficial details of her performance were very good, and all the better for not being too elaborate and repulsively realistic, like Ristori's "business" in this episode. But in Mrs. Langtry's performance there was no suggestion of the terror of remorse, the torture of a guilty conscience, the awful agony of a lost soul. So, also, the note of buoyant glee, essential to the perfect embodiment of the spirit of comedy, is always beyond her reach. But she has acted many parts to very good effect, and if you will recall to mind the actors of whom more in praise can be honestly said, you will realize what the comparative merit of Mrs. Langtry is.

In "The Degenerates" she is not overweighted, except in the first act, wherein the brilliant manner of an Ellen Terry would be required to give the slow scenes their full dramatic value. But elsewhere she does not fail, though, of course, every scene could be used to better advantage by an actress of positive genius.

But it is not Mrs. Langtry's acting that counts in "The Degenerates" at the Garden Theatre, or the well-considered work of that accomplished comedian, Frederick Kerr, so much as the suggestiveness of the play, and particularly the fictitious importance given to it by skillful advertising. This is a show, ladies and gentlemen, in which the delightful iniquity of high life is exhibited by one who knows; here you have the aristocracy and nobility of England shown up by one who has risked it with the aristocracy and nobbed it with the nobility; no reputations spared; shocks and blushes for every one; step up to the office and buy your tickets!

Of course, this is a terribly "moral play." Mrs. Langtry says so. It shows you how a lady who admits that one more unsavory scandal cannot hurt her reputation much, and playfully hints that the Judge erred in rehabilitating her character in the law courts, gets praise and kisses and handshakes from everybody and finally marries a bald-headed but sententious Duke. It shows how Baronets' wives act when they visit rascally promoters after midnight. Moral? Yes, indeed. It is full of choice hints as to conduct under dubious circumstances and of gay verbal tidbits about the private habits of good society. John Bunyan could not be more moral than that.

"Brother Officers" came along just at the right time. With the memory of "The Degenerates" freshly burdening the mind, its simplicity and wholesomeness were particularly gratifying to the first nighters. In contrast with the bad acting in most of the characters in Sydney Grundy's play the work of the actors of the Empire Theatre seemed perhaps even better than it was. No other new play of this season has been quite so well acted in its first performance as "Brother Officers." From Mr. Faversham, who excelled most of his previous efforts as the self-sacrificing ranker, to George Osbourne, Jr., who gave just the right tone to his small rôle of the Colonel's batsman, all the actors were well suited. Mr. Backus forgot to bellow and Mr. Wheelock, Jr., pleasingly diversified his style of acting a nice namby-pamby young man.

But of course "Brother Officers" is no masterwork, and in other circumstances it would have seemed a rather belated production. The manner of the play belongs clearly to the era of Tom Taylor, though not all of the matter is out of date. The definition of the distinction between the social position of its plebeian hero and his aristocratic friend holds good to-day and in a democracy as surely as in a monarchy. It is, after all, not so much a question of caste as of the accidents of birth and breeding.

Hinds is an entirely possible personage, a ragamuffin boy of low and bad origin but inherently good, developed in the right direction by the rough discipline of the British Army, strengthened and refined by suffering, promoted for heroism. He is, in many attributes, the equal of Pleydell and the Baroness. If their lives could thereafter be spent away from the conventions of fashionable society, marriage between him and the Baroness, shown in the play to be possible, might be happy. But the heroine could hardly have been expected to dwell in the Wilderness, and Hinds, in spite of his bravery and his fair share of learning, would be quite out of place in fine society.

That he knows this, and does not act contrary to his knowledge, except in one moment when passion possesses him; that he, because of his lack of it, regards high birth and a noble name the best inheritance a man can have, while the Baroness is sentimentally inclined to hold that man who makes his own way in spite of all obstacles her hero, are denotements of character perfectly true to life. Much of Mr. Trevor's dialogue, too, is of a refreshing quality, though some of it has the antique flavor of the plays of the sixties and seventies.

In the first half of Act I., for instance, it seemed as if the nimble pen of the late H. J. Byron had been at work again. In construction Mr. Trevor clings to the clumsy models discarded by Pinero, Jones, Thomas, Fitch, and the other successful dramatists of this hour. He depends largely on the "aside" and the soliloquy and uses both for purely explanatory purposes. But he gets safely at some highly effective situations not all of which are reminiscent, and in his purely conventional scene of the discomfiture of the villain, such a scene as every play of the middle century used to have, and yet such a one as probably never had its counterpart in real life, is splendidly effective.

Of course, though, the uncommonly good acting is essential. With every part cast to an actor who fits it both in the matter of personality and in the needful powers of expression, the play gains in dignity and interest. Mr. Faversham denotes every trait of the new hero with facility, touches the sentiment of the rôle with sympathy, lends the due measure of force to its passion, and holds its humor within the modesty of nature. Edwin Stevens, latterly of one of Charles Frohman's traveling troupes, once of the Daly company, and previously identified with operetta and burlesque, is particularly acceptable to the audiences, it seems, in the rôle of the serio-comic villain. His acting is reasonably satisfying from any point of view, but one who has seen Mr. Stevens as Sir Harcourt Courtly, the Japanese Marquis Imari, and the Duke Senior living in exile does not derive from it the idea that the comedian has gained any new versatility. A more gratifying incident to me was the display of fervor and sincerity of the acting of Guy Standing.

Margaret Anglin, by the performance of only two rôles, (for her sad experiences in "The Musketeers" and "Citizen Pierre" need not be taken into consideration,) had already become something of a popular favorite. As the Baroness Roydon she has really a better opportunity than she had as either Roxane or the interpolated Mimi of "The Only Way." She reveals a fine talent for comedy and denotes the high spirits, the gentle breeding, the womanly sympathy, and the passion of this heroine with exquisite effect.

EDWARD A. DITHMAR.

THIS WEEK'S NEW BILLS

Miss Nethersole in "Sapho," Miss de Wolfe in "The Surprises of Love."

At Wallack's Theatre to-morrow night Olga Nethersole will appear as the French Sapho, not Byron's burning Sappho, who "loved and sung" in the Isles of Greece, but Daudet's grisette, Fanny Legrand, called Sapho because of her fascinating powers. Clyde Fitch newly dramatized Daudet's story for Miss Nethersole. There was a French play, which Daudet himself helped to make, and in this Mme. Rejane acted with noteworthy effect during her engagement some years ago. Mr. Fitch has not stuck too closely to the original story, they say, as he has endeavored to make the character of Sapho more "sympathetic." But it is his play we shall have to deal with this week, not Daudet's book.

Fanny Legrand belongs to the objectionable category of Marguerite Gautier and Zaza. She has a little son by a forger named Flamant, who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment. The child is in an orphanage. Sapho finds a lover in Jean Gaussin, who provides a home for her and permits her to adopt a child. She is desirous of getting her own child to care for, but when Gaussin is told by a treacherous friend of Sapho that the little boy she has adopted is her own son, he is angry and there is trouble in the fool's paradise. Sapho has been striving to lead what she calls a decent life, but it seems impossible now.

The succeeding episodes afford the actress of Sapho many opportunities for emotional acting. She is turned adrift by Jean, and then taken back by him. In the last act Flamant returns from prison and offers to provide a home for the boy and his mother. Jean's burst of jealous rage shows Sapho that he still cares for her, but she decides to follow what seems to be the path of duty and goes away with Flamant.

There are twenty-three characters in the play, and some of the scenery by Ernest Albert is said to be very handsome. The supporting cast includes Hamilton Revelle as Jean Gaussin, Fred Thorne as his droll Uncle César, John Glendenning as Flamant, and Mrs. Glendenning, Francklyn Hurleigh, Alexes Leighton, Nellie Thorne, and Walter Robinson in other rôles.

The new play to be produced at the Lyceum Theatre to-morrow night called "The Surprises of Love" was written by MM. Bilhaud and Carré, and has not yet been acted in Paris. This, therefore, is not the "costume play" in which Miss de Wolfe was expected earlier in the season to make her first appearance this season, but a fanciful comedy of present-day life. Miss de Wolfe will act the part of a young widow, Marcelle Duval, who is about to enter into a marriage of convenience with Dupont Martin, a distinguished literary man and a member of the French Academy. He has given her a lottery ticket for what is known as the Burnet Prize. No one knows what this prize is, but on the day before her contemplated marriage she wins it, and it turns up in the shape of a young man. He has been poverty-struck, and on the verge of suicide, when a friend suggests that he cling to life in the shape of a human prize. He is very accomplished, being able to sing and dance, and do various other things that are worth doing if you are going about the world. From the moment he meets the heroine, to whom he now belongs, fortune shines upon him. She herself falls desperately in love with him, and so does almost every other girl in the village, and the heroine's marriage is frustrated through her being inadvertently locked in the summerhouse with the youth at the moment set for her wedding.

Besides Miss de Wolfe, the cast will include Mr. H. Reeves Smith, who acted so well in the dual rôle of "The Brace of Partridges," as the lucky number; Olive May, who has not appeared in comedy in New York since her hit in "Butterflies"; Margaret Robinson, Wallace Erskine, Clayton White, Charles Bowser, Eric Hope, Frank Lea Short, Helen Keating, and Ellen Gail.

"The Belle of New York" will be reproduced at the Casino to-morrow night with most of the performers who were concerned in the long run of this variety farce in London. Edna May, whom this piece has transformed into an international character, will be seen and heard again as the Salvation Lassie. James E. Sullivan will appear in the rôle of the polite lunatic, in which he triumphed where David Warfield failed. The cast will also include E. J. Connelly, George Schiller, G. K. Fortescue, Ella Snyder, Hattie Moore, Toby Claude, and William P. Carleton, son of the famous baritone singer, who will recite Kipling's "Absent-Minded Beggar."

Schweighofer will give two more performances at the Irving Place Theatre. To-morrow night he will appear in "'s Nullerl." Tuesday night he will act the schoolmaster in "Scheu vor dem Minister," the tragedian in "Othello's Erfolg," and the French abbé in "Ein Blitzmaedel." Wednesday the German Singing Society, Liederkranz, will have its annual theatre evening at the Irving Place Theatre, when Schoenthan and Kadelburg's four-act brilliant farce, "Zwei Gluecklicke Tage," (Two Happy Days,) will be the bill. Thursday, "Im Weissen Roess'l," original of "At the White Horse Tavern," will be given, and this will be followed next week by its new sequel, "Wieder im Roess'l."

"Broadway to Tokio," the new spectacular comic piece announced for performance at the New York Theatre last night, has been postponed until Tuesday. A sketch of the plot, which, after all, does not matter, was printed last week. The piece is of the same order as "The Man in the Moon," and is in three acts and six scenes, beginning in New York and ending in Japan. The cast will include Otis Harlan, Fay Templeton, Josie Sadler, Ignacio Martinetti, Joseph Sparks, and Idalene Cotton.

A TALK WITH ANNA HELD

Anna Held is a very pretty and attractive woman. She is prettier than her gowns, and that is not a reflection upon the gowns either. Undoubtedly it is not a very original idea, for there are a good many people who have been to see her in this new play a good many times, and the other Saturday there was a box party of men besides a good many others in the well-filled theatre, and undoubtedly men do not make up theatre parties on children's day unless there is something or some one attractive to see.

Some people have an idea that the stage is a great beautifier, and that when an actress makes a charming appearance upon the stage she may go into her dressing room five minutes later and wash all the charm away. While many defects may be hidden, the brilliant lights which fall upon the stage are not an improvement upon ordinary day or evening light. It is not that they bring out a woman's defects, but they manufacture defects.

Those old stories of the youth who fell in love with the woman on the stage who was the contemporary of his grandfather may have been true in the days when oil was used for footlights and calciums were unknown, but it is a very short-sighted youth who would do that now. The strong light of the stage has a tendency, for instance, to make plump people look less plump—there are exceptions in cases of extreme plumpness which prove the rule—and there are some interesting actresses whose faces and arms seem almost painfully thin upon the stage who are pleasantly round and plump off it. Stage figures, like everything else on the stage, need to be slightly exaggerated to make the correct impression.

But this is a long way around and without much reference to the subject of saying that however pretty Anna Held may be on the stage she is much prettier off, because one then has a chance to see her at closer range. One of these chances came on the Saturday afternoon just mentioned, when she was talking of matters and things, herself and the stage in her dressing room. She looked very young and girlish, her big eyes looking bigger than ever with the make-up still around them, and she might have been the girl fresh from the convent that she is supposed to be in the first act of "Papa's Wife." The little short-sleeved negligée gown of pink silk she wore was a little more elaborate, however, than a little maiden at a convent school would have worn, and she certainly would not have been polishing so many precious stones. Miss Held was cleaning the jewels she had just been wearing, making them ready for the evening performance.

"I have to do it each time," she said. "There is so much powder that they are filled with it," and she went on dusting rings and other jewels and putting them away in a jewel case.

To judge from the appearance of Miss Held's fingers in the second act of the play, it might be an all-night task to clean the rings alone, for if there is an inch on any of them not covered with jewels it is because there is no place to put them. But she only wears twelve rings, though they are large ones, all of them, and make the most of themselves. "And I only wear them on the stage," she continues, going on with her task industriously, "except two or three simple ones. This heart"—it is a large one, a mass of diamonds, with a ruby in the centre, that she wears in the act—"was a Christmas present. I like pearls best, but they are expensive; and then rubies, diamonds, and emeralds, but not opals. I don't like them. And this"—it comes in with the jewels, though it is not to be worn—"is the medal I won at the flower festival in Paris."

It is a beautiful medal of Roman gold with the words Caisse des Victimes du Devoir and a design of flowers on one side, and a chanticleer on the other, with the words "Courage et Devoirment." Miss Held's carriage at that time was decorated entirely with orchids, but it cannot have been more striking than the little automobile in which she rides on the stage in this play, and of which she and her chasseur are the only ornaments.

It is an odd little carriage, a tandem which it is said the Comte de Dion, noted in France as the maker of these vehicles as well as for his conspicuous part in the attack upon President Loubet at the Auteuil races last June. He had it made for himself. It is an original model, and it was purchased from him and brought over here. If Miss Held, obtaining the permission she desired to go automobiling in the Park, should use this carriage and ride in the bizarre little costume she wears on the stage, the Park would not be large enough to hold the people who would fill it.

It is a quaint little costume, and many people think it is the most attractive and becoming she wears in the play, and disques its French appearance and Paris hall mark. As a matter of fact, Miss Held says that she gave the ideas for that particular costume here, and it was made in this country. It is very charming, though it would hardly be worn out of farce comedy. Yellow and red and green, the two former colors predominating, the long garment curving in a little to the figure, but not fitting to it, the touches of bright red and green upon it, and the big, chic hat of yellow with red flowers. On the automobile tandem with the chasseur in uniform, as it flies around the stage seemingly dangerously near the edge, Miss Held, a charming little figure in front, it is very attractive, and the people before the curtain can hardly get enough of it. To drive on the stage in a carriage with a real live horse and a brand-new style of automobile all in one play is surely to be up to date.

The gown Miss Held herself likes best is the little pink one with little puffings or flutings or something of that kind running all over it; touches of deeper pink here and there and a border of heliotrope flowers around the lower edge of the skirt matched by the heliotrope heels to the little pink slippers. "I should like it best," Miss Held says, "if it fitted, but it is too big, and I have to wear"—this is entre nous—"bigger stays with it."

And her view of the future on the stage? It has been proved this Winter that she is an actress, and she is to be, those who are interested in her say, a second Aimée; as to her own ideas, she has one decided one that she will stay on the stage only while she is young.

"I shall not stay on the stage until I am old," she declares. "I go to see people on the stage who are old, and they look"—and she makes a little face. "I do not need to work; I have a few pennies. Not enough to live like the Vanderbilts, but enough for a steak every day. I should like a big house in Paris. It would be very nice to act just when you feel like it, but then you disappoint the people."

Miss Held has a pretty little apartment in Paris now while she is awaiting the time to arrive when she will have the "la grande maison," and there she spends four months of the year and plays at housekeeping. It is not very arduous housekeeping for French servants are proverbially good.

"I keep my laundry book," she says, "and the cook comes to me every day and I plan the menus. This is what I call a good little dinner. I like ever so many of the hors d'oeuvres, the sardines, anchovies, and radishes and olives. Then I would have a melon if it was in season, and then a French sole. That is smaller and better than you have here, and you put it in egg, and you put the butter in the pan, and when it goes like that"—with a little twinkling movement of the fingers of one hand, which describes very well the bubbling of the butter when it is hot—"you put in the sole.

"Then we would have a very lovely chicken—one that is raised without muscles and that you can cut at all—and you have that à la broche. You have a fire of coals made of wood—that is the only kind that will do—and you have a big, high dish before the fire, and there is a door in the back and one in the front, and you put the chicken in, and there is something to catch the juices, and you keep pouring them over the chicken, arroser—What do you say in English?—and the more you do it the better it is.

"Then there are the pommes, and you slice them one on top of the other, like cake, with lots of butter; and there is spinach, with hard egg, and asparagus, and a beautiful omelette soufflée, and a lovely salad dressed before, and I make the coffee. Oh, and some of those strawberries and peaches."

Miss Held says very seriously that the coffee machine with which she makes coffee at her little dinners is a very simple one—not like that with which Turkish coffee is served in the play, a machine which suggests the Turkish room of one of New York's biggest and most popular hotels.

"Then there is a barouche, with a drive down the Bois de Boulogne," she adds gayly, "or a four-in-hand to St. Cloud or Versailles, and we have a hot time," finishing with that gay little raised inflection of the voice and use of American slang, which is so much more attractive with a little foreign accent than it is in plain English. And about that time Miss Held's French poodle brought a slipper for her to put on, for he knows when the play is over and it is time for her to change her gown.

VARIOUS DRAMATIC TOPICS.

Some reasonably acute observers of things theatrical who do not enjoy the inestimable advantage of possessing a public medium for the dissemination of their opinions took the violent applause of Miss Milner's acting of the sixteen-year-old girl in the first performance of "The Degenerates," last Monday night, to indicate the sympathy of the audience with the purity of the character. There was certainly nothing in Miss Milner's respectable acting of a very grateful rôle to justify such demonstrative approval. The impression of the chronicler of theatrical doings on this page was that the ill-advised applause was only another revelation of the artistic ignorance of the noisiest element in a "first-night" audience. The other view is much more creditable to human nature, of course, and to subscribe to it would be to write one's self down an optimist if not positively a philanthropist. But why should the people who crowded the theatre to see Mrs. Langtry, partly naked, act in a play which owes all its vogue to its blazoned immorality, so vociferously applaud purity? Nobody had strayed into the theatre through ignorance. Presumably the impurity was just what this audience wanted.

James E. Sullivan, who will appear as the ubiquitous lunatic in "The Belle of New York," at the Casino to-morrow night, is an American comedian who really had to go abroad to get the stamp of approval. His personal success in the 674 nights' run of "The Belle" at the Shaftesbury Theatre in London was only second to Miss May's. Yet he had a rôle in which popular David Warfield and other comedians had failed, and which, until Sullivan took it up, seemed hopeless. Sullivan will not return to London, it appears, to act in the new burletta by the authors of "The Belle of New York," even if Miss May does, but will stay here to be the star at the Casino next May, under Mr. Lederer's management, in a new musical farce Harry B. Smith is writing for him.

The telegraph operators and ushers who seem to contribute much of the current theatrical gossip to the newspapers nowadays use technical terms recklessly. The verb "to stage" is a comparatively recent growth in its accepted sense. It signifies to direct the preparations for the production of a play. Mr. Herne and some other stage managers of large reputes "stage" plays for other managers. But latterly this almost superfluous verb has been used as a synonym for "to produce," "to act," to perform." "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be "staged" next week chatters the theatrical gossiper. Another misused word is "cast." The cast of a play is merely the distribution of its characters among the actors. But in the minds of some of the theatrical speculators of this hour, who know neither theatricals nor the English language well, a "cast" is a company of actors just as in their vocabulary every list of plays to be performed by some company within a stated period is not a programme or a mere list, but a "repertwah."

Felix Morris, indeed, should have died hereafter. He was quite in his prime, and as a comic actor had few superiors. His ambition to act serious rôles was creditable, though mistaken. His triumphs had all been in comic, not pathetic rôles. Even in the best of his elaborate "character studies," his portrayal of the old Frenchman in a version of "Une Partie Piquet," he was no rival of John Hare in another adaptation of the same little comedy. But Morris could play well many rôles in which Hare would not have surpassed him. One of his best successes was the old man-of-letters who insisted that any fool could make money in financial speculation and tried to do it with a borrowed capital, with disastrous results, in "On 'Change," the English version of von Moser's "Ultimo." This was identical with "The Big Bonanza," in which James Lewis used to act the same rôle so admirably. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre in 1877, under Stephen Fiske's management, Morris acted a number of rôles, and was at his best as the simple-minded Irish lad, Arty, in Mrs. M. H. Fiske's melodrama called "The Daoulmagh"—awful name for a play. In Rosina Vokes's company his best work was done as the old Scotch butler in "The Double Lesson." At the Lyceum, in recent years, his Sir Pinto Perkins in "The Late Mr. Castello" was a capital example of comic acting, while his portrayal of Mr. St. Roche in "The Princess and the Butterfly" was a fine bit of composition.

Robert Hilliard's popular success as the noisy and vulgar man about town in "Wheels Within Wheels" has put him forward again, and next season he will star in a play by Richard Harding Davis, founded on the Van Bibber papers. Mr. Hilliard has already acted Van Bibber in a sketch by Mr. Davis called "The Littlest Girl."

W. B. C.—Mrs. Langtry fulfilled an engagement at Niblo's Garden Theatre in the old Metropolitan Hotel Building, beginning Dec. 6, 1886. Her play was "Enemies," a dramatization by Charles Coghlan of Georges Ohnet's romance "La Grande Marnière." ("The Big Marl Pit.")

Paul Bilhaud, one of the French authors of "The Surprises of Love," which is to be produced at the Lyceum Theatre to-morrow night, was born at Allichamps, Dec. 31, 1854. In appearance he is of medium height, of rather fair complexion, and wears a beard closely trimmed to a point at the chin. He began his career by writing several monologues. His first play was "Première Querelle," produced at the Gymnase in 1881. "Les Espérances," produced at the Athenée, in 1882. Others are "Première Ivresse," played at the Odéon, in 1884; and several other high class comedies, burlesques, operettas, &c. Among his later works may be mentioned "Le Paradis," written in collaboration with M. Hennequin, and produced at the Palais Royal in 1895. An adaptation of this was acted at the Bijou early this season. M. Bilhaud is one of the authors of "Ma Bru," "My Daughter-in-Law,") recently performed in London and Paris. He is a Director of The Beaux-Arts in Paris, and is an officier d'Académie.

Michel Carré, Paul Bilhaud's collaborator in writing "The Surprises of Love," was born in Paris on Feb. 7, 1865. He is the son of the celebrated librettist Michel Carré, and was educated at Vances and Louis-le-Grand. His dramatic career began by writing short plays for concert halls. His first important work was the pantomimic "L'Enfant Prodigue," (music by Wormser,) produced at the Bouffés Parisiens in 1890. Others are "L'Ecole des Vierges," "Bouton d'Or," and "Nos Bons Chasseurs," a vaudeville, in three acts, in collaboration with Paul Ellhaud, produced at the Nouveau Théâtre in 1894. His latest works are "La Belle au Bois Dormant," a lyric drama; "L'Hôte," "Lalli," a comic opera; "Les Soeurs Hedouin," and "Les Demi-Vierges." Carré is also the author of the melodrama "Cogne Dur," recently produced at the Ambigu in Paris.

The young pioneers of the scrofulous and exclusive drama have succeeded in getting a red cloth drop curtain hung in the proscenium arch of Carnegie Lyceum, which can be raised and lowered noiselessly, thus doing away with the scraping of the stiff old draw curtains which have hitherto been used. This is a gratifying improvement.

Doubtless Miss Hannah May Ingham, the leading lady of the Murray Hill Theatre's stock company, who died suddenly of apoplexy last week, worked very hard, but it is small business to try to hurt the repute of the stock company system by attributing her death solely to the overwork their routine requires. Most of us have our full share of daily labor to perform in this world, and the actor's work, at its very worst, is not more difficult than that of persons in other callings. Miss Ingham died of a disease which might not have resulted in her death at the early age of thirty-three years if her labors had been less onerous. She was a woman of pleasing presence and an actress of good skill.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

HERALD SQUARE THEATRE.—"Naughty Anthony" is continued.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Manager Knowles announces the last two weeks of "Three Little Lambs."

THIRD AVENUE THEATRE.—Manager Sheldon offers this week the drama "A Night in Chinatown."

MANHATTAN THEATRE.—Anna Held, in "Papa's Wife," is playing to large business in her third month.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—"Way Down East," William A. Brady's rural drama, continues its course at this theatre.

BIJOU THEATRE.—Miss May Irwin in "Sister Mary" is approaching the fourth month of her engagement, with no definite date set for its final week.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—"Ben-Hur" continues its extraordinary career, beginning its ninth week to-morrow evening. Public interest in this production is as large as ever.

WEBER & FIELDS'S MUSIC HALL.—Weber & Fields and their company maintain their popularity with the two burlesques, "Whirl-I-Gig" and "Barbara Fidgety."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—To-morrow evening W. A. Brady will present "A Stranger in a Strange Land," a farcical comedy which had a run at another theatre earlier in the season.

MADISON SQUARE THEATRE.—"Wheels Within Wheels" will continue until Feb. 3, and on the following Monday Charles Frohman's comedians will return to this house and will present "Coralie & Co., Dressmakers."

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE.—"The Village Postmaster" enters on the fifth and last week of its successful run. Next week's attraction will be Chauncey Olcott in Augustus Pitou's Irish drama, "A Romance of Athlone."

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA.—Jerome Sykes and Edna Wallace Hopper, in "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," begin their fourth week to-morrow night, when new musical features and new comedy conceits will be introduced.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE.—The Donnelly stock company will revive the Garrick Theatre success, "Never Again." Mr. Donnelly will make his reappearance with the company, assuming the character of Ribot, originally played by E. M. Holland.

KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE.—Nat Godwin, Maxine Elliott, and their company will continue two weeks more in "The Cowboy and the Lady," and at the expiration of that period on Feb. 5, a play by H. V. Esmond, entitled "When We Were Twenty-one," will be produced.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—Montgomery and Stone, who recently returned from London, will be seen in their black-face singing and dancing act. Other features are Duncan's collies, McPhee and Hill, Halladay and Ward, Harding and Ah Sid, Tyson sisters, Florence Henri, and many others.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—John Drew, who left New York a few weeks ago, will return to-morrow night to play a week's engagement in "The Tyranny of Tears." Charles Frohman has assigned to Mr. Drew's support Isabel Irving, Ida Conquest, Arthur Byron, Harry Harwood, Frank Lamb, and Georgie Mendum.

DEWEY THEATRE.—An excellent bill has been arranged for this week. Edward F. Rush's Victoria burlesquers will appear in their travesty, "A High Ball." The olio contains Le Roy and Morris, "The Tourist and the Footman"; Reid and Gilbert, Miss Aggie Behler, Curtis and Wooley, and Tom and Hattie Mawns.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—A strong bill will be presented this week, with Miss Kathryn Osterman, assisted by Thomas Tuther, in a sketch called "The Editor," as the leading feature. The Livingston Family will introduce acrobatic feats, and Ward and Kurran will present a sketch called "Family Characters."

GARRICK THEATRE.—The large business William Gillette is doing with "Sherlock Holmes" never varies from one week to the other. Aside from the regular Saturday matinée this week Mr. Gillette will on Tuesday give a matinee to his fellow-professionals, who have sent him a request in the shape of a round robin.

NEW YORK THEATRE.—Another Sunday concert will be given this evening, with the following artists: Le Roy and Clayton, Dillon Brothers, Louise Gunning, Joseph Adelman, Mark Sullivan, Allen Wightman, Lucie Verdier, and Polly Hazel. The feature of the evening will be the recitation of "The Absent Minded Beggar," by Miss Carol Birdsall.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—The extravaganza, "The Gay Masqueraders," containing many novelties, will be presented this week. Among the people who comprise the organization are Carlos and Vouletti, Lillian Durnham, operatic vocalist; Swift and Huber, musical comedians; Daily and Vokes, comedy sketch; Hanly and Jarvis, and Mlle. Bessie Stanton.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.—Miss Marie Dressler returns to this house and will be seen in her new skit, entitled "Twenty Minutes in Shirt Waists." She will be assisted by Adele Farrington. The balance of the programme includes Willard Simms and Jennie Graham, Leo Dervalto, Keno, Welch and Melrose, the musical Kleists, Lenton brothers, Sisson and Wallace, and others.

EDEN MUSEE.—The Neapolitan Orchestra is scoring a success. Each afternoon and evening their concert is well attended, and the programmes are carefully selected. The feature of each concert is the vocal music. It consists of solos, duets, and choruses with orchestra accompaniment. During the coming week, in addition to the afternoon and evening concerts, moving pictures will be shown each hour.

HUBER'S MUSEUM.—Col. Magnus Schult's troupe of Great Dane dogs will remain at the head of the bill in the curio hall for at least one more week. Other features will be the four Neapolitans, Porello's illusions and dissolving views, Joe Cramer, the "Rubber-neck" man; Murillo, hand balancer, and Young Americus, the strong man. In the theatre, the chief part of the programme will be furnished by J. M. Moore's New Orleans Minstrels.

CRITERION THEATRE.—The continued success of Maude Adams in "The Little Minister," which will begin the third week of its eight weeks' stay to-morrow evening, has put aside for the present the production of "As You Like It." The demand for seats has caused Manager Charles Frohman to add Wednesday matinees to Miss Adams's schedule, and hereafter there will be afternoon performances on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—The bill this week will include Minnie Seligman and her company in the second act of "In Paradise;" Walter Le Roy and Florence Clayton in a new sketch by C. M. Cohen, "Hogan of the Hansom"; Mr. and Mrs. "Hogan of the Hansom"; Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Ellis in "Mrs. Hogan's Music Teacher"; John Bowker in an illustrated talk on his personal observations in the Transvaal; Charlie Case, Louise Gunning, Newell & Shevett, Adams's sea lions, and the Vilona Sisters.

DALY'S THEATRE.—The engagement of "The Manoeuvres of Jane" will come to an end in a fortnight. On Monday, Feb. 5, Mr. Frohman will present John Oliver Hobbes's comedy of society "The Ambassador." This will enlist nearly the entire strength of the stock company. Miss Hilda Spong and John Mason will therefore appear with their associates in the new play. Following "The Ambassador," Mr. Frohman will present a drama of a romantic character, and the season will end on April 21. On April 23 the elaborate production of "Hamlet," with Mr. and Mrs. Sothern, will be given for one week only.

KOSTER & BIAL'S MUSIC HALL.—Manager Nelson Roberts has engaged Lafayette and Miss Marion Manola as the star features of the programme this week. Another prominent feature of the bill will be Miss Marie Jansen, who will have some new specialties. Solaret, the dancer, has been re-engaged for another week. Others on the bill are Ritchie, the tramp cyclist; the sisters McNulty, expert dancers; the five Cornallos, acrobats; Binns and Binns, comedians; Max Unger, in feats of strength, and Sheik Hadji Tajar's Royal Arabian Troupe. For to-night's concert the Banda Rossa of sixty musicians has been engaged. The programme will include Frederick Hallen and Mollie Fuller, Goldin, the illusionist; Tim Cronin, Hall and Staley, Eva Mudge, Coakley and Huested, and Ethel Tilson.

NOTES OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

A dramatization of "Brumaire," a novel, by Jules Claretie, director of the Comédie Française, will soon be acted at the Paris Vaudeville.

Karl Junkermann, well known to the German playgoers of this city, will begin an experimental term of German plays in London Jan. 30, with "Mein Leopold." He will not personally appear in all of the plays he intends to produce. Among them are Sudermann's "Das Gluck im Winkel" and Hauptmann's "Der Biberpelz."

"The Cause of Charity," a one-act comedy, is the latest work of Leo Trevor, author of the successful "Brother Officers."

Some Happenings in Good Society.

Congratulations may be extended this week on the anniversary of their weddings to

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Patteson, (Miss Eliza Randolph McCaw,) Jan. 27, 1846.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sheldon, (Miss Amy Fearing,) Jan. 26, 1857.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, (Miss Cornelia Sherman,) Jan. 26, 1869.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hude Beekman, (Miss Florence Delaplaine,) Jan. 24, 1871.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Howland, (Miss Clara Wood,) Jan. 26, 1871.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fearing, (Miss Gertrude Lea,) Jan. 27, 1874.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Ogden, (Miss Fanny Brush,) Jan. 21, 1874.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lorillard, (Miss Katherine Beekman,) Jan. 21, 1874.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lorillard Kernochan, (Miss Eloise Stevenson,) Jan. 21, 1892.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell H. Hoadley, (Miss Elliott Betts,) Jan. 20, 1892.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Woodward Cooper, (Miss Emily Erving,) Jan. 22, 1895.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Perry, (Miss Georgette De Rham,) Jan. 22, 1895.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clinton Wilmerding, (Miss Katherine Rutgers Bache,) Jan. 22, 1895.

***

The season has only five weeks and two days to run from this morning, and there are indications more strongly marked than last Sunday that the end is already in sight. There are still to come Mrs. Astor's ball, on Jan. 29; Mrs. Ogden Mills's annual ball, to-morrow night; Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting's annual dance, on Tuesday night; the second Assembly ball, on Thursday night, and the two receptions, and probably a dance, to be given by Mrs. Gerry, and the Gould entertainment on Feb. 10. With perhaps the exception of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's last "Saturday night," which is to be a cotillion, a musicale to be given in February by Mrs. George Crocker, and possibly a ball by the same hostess, there is nothing of any importance on the programme. People are already making their plans for the Riviera, Egypt, and even Paris, and in a few weeks New York will be as dull socially as in early Autumn. The devotees of gayety are showing signs of fatigue—why it is difficult to say, for the season is certainly not a gay one, and people are constantly discussing plans for the Lenten and Spring season. The present week will bring, as already stated, Mrs. Ogden Mills's large dance or ball to-morrow evening, a dance at Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting's on Tuesday evening, with the fourth Fortnightly dance at the Astoria on the same evening, the first of Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry's and the Misses Gerry's two receptions, also on Tuesday evening; a large reception, with music, to be given by Mrs. Henry H. Cook and her daughter, Mme. de Heredia, on Wednesday afternoon; the second Assembly ball at the Astoria on Thursday evening, the fourth meeting of Mrs. Church's dancing class on Friday, the third meeting of Mrs. Pratt's evening class on Saturday, and a cotillion at Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's also on Saturday evening. There will, of course, be the usual number of "at homes," most of which are really informal receptions. On Thursday the Old Guard ball, which interests a large, if not distinctively fashionable, element, and which, owing to the presence of so many men in uniform, is really the handsomest ball of the New York Winter season, will be given at the Metropolitan Opera House.

***

Small entertainments and affairs intimes seem just now to be the vogue. Mrs. Watson gave a woman's luncheon during the week, and Mrs. William Perry gave one on Friday. Mrs. Courtlandt Van Rensselaer has cards out for a luncheon on Thursday. Other luncheons will be given by Mrs. Junius Morgan and Mrs. Lester del Garcia.

***

The rose dinner that Mrs. William Tailer of 14 East Seventy-second Street gave a few evenings ago was a charming affair. Among the guests were Mrs. Henry Burnett, Mrs. J. Todhunter Thompson, Mrs. Allan McLean Hamilton, Mrs. Wilbur Bloodgood, and Mrs. James Hude Beekman. Mrs. N. E. Baylies, 1 East Seventy-first Street, has cards out for a dinner on Tuesday. Among the other affairs of last week was a tea given by the Misses Sedley, 127 East Thirty-first Street, and a small afternoon musicale at Mrs. J. Fred Pierson's, 20 West Fifty-second Street, on Wednesday.

***

Mr. George Schieffelin will arrive on Wednesday next from London, where he went a few weeks ago with his daughter, Miss Constance, who has since married Mr. Ismay. Mr. and Mrs. Ismay are at present on their honeymoon. Mr. Ismay has not yet gone to South Africa.

***

The annual junior promenade of Yale University, which is always an event of great interest, not only to the undergraduates but the graduates of Yale, and to the host of young women who have relatives or friends at college there, will take place in the Second Regiment Armory, New Haven, on Tuesday night. A large delegation of New York young beaus and belles will go to New Haven to-morrow to take part in the preliminary entertainments of the promenade and to participate in the event itself. Class teas will be given to-morrow afternoon. Mrs. H. L. Hotchkiss will give the junior tea at her residence, 555 Hillhouse Avenue, and Mrs. Bernadotte Perrin will give the sophomore tea at her residence, 403 Whitney Avenue. The annual concert of the Yale Glee Club will be given in the Hyperion Theatre at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening, and immediately after the concert the junior and sophomore germans will be held, the former in Alumni Hall and the latter in Warner Hall. The "Sheff" teas will be held on Tuesday afternoon, and these will include the Colony, Cloister, St. Anthony's Hall, York Hall, and St. Elmo teas. The Prom. Committee consists of P. L. Mitchell, Chairman; Henry S. Curtiss, floor manager, and S. L. Coy, L. M. Thomas, R. L. Atkinson, J. H. Wear, D. S. Blossom, J. A. Keppelman, and Harold Chappell. Among the purchasers of boxes for the Prom. are Hugh Auchincloss, R. H. Hawkins, Ralph O. Wells, R. Townshend, W. W. Hoppin, Jr., D. B. Lawrence, Alexander Cameron, Roland W. Betts, Clarkson Potter, and A. S. Williams, all undergraduates from New York.

***

The cotillion at Mrs. Mills's to-morrow night will be led by Mr. Worthington Whitehouse. There will be two leaders of the cotillion at Mrs. Astor's ball on Jan. 29. Mr. Harry Lehr, who will be one of these, will lead from one end with Mrs. Ogden Mills. Several dinner dances, it is rumored, will be held in certain well-known houses, but as yet it is not certain that they will be given. Everything now looks like a speedy departure of New York's chief entertainers for Europe and the South. Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel will go abroad early in March.

***

At the wedding on Wednesday of Mr. Edward McVickar and Miss Edith L. Speyers the special feature was the promptness and celerity with which the chief actors appeared at the church and the ceremony was performed. The bridal party arrived at the little Church of the Holy Communion at precisely 3:30 o'clock and in less than five minutes the bride and bridegroom were standing before the altar. At 3:45 the wedding was over and the guests were departing. Miss Speyers made a very effective bride, and as she is a very popular girl the church was crowded to its utmost capacity.

***

The final arrangements for the Charity Ball are almost completed, and the ball bids fair to be the most successful ever given. Many distinguished army and navy officers will be present and add brilliancy to the scene. A few boxes only can be had at 2 East Thirty-fifth Street, and tickets at 16 West Eleventh Street. Mr. Alexander Hadden, Chairman of the Floor Committee, has received the following acceptances up to this date: Henry C. Adams, Charles A. Appleton, Grosvenor Atterbury, Samuel D. Babcock, Jr., J. Searle Barclay, Ashbel H. Barney, George F. Bartholomew, Thomas F. Bayard, George S. Brewster, Frederick H. Burlingham, Walter Coles Cabell, Douglas Campbell, Edward Nicoll Crosby, James D. W. Cutting, Sherman Day, Frederic Ashton de Peyster, Bayard Dominick, Jr., Gano S. Dunn, Langdon Erving, James Henry Falconer, Jr., William Foulke, Sumner Gerard, Lawrence Lewis Gillespie, Arthur Goadby, Richard F. Goldsborough, Walter S. Gurnee, third, Eugene F. Hawkins, Erskine Hewitt, Loring Townsend Hildreth, Renwick C. Hurry, Phoenix Ingraham, Frank Johns, Frederic A. Juillard, Frederic Kernochan, Dr. Balling Lee, Robert E. L. Lewis, Electus D. Litchfield, E. Victor Loew, Jr., Heth Lorton, Walter S. Matthews, William R. McLaughlin, David M. Milton, Benjamin W. Morris, Jr., Monson Morris, Richard L. Morris, Stephen P. Nash, Jr., Rudolph Neeser, Grosvenor Nicholas, John A. O'Connor, William H. Owen, Jr., Edward C. Parish, Howell C. Perrin, Amos R. E. Pinchot, Robert Quennell, T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, Franklin A. Plummer, Harry Pelham Robbins, Kenneth D. Robinson, Arthur F. Schermerhorn, Burritt H. Shepard, Schuyler Schieffelin, Eugene Southack, Frederick Oakley Speddin, H. Tuthill Spence, Joseph Earle Stevens, John Stewart Tanner, Dwight W. Taylor, Guy Van Amringe, Killiaen Van Rensselaer, William D'Hertburne Washington, William A. Watson, R. W. G. Welling, Evart Jansen Wendell, Arthur Skelton Wily, and Henry Bogert Winthrop.

***

Among those who are expected to be present at the first night of "The Surprises of Love," in which Miss Elsie De Wolf is to appear at the Lyceum Theatre to-morrow evening, are Gen. Charles Whittier and party, Gen. Lloyd Bryce, Mrs. Bryce, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. Edward Lauterbach and the Misses Lauterbach, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Abbe, Miss Palmer, Miss Hewitt, Miss Emily Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. W. Fanshawe, Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin, Miss Winifred Ives, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hillhouse, Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, Mrs. Charles Baldwin, Mrs. Thorndyke, Miss Frelinghuysen, Mr. Egerton Winthrop, Mr. F. Marion Crawford, Mr. Eliot Gregory, Mr. Harper Pennington, Mr. Frederick Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. P. Cooper Hewitt, Mrs. James Harriman, Miss Harriman, Mrs. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Peter T. Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Montant, Mrs. Charles Childs, Mr. W. Forbes Morgan, Jr., Mr. A. Murray Young, Mr. Frederick Baldwin, Mr. Charles Robinson, Mrs. Arthur Murray Dodge, Mrs. Hone, Mr. and Mrs. George Scott, Miss Louise Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sorchon, Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., Mrs. John Borland, Mrs. Arthur Welman, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Whitridge, Mr. Robert Van Cortlandt, Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Mrs. Charles Perkins, and Mr. Chesley Richardson.

***

The engagement of Miss Gertrude Eccleston, daughter of the Rev. Dr. John C. Eccleston, rector emeritus of St. John's Church, Clifton, S. I., and Mr. Charles Barton is announced. Mr. Barton is a brother of Mrs. William Davis of 26 West Fifty-first Street. His family are connections of the Vanderbilts, and his sister, who died some years ago, was the first wife of Mr. Jacob H. Vanderbilt, son of the late Capt. K. Jake Vanderbilt.

***

Next Wednesday evening at Delmonico's the third Wednesday cotillion will be danced. Arthur Wiley of Virginia will lead, dancing with Miss Heloise Beekman of this city. The fourth and last cotillion will take place on the evening of Feb. 14 next.

***

The third of the series of Thursday receptions given by Mrs. Richard P. Lounsbery during January took place last week. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. J. B. Haggin, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Chapin, and Miss Berrick.

***

The Miss Hinchman now visiting her cousin, Mr. Alexander Drexel Biddle of Philadelphia, is a grandniece of the first Mayor of New York—Walter Bowne. She is related to the Bayside Lawrences and to the Hinchmans of Dover and Morristown, now "the people of New Jersey." Mr. H. Hinchman of New Jersey is an uncle. Miss Hinchman is quite talented as an artist.

***

One of the prettiest weddings of the week was that of Miss Harriet May Hampton, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Grant Hampton of Highland, Ulster County, and Mr. William Frederick Havemeyer, Herrman. The ceremony was performed at high noon on Wednesday, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. S. A. Welkert, D. D., of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Poughkeepsie. A large number of invited guests boarded a West Shore special train at 9 o'clock in the morning. On reaching Highland they were met by sleighs and conveyed over three miles of picturesque roadway to Fairview-on-the-Hudson, the beautiful country home of Mr. Hampton, overlooking the broad reaches of the noble river for many miles in both directions. The bride was attired in a white satin gown with point lace trimming, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses, and was attended by her sister, Miss Lois Hampton, as maid of honor, who wore a dress of white point d'esprit and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Alice Kendrick of New York and Miss Clara Ackerman of Syracuse, the best man being David Lawton of Newark. The house decorations were of pink and white roses, pink and white carnations, palms, and smilax. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. Among the 150 or more guests who partook of the hospitality of the host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. James Herrman and the Misses Herrman, Mr. E. N. Taller, Mr. George D. Harrison, Mrs. H. L. Flagler and Miss Flagler, Mr. and Mrs. Wilder, Dr. James K. Crook and Mrs. Crook, and the Misses Kendrick of New York. Mr. and Mrs. John Blunt and Miss Coutant of Brooklyn, the Misses Youle of Madison, N. J., Mrs. Da Costa and Mrs. Littell of Summit, Miss Ellen Harrison of Hartford, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Vail of Poughkeepsie, and Dr. Lamoree of Highland. After their return from Florida the bridal couple will reside in their now home, now being built in Highland.

***

Miss Maria Theresa Barrington, daughter of the late Clement Clarke Moore of New York, died in London on Jan. 10. Clement Clarke Moore wrote "The Night Before Christmas." He was the son of the Rev. Benjamin Moore, Bishop of New York, who married Charity, daughter of Major Thomas Clarke, April 20, 1775. The Royal Gazette of May 2, 1775, announced the marriage thusly:

The good Parson deserved a good Clarke,
Such happiness fate had in store;
'Twas Charity blew up the Spark
And fixed the bright flame in one Moore."

The residence of Major Clarke was about Twenty-third Street and Ninth Avenue, in the village of Chelsea. The village assumed the name, which it retained until swallowed by New York. The house stood on top of a hill, and it was in it that the "Night Before Christmas" was written. Miss M. T. B. Moore was born here, and the poem was written for her and her brothers and sisters. She was named after her mother's sister, who had married Viscount Barrington. A brilliant ball was given in the old house Dec. 9, 1804. The fashionable people of New York went to it in sleighs from State Street, Park Place, and Lower Broadway. Miss Moore lived at one time in Catherine Street, corner of Fir Street, Newport, R. I., but moved to London about 1809, where her aunts, Lady Applick and Lady Barrington, introduced her to English society. Two of Miss Moore's sisters married successively Dr. J. Ogden. One brother married Miss Sing of Sing Sing and was the father of the present Clement C. Moore. Another brother married first Miss Lucretia Post, and then Miss Catharine Robinson, who survives him, he having been killed by being run over in Paris on May 19, 1897. The late Nathaniel F. Moore, LL. D., President of Columbia College, was a cousin of Clement C. Moore.

***

The Cairo season does not promise to be one which will vie with the gay Winter of last year. Perhaps when the yachts get started and parties come down to Egypt from the Riviera there will be a few weeks of dinner and ball giving. Rome, on the contrary, promises much more than other places. The Prince Doria has the gratitude of many American and English people by his laying out splendid golf links near the city. The Campagna has been drained, and the spirit of modern improvement has been such as to suggest villa sites and building lots. The only trouble in Rome now from fevers arises from defective drainage, but many of the hotels and pallazios are being fitted up with modern improvements. Ambassador and Mrs. Draper are planning a series of brilliant entertainments. The Princess Brancaccio will also give some beautiful fêtes at her villa, and Mrs. McTavish and Miss McTavish of Baltimore will hold their little Winter court. Later Lord Rosebery and his daughter are also expected, as well as the William Waldorf Astors.

***

To-day Mr. William K. Vanderbilt and the Valiant are due at Nice. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., have been expecting him and will be at Nice to meet him. The young Vanderbilts have a very pretty apartment, and they intend to remain at Nice, with the exception of a short cruise on the Valiant, for the season.

***

The Duke of Marlborough, Mr. Iver Guest, and quite a little band of fashionable and prominent Englishmen sailed for the Cape yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Rudyard Kipling also were passengers on the ship. Mr. Kipling, whose health is much improved, will study the situation, and write some articles for an English publication. In fact, Cape Town has now become so fashionable that there have been quite a number of small entertainments among the people there this Winter. Lady Randolph Churchill is only to stop a short time. She is due in London at the end of February.

***

There is but little doubt that the Duchess of Marlborough will not take part in any charitable entertainment, or, in fact, be seen in society during the absence of her husband in South Africa. Synsonby Lodge, which was taken for the hunting season, has been closed, and the Duchess and her mother will go to the South of France. The entertainment which Lady Landsdowne had arranged was fixed for Washington's Birthday. Patti was to have sung, and the Duchess of Marlborough recite "The Absent-Minded Beggar" surrounded by the sons (all under ten years of age) of patrons and patronesses of the affair. They were to be dressed in the different uniforms of the British Army.

***

The fad on the Riviera is to turn villas over to the British War Office to be used as convalescent homes for sick and wounded officers. Quite a number have been so offered. Entertainments to raise relief funds for the orphans and widows are being arranged in every Continental town where there are American and English colonies, these two acting absolutely in concert. Cannes is fairly full, and so is Mentone. The golf club at La Napoule has been quite a success. Among the golfers is Miss Hoffman. The Marquise de Mores is also expected at Cannes shortly.

***

The wedding of the Count MacCarthy and Miss Viva Exshaw at Bordeaux is an item of interest to many Americans as well as English people. The Count MacCarthy is one of the old French-Irish titles, and Miss Exshaw comes from a colony of Americans and English people who are engaged near Bordeaux in the wine and brandy business. Among these are the Bartons, the Gustiers, the Hennessys, the Martels, the Johnstones, and the Exshaws. They are called at Bordeaux "Anglais de Cognac." The Vicomte de Janze, who was out here some years ago, married a Miss Hennessy, who has many American relatives.

***

There is but little new this week from the Tyrol. Col. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. Astor had not yet arrived, and the last mail did not contain any particulars of the death of Lady Alice Montagu at Davos Platz. Christmas was sloppy all through the Tyrol, and a fearful rainstorm at St. Moritz on Jan. 3, with temperature which is said to have been the highest ever recorded for that time of year, dismayed the hotel keepers. On Jan. 11 there was a fancy dress ball, with cotillion, at the Kulm. At Davos there were a fancy ball and some athletic sports. The tobogan races at St. Moritz, for which Col. John Jacob Astor has offered a cup, will be held late in the end of this month. Among those recently registered at St. Moritz at the Kulm are Mrs. Duncan Pell, Newport; Mrs. John W. Payne and Miss Bessie Payne, and Mr. and Mrs. Colgate, New York. At the Hotel Suisse is Mrs. Livingston Cutting. At the Palace Hotel are Mrs. Walter Kingsland, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. King, Jr., and Miss Alice Smith. At Davos are Mr. and Mrs. Vietor, Miss Burnett, and the Baroness Margaret Halkett. At Innsbruck are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Myring. Mrs. Myring was Miss Estelle Schuyler of this city.

***

William Waldorf Astor will start in February on a four months' cruise in the Mediterranean. He has hired the Catania, the Duke of Sutherland's yacht. He will have a large party with him. Eugene Higgins is at present cruising in the Mediterranean. The yachts which are being built for Anthony Drexel and James Gordon Bennett are not yet launched. The Drexels, however, will hire a yacht and take a short cruise in southern seas in February.

***

Lord William Beresford has been pronounced much better, and Lily, Duchess of Marlborough, and her sister-in-law, Lady Marcus Beresford, came up to London last week to open the annual exhibition of the Cat Club, in which they are much interested. Foxhall Keene is doing very well after his accident in the hunting field. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin have returned to London, and Lord and Lady Craven have left Coombe Abbey and are visiting them. Lady Hesketh has been hunting in Ireland. Mrs. Ogden Goelet and Miss Goelet are in Paris. Miss Van Wart remains at Ditton, where she continues to give handsome entertainments.

***

New Year's in Rome was extremely gay. There was a large reception at the English Consul's, Mr. Ceccarelli Morgan's, and Mrs. Ceccarelli Morgan wore a soft clinging gown of foulard. At this reception there were many Americans. Nearly all the guests left to go to Mrs. Lee's, who gave a representative American afternoon at her apartment in the Del Drago Palace. The traditional eggnog was served to the guests, among whom were Mrs. Osgood Field, Mrs. Isaac Bronson and Miss Bronson, Mrs. W. W. Story and Miss Story, Mrs. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Iddings of the Embassy, Mr. and Mrs. McNutt, Miss Kemp, Mrs. and Miss French, the Misses Braidwood, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Hurlburt, Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright, Mr. and Mrs. Hazletine, and Miss Norton. In the evening the same guests, with few exceptions, met at the Countess Mier's. The Countess wore a yellow satin gown, embroidered with spangles and tiny white precious stones. Pearls hung on her neck, and in her hair she wore diamond stars. Before leaving every guest was presented with a little strenna in the shape of an almanac. Receptions were also given by Mrs. Story and Mr. and Mrs. Seligman. Only American families received on New Year's Day in Rome, as no English families are giving entertainments abroad this year. The most that they do is to offer a quiet cup of tea here and there, and that is all.

***

At the Anglo-American Hotel in Rome there has been stopping Mrs. Weir, an Englishwoman who is well-known to many Americans. It was her daughter, Miss Weir, who was the unfortunate victim of the terrible landslide at Amalfi. Miss Weir was buried under the ruins of the terrace, so beautifully described by Marion Crawford in one of his late novels.

MORE TO-MORROW

***

Even in all the gloom in which at this writing England is wrapped there are bits of "Britishisms" which are simply delicious. It is just now the fad to publish long notices of christenings, and the following is a sample, appearing in a column of similar ones in an English fashion paper:

"CHAD.—Canon Pennefather officiated at the baptism of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scott Chad, 20 Palace Gardens Terrace, Kensington, W., on Dec. 14. The baby (born Nov. 1) was christened in a very handsome muslin robe with Mechlin lace (which had been worn by his father) and a Limerick lace veil. The sponsors were Mrs. Horace Rudge, (42 Campden House Court, Kensington, W.,) the Rev. Norman Pares, (Horsell Vicarage, Woking,) and Mr. Edward Christian, (1 Gloucester Mansions, South Kensington,) their little godchild being named George Norman. The presents included a silver mug, a large Bible, £5 in Post Office Savings Bank, and a silver rattle."

The christening robe which had been "worn by the father" is a variation upon that traditional bit of property "the lace veil which had served at the wedding of the bride's mother and grandmother," and which is such a favorite bit of finery at New York weddings.

***

Miss Beatrice Knollys, who has many friends in this city, and who is the writer of many of the little dialogues which have been published from time to time in The London World, Black and White, and other periodicals, has brought out a brochure, with advice on "The Gentle Art of Good Talking." Some of the hints in making conversation can well be taken by many people in society. Here are a few: "It is not etiquette to talk of the Ten Commandments. It is unpardonably personal. It is not etiquette to talk to a widow or a widower about second marriages, for you only make them fib faithfully over the dear departed. It is not etiquette to ask a woman's age, the price of her bonnet, or the name of her dressmaker. It is not etiquette to introduce disagreeable subjects, such as premature burial, vivisection, dissection, mother-in-law, Parliamentary patriotism, and disinterested charity." "Give a person a higher title than he owns. Mistake a cad for a gentleman, a plain woman for a beauty, a silly man for a celebrity, any woman for a photographed star, any man (especially a clergyman) for a soldier. Talk shop to the young men or the young women who have just entered into their new career. They will be delighted, for no one loves shop conversation so much as those who are only on the doorstep of it." This is a key possibly to the average British conversation.

***

Now it seems that Mr. James Van Alen will go to South Africa, or, rather, he has volunteered his services. Mr. Van Alen offered some time ago to equip an ambulance and go to the front, but his offer was refused. Mr. Van Alen married the eldest daughter of Mrs. Astor. His wife has been dead some years, and he has taken up his residence in England, living in the neighborhood of the Quorn Hunt. He has two daughters, one of whom made her début at Newport some years ago, and a son. He is a man of independent means, and of recent years, ever since he was disappointed about his appointment as Minister to Italy, he has lived in England, coming to this country very seldom. His Newport house has not been opened in some seasons.

***

The Knickerbocker Whist Club is one of the forms of entertainment which has had a great success this Winter. It meets every fortnight at the houses of different members. At the last meeting at the residence of Col. Chisolm and his stepdaughter, Mrs. Lester del Garcia, Mrs. George Schieffelin won the first prize and Col. Horace Brookes the second. The booby prize was won by Mr. Frederick Wombwell.

***

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs gives a luncheon to-day. She will sail for Europe in February. She will join her sister, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., at Nice.

***

Mrs. Astor will give a dinner on Saturday, Feb. 10. This will be the second in the series, the first of which was given before Christmas. Mrs. William Duer will give a large dinner on Thursday, Jan. 25.

***

The theatre has been well patronized by society this past week. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills were at the première of "Brother Officers," and on another evening at the same theatre were Mrs. Coudert-Brokaw, Miss Morrison, Mr. Richard Fay, Bradley Strong, and Mr. and Mrs. N. L. McCready. Mr. and Mrs. William Hazard were at "The Degenerates" on Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. George Gould and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Cowdin. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish had a party at the same play during the week. Mrs. John R. Drexel has been quite a constant attendant at the opera. She was in the stalls on Wednesday evening, and in her box on Friday.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barclay were to have given a large house party for the sleighing at Lenox this week, but the party was abandoned on account of the thaw. It is now quite the fashion to open a country house from Friday to Monday, and there are yet some people remaining in the country all Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stevens are still at Westbury, where they have been having house parties, and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Kernochan and Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensselaer Kennedy are also at their country seats. Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt have been having a succession of house parties at Biltmore, and are now entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Rawlins Cottenet. Mr. and Mrs. George Gould entertain over Sunday at Georgian Court, Lakewood.

***

The Thursday Evening Club will hold a meeting next Thursday at the residence of Mrs. E. H. Harriman. Mr. Rudolph Ernest Gunther will continue his series of musical teas every fortnight. The description of the last and the names of the guests were published yesterday.

***

The Misses Livingston and Mr. Howland Pell are among the latest arrivals at St. Augustine, Fla. Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Iselin and the Vicomte de Garets are among the guests at the Lakewood, at Lakewood.

***

Mrs. George Burroughs Torrey gave a handsome luncheon to twenty ladies in Mr. Torrey's studio, at 391 Fifth Avenue, on Saturday afternoon. The guests were seated at a round table, decorated with a large centrepiece of maidenhair ferns. The luncheon was served by Delmonico. The guests were the Baroness d'Alexandry of Paris, Mrs. Henry Burnett, Mrs. H. B. Gilbert, Mrs. F. Vivanti, Mrs. Guggenheimer of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. W. V. Brokaw, Mrs. Edward Brandus, Mrs. James Struthers, Mrs. Haigh, Mrs. A. N. Waterhouse of Philadelphia, Mrs. James Martin, Mrs. R. P. Lounsbury, Mrs. E. M. Culver, and Mrs. John Chester Eno.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mrs. J. Wechsler last week gave a large luncheon for married and young people.

The Freundschaft Club gave an excellent vaudeville performance last evening, which was followed by dancing.

Mrs. Edward L. Crabbe and the Misses Crabbe of 291 Riverside Drive were at home Thursday, Jan. 18, and will receive again next Thursday.

The Lone Star Boat Club gave some private theatricals last night at Sherry's, which were followed by a dance. It was largely attended.

The death of Miss Sophie Kohn, a few weeks ago, has brought sorrow into many homes. Her friends were legion, and her loss is much lamented.

The Harmony Club on Sunday evening, Jan. 28, will give a beefsteak supper at 7 o'clock. This will be followed by a stag vaudeville entertainment.

Mrs. Lawrence Phelps Tower and Miss Tower will be at home informally at their residence, 23 East Sixty-first Street, Monday afternoons until Lent.

Mrs. George Burroughs Torrey is again keeping her days "at home," and will receive her friends on Mondays at Mr. Torrey's studio, 391 Fifth Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Danforth will take apartments at the Lorraine, Forty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, on the completion of that building. In the meantime they will remain at the Astoria.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Nathan on the birth of a son; also to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse I. Straus on the birth of a son. Mrs. Nathan and Mrs. Straus are sisters-in-law.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Baumann of 51 West Eighty-ninth Street have issued cards for the forthcoming wedding of their daughter Lillie to Mr. Max Englander of this city. The event will take place Monday evening next at Sherry's.

The engagement is announced of Mr. Jules Levy of this city and Miss Goldsaw of Cleveland. The engagement of Miss Edna Falk and Mr. Charles Levy is announced; also that of Mr. Edward Siesel and Miss Estelle Fox, and of Mr. Miller and Miss Kaufman.

Mrs. Louis Stern has organized a dancing class. Mrs. George Stern of 161 West Eighty-sixth Street gave a reception yesterday afternoon, and will give a second next Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Charles Blum has issued cards for receptions on the fourth Tuesdays of January and February.

Miss Estelle Rosenshine of 49 West Fifty-seventh Street was tendered a surprise party by Miss Gumbirer, who conceived the idea, and her friends on Thursday evening last. Miss Rosenshine was kept in ignorance of the affair, as were also her parents, and the supper, music, and all accessories were supplied by her guests.

At Mrs. Egbert Guernsey's apartments, the Madrid, Central Park South, a number of men and women meet every Thursday morning to listen to Mme. Le Plongeon's (Lady Coqueville's) illustrated lectures on the famous ruins of Yucatan. Her subject Thursday morning last was life at Uxmal, where Dr. and Mme. Le Plongeon spent much time, while exploring Yucatan.

Mrs. Joseph Herzig of 1,190 Madison Avenue will be at home on Thursday next, and on Feb. 1 and 15 Mrs. William I. Spiegelberg, 134 West Seventy-eighth Street, receives on Fridays in January, and Mrs. Arnold Stiefel of 33 East Sixtieth Street has sent out cards for the fourth Saturday in January and February. Mrs. J. Guy Seligman, formerly Miss Hilda de Pinna, is giving a series of receptions at her home, 2,314 Broadway, on the first and second Thursdays of the month during the season.

Mrs. J. Wittenberg was the chief organizer of a dinner dance and some amateur theatricals which took place at Sherry's on Thursday night last. Others who aided Mrs. Wittenberg were Mrs. C. D. Bernheimer, Mrs. J. Weil, and Mrs. J. Rothschild. Some of those taking part in the theatricals were Miss Rothschild, Mrs. J. Weil, Miss Moses, and the Messrs. C. Banner, W. Cahn, M. Frank, and Mr. Goldmark. The play selected was "The Arabian Nights," and it was one of the best amateur performances seen this season. Miss Julia Marlowe coached the performers.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Homoeopathic Hospital of Harlem is composed of many prominent women of Harlem who have joined together to assist the hospital in its dispensary work. They will give the first of a series of progressive euchre next Monday afternoon at Wallace's Ellerslie Hall, 82 and 84 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street. They expect this season to extend large financial aid to the hospital, and every effort is being made to make this entertainment a great success. The President of the auxiliary, Mrs. Howard S. Robbins, with the officers of the society and the Entertainment Committee, of which Mrs. M. E. Chipman is the Chairman, will receive the many guests that will be present. Many handsome prizes have been given, which will be awarded to the successful players.

The tenth German Charity Ball, given under the auspices of the Bachelor Society of German leaders, Arion and Beethoven Maennerchor, will take place at the Metropolitan Opera House on Thursday, Feb. 1. In the past nine years over $80,000 have been distributed to the various German charities from the results of these balls. The officers this year are as follows: Honorary President—Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer; President—Mr. Robert C. Krammerer; Treasurer—Mr. Hubert Cillis; Corresponding Secretary—Mr. Charles L. Gunther; Recording Secretary—Mr. Fred F. A. Treuleben. The ball will be opened by Mr. Robert C. Kammerer, President, and Mrs. William Forster. The dance music is in chage of John C. Rietzel, and the promenade music by Mr. Frank, of the Twelfth Regiment Band. It is expected that not less than $10,000 will be netted as the result of this ball.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Jones of 118 West One Hundred and Nineteenth Street celebrated the betrothal of their daughter Veronica to Mr. Abe Klaremeyer on last Sunday evening. There were recitations, music, and dancing. Among those who helped to make the reception enjoyable were Mr. J. Aldrich Libbey, who rendered a few choice selections, accompanied by Mr. Monroe H. Rosenfeld. After the reception a banquet was served. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. S. Lippstadt, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Levy, Mr. and Mrs. B. Jonas, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Klarenmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cohen, Dr. and Miss B. Sortz, Mr. and Mrs. H. Schumann, Mr. and Mrs. E. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe S. Rosenfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Ury, Mr. J. B. Falk, Mr. and Mrs. J. Plass, Mr. Alfred Jonas, Miss Veronica Levy, Miss Selma Kallman, Mrs. Isidor Mayer, Miss Martha Levy, Miss Bertah Levy, Miss Hennie Jonas, Miss Beatrice Klarenmeyer, Mr. E. Winebergh, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Rosenstock.

The Theta Chapter of Alpha Theta Psi Fraternity held the first of its several dances to be given this season at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn, on Tuesday evening last. The dance was held in the banquet hall, which was decorated with palms and ferns. Dancing began at 10 o'clock and continued into the early morning. The patronesses were Mrs. Andrew McLean, Mrs. O. D. Person, and Mrs. S. A. Bergen. The committee was composed of Messrs. David J. McLean, (Chairman,) T. C. Burrows, and Charles O. Hartich. There were about seventy couples present, among whom were Miss Vandeveer of Woodhaven, Miss Bacon of Boston, Miss Mortimer, Miss Patterson, Miss Haws, Miss Slede, Miss Young, Miss Goodhue, Miss Harding, Miss McLaren, Miss Steiner, Miss McLean, Miss Campbell, Miss Frost, Miss Kirkus, Miss Slater, Miss Taylor, Miss E. E. Smith, the Misses Miller, Miss Bolinger, and Mrs. John B. Clark. From New York there were present Miss Evelyn Westbrook, Miss B. Taylor, Mr. G. De Graw Borden, and C. W. Townsley. From Flatbush Miss Stott, Miss Holmes, Miss Moore, Miss Fackenthal, Miss C. Smith, and Messrs. German, Yates, Day, Vanderpool, Bartendale, and Fackenthal. Among the men from Brooklyn were Messrs. John B. Clark, A. Hardich, G. Person, C. Valentine, W. Slater, S. Milne, W. Dodworth, D. McLean, C. Hartich, T. Burrows, A. Ball, W. Grant, F. Taylor, L. Matthews, G. Whitlock, J. McLaren, J. Mason, H. Smith, J. MacDonald, C. Porter, D. Frost, and Messrs. T. C. Simonton and A. P. Gray from Paterson, N. J.

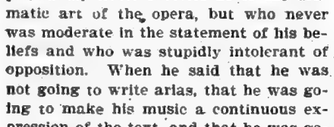
The Students gave the third dance of their eleventh season at the Hotel Majestic Thursday evening. The dance took place in the drawing room suite on the first floor. There the guests were received by the patronesses, Mrs. Cord Meyer, Mrs. Lucy Tate Griffith, Mrs. Archibald Turner, Mrs. Stephen D. Pinckney, Mrs. Theodore Suro, Mrs. Henry Aplington, and Mrs. Delancey Walbridge. The usual elaborate supper was served. Among the members of the organization are Miss Maud Becker, Mr.

Themes and Topics
In the Musical World

Much is said of the loss of the secrets of the old Italian school of singing, and the blame for the prevalence of bad vocal style is usually laid upon the shoulders of Wagner This is not altogether unjust, nor is it wholly just. Wagner did not desire bad singing; but he began his work as a writer of music dramas with theories as to the relative places of singing and acting which frightened the old-fashioned opera singers away from him. He held that it was more important for the truth of operatic representation that the acting should be good than that the singing should be simply pretty. He did not see any possibility of performing his works if the performers were to stand down by the footlights and sing without any consideration of the histrionic features of the scene. This was one of the old-fashioned ways. The action was almost wholly confined to the passages of recitative or to the orchestral descriptions. Whenever a singer had an aria to sing he stood still. The teachers taught that it was unfavorable to beautiful delivery to move about, and the whole structure of the drama underlying the opera was sacrificed to the production of a beautiful tone and to the achievement of vocal feats. This was the state of affairs on the Italian stage just before Wagner's advent.

It was to all this that Wagner raised the violent opposition of a man who had profoundly noble theories as to the dramatic art of the opera, but who never was moderate in the statement of his beliefs and who was stupidly intolerant of opposition. When he said that he was not going to write arias, that he was going to make his music a continuous expression of the text, and that he was going to demand of the singer that he be also, and primarily, an actor, he virtually closed the doors of his temple of art to all the great singers of the world in his day. Therefore, in order to get his works performed, he had to take such material as he could get and mold it to his purposes. I have never been able to find in the writings of Wagner any expression of opposition to pure beauty in singing on its own account. He opposed only the customs of the old stage, which sacrificed everything dramatic to the display of the beauty of the voice.

He demanded that the voice be regarded as a means, not an end. That he wrote passages unfavorable to the voice is perfectly true, but it is also true of almost every other opera composer who ever lived. The strain of singing the chief parts in the Wagner dramas is no greater than that of singing those in the Meyerbeer operas. And let me hasten to add that I do not make this assertion on my own authority, but on that of eminent singers and throat specialists. Wagner has proved over and over again in his works that he had use for the very best singing that could exist. The Wagnerian cantilena is as musical as that of Verdi or Gounod, and not a whit different in its demands for pure beauty of voice and delivery. In all operatic music there is no passage that yearns for more luscious sensuousness of tone than the duo in the second act of "Tristan und Isolde," and all singers will bear me out in the assertion that, so far as its demands on the voice are concerned, it is no more exacting than the duet between Faust and Marguerite in the garden scene. Indeed, I do not hesitate to say that there is nothing in "Oh, sink hernieder" as difficult to produce successfully as the A in this passage:



But Wagner did demand that the text should be respected, and thereby he opened up a large field of difficulties to the mere singers, who had cared little for the words so long as they made pretty sounds. The school of singing actors whom he was forced to rear for the presentation of his works contained few pupils who had been well grounded in the principles of the art of singing. The result was inevitable. They sang Wagner badly, just as they would have sung any one else badly; and with this aggravation of their failings—that they were forced to push to the front just the weakest part of their style. This was their ignorance of the method of reconciling perfect diction (which their master demanded) with a good voice production. A poor singer has difficulties with certain vowel sounds. He cannot sing this tone with that vowel or that tone with this one. We all recall the familiar tale of the indolent Brignoli, who, finding that he could sing certain notes best with the open sound of "a" and others best with the long "i" of Continental tongues, was wont to make the text of his arias at times consist entirely of the words, "Ah, si, Ah, si." If a singer with such a lovely voice as that of Brignoli resorted to such tricks, what must have been the struggles of the unschooled Wagner singers of the early period, who found themselves compelled by the inexorable laws of Baireuth to enunciate the text at no matter what cost and to perform the proper actions, too?

With one or two exceptions they sang abominably, and there grew up a tradition that this was the way to sing the music of Wagner. Wagner himself did not wish to have it so sung. If he could have found singers who could act, enunciate the text, and reveal to the auditors the full wealth of his melodies, he would have been overjoyed. But failing to get these, he was glad to have people who could at least indicate the melodies, while they gave themselves up to a complete embodiment of the composer's thought. It is quite true, therefore, that in a measure Wagner is responsible for the bad singing that used to be inseparable from the performances of his dramas. He wrote dramas that the old-fashioned singers would not sing and the new-fashioned could not. Then arose the belief that the Italian was the only good singer and the German was the unfailingly bad one. Of course, this was untrue. There were good German singers even in the early Wagnerian days. And these singers were a constant living proof of the contention which has been made in these columns for the last thirteen years that Wagner was neither the direct cause of bad singing nor any excuse for it. In what sense he was a cause of it has just been set forth. That in itself goes to show that an unhappy combination of circumstances was the only reason why the music of Wagner should ever have been sung badly, or pronounced unfit to sing. In looking over my scrapbooks I find that in the season of 1889, when there was some especially bad singing in the Metropolitan Opera House, I wrote this:

"Signor Saccharini might sing the music of Siegfried without a single error in method or vocal style and yet fail to move an audience as much as Herr Wachsend, who outraged his glottis with every note and constructed his phrases with the delicacy of a musical blacksmith. But because Herr Wachsend is so fine a dramatic performer we are not to forget that at every appearance he strews the stage with the disjecta membra of the lyric art. Singing is a very important part of the opera, even of the Wagner music drama. 'Nothung! Nothung! neidliches Schwert,' can be sung strictly in tune and with the aid of all the resources of the most perfect vocal method without the sacrifice of one shade of its magnificent dramatic power. And people who pay for the expensive privilege of listening to operatic performances have a perfect right to demand that it shall be."

Friends, well-meaning friends, used to come and reason with me when I wrote in that strain in those days. The same friends now say, "Of course. No one ever thought anything else." That is because they have lived to be convinced that the laws of beauty in singing are the same yesterday, to-day, and forever; that the principles by which Caffarelli and Farinelli and Senesino were guided when they did the wonderful things recorded of them are the same as those by which Jean de Reszke is guided when he sings Tristan and Lehmann when she sings Isolde and Nordica when she sings Brünnhilde. And singers like these have lived to prove that Wagner is no more difficult to sing, no more taxing on the voice, than any other great master of the lyric stage. For many years I have never lost an opportunity of discussing the technics of singing with the acknowledged masters of it, for I am a firm believer in the wisdom of a certain injunction of Brander Matthews: "If it chance that artists fall to talking about their art, it is the critic's place to listen, that he may pick up a little useful knowledge." It was never my good fortune to talk on this subject with Mme. Patti, but I have had hours upon hours of talk about vocal technics with such singers as Mme. Sembrich, Mme. Melba, Mme. Nordica, Mme. Eames, Campanini, Ffrangcon-Davies, the de Reszkes, Maurel, and their kind. Now, it is my firm conviction that these people know their business a great deal better than I know it. Sitting in my seat in the Opera House I can tell when they produce the correct result, but they can teach me A B C of how to do it. Therefore I take some pleasure and not a little pride in saying that I have yet to find one whose ideas on the subject are not the same as my own. In the details of method there are many differences among singers. As to the objects to be aimed at there are none. As to the possibilities of singing there is a general accord. As to the great fundamental laws of singing all are agreed. Even M. Ernest Van Dyck, who does not produce the results for which the true method seeks, says that there is only one vocal method, and that this way is the one way for all music.

Singers like the de Reszkes and Lehmann and Nordica have solved the problem which poor Wagner found insoluble in his day. They sing Wagner's music beautifully; they enunciate the text; they do justice to the dramatic intentions of the composer. Why? Because they possess the old schooling, the schooling which is the glory of Mme. Sembrich's art when she sings for us Norina and Susanna and Lucia, which is the secret of the liquid flow of Mme. Melba's voice when she carols for us the heartless frippery of "Bel raggio."

Wagner demanded of the singing actor simply what the great masters of the old school of Italian singing had taught, but which had been permitted to fall partly into desuetude through the evil influences of the later Neapolitan school of opera composers. Does any one suppose that Porpora taught the art of producing a beautiful tone on only one or two vowel sounds? Does any one believe that he did not teach the enunciation of the consonants? Such a thing is inconceivable to those acquainted with the history of the singers taught by the masters of whom I have selected him as a type. The operas by the composers of the early period give the lie to all such accusations. The works of Caccini, Monteverde, and Carissimi are in themselves a sufficient refutation of such a charge, were it brought. The operas of Handel, Scarlatti, and Hasse were even more exacting in their requirements, yet it was in the time of these composers that the most remarkable singers flourished. This was the period of the wonderful men singers already named and of such women as Faustina and Cuzzoni.

The principles of singing as understood by these artists are those to which the modern de Reszkes and Sembrich and Lehmann and the others proclaim allegiance. They are the principles which govern the singing of Wagner and of Verdi and of Gounod alike. But they are in danger of being thrown into obscurity at the present time by the theories of certain Wagnerian interpreters, of whom the chief in this matter is M. van Dyck, and the precepts of the narrow-minded and, I must add, ignorant creatures who now control the destinies of Baireuth. Cosima and Siegfried Wagner are doing more to justify the charge of hostility to good singing in the Wagner camp than the lamented composer did in the whole of his polemics and ill-phrased diatribes against his predecessors.

M. van Dyck, a man of high intelligence and independence of thought, has devised his own plan of reading the Wagnerian music. It is not unlikely that he is embittered by the success of Jean de Reszke, who sings the rôles in a manner radically opposed to that which is taught by M. van Dyck; and perhaps this feeling carries the utterances of the Belgian tenor a little beyond his beliefs. But at the bottom M. van Dyck is right. He holds that there should be a distinct difference between the styles of the recitative and the cantilena in the Wagnerian drama. This is undeniable. One has only to examine the scores of the works to see that the Belgian speaks the truth. The recitative is to be sung in a manner as near that of conversation as is consistent with the fundamental difference between song and speech. The illusion of conversation should be achieved in the Wagnerian recitative, and it can be. But when M. van Dyck tells us, as he does in his practice, that the recitative should not be sung at all, but cackled in a dry and tuneless staccato, without due regard to the pitch of the notes which Wagner has written, then we must cease to agree with him. The boundary line between music and the unmusical should not be crossed. M. Jean de Reszke errs in the other direction. He sings legato all the time, and that also is false to the thought of Wagner. And it is this sacrifice of the ruggedness of the true Wagnerian recitative to pure beauty of tone which makes M. de Reszke's Tristan in one or two places and his Siegfried in more than one or two fall below the possible measure of eloquence. But it is far better to sing than to shout Wagner. It is nearer to Wagner's purpose that we should hear the tones as he wrote them, even if they are now and then a little too sweet, than that we should not hear them at all except when a passage comes which the singer interprets as intended to be a bit of cantilena. And then what happens? The tired throat refuses to sustain the tones, and false intonation is the result. Hear M. van Dyck sing "Nun weisst du, fragende Frau."

This brittle staccato, delivered in a hard, dry voice, without a vestige of forward resonance, with the nasal passages closed, and the muscles of the throat all strained, has no place in vocal art and has no business on the operatic stage. Young singers who are led into the attempt to imitate it will seriously injure their voices. And it is neither beautiful nor eloquent. And it is unnecessary. The Wagnerian recitative can be honestly treated with the resources of the old vocal art, and the dramatic purposes of the composer can be carried out without a sacrifice of voice or method. There is a light, conversational style of recitation in many of the older Italian operas. There is also a tragic and intense declamation in many of them and in some of the oratorios. The best training for the delivery of these is the old Italian school, and that, too, is the best training for the delivery of the recitative of Wagner. There is nothing in the music of Wagner that demands the application of new laws to singing either in recitative or cantilena. The style of the music is new, but so was that of Meyerbeer or that of Verdi at one time. And if you wish to find something which was not only novel but alarming in its day, examine the Weber air, "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster." It takes a dramatic soprano with a colorature education to sing that properly.

At Baireuth the eminent Cosima and her "Wonniges Kind" are teaching that the whole music of Wagner, cantilena and all, should be sung in the brittle staccato. These distinguished reformers of the reformer of the musical drama are asking tenors to sing "Am stillen Heerd" and "Morgenlich leuchtend" in "Die Meistersinger" in the same style as M. van Dyck sings the prattle of Loge. No wonder that the opponents of Wagner say that his works are ruinous to the voice, and that they cannot be sung with the old method. There is only one way to sing, so far as the production of the tones is concerned; and that is as the old masters sang and taught. The laws which they laid down, though couched in a poor terminology, were the fundamental laws of song. The same laws are to be observed to-day. The same laws are observed by the best singers. We cannot improve on the method of such a singer as Marcella Sembrich. Whenever she appears on the stage she preaches an eloquent sermon on the art of singing. And it is no great difficulty to trace the teachings which she reveals back to their musical origin. She herself declares that she owes her knowledge to the instruction of Lamperti. No doubt it was that eminent teacher who gave her the rudiments of singing and prevented her in her vocal youth from falling into bad habits. But I am inclined to think that her own high skill as a musician had more than he to do with the full development of her mastery of her art. She sings according to the laws of nature, and to do this was the aim of the whole Italian school. Perhaps later I may have something to say about these laws. At present I am concerned only in calling the reader's attention to the truth that there is only one right way to sing, and that the so-called Wagnerian school is an illusion, a delusion, and a snare.

W. J. HENDERSON.

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR THE WEEK

SUNDAY—Popular concert, Metropolitan Opera House, 8:15 P. M.
Arion concert, Club House, 8:15 P. M.

MONDAY—Mrs. Snelling's song recital, Mendelssohn Hall, 3 P. M.
"At the Lower Harbor" and "The Magic Melody," American Theatre, 8 P. M.
"Le Prophete," Metropolitan Opera House, 8 P. M.

TUESDAY—Perry Averill, song recital, Mendelssohn Hall, 3 P. M.
Paderewski and the Adamowski Quartet, Sherry's, 4 P. M.
Pittsburg Orchestra, Carnegie Hall, 8:15 P. M.
Kneisel Quartet, Mendelssohn Hall, 8:15 P. M.

WEDNESDAY—"Die Meistersinger," Metropolitan Opera House, 8 P. M.

THURSDAY—Mark Hambourg, piano recital, Mendelssohn Hall, 2:30 P. M.
David Bispham, song recital, Mendelssohn Hall, 8:15 P. M.
Dannreuther Quartet, Sherry's, 8:30 P. M.

FRIDAY—Philharmonic Society, Carnegie Hall, 2 P. M.
"Don Pasquale" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," Metropolitan Opera House, 7:45 P. M.

SATURDAY—"Tannhauser," Metropolitan Opera House, 2 P. M.
"Faust," Metropolitan Opera House, 8 P. M.
Philharmonic Society, Carnegie Hall, 8 P. M.

THE WEEK AT THE OPERA.

The programme for the week at the Metropolitan Opera House is as follows: Monday, "Le Prophète," with the same cast as before; Wednesday, "Die Meistersinger," in German, Mmes. Eames and Schumann-Heink and Messrs. Van Rooy, Dippel, Bertram, Friedrichs, and Muhlmann; Friday, "Don Pasquale" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," with the same casts as before; Saturday afternoon, "Tannhäuser," with the same cast as before, except that Mme. Ternina is announced to appear as Elizabeth and Mr. Bertram will be the Wolfram; Saturday evening, "Faust," with Mme. Eames as Marguerite, Mme. Mantelli as Siebel, M. Saleza as Faust, M. Ocellier as Valentin, and Mr. Pringle as Mephistopheles.

THE SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT.

The programme for this evening's weekly concert at the Metropolitan Opera House is as follows:

Overture, "Rienzi" ..... Wagner
Es ist Genug, "Elijah" ..... Mendelssohn
Herr Van Rooy.
Vedrai Carino, "Don Giovanni" ..... Mozart
Mlle. Zelie de Lussan.
Monologue from "Falstaff" ..... Verdi
Sig. Campanari.
Aria, "Sigurd" ..... Reyer
M. Saleza.
"Wie Nahte Mir Der Schlummer," "Der Freischuetz" ..... Weber
Mme. Gadski.
Valse ..... Rubinstein
"There is a Green Hill Far Away" ..... Gounod
Mlle. Zelie de Lussan.
"Antwort auf die Frage Eines Maedchen ..... Haydn
"An die Musik" ..... Schubert
"Sei mir gegruent" ..... Schubert
Herr Van Rooy.
"Du bist die Ruh" ..... Schubert
"Erlkoenig" ..... Schubert
Mme. Gadski.
Aria, "L'Africaine" ..... Meyerbeer
M. Saleza.
Vorspiel, "Die Meistersinger" ..... Wagner

MRS. SNELLING'S SONG RECITAL.

Mrs. Grenville Snelling will give a song recital to-morrow afternoon at Mendelssohn Hall. The programme:

Oboe solo, introduction, andante, et polonaise..Colin
M. Georges Longy.
Priggioniera Abbandonata (Aria from "Adriano")..... Galuppi, 1706-1785
Mrs. Grenville Snelling.
Nell ..... Faure
Au Cimetiere ..... Faure
Mandoline ..... Faure
Mrs. Snelling.
"Nymphs and Shepherds" ..... Purcell
"The Roses Are Dead" ..... Arthur Foote
Mrs. Snelling.
Le Berger ..... Barthe
Couvre-Feu ..... Barthe
Scherzo ..... Barthe
M. Longy.
Air—"Il m'aime! Espoir charmant" ("Les Dragons de Villars") ..... Maillart
Mrs. Snelling
"Wir Glaenzt der Helle Mond" ..... Sinding
"Mir Glaenzen Die Augen" ..... Sinding
"Widgenlied" ..... Sinding
Mrs. Snelling.
Bergerette: Louis XVI. "Par un Matin." ..... Chansons Populaires: "Pierre et sa Mie," "Le Joli Tambour."
Mrs. Snelling.
Agnus Dei, with oboe and organ obligato...Bizet
Mrs. Snelling and M. Longy.

THE PADEREWSKI-ADAMOWSKI RECITAL.

The programme for the Paderewski-Adamowski recital to be given at Sherry's on Tuesday afternoon at 4 P. M.:

Quartet for strings in F Major, Op. 10. ..... R. Statkowski
Adamowski Quartet.
Soli for piano—
Ballade, Nocturne, D flat, Op. 57, Etude ..... Chopin
Cracovienne ..... Paderewski
Rhapsodie ..... Liszt
Mr. Paderewski.
Quartet for piano and strings ..... Schumann
Mr. Paderewski and Adamowski Quartet.

PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA CONCERT.

The first concert in New York by the Pittsburg Orchestra of seventy players, Victor Herbert, conductor, will be given in Carnegie Hall Tuesday evening, Jan. 23, at 8:15 o'clock. The dignified spirit which marks every effort of this organization is seen in the quality of the programme printed below. Miss Marie Brema, the soloist, will make her first appearance in New York this season on this occasion. The orchestra will give a second concert in Carnegie Hall on the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 27, when Miss Sara Anderson, soprano, will be the soloist. Next Tuesday evening's programme is as follows:

Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Op. 9..Berlioz
"Air de Telaire," "Menuet Chante," from the opera "Castor et Pollux" ..... Rameau
Miss Brema.
Symphony No. 5, in E minor, Op. 64.. Tschaikowsky
Intermission of fifteen minutes.
Mephisto waltz, (after Lenau) ..... Liszt
"Six Chansons a Danser" ..... Alfred Bruneau
Le Menuet. La Gavotte. La Bourée.
La Pavane. La Sarabande. Le Passe-Pied.
(First time in New York.)
Miss Brema.
Vorspiel, "Die Meistersinger" ..... Wagner

MR. BISPHAM'S REQUEST RECITAL.

After carefully canvassing and counting the requests received, Mr. Bispham thinks the following have been most frequently asked for and will consequently be the programme for his recital in Mendelssohn Hall next Thursday evening:

"Adelaide" ..... Beethoven
"Die Ehre Gottes" ..... Beethoven
"Wie bist du meine Koenigen" ..... Brahms
"Meine Liebe ist grun" ..... Brahms
"Widmung" ..... Schumann
"Die Lotosblume" ..... Schumann
"Fruhlingsnacht" ..... Schumann
"Du bist die Ruh" ..... Schubert
"Der Erlkonig" ..... Schubert
"Im Herbst" ..... Franz
"Ein Ton" ..... Cornelius
"Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt" ...Tschaikowsky
"Ich liebe dich" ..... Grieg
"Who is Sylvia?" ..... Schubert
"Myself When Young" ..... Liza Lehmann
"Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes" ..... Old English
"Danny Deever" ..... Damrosch

THE DANNREUTHER QUARTET.

The Dannreuther Quartet's programme for Thursday evening at 8:30 at Sherry's is as follows:

Quartet, Op. 50, No. 6, in D major.....Haydn
Songs.—Mr. Frederic Howard.
Quartet, Op. 105, in A flat major.....Dvorak
Songs.—Mr. Frederic Howard.
Quintet, Op. 34, in F minor, for pianoforte, two violins, viola, and violoncello.....Brahms
Mr. Felix Fox of Boston at the piano.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

The fourth rehearsal and concert of the Philharmonic Society will take place at Carnegie Hall on Friday afternoon and Saturday night. The programme:

Overture, "The Flying Dutchman" ..... Wagner
"Ganymed," poem by Goethe, for contralto and orchestra ..... Louis V. Saar
First Time.
Mme. Schumann-Heink.
Symphony, No. 4, B flat major, Op. 60..Beethoven
Songs. "Der Kreuzzug" ..... Schubert
"Der arme Peter" ..... Schumann
"Er ist gekommen" ..... Robert Franz
Mme. Schumann-Heink.
Piano accompaniment, Mr. Emil Paur.
Overture, "Prometheus Bound," Op. 38..... Goldmark

As Mme. Schumann-Heink's first number is by a resident composer, a few words about him may be interesting. Louis V. Saar, born in 1868 at Rotterdam, in the Netherlands, attended the Gymnasium (College) at Strassburg, Alsace, until 1885, studied music in Munich with Rheinberger, graduated as composer and pianist in 1889, on which occasion he was publicly mentioned for conspicuous work in all branches. On the programmes of the Munich Academy of Music of that day may be found among other works of Saar one symphony, two overtures, one piano quartet, one cantata for soli, choir, and orchestra. From Munich Saar went to Vienna, with special recommendations to Johannes Brahms, and, although not receiving instruction from him, he nevertheless enjoyed personal contact with the master. Devoting himself to composition and following Brahms's advice to hear much, Saar during the years 1890 to 1892 lived alternately in Berlin, Vienna, Leipsic, and Munich. In 1891 he received the Mendelssohn scholarship for a piano suite and songs, and in 1892 the Vienna Tonkuenstlerpreis for mixed quartets with piano.

Since 1892 Saar has been living here as teacher and composer. His many songs first received extensive commendation. In June, 1899, he received, in Boston, the first prize for "Variations and Fugue." Of Saar's larger works, written in the past few months, may be mentioned, besides the just-completed "Ganymed," a secular ode for solo, male chorus, and orchestra, a mixed double choir with orchestra, "Wechselgesang," and many piano pieces, songs, and duets. Saar's works have been published here and abroad.

MR. AVERILL'S SONG RECITAL.

Perry Averill will give a song recital at Mendelssohn Hall on Tuesday at 3 P. M. The programme:

"Adelaide" ..... Beethoven
"Elland," song cycle ..... Von Fielitz
Piano solo waltz caprice, "Man Lebt Nur Einmal" ..... Strauss-Tausig
"The Stars" ..... McCracken-Purdy
Song from Omar Khayyam ..... Victor Harris
"The Captive Sunbeam" ..... Cary
"I Wait for Thee" ..... Fisher
"Le Portrait" ..... Goring-Thomas
"L'Amour et le Bonheur" ..... Goring-Thomas
"Si j'etais Roi ..... Goring-Thomas
Violin Solos—
Air from D major suite ..... Bach
Perpetuum Mobile ..... Ries
Scherzo Tarantelle ..... Wieniawski
Miss Anna Otten.
"Der Traum" ..... Rubinstein
"Wiegenlied" ..... Grieg
"Flina's Shoes" ..... Bungert
Scenes from "Le Luthier de Crémone (with violin obbligato) ..... Rubay
Oh! Carol ..... Costa

MR. HAMBOURG'S RECITALS.

After a series of successes in most of the large American cities as far west as Chicago, Mark Hambourg, the eminent young Russian pianist, will give two New York recitals at Mendelssohn Hall on the afternoons of Thursday, Jan. 25, and Wednesday, Jan. 31. The programme for the first recital, next Thursday, will be:

Alceste ..... Gluck-Saint Saens
Fantasia, Op. 17 ..... R. Schumann
Nocturne ..... Chopin
Two preludes ..... Chopin
Sonata, B flat minor, Op. 35 ..... Chopin
Intermezzo in octaves ..... Leschitzky
Chanson Triste ..... Tschaikowsky
Walther's Preislied from "Meistersinger" ..... Wagner-Schutt
Barcarolle ..... Rubinstein
Waltz Allemand ..... Rubinstein

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

The third evening concert in the series given by the Kneisel Quartet will take place in Mendelssohn Hall on Tuesday evening. The programme will include Haydn's String Quartet in D, (Opus 76, No. 5;) Beethoven's in E minor, (Opus 59, No. 2,) and Fauré's Sonata for violin and pianoforte, played by Mr. Kneisel and Mme. Antoinette Szumowska-Adamowski of Boston. The Beethoven Quartet is the second of a set of three that he published in January, 1808, and dedicated to his friend, Count Rasoumoffsky, wherefore the three are generally known as "The Rasoumoffsky Quartets." They are generally deemed to be among the most vigorous and characteristically beautiful of Beethoven's works in this form. Mendelssohn was accustomed to say that the first of this set and the one in F minor, Opus 95, were the "most Beethovenish of all Beethoven's works." Count Rasoumoffsky was a Russian nobleman, for many years Ambassador to the Imperial Court at Vienna; he was an enthusiastic amateur of music, and himself a player of the second violin in his famous quartet led by Schuppanzigh. The closeness of Beethoven's relations to him is indicated by the fact that three of his greatest works are dedicated to him—besides this set of quartets, the Fifth and Pastoral Symphonies, (jointly with Prince Lobkowitz.) The quartets were written in 1806, a time when Vienna and the neighboring country were overrun by the French Army. Beethoven spent the Summer of that year at the country houses of the Count of Brunswick in Hungary and of Prince Lichnowsky in Silesia. There he composed his Sonata in F, (called the "Appassionata,") and at about the same time, besides the Quartets, the pianoforte concerto in G, the Fourth Symphony, and the thirty-two variations in C minor for pianoforte. Out of compliment to the friend to whom the Quartets are dedicated, Beethoven used a Russian theme in the first of the set and another in the second. That in the second, to be heard on Tuesday, is made the subject of the Fugato forming the trio ("Maggiore") of the second movement.

Gabriel Urbain Fauré, whose sonata for violin and pianoforte is to be played at the concert; has won his place among the most prominent of French composers, though his music has made slow headway outside his native land. Some of his songs are not unfamiliar, and this sonata has been publicly played in New York. It was published in 1878. M. Fauré is about fifty years old, and was a pupil of Saint-Saëns; he is a successor of that master as organist of the Madeleine in Paris. His most important compositions include a symphony, a suite for orchestra, a requiem, and other choral works, a violin concerto, and a little chamber music.

NOTES OF MUSIC.

Mme. Marcella Sembrich has been engaged as the principal soloist of the Cincinnati Musical Festival, to be held during the second week of May. She will be heard for the first time in this country in Brahms's "Requiem," in the vocal part of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and in concert numbers.

The sale of seats for the gala concert to be given at Carnegie Hall Tuesday evening, Feb. 6, in aid of the Dewey Arch Fund, will begin at Tyson's and the box office of Carnegie Hall Monday morning, Jan. 22. The interest manifested in the concert is very great, and present indications are that the house will be crowded. Admiral Dewey and Mrs. Dewey are expected to arrive in New York from Washington on Feb. 6, and will be the guests of the committee at the Waldorf-Astoria. Gov. and Mrs. Roosevelt have promised to be present, and the Governor will deliver a short address at the end of the first part. For Damrosch's "Manila Te Deum" sixteen of New York's most able solo singers have kindly volunteered their services for the ensemble numbers. Their names, headed by Mme. Gadski, are as follows: Soprano, Mme. Gadski, Miss Natalie Dunn, Miss Mary H. Mansfield, Miss Eva Gardner Coleman; alto, Miss Horlocker, Miss Belle Newport, Miss Carrie Bradwell; tenor, Evan Williams, E. Ellsworth Giles, George William Jenkins; bass, Allan Walker, Gwilym Miles, Herbert Witherspoon. Mme. Nordica will sing the Inflammatus from Rossini's "Stabat Mater," and Mme. Gadski the aria, "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster," from Weber's "Oberon." M. Edouard de Reszke's solo is to be announced later. Admiral Dewey and Gov. Roosevelt are to arrive at 8:20 sharp, and at 8:30 punctually the concert will begin.

The opera répertoire for this week at the Germania Theatre is as follows: Tuesday, Jan. 23, Weber's opera "Der Freischütz;" first appearance of the prima donna, Fräulein Martha Hofacker, and the tenor, Herr Wilhelm Kanten. The same opera will be repeated on Friday night. On Wednesday, Jan. 24, and Saturday night, Mme. Moran Olden and Herr Julius Perroti appear again in "Il Trovatore."

Five high noon subscription recitals are announced by Victor Thrane, to be given at Sherry's each successive Tuesday from Feb. 6 to March 6, inclusive. The celebrated instrumentalists Alexandre Petschnikoff, Mark Hambourg, Leonora Jackson, and Elsa Ruegger, assisted by Mme. Frances Saville and other distinguished artists, will contribute to especially arranged programmes, which will be made up for the most part of solos and ensemble numbers not before presented in New York by these artists.

Mr. Anton Van Rooy, the famous baritone, announces a song recital, to be held at Mendelssohn Hall on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 15, on which occasion he will be assisted by Mr. H. H. Wetzler.

"AT THE LOWER HARBOR."

A New Opera to be Produced by the Castle Square Company.

"At the Lower Harbor," ("A Basso Porto,") a grand opera in three acts, by Niccola Spinelli, will be presented in conjunction with "The Magic Melody; or, Fortunio's Song," a dainty operetta by Offenbach, at the American Theatre next Monday, Jan. 22, on which date the Castle Square Opera Company will celebrate its six hundred and fiftieth performance of opera in English in this city. The scenes of Spinelli's opera are laid in Naples; the period is that of the early sixties. The first act shows an open market place near the quays; the second, the interior of an inn frequented by sailors, laborers, and fishermen, and other members of the Cammorristi, a society formed by the lowest classes of Neapolitans to plot against the Government. The third act, which is only eight minutes in duration, displays the market place on the evening of the same day. The action of the opera transpires in six hours.

Eighteen years prior to the opening of the opera, Maria, a woman of the people, has been betrayed and abandoned by Cicillo, a member of the Cammorristi. Maria falsely accuses her rival, Carmela, and encompasses her death and Cicillo's imprisonment. Meanwhile, she marries, and when the opera begins, is a widow and the mother of two children, a son, Luigine, and a daughter, Sesella. Cicillo has become a Government spy, but masquerades as one of the Cammorristi, whom he intends to deliver up to justice. Luigine is also a member of this society, and through Cicillo's influence has degenerated into a dissolute gambler. Cicillo, when reproduced by Maria, declares that it is his intention to bring about the further ruin of Luigine, and to make of Sesella, who is in love with him, a wanton. The arrest of a member of the Cammorristi and the discovery that there is a spy among them serve as the climax of the first act. Here Cicillo, by a movement of alarm, betrays himself to Maria. The curtain rises on the second act to disclose a scene of hilarious merry-making, in which Luigine figures conspicuously. Cicillo appears, orders him to depart, then denounces him as a spy. The Cammorristi rush out in search of him, and Cicillo is left with Sesella, who has come there to meet him. He urges her to go away with him, and tells Sesella that her mother's objection to their union is caused by jealousy. Their flight is interrupted by Maria. When taunted by Sesella, Maria confesses her love, and relates the story of Cicillo's perfidy. Sesella begs her mother's forgiveness, and from her Maria learns of the accusation brought against Luigine. Sesella assembles the Cammorristi, to which Maria presents the proof of Cicillo's treachery. Luigine, despite his mother's protests, is appointed to kill him. The third act relates Maria's attempt to save her boy from committing murder. She warns Cicillo of his danger, and promises to save him if he will no longer molest her children. He refuses, and tells her that the place is surrounded by soldiers who await his signal to descend upon the Cammorristi. He tries to give the signal, but Maria stifles his cry, and stabs him to death.

Spinelli's musical interpretation of this tragic tale is said to contain intense passion and great melodic beauty. The orchestration employs ingeniously the mandolin and guitar. Mr. C. H. Ritter has furnished two striking scenes, and the costumes are picturesque and appropriate. Mr. Edward P. Temple, whose staging of "La Bohème" was so signally successful, has supervised this production. Mr. Clarence West will direct an augmented orchestra. The alternating casts for "At the Lower Harbor," have been arranged, as follows: Maria, Selma Kronold and Mary Linck; Sesella, Mary Carrington; Luigine, Harry Davies; Cicillo, William G. Stewart and William Pruette; Pascale, Frank Belcher, and Picillo, Herman Brand. The "Magic Melody" will enlist the services of Misses Morgan, Quinlan, Lambert, and Messrs. Roberts, Cassavant, and Moulan.

"SIEGFRIED" IN ROME.

Wagner's Music Drama Sung in Italy and Liked.

Foreign Correspondence of The New York Times.

ROME, Dec. 30.—The much-talked of performance of Wagner's "Siegfried" at the Scala of Milan—the first performance ever afforded the great work in Italy—has at last taken place. The result has been, as was generally expected, a complete victory for the work of the great German master, and "Siegfried" is destined to make the round of the principal cities of Italy in the very near future. The death-blow seems to have been struck at last against the opponents of the Wagnerian "musik-drama" in this country, and the final victory gained by its admirers. But a few years ago the "opposition" party was in the majority; now it is in a decided minority.

The performance on Tuesday evening was an assured success. The theatre was crowded from the gallery to the pit, and the applause enthusiastic, especially during the first and third acts. The tenor, Boyatti, as Siegfried, acquitted himself magnificently, scoring a veritable triumph. Elena Bianchini-Cappelli as Brünnhilde, Gaetano Pini-Corsi as Mimi, Wilmant as Alberich, Arcangeli as Wotan, and the Bruno as Erda were one and all excellent.

The orchestra acquitted itself well under the able direction of Maestro Toscanini, although a slight roughness was noticed in one or two places, due, no doubt, to insufficient rehearsals.

All in all, the performance was one of exceedingly great importance in the Italian music world, and has created intense interest and comment throughout the peninsula.

The Roman papers have just published the list of operas and music dramas given at the principal Opera Houses of Italy on last Tuesday night, the traditional "Evening of St. Stephen," on which evening, according to a time-worn custom in this country, the first performances of the regular Winter season take place in the various theatres throughout the peninsula.

Fifty Opera Houses are mentioned on the list, and strange to say, surprising as it may be to the many anti-Wagnerians of Europe, the Baireuth master's name heads the list of composers, with representations at nine theatres of "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin," "Meistersinger," "Siegfried," and "Tristan und Isolde."

This is a significant fact and one more proof of the tremendous strides toward popularity made by Wagner's works of late years in Italy. Second on the list comes Verdi, also with nine performances, but in less important cities.

The occupant of the third place of honor is Umberto Giordano, whose "Andrea Chenier" and "Fedora," despite many adverse criticisms, have been making the round of Italy with great success this past year.

Leoncavallo's "Bohème" is running Puccini's famous work on the same subject a constantly closer race here in Italy. Hardly noticed at its first performances two years ago, when Puccini's work was making such a triumphal progress throughout Europe, it has steadily pushed itself into the front rank of modern operas by means of its sheer merit alone, and the recent clamorous receptions of the work at Rome, Paris, and other important art centres have been but a just, though a long-deferred, recognition of the work of a master whose promise, given some years ago in "I Pagliacci," has been at last worthily fulfilled. Jules Massenet is at present in Milan bringing out his newly composed "Cendrillon," or "Cinderella." The temporary presence of the great Verdi at Milan gave occasion for an affecting visit of the French composer to the famous veteran, a visit which was by Verdi with a small but select reception in honor of the younger musician.

Massenet's work seems more popular than ever in Italy, and, in addition to his "Cendrillon" and performances of the now famous "Manon Lescaut," Rome is to have an opportunity of judging his "Werther" for the first time this Winter.

Joseph Joachim and Eugen d'Albert are down among the foreign artists who are to play at the series of concerts to be given at the Academy of Santa Cecilia, in this city, during the carnival season.

The hopes entertained for securing Paderewski's assistance this year seem destined to disappointment, however. Wagner's "Meistersinger" is the great attraction at Venice just at present, as "Siegfried" is at Milan, and "Tristan und Isolde" at Trieste.

Tamagno sang in "Otello" at Milan last night, arousing the usual enthusiasm and applause. The house was packed, as it always is, when this famous "star" is on the programme. The Carelli sang the part of Desdemona, coming in for her due share of thoroughly merited applause. This singer, hardly known outside of Italy, is surely to be classed in the very first rank of latter-day artists, and it may not be very long before her fame spreads to the other side of the water.

Don Lorenzo Perosi is still at work on his new oratorio, "The Massacre of the Innocents," which is to be given in the principal cities of Italy before very long.

Still another "Cinderella," besides the famous ones of Rossini and J. Massenet, and this time by a neo-Italian composer, of whom more in my next letter.

F. M. P.

Mr. Paderewski's Earnings.

"The tremendous audience which was present at the Paderewski concert at Music Hall Monday night," says The Baltimore Sun, "has called forth much comment on the great pianist's possibilities as a wage earner.

"The Polish laborer's recompense for his digital proficiency last week was $13,000. But he will earn

Women Here and There—Their Frills and Fancies

"There are advantages in living in Brooklyn, though some people have to be educated up to the fact. I never am called to account for not meeting an appointment promptly," says one Brooklyn woman. "It is difficult to be at an appointed place anywhere in New York at a certain time unless one plans to get there ahead of time and wait, for the distances are so great that one is never sure how long it will take to get anywhere. Nevertheless, people always expect you to be prompt, that is, they expect most people to be if they are themselves, but that is not the case with me. I may be half an hour late, but I am only received with words of commiseration: 'Yes, you poor dear, I know; you have come all the way from Brooklyn.'"

***

A woman wrote two letters last week on the same evening, one to a woman and one to a man. The woman was an intimate friend, and the man she knew well and occasionally had to correspond with him upon matters more or less of a business nature, but naturally there was some difference in the tone of the letters. They were both to go off in a hurry, so the woman put them in their envelopes and, despite a bad headache, went out herself to mail them. The next day she received them both back again; there had been a slight mistake and she had put the letter for the man in the envelope directed to the woman, and vice versa. The letter which the woman received was all right. It began in the correct form of a letter to an acquaintance, "My dear Mr. Smith," and the woman who received it saw the mistake at once, and made some laughing remarks about having been made the censor of her friend's letters as she sent it back.

But the letter the man received was different. He had seen enough of the writing of the woman who sent it to recognize it as hers and he would have no reason to suppose that the letter was not intended for him. Still, the beginning was a little surprising. It ran thus:

"My dear ——: Where are you at? [The "are" underlined.] It seems much longer than two weeks since I saw you. Have been hoping all day that you'd come in to tea. Next week Dick will be away, and I shall be quite alone," &c., &c. Then the letter closed affectionately: "With love, always yours, A. B. C." the initials signed, not the full name.

The man who received that affectionate epistle does not tell just how much he read of it before he came to the conclusion that it was not for him, though he admits the beginning and the ending. The woman for whom it was intended and whom it finally reached attracted attention to herself going home in the cars by laughing aloud as she read it in the light of the impression it must have made upon the first recipient.

***

"How these actors and actresses do talk about 'creating parts,'" says a woman who writes plays. "We poor playwrights work ourselves to death making characters that fit the players like their own skins, and then they go on the stage and act like themselves, and we hear people talking with admiration about that clever woman or clever man who created the character. Well, they don't create it, that is usually done for them; but it would never do to say so."

***

Anna Held says that the most difficult word in the English language is "ridiculously." She likes to say it now, bringing out each syllable separately, but she worked a long time before she could get it correctly for one of her songs.

***

"The feeing system in this country is becoming more and more an annoyance, and spoils the pleasure of being away from home," says a woman who has many wealthy friends. "It is bad enough in hotels and restaurants, but there we have some idea of what is expected of us, and in private houses we have not. It is not only the expense, which is considerable to people of moderate means, but one hardly knows how to regulate fees, to give without being vulgarly lavish, and still to give what is expected of one. Yes, expected of one, for it is expected in many houses, and I believe it is a very bad practice. I know that in some of the houses I visit, the servants are paid lavishly, and I also know that near relatives of the family never visit them even for a few days without giving each servant in the house, even the children's nurses, at least $1. Certainly when near relatives give in that way it sets a precedent which others must follow. It is a considerable expense which will often make a visit an impossibility. I do know one house where the hostess informs her guests that her servants are not to be feed. Some people seem to think that rather strange, but for my part I consider it a very courteous and proper thing to do."

***

A club woman's directory is one of the needs of the hour. Now that every woman who belongs to a club is Mrs. Nellie Brown, Mrs. Harriet Smith, or Mrs. Elizabeth Margaret Jones it is impossible to find any of them in a case of necessity, unless Mr. Nellie Brown, Mr. Harriet Smith, or Mr. Elizabeth Margaret Jones have risen to enough prominence to be known by their wife's club friends as Tom, Dick, or Harry. In the clubwoman's directory the names Nellie, Harriet, and Elizabeth will be given with possibly the words "as married Mrs. Tom, Dick, or Harry," for the benefit of any of the husband's friends who might chance to pick up the book. But this last is not probable, for though women like to be considerate they also like to stand alone, and the directory will be an individual affair. An up-to-date burial notice for a man now gives the name, "H. P. R. Smith, husband of Grace Martha Smith, née Brown, only the extra "e" in the word "née" showing who it is who was born Brown.

***

Girls living in the suburbs of Brooklyn say that no number of burglaries will make them timid going out in the evenings now if they are properly escorted, for all the young men of the suburbs have purchased sword canes and are prepared for all emergencies. Sword canes are not inexpensive. One with a good Damascus blade will cost $17 at the least.

***

It is not strange that daughters of some of our multi-millionaires should inherit solid practical talents, and there is no reason why they should not exercise them if they only do it thoroughly. Miss Elise Farrell, heiress to millions, has become a stenographer and typewriter in her father's office. She is said to be expert, which may be truer than the statements which make all society girls beautiful. If she is and commands a good salary she is doing a good thing. There are no women who need good business heads more than women who have money. It has always been something of an ethical question as to whether women of wealth should enter the overcrowded ranks of women who are working for their own support. But it is not the women who work for good salaries who do the harm; it is the so-called charitable people who do poor work for little or nothing who crowd others to the wall.

***

In an editorial of last Sunday The Brooklyn Eagle quotes The Elmira Daily Gazette and Free Press as saying—and evidently with a favorable opinion of the suggestion—that while there are placards in the cars requesting men not to expectorate on the floor, there should also be an ordinance passed and placards printed and hung around the streets requesting women not to do the street-sweeping with their skirts. Probably the two editorial writers do not ride frequently in the cars or when they do they may be so closely engaged in reading their respective papers that they do not have time to take observations. That little sign in the car is unpleasantly suggestive, and instead of putting up others it would be well to remove it. It is only an added annoyance, for the ordinance is absolutely a dead letter. The cars are never clean, conductors never enforce the rule, and the only people who have the courage to try to have it enforced and have been known to speak to the law-breakers are some of the members of the Brooklyn Health Protective Association. The workingmen are the worst, though by no means the only, breakers of the ordinance, and at hours when they fill the cars the latter become positively filthy. Sweeping skirts are an evil undoubtedly, but there is a good deal of solid work for the papers to do before they get away from those wretched little signs in the cars.

***

Megaphones are comparatively new, and their introduction as means of calling carriages after a reception at the White House in Washington is noted as a useful innovation. But the megaphone seems out of keeping with modern inventions and usages. The tendency of the age is toward quietness and concentration, and the big, resonant megaphone in association with social functions is suggestive of anything but quiet elegance.

***

"The car question is too much for me," says the woman who has had experience. "If I take a car that starts from a given place the men who are waiting for it climb on before the incoming passengers have a chance to leave, and usually by the time the women can get into the car the men, having made use of their superior strength, agility, and freedom from skirts and conventionality, have secured at least three-fourths of the seats. I see that again and again, hence it is supposed that men prefer to have seats when traveling in the cars. They are the strongest, the best able to push, and they get the seats, and while there continue to be more people than seats they will continue to have them. But the strange part of it is that when there are more seats than there are people the men do not care to sit; they prefer to stand. I have seen men standing in a car, three or four of them, with plenty of seats. The car has been filled before, possibly, but as the people leave the men continue to stand, and not for a few moments, but for a long distance, evidently only because they like to. Why is it? It is all right, of course; this is a free country, we are told often enough; only when they are standing, with plenty of seats around—and I remember long, tiresome rides I have had standing while they were sitting—I can't help wishing their desire to stand would not come just at the time when it is not necessary and is a hindrance to people who have to crowd past them. This is a funny world."

***

A little New York woman, the wife of a carpenter, is keeping track of her husband's increase of wealth for him. He has invested some money in real estate, lots in an outlying district of the city where they are sure to increase in value. They are increasing in value almost every day, and the carpenter likes to count and gloat over his profits. Other lots in the vicinity are gradually being sold or offered for sale, and by the prices they bring the carpenter gauges his wealth and he learns the prices through his wife. They watch the ground carefully, and whenever a new sign "For sale" is put up the wife starts immediately to the office of the real estate agent to learn the price. This, of course, they always give her, thinking her a possible purchaser, and if it is a hundred dollars ahead of the last price given she goes home triumphant and the family has something extra for dinner that day to celebrate the increased value of their own lots.

***

Women of the stage say that nowadays so much has been said and written of the theatres that people do not regard them quite so curiously as at one time, and letters asking queer questions about performances, the players, and their parts are not common. "The people who ask queer questions now," recently remarked one woman belonging to a New York stock company who meets many nice people in her private social life, "are the intelligent people, nice women whom one meets and who would be supposed to know better. They ask all sorts of ridiculous questions. They want to know if you take your gowns home at night and if you make up for the stage, and innumerable questions of that kind."

***

"I think all actresses of refinement like to dress very quietly off the stage," she went on, talking of dressing in private life. "You like to avoid notice as much as possible. The less an actress is seen off the stage the better, and it is really embarrassing to be known by so many people. There is poor Mrs. Blank, who says she can't go to church because people recognize her and stare unpleasantly. She hasn't a seat of her own, and until she has she feels that she can't go without being made to feel very uncomfortable. But then, I suppose if people didn't know us we wouldn't like that, so there it is."

***

But if people don't send letters with ridiculous inquiries the absurd remarks which they make in the theatres would fill a book. And they are made by people who might be expected to know better. For instance, there were two women who went to see Anna Held in "Papa's Wife" at the Saturday matinée. They could not understand the sudden change in the last act, when the little heroine is found to be married to the son instead of the father.

"It's the funniest ending to a play I ever saw in my life," said one with an air of indignation. "It was absurd. The Baron, the husband, only came on two or three times in the whole play."

She plainly felt that she had cause for grievance, and yet if she expected to find in that farce comedy things running like an ordinary romance, or as they might in real life, as she knew it, there might be a good many other things in it of which she might ask the why and wherefore.

***

Here is an instance of a woman's business methods which some people might think peculiar, but in which the woman seems to consider herself entirely justified. It may be one of the eccentricities of genius, for the woman is an inventor—has invented something that is sure to make a fortune, she believes—and has applied for a patent. The next thing is to put it on the market. To help her with this she has invited a friend to invest capital. The friend, another woman, is quite willing if there is a chance of the article being worth while, she having great faith in the money making properties of inventions. But here the trouble begins. The woman inventor is very cautious. She does not wish to run any risks with her precious invention, so she is not willing to disclose anything about it, its name, or its nature, to the woman she wishes to interest until the latter has promised that she will put her money into it. Naturally, the outside woman is a little averse to making this promise until she has some slight inkling of what she is to promote, and there the matter stands. The woman with the money to invest is firm, and the other woman is looking rather indignantly for some one else who will have a reasonable amount of confidence in her word.

***

This is equalled by a man now in the city who has a new flour to put on the market which will work, he thoroughly believes, the salvation of the world, moral as well as physical. But the people are too ignorant to know what is for their best good, he declares, so until they have become regenerated by means of the diet which he proposes, their only chance is to put unquestioning faith in him as a savior of mankind and obey him implicitly. As this process may be slow he proposes to enforce in England the eating of nutritious flour, and do away with the fine wheat now universally used, by act of Parliament. "We must," he says, and evidently with perfect sincerity, "create the demand for proper flour and then I will supply it." This is, of course, most satisfactory reasoning, and if it can be carried out fortunes will be made as well as reforms instituted.

FEMININE FRILLS.

"In getting a frock coat," says the writer of men's fashions, "it is well to buy one that will look well though the fashions may change a trifle, for they are expensive garments and should last a number of years."

"The styles of hats do not change so much that it is necessary to buy new ones at the commencement of every season," he says in another paragraph.

Imagine a woman's gown that would last without alteration for a "number of years" and a hat of a style that it will "not be necessary to buy one every season!" Happy man! Or is it unhappy man?

***

There are as many shades of face powder as there are shades of color almost. The powder that the Jewish and Egyptian women wear in their "make up" in "den fur" looks a bright canary yellow in daylight.

***

Up-to-date lace sleeves may have elbow protectors. They may not be intended for that, but they will serve the purpose. A light cloth gown has long sleeves of lace, a piece of the cloth set in at wrist and shoulder, and another, broad at the outside seam, with points on either edge, the piece growing narrower inside the arm. It may not be to hide a sharp elbow, but it might be.

***

Long skirts in the street, longer skirts in the house, and it pleases every one but the woman of economical mind. There is a sweep to a train of extra length which gives a pleasant sensation to a woman of presence; she likes the feeling of the swing of the skirts. The dressmaker can get better effects with the long skirt; it shows up the material to better advantage, and as it takes more of it, that is a satisfaction to manufacturers and merchants. But that is not so agreeable to the woman who has to count the dollars. A long train requires less trimming, if anything, than a shorter one, for it has a certain dignity of its own in a rich material, and is apt to lose by being trimmed.

***

The long coats are particularly handsome in velvet. It is too rich a material not to be handsomest when falling in long lines. The coat this year gives an opportunity for this, and a long coat of black velvet over a handsome gown has not its superior as an attractive outer garment.

***

One young woman who is tall and has a fine figure wears an all black velvet suit. The skirt is perfectly plain, and there is a short jacket, simply made. The effect is excellent. The skirt, to be sure, is abnormally long for street wear, but then it looks wonderfully well when it is not necessary to carry the biggest part of it in the hand.

***

Embroidered velvets, velvets with polka dots of the same or blending shades, are to be seen in the shops and in handsome gowns. It seems to be painting the rose, but the material is handsome and it is fashionable.

***

There is always a certain jauntiness to the fur boa which makes it always welcome when it comes to the fore semi-occasionally. Fur boas are more fashionable this Winter than regular fitted furs, and it is fortunate that this is so, for the season has been mild and all furs fashionable. In warm weather it is much easier to slip off a boa than other furs. A boa can be slipped down from the neck with a slight movement of the hand, whereas in removing other furs one has the appearance of settling down for a long stay. Boas are also quite as becoming as other furs from their fluffiness, though they are somewhat lacking in dignity for older women.

***

"No," said the business woman, "there is no use talking; I can't afford a flannel waist. I am obliged to wear silk ones always. A good, well-made flannel waist really costs more than a very respectable silk one does. Then the prettiest waists in flannel are in delicate shades, very charming, but they soil quickly, and even the so-called wash waists do not hold their own after having been through the laundry. A soiled waist is an abomination, so I wear silk waists. Another thing is that, being a business woman, I have to get in and out of my coat more often than many women, and there my silk waist is a blessing. Another thing is that I sometimes have to make a good appearance—go out to luncheon or dinner, perhaps, without having time to get home to make ready—and there my silk waist makes a more presentable appearance than a flannel one would, though the flannel has twice the style of the other. Perhaps the silk waist does not give as much actual wear as the flannel, but it is more serviceable in the long run."

***

Décolleté gowns are cut decidely low this year, but they have not that effect, for the modistes have learned how to make the edge of the gown stay put, finished with a bit of tulle or chiffon, and while low and exposing the shoulders almost entirely, the gown is reasonably modest. Evening gowns have been particularly becoming this year, so much fur and lace have been used to finish the neck, and there are few people who do not need a slight softening effect.

***

"No, indeed," says the girl who is to be a bride in the early Spring, "you will not catch me having flowers scattered in my path at my wedding either out doors or in the church. Not all the French fashions in the world would make me do it. Why, I love flowers! I should surely disgrace myself if I should attempt such a thing. I should walk as if I were walking on eggs, or trying not to walk on them, and I couldn't help giving a little scream if I should feel something under my foot and know I had actually crushed a pretty posy. No, indeed, it hurts my feelings when they wilt and die naturally, but to crush them voluntarily is too barbarous."

***

Pretty little belts are worn by girls tired of the plain little narrow belts. They are broad in front with two points above and below, sloping down on either side and passing around the waist in a narrow band fastening in the back or at the side. These belts are of embroidery or some material to match the trimmings of the gown.

AMERICAN HOMES IN CUBA

Great Difference in the Quarters of the Army Officers.

FROM PALACE TO MERE HOVEL

Havana Houses Are So Large that Several Officers' Families Occupy Each One.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Jan. 15.—It is interesting to note how various Americans live here—many in a way that would be out of the question in a colder climate, others with all of the comforts that one could wish. Not long ago I made a round of calls, and found my friends living in many and various ways. "To the Maestranga" was my first order to the coachman. Arriving there, we were confronted by a long series of doors in that gloomy old Spanish barracks. By dint of much inquiry we found the right door, and I entered. The quarters were up stairs and very homelike in their appointments, but there was no sunlight; perhaps it was a dark day, but I doubt if the sun reaches that room often. "We are very comfortable," my hostess told me. "We have four rooms, which are ample for our family; to be sure, there is no kitchen, so we don't keep house. We get our meals at a restaurant near by, but that is less trouble than to look after our own. Some of the families have kitchens and everything convenient for running a household just as they would in the States. There are ever so many of us living in this building. By the bye, it is very convenient to have these rooms furnished us and be given commutation of quarters as well." I agreed with her and wondered over the fate that treated them thus and others with less kindness.

"To Gen. Chaffee's" was my next order. On the Prado, the fashionable drive of the city, I found the house of the General. The porter at the door was very obsequious, and to my inquiry for Mrs. Chaffee informed me that she was in and invited me to enter. After passing through the entrance hall we came to a courtyard, in which was a fountain surrounded by beautiful palms. The porter took my card, and I was left in a room which is probably the General's office. The period of probation was short until he returned and conducted me up long stairs, at the head of which I found my hostess awaiting me. She led me into the drawing room, a beautiful room, handsomely furnished, with luxurious easy chairs, statuary, bric-a-brac, &c., just such a place as one would like to find when tired, for it certainly had a restful effect. Leading back from the drawing room was a long gallery overlooking the courtyard, splashing fountain, and spreading palms, and opening from which were the bedrooms. Somewhere in the rear were the dining room and culinary department; the stable, too, was doubtless under the same roof, for from the Governor General's palace down to the humblest home the rule is to keep coaches and horses in the same building; indeed, very often the carriage is taken right to the front door. Just outside the drawing room door was a tea table, with the same dainty appointments that one finds elsewhere. From the nature of the furnishing, I judged that this house, the property of a formerly wealthy Cuban, probably, had been taken ready furnished—the general appearance was Cuban rather than American.

I gave the driver the next number, which we found to be on a corner. There was no entrance on the street where the number was, but instead, I had to walk down the side street about half a block and go up some dingy stairs. No bell, no knocker, and no door on which to knock, so I announced my own arrival to the first person I could find, who chanced to be a servant in the kitchen, and it occurred to me that this department was not as well placed as it might be, for it was next to the room which I took to be the parlor, and on the other side was a bedroom. This servant could not understand my Spanish, so called the landlady, with whom I was more successful. As I said before, I took the room to be the parlor. I did not see it at close range, for the landlady evidently thought it proper for ladies to use their own rooms as reception rooms, and so took me to my friend's room, much to the latter's embarrassment and to my own. The landlady was a large woman of the lower order of Cubans. I imagine, but eager to be on very intimate terms with her boarders and their friends, so came in and remained during my visit.

IN A CUBAN PALACE.

A short drive further on, and my carriage drew up at the door of a three-story house rather more pretentious in appearance than the surrounding buildings, which were all occupied by shops of one kind or another. The porter came to the carriage and said that Mrs. —— was at home, so I went in the door and up the grand winding staircase to the second floor. The arrival of a guest had already been heralded by the ringing of a loud gong in the entrance way—this was done by the porter who met me—so when I reached the head of the stairs I found a man who took my card and led me to the drawing room. The grand staircase had led me to imagine that there were very pleasant quarters above, but I was scarcely prepared for the palace-like elegance and spaciousness that I found. One scarcely expects a palace sandwiched in between offices on the first floor and a cigar factory on the third, and yet here in Cuba there are many such surprises. In passing along the streets of the city one often catches a glimpse through an open door—the houses in the city have no front yard—of a charming life that is more like a fairy tale than reality. The rooms to which I came were a part of a seventeen-room house, all on one floor, and were taken ready furnished by the American family occupying them, but there were many dainty belongings scattered about which do not go with a furnished house. This family entertains a great deal; scarcely an evening passes on which there are not guests for dinner.

I had several calls to make in the Vedado, a half hour's drive from the city, and some also at the Pirotecnia, formerly used as the ordnance depot of the Spaniards, and now utilized in the same way by our army. Several staff officers, four, I believe, have apartments in the building. Their rooms are very spacious, with beautiful tiled floors, electric lights, modern sanitary plumbing, and a hundred other conveniences that we deem almost a necessity. Last Winter a sum of money was appropriated for the furnishing of these apartments. A General was then living there, so his rooms were fitted out in the most delightful manner. The other officers took their turn, but all had some kind of furniture.

The Pirotecnia occupies a beautiful site on the crest of a hill commanding a view of the sea, city, suburbs, and last, but not least, a Chinese market garden. I must not forget to mention this last, for, owing to its proximity, there are millions of mosquitoes which would not infest such a high place otherwise. A bed in Cuba without a mosquito bar is almost an unknown thing, and every evening before sundown the bars are lowered. In the inclosure in front of the Pirotecnia are large grounds, with flower beds and pretty drives. I must not forget to mention the Spanish doors of stained glass between the rooms. These are of half the height of the wooden ones which are used when complete exclusion is desired, and are very pretty. I saw only Cuban servants in this building.

OFFICERS IN HOVELS.

In my next call I found crowded into two small rooms, not larger than 12 by 12, an officer, his wife, and a little child. The rooms were of the plainest description, in a small building made of rough boards, whitewashed. For a parlor, a part of the porch in front of these rooms was inclosed with canvas, making a room about 4 by 10. To make this more attractive, an Indian blanket—a trophy of Western service—some pieces of tapestry, and a few bright prints were used to cover the canvas. There was a table for a lamp, and a piece of canvas served as a door. The house in which these rooms were was inside a fort, and was built by the Spaniards. There were only two other rooms, and they were used by the Surgeon and another Lieutenant. A boarding house near by was patronized for meals. Fortunately, this is a Summer land, or the porch parlor might not be altogether pleasant. Army people are philosophical, and though in primitiveness this compares with life at the most desolate frontier posts, there is only good nature about it.

At Camp Columbia all of the officers are limited to two rooms, and all that separates each officer's quarters from those of the next person is a thin partition extending half way, or three-fourths of the way, to the ceiling. The officers' quarters at Camp Columbia are all in rough wooden buildings. Gen. Lee lives with his family in Quemados in the building used by the regiment of engineers as headquarters last Winter. The building is too large for his use, so two other families share it with him. Both are families of officers on his staff. The house is a very handsome one, with a large yard, around which the rooms are built. In this yard is a Summer house, and there are many beautiful plants. His other staff officers are scattered about in the town, most of them housekeeping; and as most of the desirable houses are too large for one family, there are at least two in each house.

Gen. Ludlow has as his home the second floor of the building in which his offices are. The rooms are all very large and delightful for the entertaining which he and Mrs. Ludlow do. Saturday is their reception day, and twice a month, on the first and third Saturdays, they receive in the evening, when there is dancing. On the first Saturday of this month there were very few out, owing partly to the unpleasant weather, but principally to the fact that the week had been a very gay one and almost every one was tired out.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Rathbone live in a fashionable suburb of the city and very near to it. Their house is a beautiful one—and very large. Extending entirely across the front is a wide veranda, on which are a dozen or more easy porch chairs. There is a narrow yard in front, in which is growing a row of palm trees parallel to the street. They entertain a great deal.

GEN. WOOD'S FINE QUARTERS.

Gen. Wood lives in the palace of the Governor General, near the harbor. His apartments are furnished as befits the position of the Military Governor, the same of course as during Gen. Brooke's administration. The General is entering into all of the affairs of the social world. Since the beginning of the year there have been great changes; many Cubans have been put into positions formerly held by Americans; and in many ways the General has been making himself very popular.

Across the harbor at Cabanas, guarding that and Morro Castle, are several batteries of artillery. Both officers and soldiers live in wooden barracks outside of the fortifications. Last Summer there was some yellow fever, but at present the garrison is entirely free from it. The quarters are very much exposed to the wind, and doors and windows must be kept closed on disagreeable nights or no lamps can remain lighted. There are several ladies living there, with either husband or father, but it is a lonely place in itself. However, it is very easy to come to town unless the weather is exceedingly rough, for two little Government boats ply between Morro and the city, a very short distance. These boats do not run after half-past 6 in the evening, but there are always scores of boatmen to be had. The road up to the barracks from the dock is very steep, though not a very long one, not quite a mile. When any one wishes to visit the garrison he telephones over for an ambulance to meet him at the dock, and when the officers and their families come over to town they have it meet them on their return. When the weather is too rough for the boat to go to the Morro landing, for it is so near the open sea that the breakers run high, a landing is made at the Cabanas dock, a little further in and more sheltered from the weather.

Only a few officers have brought their household goods with them, and so for most of them it is little more than camping out in a house with everything arranged in a manner that seems more or less temporary.

DOROTHY STANHOPE.

IN FOREIGN LANDS.

M. VALFREY SOUNDS A WARNING TO FRENCH ANGLOPHOBES.—Even more emphatic than the opinion of M. Edouard Lockroy, the ex-Minister of Marine, that France cannot hope to cope effectively on the open sea with Great Britain, is deemed a recent article in Le Figaro of Paris from the pen of M. J. Valfrey, a well-known littérateur. In the course of his article M. Valfrey says that when intelligent people speak of Great Britain and reckon with her they do not think of her land forces or of their staff. "The true and only England," he continues, "is that which possesses the domination of the seas through the numerical superiority of her ships and their crews, a superiority which allows her at present to hold her own against a coalition of all the fleets in the world and to crush all obstacles which she might meet in the shape of pitched naval battles.

"Well, our Anglophobes must resign themselves to this as the fact that cannot be denied. Not an atom of the immense machinery upon which the naval omnipotence of Great Britain is based has been affected by the Transvaal war, and hundreds of ships are ready to assume the offensive with as much ease and rapidity as if the Cape empire were enjoying the same tranquillity as that of India. I maintain that we must not launch out into frivolous provocation and impolitic threats against England. There are no serious causes of war between France and England, and I hope with all my heart that the course of events will not give rise to any."

FURTHER FIGURES CONCERNING EGYPTIAN FINANCES.—The complete report of J. L. Gorst, Financial Adviser, on the Egyptian budget of 1900 has now been published in full by the Egyptian Government. According to certain figures recently presented in these columns, unusual difficulties attended the drawing up of the budget, owing to the failure of the Nile flood, which this year was the lowest ever recorded. It is now estimated that during the coming year about 280,000 acres in Upper Egypt cannot be irrigated, and that over other areas water will be more or less deficient. From this cause the loss of land tax will be £250,000, and the diminution of railway receipts is estimated at £100,000.

Mr. Gorst points out, however, that this loss of revenue is a purely temporary incident, due to the exceptional circumstances of the year, and that the financial stability of the Government is in no way affected, nor need there be any anxiety with regard to the general prosperity of the country. The total loss due to the low Nile may be estimated at £800,000, of which £250,000 falls upon the Government as loss of revenue and £550,000 as direct loss to the people from uncultivated areas. On the other hand, the cotton crop just harvested gives a difference of over £3,500,000 in favor of 1899 over 1898, due to larger yield and higher prices.

Concerning the district of Suakim, which under the Soudan convention has its budget reckoned with that of the Soudan, Mr. Gorst estimates that the revenue thus derived will bring the total of Egypt up to £10,640,000, as compared with an actual revenue of £11,632,000 in 1898 and a probable revenue of £11,502,000 for 1899.

In conclusion, Mr. Gorst declares that the influx of foreign capital, which is rapidly increasing from day to day, may be expected to continue in the immediate future.

FURTHER FIGURES CONCERNING EGYPTIAN FINANCES.—The complete report of J. L. Gorst, Financial Adviser, on the Egyptian budget of 1900 has now been published in full by the Egyptian Government. According to certain figures recently presented in these columns, unusual difficulties attended the drawing up of the budget, owing to the failure of the Nile flood, which this year was the lowest ever recorded. It is now estimated that during the coming year about 280,000 acres in Upper Egypt cannot be irrigated, and that over other areas water will be more or less deficient. From this cause the loss of land tax will be £250,000, and the diminution of railway receipts is estimated at £100,000.

Mr. Gorst points out, however, that this loss of revenue is a purely temporary incident, due to the exceptional circumstances of the year, and that the financial stability of the Government is in no way affected, nor need there be any anxiety with regard to the general prosperity of the country. The total loss due to the low Nile may be estimated at £800,000, of which £250,000 falls upon the Government as loss of revenue and £550,000 as direct loss to the people from uncultivated areas. On the other hand, the cotton crop just harvested gives a difference of over £3,500,000 in favor of 1899 over 1898, due to larger yield and higher prices.

Concerning the district of Suakim, which under the Soudan convention has its budget reckoned with that of the Soudan, Mr. Gorst estimates that the revenue thus derived will bring the total of Egypt up to £10,640,000, as compared with an actual revenue of £11,632,000 in 1898 and a probable revenue of £11,502,000 for 1899.

In conclusion, Mr. Gorst declares that the influx of foreign capital, which is rapidly increasing from day to day, may be expected to continue in the immediate future.

A. SIMONSON
933 BROADWAY
21ST & 22D STS.
THE LEADING HOUSE FOR HAIR GOODS

THE NEW STYLE OF
Marie Antoinette Coiffure
WILL PROVE A DECIDED SUCCESS!
The various innovations of same will add to the comfort and beauty!

This particular style of Hair Dress is a blessing in disguise, particularly for all those who have ruined their hair, or Ladies with thin hair, or those whom nature has denied a luxuriant growth of hair, or for all those who wish to conceal their own hair for various reasons.

All Ladies with any kind of the various deficiencies will find this new Marie Antoinette a great relief, without resorting to wigs. A magnificent assortment in all beautiful colors.

COSMETICS.—I can safely recommend the SPECIAL LIQUID Nos. 1 and 2, wonderful hair grower and sure cure against dandruff.

POUDRE VELOUTINE and FOUNTAIN OF BEAUTY, guarantees a perfect transparent complexion.

NO BRANCHES. NO AGENTS.
A. SIMONSON,
933 BROADWAY. 21ST AND 22D STS.

H. C. F. KOCH & CO.
125th St., West, between Lenox and 7th Aves.
Continuation of Great Pre-Inventory Sale

Just as we thought, the astounding values offered by every department last week kept the store thronged with eager shoppers. This week, still more remarkable opportunities—a climax in retailing which will make this Pre-Inventory Sale hard to surpass in future years. Impossible to give full details—merely these hints:

Silks:
500 yards Pure Silk Satin DUCHESSE and PEAU DE SOIE, in an extra heavy quality, regularly 89c. per yd . 69c
1,000 yds. BLACK TAFFETA SILKS, 23 in. wide, a superior quality, regularly $1.00 per yd., at 79c
100 pieces CORDED WASH SILKS, all the newest colorings and combinations, regularly 50c. per yd., at . . 39c
50 pieces COLORED TAFFETA SILK, in changeable and plain colorings, regularly 85c. per yd., at . . 59c

Dress Goods:
25 PIECES BLACK STORM-PROOF SERGES AND CHEVIOTS, regularly 75 cents per yd., at 59c
50 PIECES SCOTCH HOMESPUNS, 50 in. wide, latest shades and Oxford mixtures; regularly 98c. yd. . . 79c

Millinery:
UNTRIMMED HATS—the balance of all our Fur Felt Hats, this season's shapes and colors, formerly 75c. to $1.48, at 25c
MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S FELT CLOTH HATS, with Tam o' Shanter crowns, plain, braided or stitched, all colors, trimmed with quills and rosettes, were $1.25 and $1.50, at 25c
JET SPANGLED and TAFFETA TUCKED SILK HATS, the celebrated "Miss Hobbs" (the hit of the season), tastefully trimmed with large rosette of Panne velvet, downtown $10 to $14.00, on Monday 5.00

Household Linens:
65c per yd. for 89c quality of FINE ALL LINEN BLEACHED IRISH TABLE DAMASK.
98c per yd. for $1.50 quality of EXTRA FINE DOUBLE SATIN DAMASK.
$2.29 per dozen for $3.00 quality of dinner size NAPKINS OF FINE IRISH LINEN.
$2.98 per dozen for $5.00 quality of dinner size NAPKINS OF EXTRA HEAVY SUPER DOUBLE DAMASK.
19c for 25c quality of HEMMED, HEMSTITCHED OR FRINGED HUCK OR DAMASK TOWELS.
23c for 35c quality of extra large and fine HEMMED, HEMSTITCHED OR FRINGED HUCK OR DAMASK TOWELS.

Furniture:
BOOKCASES, in quartered oak and mahogany finish, some with single, others with double glass doors, formerly $19.00 to $24.00, at 13.95
GOLDEN QUARTERED OAK BOOKCASES, 33 in. wide, with sliding glass doors, formerly $12.00, at . . 8.25
MAHOGANY DRESSING BUREAUS, richly polished, with large oval or fancy shaped French plate mirror, formerly $24.50, at 16.95
SOLID GOLDEN OAK CHIFFONIERS, handsomely finished, with five drawers and oval French plate mirror, formerly $10.75 . . . . . 7.49
LADIES' DRESSING TABLES of golden quartered oak or bird's-eye maple, with single drawer and fancy shaped French plate mirror, formerly $9.50, at . 7.25
Oak and Mahogany finish MORRIS CHAIRS, with your choice from a large selection of Velour or Tapestry Cushions, filled with best hair, regularly $9.50, at 5.49

Curtains:
BOBBINET CURTAINS, with ruffled edge and lace insertion,
Were . . . . $2.50 $3.25 $4.50 per pr.
Now . . . . 1.75 2.50 3.00 per pr.
Real RENAISSANCE LACE CURTAINS, in one, two and three pair lots, scrim or net centres, heavy deep borders,
Were . . . $12.50 $16.50 $18.75 per pr.
Now . . . 8.75 12.50 14.75 per pr.
TAPESTRY CURTAINS in choice colorings, fringed top and bottom,
Were . . . $3.75 $5.50 $6.75 per pr.
Now . . . 2.25 3.50 4.75 per pr.
FURNITURE RE-UPHOLSTERED AT COST—and you may pick as you please from a splendid stock of furniture Satins, Velvets, Velours, Damasks, Brocatelles, Tapestries, etc.—ALL THESE AT REDUCED PRICES.

Carpet Department:
SHORT LENGTHS OF CARPETS, some with borders, lengths sufficient for one or two rooms.
$1.25 per yd. for $2.50 ROYAL WILTONS.
95c. per yd. for $1.50 SAVONNERIES.
65c. per yd. for $1.00 WILTON VELVETS.
70c. per yd. for $1.35 BODY BRUSSELS.
45c. per yd. for 75c. TAPESTRY BRUSSELS.
HEAVY AXMINSTER RUGS in Oriental colorings and designs, size 9x12 ft., were $22.50, at 16.50

Opening of Cotton Dress Goods.
We are now exhibiting our Spring Importations of French, German and English Wash Fabrics, comprising Scotch and French Zephyrs, English Percales, Mousseline Crepe Raye, Poult de Soie, Cable Cords, Dimitie Satin Raye, Crepon Nouveaute, Peau de Satin, Organdie Splendide, Plumetis Soie, etc.
SPECIAL FOR MONDAY—100 PIECES OF FIGURED FOULARDINES in a large variety of styles, sold elsewhere for 12½ cents per yard; sale price, . 9¾c.
Do not fail to see the trio of Famous PAINTINGS OF JERUSALEM (size of each picture, 8½x10 feet).
125th St. West, between Lenox and 7th Aves.

The Government is prepared to give every legitimate encouragement to these industrial developments, so long as no attempt is made to violate the elementary principles of political economy. There must, however, be no question of fostering unsound industries by a protective policy. Such a course would not only seriously interfere with the fiscal system of the Egyptian Government, in which the customs duties on imports are a most important item, but would divert the labor and capital of the country from profitable to unprofitable undertakings.

AMERICAN STUDENTS IN LEIPSIC.—Last November the American students of the University of Leipsic founded the American Students' Club of the University of Leipsic. The object of the club is to bring the American students into closer touch with each other, to promote mutual benefit and enjoyment, and to give information and advice to new American students. The meetings take place once a fortnight on Saturday evenings. Dr. J. Grant Cramer, nephew of the late Gen. U. S. Grant, is President of the club; Dr. H. Learned and Dr. K. Mellby First and Second Vice Presidents, respectively; Mr. P. Muckaye is Secretary-Treasurer. On Thanksgiving Day the club gave a banquet, which was attended by an enthusiastic crowd. Christmas found but a small number of the members dining together informally, as the majority had scattered for the holidays. There are 63 American students at the University of Leipsic, which has 3,849 students this semester.

PROF. MECHNIKOFF'S DISCOVERY OF AN ALLEGED ELIXIR OF LIFE OVERRATED.—Quite recently stories were telegraphed from Paris concerning an alleged discovery by Prof. Mechnikoff of the Pasteur Institute, by which it was said human life might be almost infinitely prolonged. According, however, to the interviews with the Russian experimentalist published in the Paris papers, the actual facts have been greatly exaggerated. Prof. Mechnikoff asserts that up to the present moment he has simply made laboratory experiments of an abstract character. He has a theory, for the working out of which he divides the cells of the body into detensive and offensive cells. He and his colleagues determined to give battle to the latter. A serum or lymph was found and was injected by a M. Bordet, one of the professor's assistants, who succeeded in effecting some cells without injuring the others. This leads the professor to hope that other serums will in time be discovered for the efficacious protection of the defensive cells. The balance which should exist between the numerous elements of the body would then be attained.

THE AUTOMOBILE IN WARFARE.—As has been already stated in these columns, both the French and Italian Governments have for some time been engaged in making experiments to determine to what extent automobilism is available for Features of Some Seasonable Sports.

This is a pretty good time of the year for the angler to look over his rods and tackle and get them into shape for next season's use. While such work as replacing warped or broken joints and tips is beyond the skill of the ordinary amateur, there are many little bits of repairing that the fisherman may make himself during the Winter evenings as he sits before his fire pipe in mouth and recalls his fishing experiences of the last year. With a spool of silk, a bit of wax, a camel's hair brush, a little powdered pumice stone and oil, and a small bottle of rod varnish the guides may be rewound, the rod whipping renewed, and the entire rod revarnished, making it look nearly new.

The skill required to wind the silk evenly and neatly is easily acquired, and the feeling of security derived from the knowledge that the work is properly done and the guide securely fastened amply compensates for the time and labor expended on the task.

In rewhipping a guide, remove the old winding from one side only, replace the silk with new, then remove the old whipping from the other half and proceed as before; this mode of operation prevents the guide getting out of line with the others. In cases where the rod is to be varnished or when the guide has been lost or twisted, a piece of line passed through the hole or ring of the tip and fastened to the butt of the joint will give the proper alignment. String the guides upon it, fasten them temporarily with a few turns of silk, remove the line and whip as above. For the second joint and butt, whip the ends of this guide line to each end, being careful that, on the butt, it passes over the centre of the reel seat.

There is nothing connected with a fisherman's outfit more calculated to arouse profanity than a poorly snelled hook, and there is nothing which is more generally sold, even to those who pay a good price and expect to receive the best.

Some anglers take out an insurance policy against lost fish by buying their gut and hooks separate and snelling them themselves. With trout gut at 20 cents a hundred or heavy bass at 75 cents, and spring steel hooks at from 10 cents for No. 2/0 to 30 cents for No. 10 a hundred, a man who finds amusement in the task may snell his own hooks, putting a loving care and thoroughness into the task that could never be hired, at no matter what rate he might pay per dozen for the finished product.

For the man who has not time to keep his rods in trim, nor the means to pay a good tacklemaker for overhauling them, there is made a rod of hollow steel, with the guides whipped on with fine wire. These rods weigh from six and one-half to ten ounces, and, being of metal, never warp, swell, or shrink, and the mountings never become loose.

Being made with three joints and a butt, they take down to a very short length, not much longer than the trunk rod, which makes them convenient for wheelmen and travelers. A man who insists on having a combination affair, and making one rod do the work of two or three, can have one of them with a reversible butt and a short tip to go into the end of the second joint, thus securing a fly, light, and heavy bait rod, but he will have one that, like all combinations, has none of the best points of any one rod made for a special purpose.

One of the many things that fill the heart of the angler with woe is the finding of a lot of fine dust and loose feathers and hackles occupying the place where he had put his cherished flies for their Winter rest. About the best insurance against the ravages of the gay and festive moth is a fly book with celluloid leaves. There is enough camphor in the celluloid to render a book with leaves of this material unpopular as a Winter sanitarium for the little pest, and its water-proof qualities make it particularly desirable for use on the stream.

While passing a sporting goods house the other day I saw a pair of Norwegian skees hung up in the window. The skee is a strip of ash or spruce from six to eight feet in length and about three and one-half inches wide, with the ends turned up, somewhat after the fashion of an old-time skate. They are fastened, one on each foot, by means of what looks like the tip of a boot, under which the toe rests. The heel is left free, a block of wood being fastened behind it to prevent the wearer from slipping off backward when coasting. As the skee is not lifted from the surface of the snow, the toe fastening is sufficient to allow its being pushed along, while the loose heel allows one to slip out of it as easily as from a pair of slippers should one see danger ahead on a down grade.

The skee is the snowshoe of the Winter hunter and traveler in Norway, and has been brought to this country by the emigrants from that land, who have settled in the Northwest. They are not very much in evidence in this section, though they would become speedily popular if their merits were better known.

With the faculty which the American public have for adopting the sports of other nations and making them their own, it is somewhat strange that the Winter pastime of skee running, so popular in Norway, is not practiced among us to a greater extent. Skee running is as far superior to snowshoeing as skating is to sliding. The snowshoe, which must be lifted at every step, is a wide, ungainly looking affair, with which one may progress only at the amount of speed at which one's gait is set, and which requires as much effort on the last stride as at the first. The skee, on the contrary, is simply pushed along the surface of the snow by means of the toe caps, the heel being left free for ankle motion. By reason of the sliding motion, the wearer gains momentum after starting in about the same manner as does the skater, and, after getting under way, very much less effort is required to keep up an amount of speed that would be simply impossible with a snowshoe, and when a down grade is approached all that the skee runner has to do is to keep right side up and coast at such speed as he may desire, the rapidity of his descent being governed by his staff, which he uses as a brake, although the more skillful runner often discards this adjunct and takes every coast flying.

The skee is at its best on a light, dry, unpacked snow, and for this reason runs across country just after a snowfall would be a jolly amusement for a party of young people on moonlight Winter nights stopping at some farmhouse or inn for supper and then returning. Now that country house parties are so much in favor during the Winter months, it is rather strange that so few in this part of the country have tried this style of amusement. Of course, like skating and snowshoeing, a little practice is needed, but not to any such extent as with the two first-named sports, and the cost of skee outfits for a fair-sized house party would not be anything like the amount needed to erect and equip a toboggan slide for that number of people. Another point in its favor is that, unlike the "swish-and-walk-a-mile" sport, it takes people out over the country side and through the fields at a time when they would be unapproachable by any other means of locomotion. Some convenient hillside could be easily fixed for coasting purposes, "thankee ma'ams" being arranged for the more skillful runners.

A good "thankee maam" or skee jump is made by banking up the snow on the upper side of a stone wall at a hill foot, and clearing it away from the further side, leaving only enough to cover the ground deeply, sufficiently to prevent the skee striking through on landing. With a good hill back of the wall the skee runner goes shooting out through the air, making a flying leap the length of which would appear impossible to one who had never tried it.

Coasting on a bob or toboggan seems tame after trying a slide of this kind, but one should go slowly at first, and not attempt steep inclines or high jumps until he has acquired some confidence in his ability to prevent his skees crossing each other while he is in the air. For those who do not care to pay $5 for a pair of these articles, a little ingenuity, a couple of pieces of one-inch spruce, and an old pair of boots will furnish the material from which a home-made pair may be produced. In turning up the ends it is well to steam them thoroughly and keep them in the desired curve until dry by means of short sticks placed over and under each other, criss-cross fashion.

Many sportsmen nowadays are also photographers and are employing the long Winter evenings in developing plates and mounting prints that are reminiscent of the past season's outings. One of this class, a New Yorker and an enthusiastic canoeist, has for some time been looking for something new in the way of mounts. His mantel, dresser, and desk are littered with photos mounted on the regulation cards, his walls are covered with a collection of prints, pasted on cardboard and framed, and he yearned for something out of the ordinary. Finally an idea struck him, he went to an oar manufacturer and selected a five foot single-bladed spruce paddle, just as it came from the shaper. This he smoothed down with steel wool. Then he mounted several blue prints of canoeing scenes upon the blade and carefully applied a couple of coats of the finest varnish, carefully rubbing down each coat with the steel wool. The contrast of the clear grained white wood was just the one thing needed to set off the beauty of the blue prints and the mounting was in harmony with the subjects.

It is a curious fact that the man who needs assistance rarely gets it, while the self-sufficient individual has it fairly forced upon him. This moralizing is simply for the purpose of leading up to the following yarn, which, by the way, is strictly true. A young fellow was paddling down the upper Delaware in a folding boat. He was after black bass and had a fine collection of fishing tackle aboard, but had cruised from Deposit to Hancock without being able to secure any bait. Just below the latter village he discovered an old farmer, armed with the traditional bean pole and chalk line yanking in an occasional bass. Discovering that the aged agriculturist had a bucket of choice lampreys aboard, the cruiser ran along side and tried to purchase some.

"Not much, young man," said the A. A. "I put in a hull half day's work getting them bait and they beant for sale."

The young man's heart sank, but he kept up a good countenance. "Oh! All right. Bet I beat you, anyhow," and he bent an artificial minnow on to his leader and made a cast. "Them things are no good," quoth the A. A. "Wait and see," said the cruiser. It was an awful bluff, and he knew it. That minnow was of a particularly undesirable variety, and had never had a strike, and there was no reason for believing that it ever would. Nevertheless over it went, and much to the A. A.'s—and more to his own—surprise he reeled in a pound chub. The A. A. had a half dozen half-pound bass in his scow, for any one of which the cruiser would have gladly exchanged his own capture, but to the A. A. a fish was a fish, and, only size counted. Consequently the young man rose immediately in his estimation, especially as he wisely ceased angling then and there and beached his boat with the intention of making camp for the night. His vapor stove was making the water boil and he was getting things shipshape when the A. A. beached the scow alongside the cruiser boat. He looked admiringly at the outfit, and then observed that rain threatened. The cruiser produced a pair of waders and an oilskin, and said that it did not particularly interest him if it snowed. Becoming convinced that the cruiser needed no aid, and was therefore worthy of it, he pressed him to accept the shelter of his house. This suited the cruiser perfectly, so, after a reasonable show of reluctance, he extinguished the spirit stove, repacked his duffle, and followed the A. A.'s craft down stream. "Too bad you got here too late for supper," said the A. A.'s wife as the cruiser, whom his host had helped to the house with his luggage, sank into a chair. This was a crusher, as he had supposed that the invitation included something to eat. Still he smiled, and, answering her that it did not matter, relighted the spirit stove, made some tea, and opened a can of salmon and can of biscuit.

"Waal, naow! You be smart," observed the lady of the house, lost in admiration of the ease with which he seemed to be making the best of a bad situation. "Come to think of it, there is some cold vitul in the pantry." And there was. Half a chicken, biscuit, and apple pie came forth, and such a pie. The salmon went untasted, but the old lady tried the tea and liked it, and then brought out her own and husband's pipes and helped make his tobacco pouch lighter. At 10 P. M. they declared that they had no idea it was so late. "Hadn't had such good company in years," they assured him, and put him in the spare room and retired.

Next morning they gave him a breakfast and refused any compensation. They also declared that if he ever passed that way again without stopping in they would consider it a personal affront. The A. A. helped him down to the boat, and, as he stepped aboard, said: "Say, I'm going to be too busy for fishing for a couple of days, so I just dumped them lampreys into that minner bucket of yourn." The cruiser thanked him and kept a straight face, but it was hard work. Behind the first bend of the river he opened his tackle pack and took out the minnow. "Without you, my friend, things would have been sadly different," he observed.

E. T. KEYSER.

FIELD AND TRAP SHOOTING.

The proposed team match between members of the Brooklyn Gun Club and the Crescent Athletic Club has fallen through for the present.

***

Another cup has been presented for the consideration of the trap shooters of New York, through the generosity of W. H. Sanders and G. L. Storm. The first contest for it will be on Feb. 7 next. The conditions in a general way will restrict the competition to bona fide residents of New York City. The contests will be at fifty singles, unknown angles, $1 entrance, and the winning of the cup, according to the conditions, will signify the Greater New York target championship. It is a challenge cup. The challenger must deposit $5 with the challenge, and cup and money go to the winner. All shoots for it must take place on the grounds of the Brooklyn Gun Club. The committee in charge of it are W. H. Sanders, John S. Wright, and W. R. Hobart.

***

Harold Money has left New York for Lincoln, Neb., where he will devote some years to the study of mining and civil engineering.

***

The regular monthly shoot of the New Haven Gun Club is held on the second Wednesday of each month.

***

A Minneapolis (Minn.) firm does an extensive business in the shipment of American wild rice for planting in wild fowl waters in Berwickshire, Scotland, and in New Zealand and Australia.

***

Joseph Jefferson and his son have purchased a naphtha launch and a bungalow on Hobe Sound, Florida, and recent reports say that they are entertaining their friends with some of the finest fishing in Florida—and a proportionate share of healthy mosquitoes.

***

John Wright, Treasurer of the Brooklyn Gun Club, is trying to arrange a series of team matches between his own and the New Utrecht Gun Club. The series, if arranged, will consist of three contests, ten men on a side, each club to pay $25 toward the purchase of a silver cup to be given to the club winning two out of the three contests.

***

A late report in shooting circles is to the effect that the Lyndhurst Shooting Association will forward a challenge to the Boiling Springs Gun Club for the loving cup presented to the clubs of New Jersey by Shooting and Fishing. The Boiling Springs Club has held the trophy for a long while for the reason that up to the present time none of the New Jesrey organizations was able to get together a team that could compete against the Rutherford club with any prospect of success.

***

The Yonkers Gun Club proposes to hold a tournament Feb. 22 at live birds. All shooting to be sweepstakes, and to be started promptly at 10:30 A. M., on the club grounds adjacent to the Hollywood Inn.

***

The match recently shot between W. S. Canon of Newark, N. J., and Felix of Philadelphia did not prove satisfactory to the former, who thought it was the luck of the birds, as it is called, that led to his defeat, which was by the narrow margin of a single kill. Correspondence has already been had between the two looking toward another contest, and as each man appears to be ready to meet the other, it will without doubt come off. One of the holidays of the coming month will probably be the day selected.

***

"The ducks are moving South," is the word that has been passed along the Long Island coast from east to west. The cold spell that began Christmas Day, together with the blustery southeaster that began in the small hours of the day previous have had their effect on the ducks. They took the hint, and are now winning their way in large numbers to a warmer climate. "Ducks are just as fond of living in a place where the sun shines on both sides of the fence as is the Southern darky," remarked Treasurer John Wright of the Brooklyn Gun Club. Whistlers and a few black ducks will soon be all that are left in the Long Island bays." Extreme cold does not drive away whistlers, and many a good day's spot can be had with them when nothing but airholes are left here and there in acres of sold ice.

***

A New York firm is sending a four-thousand-dollar exhibit of fishing tackle to the Paris Exposition. One rod is valued at $2,000. The silver handle of this rod is engraved with fishing scenes and mounted with topaz and other stones.

***

The date of the Grand American Handicap has been fixed for the week beginning April 2. On the 3d and 4th the two preliminary events will be shot off, and the contestants will face the traps in the principal race on the morning of April 5. The tournament will be conducted under the management of Elmer E. Shaner and Edward Banks will have charge of the compilation of scores.

GRAND AMERICAN HANDICAP.

Many Westerners Will Take Part in the Big Trap Shooting Contest.

The Grand American Handicap, the most important trap shooting event of the year, is already attracting the attention of shooters throughout the country. During the past two seasons the contingent of Western shooters have chartered a special train of parlor cars, in which they have lived during the week's sport, and afterward visited several important cities in the East.

Arrangements are being perfected now for another special for the Western experts who will come East again full of hope and anxious to again carry the important trophy home. A partial list of the men who will make up the aggregation this year follows:

Illinois—F. P. Stannard, E. D. Bingham, W. H. Dupee, J. B. Barto, C. C. Hess, Silas Palmer, J. S. Boa, T. P. Hicks, C. P. Richards, W. F. Carver, John Watson, E. M. Steck, E. S. Rice, W. P. Letlingwell, J. L. White, Dr. S. Shaw, A. C. Paterson, J. H. Amberg, Henry Levi, Chicago; Harry Dunnell, Bert Dunnell, Fox Lake; Mayor Thomas A. Marshall, Keithsburg; Dr. J. Morris, Dixon; V. E. Boltenstein, H. E. Boltenstein, Cambridge; L. H. Owen, McHenry; George Roll, Blue Island; F. C. Riehl, Alton; E. K. Crothers, Bloomington; A. D. Sperry, Thomas Laflin, Rock Island; William Harbaugh, Geneseo; J. English, Mount Pulaski; William Meidroth, Peoria, and Chauncey M. Powers, Decatur. Wisconsin—Dr. R. Williams, M. E. White, Richard Merrill, George Dieter, J. Wolff, H. Roland, Dr. M. L. Williamson, Milwaukee; R. J. Rockwell, Guy Deering, Columbus. Iowa—John A. Lane, Dr. W. B. Kibbey, Marshalltown; Joe Kirschner, William Milner, C. W. Budd, George McCarthy, Des Moines; Charles W. Grimm, Clear Lake; Fred Halbert, Russell Klein, Spirit Lake; James O'Brien, Dubuque; Samuel Hoffman, Atlantic; A. H. Sheldon, Mason City. Indiana—Elmer E. Neal, Bloomfield. Minnesota—Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Shattuck, F. McKay, Minneapolis; H. C. Hirshey, St. Paul. Missouri—J. A. R. Elliott, Christ. Gottlieb, David Elliott, Edward Hickman, James Riley, Kansas City; F. H. Stockton, Hannibal; John J. Sumpter, Jr., St. Louis. Nebraska—G. F. Brucker, Frank Parmelee, and W. D. Burgess, Omaha. Other shooters who might join the excursion on the way are Jack Parker, Detroit, and E. H. Worthington, T. G. Upson, and Paul North, Cleveland.

AMATEUR ATHLETIC NOTES.

Col. Luscomb, President of the Military Athletic League, has sent an application to the Secretary of War asking for the presence of certain troops at the tournament of the Military Athletic League to be held at Madison Square Garden from March 25 to 31. Col. Luscomb also wrote to Gen. Miles, Gen. Merritt, and Adjt. Gen. Corbin, advising them of the tournament and asking their co-operation. It is expected that a light battery of the Seventh Artillery from Fort Adams, a detachment of the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, some of the Fifteenth Infantry, just returned from Cuba; a number of West Point cadets, a siege detachment from Fort Hamilton, and a good number of marines will take part in the military display. Rear Admiral Philip has already promised his support. Gov. Roosevelt has notified Col. Luscomb that he will help the league in every possible way. Adjt. Gen. Edward M. Hoffman of the New York State National Guard has accepted the offer to serve on the Military Committee, and in his letter of acceptance expressed his hearty sympathy with the work the league is doing. The following committees have been appointed:

Military—Col. C. H. Luscomb, Col. B. T. Clayton, Fourteenth Regiment; Lieut. Col. C. J. Seiter, Twelfth Regiment; Lieut. Commander W. B. Franklin, Naval Militia; Major David Wilson, Second Battery.

Athletic and Cycling—Major W. A. Turpin, Thirteenth Regiment; Lieut. Commander W. G. Ford, Naval Militia; Capt. John J. Dixon, Forty-seventh Regiment; Capt. A. S. Williams, Seventy-first Regiment; Capt. Charles P. Staubach, Eighth Regiment; Capt. T. W. Timpson, Ninth Regiment; Lieut. W. A. Du Bois, Twenty-third Regiment.

Press and Printing—Major David Wilson, Second Battery; Lieut. Col. N. B. Thurston, Lieut. Col. H. H. Treadwell, Twenty-second Regiment.

Boxes—Lieut. Col. T. J. O'Donoghue, Brigade Staff; Lieut. Col. H. H. Treadwell, Twenty-second Regiment; Major W. B. Smith, Old Guard; Capt. C. B. Baldwin, Second Signal Corps; Capt. W. L. Flanagan, Second Battery; Lieut. J. C. McLee, Troop C; Lieut. R. A. De Russy, Twelfth Regiment.

Prizes—Major S. E. Japha, Ninth Regiment; Lieut. Col. H. G. Ridabock, Eighth Regiment; Lieut. R. J. Beach, Naval Militia.

***

The committee of the Amateur Athletic Union which held a meeting at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club last Sunday decided to postpone the dates of the National boxing and wrestling championships to next month. The championships were originally scheduled to take place at the Broadway Athletic Club beginning Wednesday night, but the fact that only a few days remained for the athletes to train before the closing of entries made it necessary to change the dates. The committee has applied to the Broadway Athletic Club for the nights of Feb. 14, 15, and 17, and it is likely that the club will consent to these dates.

BOWLING ITEMS.

The Carruther National tournament will begin at the Elephant Club alleys, in Brooklyn, on Feb. 14. Twenty-one teams will enter, including the best bowlers in New York. Thomas B. Curtis has been elected Secretary of the tournament.

***

There is a movement on foot to arrange a series of games between the winning teams in the various industrial leagues. Those who are trying to arrange the series say that a championship tournament among the winners of the Bank Clerks' League, Wholesale Drug Trade Association, Life Insurance, and Fire Insurance Leagues, would make an interesting competition.

***

Probably every club now competing in the various tournaments throughout the city will enter one or more teams in the international tournament, to be held under the auspices of the United Bowling Clubs next July. The Tournament Committee has a representative in the West, and he reports that up to the present time nearly 100 clubs have signified their intention of sending a team to try for championship honors. Dr. H. Timm is in communication with clubs in Hamburg and Berlin, all of whom want to take part in the tournament.

***

The Harlem League has arranged the following schedule for its postponed games: Jan. 22, Belvidere, Boulevard, Lotus; Jan. 23, Morris Wheelmen, Friendship, Grove Hill; Jan. 24, Cyclone, Audubon, Boulevard; Jan. 25, Lotus, Riverdale, Oriental; Jan. 26, Premier, Empire, Boulevard; Jan. 27, Standard, Premier, Belvidere; Jan. 29, Friendship, Riverdale, Cyclone.

ECHOES FROM THE LINKS

Foreign Golfers May Not Visit This Country, After All.

HARRIMAN NOT GOING ABROAD

Local Players Will Soon Meet to Prepare for the Coming Season—Chicago Professional Changes.

"Golf is a wonderful game for rumors, isn't it?" remarked the Winter enthusiast as he arrived at his New Jersey club for a friendly game on the frozen greens. "Just notice in the course of a year how many predictions of big things about to happen you hear, and then try to recall how few actually take place. A few days ago we were all excited by the news from London that open champion Harry Vardon was on the point of sailing for America. This was followed a little later by the announcement that teams of men and women from the leading clubs in Great Britain were arranging for an American tour, and on top of this comes the denial that our own champion, Herbert M. Harriman, is going abroad, as was so confidently reported a month ago. I believe the denial is authoritative, as I understand that Harriman has told his friends he has no intention of going to England. Moreover I am extremely doubtful of the visit this year to our shores of any prominent foreign golfers, amateur or professional."

All golfers will admit that there is considerable ground for these statements. The news regarding Vardon was to the effect that he would reach New York toward the end of this month, but no cablegram from London has arrived stating that the champion has sailed. Members of local golf clubs have recovered from their first excitement and are falling back into the condition of not believing anything about Vardon until they see him on American soil.

The proposed visit of a team of English and Scotch amateurs is the latest rumor from across the Atlantic. It is stated that among the team will be John Ball, Jr., the amateur champion; H. H. Hilton, open champion in 1897; Charles Hutchins, Leslie Balfour Melville, J. E. Laidley, Horace Hutchinson, whose writings on golf are known wherever the game is played; Robert H. Maxwell, and John Graham. These men would make a grand team, and a meeting with an American team would be one of the most interesting events of the year, but the most sanguine expectations hardly admit that such a combination of foreign golfers can be got together for a tour this year. Some of the women golfers, it is also said, are thinking of an American journey in the near future. Secretary Robert B. Kerr of the United States Golf Association, said last week that he had heard nothing about the visit of foreign players, and he attached little credence to the report of their coming.

Metropolitan golfers will soon be making preparations for their second annual championship, which undoubtedly will be held at Garden City, as was the case last year. The annual meeting of the Metropolitan Association will be held on Thursday evening, Feb. 1, at the Metropolitan Club. The election of officers will take place, and the dates may be fixed for the championship event. The Princeton Golf Club has chosen as its delegates to that meeting Charles Griswold, Jr., and P. A. Van Doran.

This coming week, in all probability, the formal call will be sent out for the meeting of the National Association, which, as previously arranged, will be held on Feb. 28. President Thomas will soon announce the names of the Nominating Committee, and its selection of officers will be sent to the various clubs a few days before the meeting. The Lakewood Club has come into the field as a possible aspirant for the open championship. As is customary in golf circles, the officers say, if offered to them, they will take it; but they will do no electioneering for the tournament. If the open contest should be fixed in the East, none of the big events would be seen in the West this year.

A number of new clubs will be elected to membership at the annual meeting, and the Nassau Country Club of Glencove has filed an application to be elevated from its present position of allied membership to that of an associate member. This change will give the club a vote and make it eligible for future championships.

John M. Ward, the old New York baseball Captain, has become an enthusiastic golfer, as his recent election to the Captaincy of the Lawrence Harbor Golf Club will show. William Freeland, who learned his game at Nantucket, was chosen President for the ensuing year. Joseph F. Stier is the new Vice President, Frank M. Clarke Secretary, while Mortimer M. Singer remains as Treasurer.

Some idea of the amount of money invested in golf by certain clubs is seen in a statement recently made by the Chicago Golf Club, the pioneer organization in that city. The club has an excellent eighteen-hole course at Wheaton, and its property value has increased nearly $0,000 since 1898, the total valuation being over $80,000. That the club is a distinct success financially is also seen by a profit of $10,785 last year over all expenses. Over $6,000 was expended upon the links, and several improvements were made. Charles B. Macdonald, who is soon to become the club's President, has gone to Thomasville, Ga., for a Winter vacation. There is an excellent course there, and the former amateur champion will practice for the Spring games.

The Chicago professionals are discussing a plan to organize a Western professional league. Fred Herd and the Foulis brothers are highly in favor of the scheme. The idea really is a golf labor union, as the professionals intend to fix a standard price for clubs and balls, and make a uniform price of 75 cents an hour for instruction. These Western "pros" claim that many poorly equipped Scotch golfers are pouring into the country, and this prevents good instructors from getting work. They therefore wish to organize and drive these fellows from the links. The success of the scheme will be watched with interest by professionals throughout the country. If it does succeed, we may have waiking delegates visiting the links to see if all the clubs and balls bear a union mark, and to ascertain if the professional is a member in good standing of the accepted order of improved golfers.

One thing for which the Chicago clubs must be given credit is that they realize the benefit to be derived from good professional talent. For over two years the open champions of the United States and others of the first rank have hailed from Chicago. The present open champion, William Smith, is now making a tour of Florida links, and he has been re-engaged for another year by the Midlothian Club of Chicago. For his assistants Smith will have David Bell and George Smith, a young brother of the champion, but who showed much promise on Western links last year of becoming a noted golfer. Lawrence Auchterlanie, who has gone back to Scotland to be married, will return early in the season to the Glen View Club. Alexander Smith and Frederick Herd, last year's champion, will remain with the Washington Park Club. Peter Walker, who had charge of the Onwentsia links last year, has returned to Scotland for good, and his assistant, William Marshall, will be the Onwentsia professional this year.

There was a rumor that James and David Foulis would leave the Chicago Club, but they have recently stated that they will remain for another year. In point of service, they are among the oldest professionals in the West, and it would seem strange not to find the Foulis brothers on the Wheaton links. Henry Turpie will remain at the Edgewater Golf Club. He started this month for a three months' engagement at the Audubon Golf Club of New Orleans, where the officials intend to bring their course up to first-class standards. The Edgewater Club may abandon its present grounds in a short time for more desirable quarters. Alexander Taylor will go to Exmoor. David McIntosh will go from Dayton, Ohio, to be the greenskeeper of the Westward Ho Club, and John Adams will take charge of the Hinsdale links.

The recent professional tournament at the Oakland Golf Club, Cal., the first big one of that character ever held on the Pacific Coast, was won by Horace Rawlins, the open champion in 1895, and who was a White Mountain professional during the Summer. He won the first prize of $100. The second, a purse of $50, was taken by Alexander Smith of Chicago. William Stephenson of the home club came in third, and James Melville of the Delmonti Club, California, was fourth. The competition was at 36 holes, and it was witnessed by the golfing fraternity of San Francisco and Oakland.

Boston golfers are again looking forward to the establishment of a local league, on lines similar to the Metropolitan Golf Association in this locality. The effort made in that direction last year failed of success owing to the coldness of several clubs, but a strong demand has arisen this Winter for the organization of the leading clubs. The league may take in a wider territory than the immediate Boston district, and it may be called the Massachusetts Golf League. At the coming annual meeting of the Wollaston Golf Club, it is expected that some definite plan of action may be adopted. If the Brookline Country Club, Myopia, Essex County, Oakley Country, and Wollaston all join forces to make the scheme a success, the union of golf clubs will be speedily formed, and the coming season may then witness the first Massachusetts championship.

Public golf links are evidently growing in favor, although outside of New York and Boston the public courses are not kept in the best playing condition. The latest indication in this respect is that the Denver, Col., golfers are making arrangements to lay out a public course in the suburbs of that city.

One of the golf courses in the South which has grown steadily in popularity during the last two years is the Pinehurst golf links, at Pinehurst, N. C. The course is owned by John W. Tufts of Boston, and several players from that city are now keeping the links in activity. One of the stars is Mrs. E. A. Manice of Pittsfield, Mass., who is well known as an able competitor in the recent women's amateur championship. The Rev. Philip M. Prescott of Washington, Merrill Waters of this city, and Dr. E. R. Pfarre of Brooklyn are among the other golfers.

YALE'S NEW ROWING SYSTEM.

Class Crews to be Formed and the 'Varsity Eight to be Selected from Them—Stroke to be Modified.

The rowing council at Yale University has become satisfied that the system used at Yale for so many years to develop 'Varsity and freshmen crews does not bring about the best results, and for this year an entirely new system has been adopted for crew training. Dr. Edson E. Gallaudet, the head coach, and Capt. Allen, at a recent dinner given at the Yale Club in New York, outlined a plan of working on class lines this year, a scheme indorsed by all the old Yale oarsmen present.

Immediately after the Junior Prom Capt. Allen, instead of issuing a call for 'Varsity crew candidates, will call for candidates for class crews, and it is expected that enough men will respond from the three upper classes to form ten of twelve eights. Each of these crews will have a head coach, who will be under the direction of Dr. Gallaudet. These squad coaches, each of whom will have several assistants, are all seasoned oarsmen, well fitted to teach the stroke. Capt. Allen will take personal charge of the freshmen and will have as assistants J. H. Niedecken and H. P. Wickes, members of last year's 'Varsity crew. The men chosen to take care of the other squads are: Seniors, J. P. Brock, 1900; juniors, F. Gordon Brown, 1901; sophomores, J. W. Cross, 1900.

The various crews will be kept at work in the tank learning the stroke until about the middle of March, when the men having done the best work will be sent out on the water to row in fours and eights. At about this time a college crew will be formed to meet an outside crew, probably that of Annapolis. With all these crews on the water, there will be plenty of seasoned material to draw from from the representative crews. Indeed, there will be no final selection of a 'Varsity crew until after the Spring regatta on Lake Saltonstall in May, so that every man in a class boat will have a chance to qualify for the 'Varsity crew until after the third week in May.

This new system should bring about a boom in rowing at Yale. It will lead to annual class races every year. Each class will develop crews for eights, fours, doubles, and even single sculls. A similar system was in vogue at Yale in the early seventies, and it was the means of bringing into prominence Julian W. Kennedy, one of the best amateur scullers the country ever had. At that time the Dunham Boat Club was used as a medium for training. An attempt was made last year, through the Dunham Boat Club, to develop 'Varsity oarsmen, but was not successful because of the lack of equipment at the boat house. It is thought that the new plan of working on class lines may be a little difficult at first, because of the lack of equipment at hand, but facilities of every description will be provided as soon as possible.

There is just such a system in vogue at Harvard. At the Cambridge University, instead of class crews, there are opposing boat clubs, the Weld and Newell. Both of these clubs develop crews that race during the Spring. The success of this system was plainly shown last year at New London.

There will be a slight change in the stroke at Yale this year, due to the fact that the wide blade will replace the English plan of narrow blade. This will necessitate the lengthening of the slide and the shortening of the swing. Last year's blade was six inches. The one adopted this year is seven inches wide.

BOATING PLANS AT YALE.

Great Effort Will Be Made to Get a Winning Eight.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 20.—Extensive plans are on foot to make boating at Yale this year the predominating feature in the athletic line. Capt. Allen of the Yale 'Varsity crew is determined to turn out a winning eight. He and Head Coach Gallaudet have devised a new training scheme from which they expect great results. The idea of the men is to have at least 100 oarsmen candidates for the regular eight. In order to get this number of men in training, an attempt will be made to organize three or four crews in each of the upper three classes. After the men of these crews have been in training for several months, Capt. Allen is of the opinion that he will find some fresh material for the regular university crew.

This plan is put in operation for a special reason. Nearly all the men who are styled as having sure seats in the boat of the 'Varsity crew the coming season will be graduated this year. This will give boating at Yale an unfavorable outlook for the next season. So the athletic managers are killing two birds with one stone in the contemplated arousing of boating interest among a larger number of students.

The call for the class crews will probably be made on Wednesday of this week. The fact is, unless some fresh material is put in the boat this year, that Yale's eight seats will be vacated in June. Capt. Allen and his fellow-crewmen all graduate. The managers feel that their places must be filled and from the largest squad of substitutes that can possibly be gathered.

Each of the class crews will have a coach, and all will be responsible to Head Coach Gallaudet. It is not now expected that any of the class crews or even the 'Varsity eight will be able to row in the harbor before the middle of March. From now on the practice work will be confined to the tanks in the gymnasium.

COACH WARD'S METHODS.

He Thinks Rowing Machine Practice Better than Tank Work.

Coach Ellis Ward, who has in the past two years turned out winning crews at the University of Pennsylvania, has nearly one hundred candidates for rowing honors under his care. Every afternoon the veteran coach has the men take exercise on the machines in squads of eight. Each squad of men occupy the machine for about twenty minutes, during which time the men are taught the rudiments of rowing, and are grounded in the principles of the catch, pull, recovery, and slide of the Ward stroke. With those who know the stroke the exercise is quite light.

Coach Ward is not a believer in tank work, using perforated oars, for Winter training. He thinks the rowing machine far superior. This advantage, he claims, lies in the fact that a man can be taught the stroke more easily, as in machine work the stroke is taken apart, so to speak—divided into catch, recovery, leg drive, and the like. In tank work, no matter how the oar is fixed, the man must pull it through the water. It is just the opposite in a boat. In the latter case the oar catches the water and the boat is pulled through. This stroke is very fatiguing to beginners. The coach has a number for each part of the stroke in machine work, and each man can go through each part of the stroke in response to the numbers as they are called by the coach.

At the University of Pennsylvania they have a way of testing a man's rowing strength by comparison. When the crews go out on the river early in March, two candidates are put in a pair-oared shell, each with one oar. If both pull with equal strength the boat will shoot straight ahead, but if one man pulls stronger than the other, the boat will swerve to that side.

POLO SEASON PROSPECTS.

Doubtful Whether an American Team Will Enter the International Contest in Paris—Lakewood Field.

H. L. Herbert, Chairman of the Polo Association, does not believe that this country will be represented by a polo team during the Paris Exposition. An international polo tournament is announced as one of the attractions, just as an international golf competition has been included among the probabilities. Those who play golf, whether in America, England, or India, play it according to certain fixed rules, but with polo it is different, as the French game differs considerably from the English game. Among other things, the French game allows the hooking of mallets, and some of the other rulings are less stringent than is the case on polo fields here. An American team, therefore, would have to be fully picked and do some playing together in order to master the strange rules and be able to meet international opponents on an equal footing.

"There is no doubt," said Mr. Herbert, "that a number of American polo players will be in Paris during the exposition, but it is not likely that many will be there at once, and I doubt if any man will take his ponies over, or otherwise go equipped to play polo on French grounds. It would be a very expensive undertaking, as you see, to make an effort to send over an American team, and, all rumors to the contrary, I do not believe our players will compete in a foreign tournament."

George Gould, who has been reported as going to France prepared to play polo, denies that he will play, although he expects to visit the exposition with his family. The polo games on the Lakewood field have ceased for the present, and no more playing will be done there until early in the Spring. That is, the big field will not be used until that time, probably in April, for the turf is too soft, and one day's playing now would do damage that could not be repaired by weeks of hard work. The indications are that George Gould will open the polo season in this locality by a series of club tournaments on his grounds. The Lakewood field will be in playable condition much earlier than others in this vicinity, and April and May will see a number of events taking place at that resort.

Frank J. Macky, one of the strongest players on the Onwentsia polo team of Chicago, is anxious that some of his Western friends should join him on the polo field of Paris this Summer. Mr. Macky has lived in England during the past year, where he has extensive stables at Leamington, Warwickshire, and he has become as well known among English polo men as he is here. He made a reputation three years ago, when he took a team of English players to Paris, among whom was J. W. Drybrough, who was killed in a polo game in England last Summer. Mr. Macky himself rides American polo ponies entirely, and on more than one occasion they have proved vastly superior to those ridden by his rivals. His English team won first place in a big Paris tournament and returned covered with laurels.

THE PIANOLA

PRICE $250

is an instrument by means of which any one can play the piano

Can be bought by monthly payments if desired.

WHEREVER THERE IS A PIANO THERE SHOULD BE A PIANOLA.

Pianola being placed in position to play upright piano.

The PIANOLA is the only piano player which has been endorsed by musicians.

When not in use the Pianola may be easily detached and removed to another part of the room. The Pianola can be used in connection with any Grand or Upright Piano, and does not in any way mar or disfigure the instrument. It can be adjusted by any one.

It is bringing into use thousands of pianos which have been silent for many years.

It is making players of people who, lacking musical training, had never expected to experience the pleasure of producing music for themselves.

It is increasing the repertory of amateur and professional pianists by making the entire literature of the piano available without study and without practice.

THE AEOLIAN COMPANY, 18 West 23d Street, New York.

Newark (N. J.) Representative, LAUTER CO., 657-659 Broad Street.

AMONG THE THOROUGHBREDS.

Two thoroughbred mares consigned to William C. Whitney arrived in this city Thursday afternoon in John Miller's special car from Lexington, Ky. It is said that they may be shipped at once to Europe.

***

Another handsome two-year-old filly by Kingston was among the arrivals from Lexington Friday. Philip Dwyer owns the youngster, which was sent at once to his stables, where it will be placed in training at an early date.

***

Word was received from McCabe's yesterday to the effect that His Royal Highness had begun work on the Brooklyn track.

***

Kris Kringle, the Western crack, which was purchased by J. W. Colt a short time ago for $3,000, was the stellar passenger in Wilson's car from the West

Letters From Readers on Various Timely Topics

THE ELSBERG AND FORD BILLS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In last Sunday's TIMES Mr. Agar, late member of the Board of Education, made an exhaustive review of the condition, defects, and possible remedies appertaining to the city school system.

In another column was a very compact letter by Principal Ettinger, President of the Manhattan Teachers' Association. The contrast between the breadth of treatment by Mr. Agar and the tendency to contraction of treatment by Mr. Ettinger is decidedly marked. The latter sums up his brief review with, "Let the Legislature deal with teachers' salaries first, school administration afterward."

Now, this is precisely what Mr. Ettinger entreated the Legislature to do last Winter, and it consented to do so—"deal with teachers' salaries first and school administration afterward." The gentlemen interested in other bills waived their claims and allowed the Ahearn bill to pass. The result has been just what was foreseen—pandemonium ever since about unpaid salaries. The "afterward" which Mr. Ettinger speaks of is now again at hand. He, however, again asks the two gentlemen, whose ideas of legislation are at least as comprehensive as his own, to again stand aside and listen to his plans about salaries. Is there nothing in a school system to be considered but salaries? Is not good administration for both pupils and teachers necessary? Why, before any structure is even complete the process of decay sets in. The school system is not exempt from this natural law. I cannot believe that the motives of true teachers are as mercenary and selfish as represented, or that they are so eager for increases as to fail to see the need of permanent provision for revenue and improved administration.

It is improbable that more than a small per cent. of the teachers have read Section 1,091 as amended in Mr. Elsberg's bill. It is safe to say, however, that it is more liberal in its provisions for every member of the school force than the most sanguine hopes of any one of them had dared to anticipate. Even superannuated Superintendents are well cared for. Would it not be well to print slips of this Section 1,091 as amended and circulate them among the teachers? Let them get their information from the original source rather than from hearsay and from committees that are coached to misrepresent.

The Elsberg and the Ford bills are supplementary, and together provide a cure for most of the evils our children and class teachers meet in the schools. The rest must be trust in wise administration, which is the most rare blessing. Let each class teacher have in hand a few slips of Section 1,091 as amended ready to give to any associate who has a complaint to offer.

New York, Jan. 16, 1900. A CITIZEN.

SOCIALISM CLEARLY DEFINED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Judging from the editorial comments and from the letter of Mr. Conyngton there seems to be a confusion of thought as to what Socialism is.

Socialism is based upon and is a natural law of evolution. It is not a theory but a recognition of inevitable conditions that are working out their own ends. Consider for one moment the methods of production of today and fifty or sixty years ago. In the period referred to the individual effort produced its result; the producer with his hands got in numberless instances the full product of his labor; the business man embarked with his small capital and made a success; but with the growth of population and the era of machinery, competition ran its race and landed in utter failure; 96 per cent. of the men who embark in business to-day fail, hence the wisdom of co-operation naturally superseding such a wasteful and destructive system. Manufacturers banded together in self-defense and formed the modern trust. Mr. Conyngton pithily remarks that Socialists of extreme views are watching the advent of trusts with a view to State Socialism as their ultimate end. The living issue for the masses will be subordination under trust management or subordination under State Socialism. Here is where Mr. Conyngton strikes a snag and shows he has not grasped the principles of Socialism, but his statement of subordination under the trusts is perfectly correct. The logical outcome of trusts must inevitably end in two classes—masters and slaves. His conception of State Socialism is evidently based on military interpretation of the Emperor William kind and is not Socialism at all.

Under Socialism proper the whole people will form the Government under the principle of the initiative, referendum, and imperative mandate. This elective principle with its power of recall will apply to the conducting of public affairs as well as in all branches of the industrial co-operation effected. The most efficient and conscientious servers of the people will alone maintain their position, and only so long as they continue to do so. The captains of industry will be servants and not, as now, masters of the people.

Individualism will have the greatest scope, but it will be an individualism not of selfishness, but service, with the honors and merits far higher than the titles so eagerly sought to-day.

The means of production will be even more centralized than the trust of to-day. Each man under public ownership of machinery will get the full product of his labor according to his deeds. In no way will the right of property so accumulated be interfered with.

The means of transportation and communication will be owned by the people themselves, and the men engaged therein will conduct the business, electing the most competent as managers and Directors, and recalling the incompetent and untrustworthy.

Under Socialism money and its functions will be properly understood, and the monetary system of to-day will be a thing of the past. The care of the aged, the sick, the demented, and the deformed will be emphasized in marked tenderness and care, and no ban of pauperism will be known. The idle and lazy and worthless will have to work or starve.

Socialism, in short, is the co-operation of all for the benefit of all. Trustism is Socialism for the few at the expense and destruction of the many. To-day the machine is a curse. Under Socialism it will be a blessing, lightening labor and shortening hours. This may seem to be a dream, but bear in mind it is environment that makes the man. Change the environment and the man will change with it. WILLIAM SAUL.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 14, 1900.

A "LIMITED SOCIALIST'S" VIEW.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see you pursue the subject of the proper distribution of wealth. It does seem to me that in your three or four articles, and especially in a long letter from a friend of Mr. Carnegie's you argue only upon the surface of the question. Your first article justified the possession of great wealth by the generosity of the holder. Your second article shifted the ground to the statement that a shallow socialism would destroy individualism. Perhaps a shallow socialism would.

Merely to declare that the advocates of a reform are disgruntled or visionary does not or ought not to strengthen the other side. A defender of things as they are is not deep or observant who does not know that many men are working brilliantly and successfully under the present system who realize its evils, and are fighting strenuously for what they believe to be an attainable ideal.

As to the suppression of individualism, you quite give your case away when you state the fact that individualism is to a large extent already smothered. This is so not by the efforts of Socialists, shallow or otherwise, but by the natural and unforeseen growth of vast combinations engineered by men who think they are anything but Socialists. This is a fact, not a theory. If a company can sell shoes at $3 people are not going to pay $6 in order that men may start shops and cultivate individuality. In the modern competitive world utility and cheapness must drive all before them.

The Prayer Book tells the humble individual to be satisfied in that condition to which God has called him. The American has believed that God has called him to where he can get. As a result individualism for personal gain has stopped at nothing, from the man who holds up a railroad train to the capitalist and shrewd lawyers who hold up the whole road. Vast fortunes have been made by honesty and ability, by every kind of shrewdness and fraud, and by blind luck. Out of this riot of individualism has come a certain order where here and there a supreme individualist stands on a mountain of stocks and bonds. We are all Socialists to some extent—even the editor of THE TIMES. But there are innumerable limited Socialists like the writer who do not believe that these supreme individualists are the best expression of individualism. We see that these fortunes are the result of monopoly almost invariably. But whatever one may think of the original accumulator, what are we to say of that other supreme individualist, the multi-millionaire baby? We often wonder what this five or ten pounds of human pulp is thinking of. In the case of the multi-millionaire baby of course we know. He employs a vast army of labor, and he is thinking of that. He endows colleges, he founds art schools, and hospitals, and he is thinking of them. And so he grows up thinking of the wise benefactions by which he justifies his wealth. Or is it of baronial castles in the South, of palaces at Newport, of automobiles, and horses that he thinks. Having attained his majority, he finds that by energy and ability he has doubled his fortune, and can now marry the multi-millionaire playmate across the way and help found that aristocracy of wealth which Dr. Huntington strangely says we don't possess. I believe many intelligent people scarcely realize that these babies merely inherit certain pieces of paper which enable them to tax the great and grateful public. I say grateful, for why should they otherwise double the babies' fortunes for them?

We believe that the Government can control all great public affairs, and that the individualist who wishes to control and manage them can find scope for his ability and energy in serving the public for a fair reward, instead of working for his own pocket all the time. We do not believe that men of great executive ability are more mercenary than clergymen or poets or men of science. The splendid services, scantily paid, of many men in the army or navy, or the civil Government disprove it.

Destroy monopoly in land and in franchises of all sorts and you cut the ground from under most of these great fortunes, but you do not destroy the men. They are there yet. Outside of what the Government ought to control it is already proved that a system of co-operation is possible where every man may receive a fair share. It is not necessary that there should be one boss individualist who swallows and owns all the little individuals in the company, as capital is but the sum of the earnings of all.

Mr. Carnegie says, I believe, that no man should die a multi-millionaire. The President of the State Bar Association, assembled at Albany, favors the confiscation of all over $10,000,000 bequeathed to any person. These are signs of an irrepressible conflict. The strength of the conservative lies not in his reasonableness, but in the enormous inertia that belongs to an established system. But a glacier moves, though we may not see it, and the editor of THE TIMES is on that glacier. B. H. NADAL.

New York, Jan. 18, 1900.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The American Continental policy of the United States is something very much larger than the platform in which President Monroe, in 1823, defined the attitude of the United States toward the schemes of the "Holy Alliance" with respect to this hemisphere. The great powers of Continental Europe were meditating both a restoration to Spain of her lost colonies and a seizing, for their own behoof or for that of Spain, of the "unoccupied" territories of the Americas. On both of these points President Monroe declared the purpose of the United States: We would stand neutral in Spain's quarrel with her revolted colonies; we could not regard with indifference an armed alliance of the European powers with Spain against them; in this western world there is no "unoccupied territory" in the civilian's understanding of the phrase; we must regard as a menace to the peace of these continents any settlements hereafter founded by European Governments upon so-called "unoccupied" territory in the Western Hemisphere. That was as much as the occasion called for from President Monroe; in England's opinion it was more than the occasion called for, though England stood with us in opposing the powers banded for the subjugation of our southern neighbors, she had no mind to halt in her career of expansion, and insisted that "the whole of the 'unoccupied' parts of America should remain open to her future settlements as before." In such terms as these does the Monroe Doctrine of 1823 formulate so much of what we may call the instinctive American continental policy as the then existing state of affairs required, and no more. That declaration of continental policy being plainly pro re nata, the National consciousness found in it only partial expression; nevertheless "Monroe Doctrine" became a popular name for our international policy regarding this hemisphere. But what American since Monroe's day, or in Monroe's day, ever used the phrase as signifying only what Monroe declared in the message of Dec. 2, 1823, or John Quincy Adams in communications to the Governments of England and Russia in the July previous? In the mind of the people of the United States the Monroe Doctrine has ever meant America for Americans; this hemisphere for the people that inhabit it, yet with allowance of continued possession of their existing colonial territories by the English, the French, the Dutch, there shall be no expansion of European dominions in America by occupation of territory before held in sovereignty by any American State; if there arise disputes about boundaries between such European colonial possessions and American States, such disputes may be determined by diplomacy or by arbitration. From a recent interpretaton of the doctrine it would appear that the people of the United States will not suffer such disputes to be decided by the rule of force in the first instance, for such was the "order from Washington" in 1895 which made the grab policy of a certain great power, not Germany, "ridiculous," and that "order from Washington" was held by Congress and the great mass of the American people to be an expression of their understanding of the Monroe Doctrine.

But now THE NEW YORK TIMES tells us that if the German Emperor shall by negotiation win possession of Brazil or any part of the territory of Brazil "the United States will not undertake in any way to prevent the transaction." On what ground is this large license granted to Emperor William? On this, that in Mr. Cleveland's celebrated Venezuela message it is said that "any adjustment of the boundary which Venezuela may deem for her advantage and may enter into of her own free will cannot be objected to by the United States." Now, does the passage in any way define American policy in the case of an intrusion of Germany, either by force or by peaceful negotiation, into the family of American States and colonies? What question of boundaries exists between Germany and any American State? None. THE TIMES admits; but then "what is true of adjustment of boundary is also true of any other policy involving possession of territory," hence "if Germany wants any part or the whole of Brazil, and can persuade that republic to convey it freely and of its own will, the United States will not undertake in any way to prevent the transaction."

Your consequence is not involved in Mr. Cleveland's dictum. What is true of adjustment of boundary is not also true of acquisition of territory by a government that is not conterminous and that is entirely foreign to these continents. Mr. Cleveland contended against British occupation of territory claimed to be Venezuelan, and compelled the aggressor government to submit the question of boundary to arbitration. Therein acting in full accordance with the Monroe declaration of the American continental policy, which expressly recognized the right of England to go on governing territory at that time possessed by her, and, as a necessary incident of such sovereignty, the inevitableness of boundary disputes. These disputes might be settled by negotiation or they might be decided by war.

In either case the United States might with entire consistency stand neutral. The United States has submitted to arbitration or to diplomatic settlement many a controversy over boundaries. Are we to suppose that she will ever submit to arbitration her sovereignty over Minnesota or Maine? Is what is true of adjustment of boundaries between British Columbia and Alaska true of English occupation of territory hitherto admittedly American?

Unless the American people, in this era of good feeling and expansionism, are ready to turn their backs upon the Monroe Doctrine and the whole continental policy of the United States, Germany will do wisely if she strengthens her navy very considerably before she commences her colonizing projects in Brazil. In the words of Monroe, "It is impossible that we should behold in any form of indifference" the founding of a German imperial colony anywhere upon these continents. With Jefferson, the people of the United States will oppose the transfer to a European power of any part of this Western Hemisphere, whether by "conquest, cession, or acquisition in any way." With Lewis Cass, they will "by force if necessary, resist the acquisition of dominion on the continent by any European power, by whatever mode, or however declared." These American statesmen are quoted here not as authorities—the American continental policy is no scholasticism and needs no confirmation from statesmen or civilians—but simply as organs of American National sentiment. The doctrine called of Monroe is a fundamental article of the American political creed.

JOSEPH FITZGERALD.

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Jan. 18, 1900.

GEN. MAURY AND COL. CURTIS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your Saturday issue, in the Topics of the Times, you relate some interesting incidents in the life of Gen. Dabney H. Maury. You may wish to give space for a short story in two parts, in which he and a citizen of your State were the principal characters.

In the battle of Drury's Farm, Virginia, May 16, 1864—the one in which Gen. Grant said Gen. Butler was bottled up—Gen. D. H. Maury commanded a brigade in the army of Gen. Beauregard, which attacked early in the morning, under cover of a dense fog, the Army of the James, then operating under the personal command of and on the plans of Gen. B. F. Butler. Gen. W. F. Smith commanded the Eighteenth Corps, and occupied the ground between the James River and the Mechanicsville and Petersburg Pike. Gen. Quincy A. Gilmore commanded the Tenth Corps, which was stationed south of the pike; Terry's division was on the left of the line, and Gen. J. W. Turner's between Terry and the pike. The One Hundred and Forty-second New York Volunteers had been brought up the night of the 15th, but were not put into the line until after the engagement had commenced and the Confederates had driven back the whole line except Turner's division. Then Gen. Turner ordered Col. Curtis to take a position near a piece of woods, some forty rods north of the line of the division as then formed, perhaps fifty rods south of the Petersburg Pike, and to hold it until the division could be withdrawn, after which Curtis was to retire in the best manner possible; in plain words, the One Hundred and Forty-second was to be sacrificed, if necessary, to save the division. This fact was patent to both Turner and Curtis at the time. Terry's division was retreating at the time the One Hundred and Forty-second was ordered forward, and the left of Turner's line was already moving to the rear. The position was gained without difficulty, and while held the regiment was not sharply engaged with the enemy in front.

The regiment was not long in position when a brigade of Confederate troops marched east on the Petersburg Pike, carrying their arms at "a right shoulder shift," and after passing by Curtis's regiment halted and ordered arms. Several mounted men, probably the brigade staff, gathered near the head of the line, and soon after two mounted men rode toward the One Hundred and Forty-second. About the time the brigade in the road halted, those in front of the One Hundred and Forty-second ceased firing, at which time all the regiments of Turner's division, except that nearest the One Hundred and Forty-second, had left the front, but Curtis would have disobeyed orders had he moved before the regiment on his left. When it faced to the rear and took one step, Curtis commanded, "About face, double quick, march," and the best running it ever did was in getting over the twenty-five rods to a ravine. When the order to face about was given, the Confederate mounted officers were more than half a mile away from the road to the One Hundred and Forty-second, and in a direct line between the two forces, the best position to prevent the troops in the road from firing on the retreating Yankees, which they could not safely do until the officers were out of the line of fire. This advantage was improved, and the One Hundred and Forty-second was most energetically urged to the ravine in its front. As soon as the troops in front of the position occupied by the One Hundred and Forty-second could come over the clearing and the brigade in the road could face by the rear rank they all opened fire upon the retreating regiment, which was comparatively safe after it entered the ravine, and leisurely marched about one mile to the east and joined the army, where it was warmly congratulated by the division commander for escaping after it had been regarded as virtually captured. In the morning there were about 800 men in line. Of this number 119 were left in a space of twenty-five rods—killed or wounded. None were captured not disabled.

The second part took place in Richmond in April, 1865. Gen. Curtis was chief of Gen. E. O. C. Ord's staff. Gen. Ord commanded the Army of the James and Department of Virginia and North Carolina. On the day of Curtis's arrival in Richmond, which was before the armies returned from Appomattox, he was taken by James H. Grant to the latter's house, and treated as a welcome guest, not because there were any bonds of sympathy between them, but because, in the state of disorder following the occupation of Richmond by colored troops, many of the people were terrified and in a state of utter despair—so that a Federal officer in a Richmond house was regarded as the best protection possible at the time. The Grants were a prominent and wealthy family, and generous dispensers of true Virginia hospitality, as understood in the best days of the Old Dominion. Grant's house and ample grounds adjoined the Executive Mansion, and Mrs. Grant was one of Mrs. Davis's closest friends. The Grants were indefatigable in looking after their less fortunate friends, and daily had every seat at their table occupied by those who had been active participants in the late contest. At one time Gen. Stevens, the engineer officer who planned and constructed the works on the south side of the James, from the outer line of which Gen. Butler's army had been repulsed May 16, 1864, with Gen. D. H. Maury and two other officers, were at dinner when the host asked Gen. Stevens how he had passed the day—it must be known time hung heavily on the hands of the prominent Confederates, and on none more so than those who had been officers of our military and naval service, as both Stevens and Maury had been.

Gen. Stevens replied that he had been inspecting the battlefield of May 16, 1864, and was glad to know that his engineering works had contributed to the success of Gen. Beauregard on that day.

Stevens's reference to the battle brought Gen. Maury into the conversation, who said he witnessed on that day one of the most foolhardy incidents he had seen in the entire war, and went on to relate his operations in the early morning, and later of his having been sent down the Petersburg Pike with his brigade to clear up as many Yankees as possible—a large number had already been captured from the Eighteenth Corps. He found, he said, a large regiment with new uniforms and bright guns stationed near a piece of woods, about fifty rods south of the pike. He marched his brigade past the regiment and halted, believing that a demand for its surrender would, under the circumstances, be promptly complied with, for which purpose he dispatched two officers to make the demand and conduct the regiment to Richmond, where he intended to exhibit it to the Confederate authorities, when, much to his surprise and chagrin, he saw, before his officers could reach the regiment, it face about and start to the rear at a double-quick. He opened fire as soon as possible on the retreating regiment, as did the troops on coming out of the woods in front of the position they had so suddenly left. It soon entered a ravine, from which it emerged beyond his fire, and he saw what he had regarded as a most valuable trophy irretrievably lost. He found on the field more than 100 men killed or wounded; probably nine-tenths escaped. Gen. Maury supposed the story would be new to every person at the table. His friends expressed their regrets that he should have suffered the loss of so valuable a prize as a full regiment. He then turned to Curtis and said:

"This regiment was from New York, but I cannot give the name of its Colonel or its number, but it was in the One Hundred and Forties or One Hundred and Fifties. Can you tell me of its history, and how soon it was destroyed by its reckless commander of that day? As for the Colonel, I have no doubt he was early disabled or killed."

Curtis gave the numbers of the New York regiments engaged in that battle, reserving the One Hundred and Forty-second for the last. When that was named, Gen. Maury said:

"That is the regiment; its Colonel's horse was killed, a prisoner said, in the earlier part of the action," and then proceeded to express his unqualified disapproval of an officer's taking such chances to avoid capture—chances not likely to be attended with success once in a hundred times.

Curtis replied that the regiment was last engaged in the assault on Fort Fisher, N. C., and was then with the army operating against Johnston. It was and had been in a condition to perform efficient work, and had had its full share of losses, but by the addition of recruits it had been able to take into action as many men as the average regiments of the army in which it had served.

Gen. Maury asked: "What has become of the reckless Colonel? When was he killed or disabled?"

Curtis replied: "The Colonel is yet alive," somewhat battered, it is true, but still doing duty. It affords me pleasure to present to you what is left of him," as Curtis put his hand to his breast—"and to express the satisfaction he has always felt that he did not accept your escort to Richmond, although for the best part of three years he was among those who earnestly endeavored to reach Richmond; but when he saw your eagerness to conduct him he suddenly felt that he did not want to go."

Gen. Maury replied: "You will remember I have not in my criticism questioned your bravery, but your discretion. And I still think, notwithstanding you saved a large part of your regiment, that your conduct was not justified."

"We differ," said Curtis; "while the loss was great, it is not to be compared with the loss of a regiment, which in all probability would not have been exchanged in time to have been of any service to the army." And he believed, as he had throughout the whole war, that a commander who decides that it is better to be killed than captured, unless actually ambushed, will, in a majority of cases, escape both death and defeat. J.

New York, Jan. 14, 1900.

EARLY IRISH CIVILIZATION.

My attention has been drawn to a controversy now being waged in your columns. I desire with your permission to say a few words on some of the matters in discussion. Some one referred to Father Thomas Burke, O. P., as a "great Irish scholar." There is surely some mistake here. He was a renowned preacher in the English tongue, whose knowledge of Ireland and Irish history was acquired through an English medium. But there is no evidence to show that as an Irishman he was anything more than a stark illiterate. History comes into dispute. It is well to bear in mind that history judges past events solely on the testimony of unimpeachable and, if possible, contemporary records. Therefore the only rational dispute about a historical fact is one concerned with the interpretation and classification of evidence. In deciding what evidence is admissible, it is universally conceded that we must discriminate against the following: First, the desire of any one, however burning, that things already passed into act should be otherwise, and, second, mere abnormal vigor of assertion. Yet, to the confusion of all well-grounded testimony, those are the only criteria sustaining Mr. Rhead's round assertion that "neither priest nor layman, learned or unlearned, can prove that Ireland since the flood was more civilized than England." In the face of this consider the real testimony:

1. All the annals of Ireland and England corroborate each other in maintaining that the English could neither bless themselves nor write their names until they met with the priests from St. Columb Cille's Monastery at Hi.

2. English students continued to fill the schools of Ireland for many centuries, receiving education, board, and lodging gratis. See accounts of the colleges at Bangor, Armagh, Lismore, and Mayo. From that circumstance the last-mentioned place is called "Mayo of the Saxons" to this day.

3. The oldest English is written on an Irish phonetic scheme, a proof that Irishmen first wrote the language. This may be evinced by a comparison of the earliest Anglo-Saxon documents with contemporary Irish material.

4. The English used the peculiar Irish letters and system of caligraphy down to the Norman conquest.

As to manuscripts, the Book of Kells, preserved in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, in the centre case on the right hand as you go up, is considered by Mr. Westwood, the best living English authority on the subject, as "the illuminated glory of the Western World" and "the most beautiful illuminated book in the world." Mr. Rhead seems disappointed at not finding a more abundant crop of manuscripts "executed before the second century." I am sure the learned world would be extremely obliged to him if he would only mention where he had seen any such. We are told with all gravity that "the word Celt or Kelt means singer," and it is put forward on the authority of the Century Dictionary that "they (the Kelts) all came originally from France and Northern Italy." It seems a great pity that those masters of special research who devote their lives to the solution of puzzles in this domain are not provided with a copy of the Century Dictionary. There they would have an authority that would plump them an assertion with the calm irresponsibility and rigidity of muscle that distinguishes a stone sphinx. But, alas for the ages of unfolding simplicity, there are Philistines now who would ask where the Century people got all that! Some persons think it is good trade to cheat their schoolmaster and invest the proceeds in an Encyclopaedia or a big dictionary. Unfortunately in quoting his sole authority Mr. Rhead classifies himself. As I do not happen to possess a copy of the work in question, perhaps there is a want of commensurability in our ways at looking at things that renders futile all efforts at intelligible argumentation. And so I desist.

The rest of his communication is made up of things that mildly move my wonder or are frankly too much for me. Why history should square itself not with the original facts and documents, but rather with statements made a thousand years later mainly by people who were not there, is among the first kind of things; the second are those places where the whirl of ideas having become too hot the grammar is inclined to run. Yet what one may discern a fine, unconscious placidity in Mr. Rhead. His citing the Century Dictionary, his confidences with the "distinguished French artist," and endless little graces of the kind mark him as belonging to that grand old generation that is now passing away, one possessed of that robust and vigorous innocence which still wafts an occasional wholesome breath into those grim and garish days of ours. But will his appearance in THE TIMES be universally interpreted as evidence that the editor holds the intellectual status of his New York readers in the very highest regard?

RICHARD HENEBRY, Ph. D.,
Professor of Keltic Languages in the Catholic University at Washington, D. C.
Jan. 19, 1900.

ANOTHER REPLY TO MR. RHEAD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter of Mr. Louis Rhead in your issue of the 13th inst., under the heading "A Reply to Mr. McLaughlin," contains as many assertions not founded upon fact and as many false conclusions arrived at from false premises as it would be possible to crowd into so small a space. With your permission, I will first point out one of his many glaring absurdities, and then deal with the contention which he advances.

In attempting to discount the overwhelming evidence which exists of the superiority of the early civilization of Ireland to that of England, Mr. Rhead states that the abbeys and monasteries of England were ravaged by the Norsemen, the Danes, and the Romans, and the works of art, &c., were thus destroyed, while Ireland escaped from these marauders. That is to say, the Romans, who came to England in the year 55 B. C., and left there A. D. 410, destroyed abbeys, &c., not one of which was erected before the eighth or ninth century! Mr. Rhead asserts that "neither priest nor layman, learned nor unlearned, can prove that Ireland since the flood was more civilized than England, Scotland, or Wales." Let us see.

Dr. Heinrich Zimmer, Professor of Philology in the University of Greifswald, Germany, in the "Preussische Jahrbücher" in 1891, (published by Putnam in English in 1891,) says: "Ireland can, indeed, lay claim to a great past; she can not only boast of having been the birthplace and abode of high culture in the fifth and sixth centuries, * * * but also of having made strenuous efforts in the seventh and up to the tenth century to spread her learning among the German and Romance peoples, thus forming the actual foundation of our present Continental civilization." What were the English doing at this time?

M. Darmesteter, the eminent French authority on early history, says:

"* * * The Renaissance began in Ireland 700 years before it was known in Italy. During three centuries Ireland was the asylum of the higher learning which took sanctuary there from the uncultured States of Europe. At one time Armagh, the religious capital of Christian Ireland, was the metropolis of civilization." What about London?

Dr. Holger Pedersen, Professor of Ancient Languages in the University of Copenhagen, writing in an American publication in 1899, says:

"* * * It is the Irish nation that bestowed mediaeval learning upon Europe. It is the Irish nation that possesses the most wonderful mediaeval literature, and the Irish language is the most interesting language in Europe."

Perhaps the learned professor meant "English" instead of "Irish."

Of this literature Dr. Douglas Hyde says that "the remnant preserved from destruction by the Danes and the English would fill 1,400 octavo volumes, and probably more." The most important remains of it are found in Trinity College, Dublin; Maynooth, the British Museum, the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and in Milan, St. Gall, and Berne, Switzerland; Vienna, Würtemberg, Carlsruhe, &c. Mr. Rhead intimates that this literature is of modern make-up, (a philological impossibility,) because a "French artist" assured him that "not one of them is genuine." The manuscripts at Milan, St. Gall, Würtemburg, and Berne were edited and published by at least four distinguished scholars, viz., Ascoli, Vigra, Stokes, and Zeuss, the last of whom being the great German pioneer and master of modern Celtic research, and Stokes the greatest living authority upon the old Irish (language.) Are we to accept their testimony or Mr. Rhead's nameless "French artist"?

Westwood, the English authority on early art in the British Islands, said: "Were it not for Irishmen these Islands would contain no primitive works of art worth mentioning. The Book of Kells is unquestionably the most elaborately executed manuscript of so early a date now in existence."

Mr. Ernest Smith of the School of Mines, London, ("Transactions," 1863,) testified to the superior quality and greater quantity of Irish gold ornaments in the Bronze Age, and "Prehistoric Art," by Thomas Wilson, published by the Smithsonian Institution, United States National Museum, 1898, states: "The Archaeological Museum in Dublin is probably the richest in gold objects of any in Europe."

These cover the field of civilization generally, and of its evidences in language, literature, and art. As to music, concerning which Mr. Rhead is equally at sea, I would recommend that he attend the lectures now being given by Mrs. Helen O'Donnell of this society on "Irish Music," under the auspices of the New York Board of Education, in the printed synopsis of which he will find "chapter and verse" of the authorities quoted from.

As to the decline of Irish civilization, Dr. Zimmer, in the work before mentioned, says it was owing to the subjugation of Ireland by the English. Miss Margaret Stokes, the highest authority of the day on Irish art, has written: "Since the Norman invasion all the native character of Ireland has best found expression in her music—a music purely Celtic and, whether in illumination of the sacred writings, or in gold or bronze or stone, was wrought by Irish hands after that century."

Mr. Rhead objects to the testimony of "priests, mostly Irish," but of the above authorities there is not one priest, not one Catholic, and only three Irish. But they are scholars, who, from a thorough acquaintance with the Irish and other early languages, are fully equipped to make their researches at first hand. Mr. Rhead has made a bold assertion, (I won't use the adjective he applied to Fr. McLaughlin's statements,) and I now beg to say to him that he cannot substantiate it with the evidence of one person who is qualified as a witness, and that he cannot find a single scholar in a position to controvert the authorities herein named. He evidently reads in the old or English school, whose writers, under the influence of racial prejudice and bigotry, sought without the capacity for thorough investigation, to color facts according to their tastes. He should read for a while in the new school, the leaders of which are Germans and Frenchmen whose scholarship is thorough, accurate, and unbiased, and with whom research is a science, not an end for misrepresentation and slander.

Should Mr. Rhead desire to honestly study this subject, upon which he has been so grossly misled, this society will be only too glad to afford him the facilities for doing so.

WILLIAM J. BALFE.
Secretary the Gaelic Society.
New York, Jan. 14, 1900.

IRELAND AND THE BOER WAR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From the standpoint of an American sympathizing with the kindly, generous Irish people in their efforts to obtain certain rights and privileges to which they deem themselves entitled there are some strange inconsistencies that tend to perplex the ordinary comprehension. In one of Kipling's stories of India he states that British legislation for the supposed benefit of that country is often futile because of the inability of any ordinary European to understand the workings of the native mind. Similar conditions, I fear, have much to do with Ireland's possible misrule.

In view of the disendowment of the Established Church, which has thus given perfect religious freedom to Ireland, followed by the Land act of 1881, under which the rents of lands in Ireland will be judicially reduced by 1908 to a yearly rental of $19,673,620, a very considerable amount below $39,831,426, the amount at which agriculture rent stood in 1878; again, by the Land Purchase act of 1885, whereby 1,686,173 acres of land have passed from the control of 2,889 landlords to 48,529 resident freeholders through money loaned by the English Government, and but recently the overthrow of the old Grand Jury system of county control, and the substitution of the people's government, it would seem that at last Ireland was about to realize "home rule" in its entirety. As if in answer to the prayers of her martyred heroes, now comes the opportunity to win nearly all that they died for. How is it received? In the House of Parliament we find the Irish members opposing every measure prompted by patriotism. In the public press and at all public meetings we find them sneering at the struggle of the British for supremacy in South Africa, and rejoicing over British defeat.

To an American viewing the matter without prejudice this seems not only unpatriotic, but decidedly impolitic. Whatever the British Government may be, it is the best the Irish have; it is their Government; they are an integral part of it, and they ought to stand by it in time of need. Lack of patriotism is not an American failing, and can never win true American sympathy. Suppose that during our brief war with Spain the Southern section of our country, remembering old grievances, should have opposed our efforts and prayed for our defeat? Would we now invest our capital with them or favor their desires in Congress? On the contrary, they stood by the Government, backed up an Administration which they did not elect, proved themselves, first of all, Americans, and instead of criticising, enlisted. And now—what they ask from Congress they will get. The inexplicable workings of the Irish mind are quite as apparent here as in Ireland. We have in this country over 4,000,000 so-called Irish-American voters, not one-fifth of whom ever saw Ireland. The remainder, being Americans by birth and education, should, according to the American way of thinking, be Americans and let the Irish in Ireland attend to their own affairs. Why should they worry any more over the past wrongs of Ireland than over the former woes of England, Scotland, or Poland?

Because the Ancient Order of Hibernians, with its comparatively small membership of 170,000, chooses to forget that its individual members are mostly American citizens, who at times almost compromise the land of their adoption, need the entire 4,000,000 Irish-Americans blindly follow their example?

I love the Irish for their kindly ways; for "the latchstring outside of the door"; for the tender sentiment they have embodied in song and story. From that little island have come many of the most brilliant minds in history, whose eloquence will be remembered when many notable Anglo-Saxons are forgotten. Why cannot they add to all this a record for consistency, a power of diplomacy? Let the men of Ireland cease to waste any maudlin sympathy on a people with whom they have absolutely nothing in common; who detest their religion, and dislike their race. Let them stand by their Government, good or bad, in its time of trouble. Let them show Great Britain and the world that they are patriotic, reliable, and to be depended on in the hour of need; that they acquiesce in the will of the majority, and are capable of self-government. Thus only shall they pave the way for Ireland's local self-government, and their cause appeal more strongly to, and themselves be better understood by AN AMERICAN.

New York, Jan. 16, 1900.

A Historical Parallel.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last night's dinners of the Holland Society and the Irish Historical Society in this Tammany-ridden city of free and enlightened America are a spectacle to wonder and laugh at. Dutch Ultra-Protestants and Irish Catholics, whose ultimate principles are wide as the poles asunder, uniting to vilify the English, reminds me of the alliance of the Pharisees and their hated opponents, the Herodians, about 1,900 years ago. England may not be an ideal nation, but she stands for religious toleration, political freedom, civilization, enlightenment, justice, and equal commercial rights the world over. HISTORICUS.

New York Produce Exchange, Jan. 19, 1900.

EXPENSE OF PATENT LITIGATION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some letters have appeared in THE TIMES in regard to the desirability of lessening the expenses of patent litigation. One correspondent suggests that the Government should assume the enforcement of a patent. This plan would rival the pension roll in cost, for every patentee, having nothing to pay, would find an infringement case and call upon the Government. I doubt if, at present, one patent in a thousand ever goes to suit.

Our Government has a more elaborate and thorough system of examining before granting a patent than any other. But it would be impossible to make any examination based upon records that would be so thorough as that disclosed in a suit, for there witnesses may be examined from all parts of the country, and they disclose vital facts in regard to the supposed invention of which there is no public record. Undoubtedly the customary method of prosecuting or defending a suit in equity for an injunction and account in a patent case is very costly; prohibitively so many times. When the cause has gone to issue the evidence is taken before an examiner, in writing, and is then printed for the use of the Court at the hearing. Although under the rule there are but three months allowed for both sides to take proofs, yet, in practice, many months, and sometimes years, are used for that purpose.

I have tried to introduce the plan that prevails in the New Jersey Court of Chancery. There the witnesses may be examined orally; the official stenographer takes down the evidence, and all questions of evidence and pleading are at once passed upon by the Chancellor. Many times the notes of the stenographer are not even written out. Rarely, unless an appeal is to be taken.

Some years ago I assisted in the trial of an important patent cause before Judge McKennan, in the United States Circuit Court, at Philadelphia. It was a case in which a very large number of witnesses were examined in open court, and the experts conducted many of their experiments before the Judge. The case occupied twenty-four days, but if it had been tried in the usual way, I believe two years would have passed before all of the testimony could have been collected.

In a pending litigation one of the United States Judges said to me that if both parties would unite in such a request he would grant an oral examination and trial. My adversary refused to unite in that request to the Court. There are some difficulties in the way of a wide adoption of this course of procedure. The United States Judges are very busy, and unless the parties, beforehand, unite in a stipulation as to the time to be occupied in the oral trial, the Judge may have too great demands made upon his continuous personal attention. Again, there may be some counsel who are reluctant to change the established procedure which would demand constant presence of the counsel who tries the case, for in the usual course much of the testimony is taken by assistants who would not presume to try the case.

Clients too frequently say: "Give the other side all the expense you can." Such clients would object to the shorter and cheaper course. Opposing litigants (if they really wish to lessen expense, and are not anxious to make expenses for the other side,) have this matter largely in their own hands. Let them meet each other as business men and agree that their counsel shall be positively instructed to unite in a request to the Court for an oral trial, coupled with a stipulation as to a reasonably short time for the trial.

In this way, in many cases, not, perhaps, a majority, the expense of patent litigation might be materially lessened.

J. C. CLAYTON.

New York, Jan. 18, 1900.

THE PATENT SITUATION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letters of Mr. Charles J. Bates about the patent situation, those of an engineer, and another published a day or two before upon which Mr. Bates commented were most interesting and timely. Reforms by which the inventor may be better protected are certainly imperative, and, owing to the condition pointed out by Mr. Bates and others, such reforms to be secured will require the education of public opinion. Without this the chances of proper relief by Congress are not great, or, rather perhaps much less. The reforms needed are many and radical, requiring talent, legal and other, of a very high order, and such are essentially preliminary to such an examination as my brother, Mr. Bates, requires. He lays stress, if I do not misread his letter, upon this for new patent cases and present ones, but be that as it may, much more must be done.

A thorough examination of the whole situation of the past, as well as present, also both the home and foreign, will be required—in short, such an investigation as a court would properly give. This should be by the United States Patent Office, which institution, owing to the delinquency of present laws and Congress, has not the equipment for it; hence the conditions pointed out by your correspondents recently.

Said reforms are as follows:

1. The staff of examiners should be men of the same professional grade as the British Colonial Service contains, especially for India.

2. To secure such a staff high salaries must be paid as in the British service alluded to. The chief examiners of divisions should receive at least $15,

The New York Times.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, JAN. 21, 1900.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK:
Publication Office.....41 Park Row
All American District Telegraph Offices.
WASHINGTON.....515 Fourteenth St.
LONDON: Trafalgar Buildings, Trafalgar Sq., W.C.
SWITZERLAND, Geneva: P. Drehmann, Librairie Nouvelle, Rue du Mont Blanc.
GERMANY, Mainz: Saarbach's News Agency, Agency for Germany and Austria.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

DAILY, per Month.....$0.50
DAILY, per Year.....6.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Year.....7.50
SUNDAY per Year.....1.50
SATURDAY, with Review of Books and Art, per Year.....1.00
MONDAY, with Financial Supplement, per Year.....1.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Month.....0.65
For postage to foreign countries add 80 cents per month.

TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES.

THE WAR AND BRITISH POLITICS.

That is not at all an inspiring picture of British politics which our London correspondent draws in his cable letter published to-day. It may be that it is overdrawn. He has shown before this that he is of those Englishmen who believe that the war might and should have been avoided. He admits that those Englishmen were and are a minority. He admits also that they now see no way for it but to push the war to a successful conclusion. Indeed, it is this which makes the situation most gloomy, this fact that Englishmen who think the war, on their part, was unnecessary, and therefore unjust, should nevertheless admit that the prosecution of it to a successful issue, even "at a cost at which humanity shudders," is necessary, is therefore just.

Why should patriotic Englishmen be made to feel that the existence of their empire is at stake from the efforts of two little communities of farmers who do not, all told, number 50,000 fighting men? How could the British Empire have been put into such straits by so puny an antagonist, except by an excessive unwisdom on the part of those who directed its councils? There can be no satisfactory answer to this question. And yet our correspondent says that not only will these "evil counselors" be retained, but that no organized effort will be made to get rid of them. Nay, he gives currency to the statement of "a great provincial newspaper" that a movement is on foot to put out of the Ministry, not the evil counselors who have rushed the British Empire into a war which has compromised its position before the world, but those of their colleagues who have endeavored to moderate their impetuosity. When he adds that this movement is said to be set on foot by those financiers who are particularly interested in mining operations in the Rand, the suggestion may not convince anybody who was not convinced already that this is, on the English side, "a Stock Exchange war." But it does at least justify our correspondent in saying that this is the first time that it has been publicly charged by a responsible newspaper that the politics of the British Empire could be shaped by "the great cosmopolitan financiers."

There can, at least, be no question that a war of which such things can be said and believed is not a war, however he may feel bound to acquiesce in it, of which any reasonable and patriotic Englishman can really feel proud. Certainly the conduct of the war has given him no cause for an access of national pride. If he cannot help entertaining scruples about the origin of it and the goodness of his cause, it seems that he must resent the action of the men who got him and his country into such a scrape. He may be excused even for "swapping horses when crossing a stream," if he finds that the horse he has been hanging to is dead. The more he is convinced, the more friendly foreigners are convinced, that the British cause is fundamentally right, the more he and they are convinced that a serious calamity to the British Empire is a serious blow to civilization, the hotter may his and their indignation properly rise against the men who have so mismanaged the British Empire as to turn a good cause into a bad one, a winning cause into a losing one, and to inflict a dreadful blow upon the prestige of Great Britain.

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT.

According to advices we have received from Washington, a canvass of the Senate and House of Representatives has placed it beyond dispute that Congress will not only pass the Nicaragua Canal bill, but will pass it in a form directly at variance with the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

This is a statement of decidedly serious importance, and we hesitate to believe that the United States Government will commit itself to a course which this country would have to regard as unfriendly.—The London Chronicle.

"The Governments of the United States and Great Britain," so runs Article I. of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, "hereby declare that neither the one nor the other will ever obtain or maintain for itself any exclusive control over the said ship canal."

There are many other agreements and stipulations in the treaty. It was not altogether a good treaty for us to make and accept. Some doubt exists whether its provisions apply to the present Nicaragua Canal undertaking. So far as the public is informed, Great Britain has never protested, although Congress has often seemed to be upon the point of authorizing the construction of a canal under the sole authority and protection of this Government.

The London Chronicle may well hesitate to believe that we are about to enter upon a canal policy which her Majesty's Government "would have to regard as unfriendly." Whether the Nicaragua Canal or the Panama undertaking is the successful applicant for encouragement and protection at Washington, it is to the last degree improbable that we shall go about the business in disregard of any existing treaty obligations.

GOV. ROOSEVELT ON THE IDEAL AND THE PRACTICAL.

In his little speech before the alumni of the University of the South on Friday evening, Gov. ROOSEVELT remarked that the "greatest damage which can be done to our youth is to teach them that there must be a divorce between the ideal and the practical." He added as an illustration, drawn, we suppose, from his own recent experience:

> No man is to be excused if he construes practicality in politics to mean what is vile, underhanded, unworthy of upright and honorable men, and, on the other hand, no man is to be excused if he preaches with the purpose of having applied a system which he knows cannot be applied.

The Governor has his own way of putting things, and it is generally rather more emphatic than the facts seem to others to warrant. But it has the great advantage that it leaves little doubt as to the immediate intention, though the generalization may be too sweeping.

The career of Gov. ROOSEVELT in the office he now holds, and in the others that he had previously held, affords ample evidence that he has tried very hard to live up to the theory he announces to the alumni of the University of the South. So far as the Governorship is concerned, it is the toughest job undertaken in the history of recent politics. He found the control of the Republican Party of the State in the hands of men who were not at all averse to construing "practicality in politics" as meaning much that was "underhanded and unworthy of upright and honorable men." The assent and the co-operation of these men were absolutely necessary to the accomplishment of any important policy in the administration of the affairs of the State. The problem presented to the Governor was how to secure this without the sacrifice of the interests of the people and without compromising his personal integrity. So far as can be inferred from his course and from the utterances which from time to time he has made in public, the solution that he has undertaken lies in frankly consulting the Republican organization, and adopting its advice when he could do so honorably, while firmly resisting it when he could not, and insisting on his own way in matters for which he felt peculiarly responsible, with, at the same time, a candid statement of his motives. Thus, in the matter of so-called patronage, he seems to have largely acceded to the wishes of the organization in the less important offices when he was satisfied that the men they wished were decently fit for their places.

He is at present confronted with the question of the succession to PAYN in the Insurance Department. We imagine that he will finally reach a conclusion as to that along the lines above suggested. He never would have appointed PAYN in the first instance, and he most certainly will not reappoint him, or consent to his retaining his place if he can prevent it. When the matter first demanded attention, PAYN was entirely confident that he would have the support of the organization to the extent necessary to permit him to hold over. Had the Governor picked out the one man he regarded as best for the place and bade the organization to accept him without debate or question, it is most probable that PAYN would have remained in office as long as the Governor. What the Governor appears to be doing is to find the best man that can be confirmed, with the firm condition that he must be a man that will perform the duties of the office honorably and adequately. If he succeeds in getting such a man, we suppose that it will be generally conceded that the interests of the insured in the State of New York will be quite as safe as if he had made a heroic fight with the machine and left PAYN in office.

We do not share with the Governor his fear, so often expressed, that even the foolish idealists in politics are a very serious threat to good government, and we think that he often exaggerates the folly of those that he cannot agree with; but it does seem to us that he is trying himself to do the best he can and that he has done very much better on the whole than any of his recent predecessors.

THE VICTORY OF THE FRENCH CABINET.

The vote of confidence passed by the French Chamber of Deputies last Thursday is of particular importance when we consider the origin of the Waldeck-Rousseau Ministry and the varied influences which have, from the first, been at work for its overthrow. The vote of 329 to 74 not only gives an approval to the general work of the Ministry, but it removes all doubt as to the popularity of the policy pursued by the Socialist Minister of Commerce, M. MILLERAND.

The Waldeck-Rousseau Ministry was born in dissension and distrust. It grew in power by the ineffectiveness of the schemes that were designed for its ruin. Now, on the eve of the exposition, it possesses both confidence and strength. At the most critical period in the history of the Third Republic it was formed by men who buried all factional hate and personal animosity, and united for the sole purpose of forcing the army to give a legal trial to Capt. DREYFUS. That work was performed with dignity and with consummate tact. Then came the duty of unraveling the conspiracy, a burden bequeathed to it by its predecessor. The Opposition prophesied that the patchwork Cabinet would not dare to undertake the task, or, if it did, it would soon go out in a storm of abuse.

The Opposition was mistaken. The "Cabinet of Justice" became the "Cabinet of Republican Defense." When the Chamber in the middle of November last gave an inspiring approval to the policy of the Cabinet by a vote of 340 to 215 the Nationalists and Royalists still deluded themselves with the idea that, as soon as the curiosity of France had been satiated in regard to the exact nature of the danger that was alleged to have menaced the Republic, the Cabinet would retire from sheer humiliation. Again the Opposition was mistaken. The conspiracy charges were gradually freed from all doubtful elements, and two Royalists, one Jew-baiter, and one "patriot" were convicted. During the whole trial the Cabinet maintained the same dignity, the same respect for legal procedure, that had characterized it during the Rennes court-martial. The vote just given in the Chamber shows that its latest victory is an emphatic confirmation of the trust engendered in the people of France by its first.

But hardly less important is the significance of the vote in its purely personal aspect. Several months ago it would have been impossible for M. MILLERAND to receive such conspicuous indorsement from the Deputies. Then the Conservative Republicans, who had at first united with the Socialists in the cause of justice, were suspicious of the Socialist Minister of Commerce and antagonistic to the supposed ambition of his party. The Socialist Congress last December changed all that. Now the alliance is evidently maintained through mutual respect. All this is extremely gratifying. It shows that the Waldeck-Rousseau Ministry rests upon firmer ground than its most sanguine supporters dared hoped for. It removes much of the stain that, in the opinion of the world, had been placed on the fair fame of France.

JOHN RUSKIN.

One of the most distinguished of American artists once remarked apropos of some change in his aesthetic views: "Oh, yes, at the proper time I had Ruskin!" And it is not to be denied that in the score of years following 1850 the young men and women of the United States who were interested in art were apt to contract the feverish enthusiasm of the gifted writer much as they had the inflammatory and temporary affections of childhood. It was the strength and the weakness of the author of "Modern Painters" and of "The Stones of Venice" that his enthusiasm was attainable and deeply enjoyable by those who had little real knowledge of art, and was delightfully proof against the disturbing and difficult critical assaults of those that had such knowledge. It was, moreover, an essentially infectious sentiment because it involved a moral standard, and there is nothing so insinuating and so penetrating as the consciousness of moral superiority in matters requiring no personal sacrifice. In RUSKIN himself this sentiment had in his later years some curious effects, and gradually changed him from the preacher of a new, or what he thought was a new, gospel of art to a lonely recluse dreaming beautiful dreams and only at rare intervals sending out some eloquent and dimly intelligible cry of prophecy or warning.

It is rash to predict the place in literary history of a writer who for so many years was the centre of active polemics, but there is reason for the belief that RUSKIN will be remembered, so far as he is remembered, rather for the way in which he was able to express his thought than for the thought itself. He had the rare gift of an individual style, rich, flexible, rhythmic, and portraying. There is nothing in modern English more full of the writer's own sense of beauty and delight in it than the finest passages of the early work of RUSKIN. It was in the true significance pictorial, not merely descriptive, but revealing, and to be read with satisfaction by those to whom his philosophy was shallow and his aesthetic dogmas uninteresting. It is to be doubted if he is much read now despite this most unusual charm. But it is the fortune of some of his earlier and much of his later work to have passed into the class which collectors value and libraries are bound to preserve, and it may be that in another half century, when the last echoes of the contests in which he engaged have died out, he will claim a higher rank than is now accorded him.

JUDGE BROWN AND THE PRESS.

That was an interesting address which Judge BROWN made at the meeting of the State Bar Association the other day on "The Liberty of the Press." It might have been found fault with on the ground that it did not "get anywhere." But its author so frankly admitted this defect as to disarm criticism on that score. "It is exceedingly doubtful," he said at the end of his indictment against the current American press, "if any legislation be practicable which shall tend to restrict the excessive license indulged in by newspapers."

There we are inclined to differ with the orator. As he says, the free criticism of public officers, or of those who aspire to be such, cannot very well be restricted, except by the action of the law of libel. But there is no reason at all why persons who are not properly and who do not wish to be public characters, should not have their privacy protected. If we have followed the course of judicial decisions on this subject accurately, it is not the press so much as the bench which has denied that there was any such thing as a right to privacy. There was a bill before the Legislature of this State last year, the announcement of which a large part of the press hailed with relief and welcome, because they took it for a project in defense of that right. But it turned out that it was a bill to prevent free criticism of public officers, and especially to protect the privacy of those two shrinking violets, Boss CROKER and Boss PLATT. Senator HILL came out with an exposure of its purpose and methods, which was about the most important public service he ever rendered, and it has not been heard of since.

One of the counts of Judge BROWN's indictment is that the opinions of courts are obtained and published before delivery. Distinctly this seems to be a matter for the courts. And so do some other forms of contempt of court. We have several times called attention to the attempts of some newspapers to prejudice a capital case on trial in this city. Doubtless this is a scandal and an outrage. If Judges have not the power to prevent such a practice by punishing the practitioners, it seems that here is a case for legislation. If they already have that power, it is not the fault of the press if they do not exercise it.

But the gravamen of the indictment, as the draughtsman of it admits, is that a large part of the press habitually offends against good taste, and that its offenses culminate in what Judge BROWN calls "the weekly horror of the Sunday morning edition." It is not necessary entirely to agree with this characterization in order to admit that we know what the Judge means. It is quite true that laws cannot be passed for the enforcement of good taste. But what would he? Newspapers are made not only for, they are made by, their readers. These papers are made to sell, by manufacturers who have a shrewd notion what their customers want. It is with the public taste which demands these things, rather than with the business intelligence which supplies them, that Judge BROWN is really quarreling. We do not deny that a newspaper which deserves his characterization does react on the public taste, and that the public taste grows by what it is fed on. But in almost every community there is a Sunday newspaper which cannot fairly be described as "a weekly horror," and to which the fastidious reader may confine himself. If there be not, he may go without a Sunday newspaper, and persuade as many of his neighbors as he can to do the same. In any case it remains true that the newspapers are really edited by their readers, and that if there were no demand for such newspapers as Judge BROWN deprecates the existence of, there would be no supply of them. So that his attack upon the American press is really an attack upon the American public.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Compressed as it was into the compass of a brief telegraphic dispatch, the closing scene in the life of WILLIAM CALLOWAY, the fire boss of a Pennsylvania coal mine, did little more than hint at the agonies of mind and body that must have preceded the man's death, but enough was told to set the imagination at work, and the lack of details assisted, perhaps, rather than made more difficult the attainment of an accurate realization of his feelings as he sat day after day in the dark, waiting for the rescuers who did not come. It was on Dec. 18 that CALLOWAY entered the mine alone in the early morning—to see if the other miners could enter safely. When far from the shaft there was a great fall of rock behind him, and he was imprisoned, for life, as it turned out. Knowing that the accident would be at once discovered, and that energetic efforts for his release would be made, of course hope was high at first, and, after writing with chalk on a convenient wall where the rescuers would find him, he retired to the safest and most comfortable part of the mine accessible to him and waited. He waited long—three weeks, they think. His lamp was a companion for a while, and he probably had a little food. He was spared the tortures of thirst. Doubtless he thought a good deal, for there was nothing else to do. He seems to have thought chiefly of others, and of himself only in relation to those others, for even when hope was gone, and he knew that the end was near and certain, he chalked a message to the wife and children. It said nothing about hunger or the pressure of the darkness or the failure of his fellows to reach him. "I think I am gone," it began, a calm statement of fact, and then: "Good-bye, FANNIE. Be good boys, GUY and WILLIE. I don't think you will see your father again." Of even more pathetic significance was the end—"I think this is Wednesday." Day and night had been the same there behind the rocks, and the minutes hours. Presumably his count was wrong. Anyway, CALLOWAY was dead when the miners broke through the wall. They had worked a month and two days to get him—a real man with some of the marks of greatness.

—Louisville's Aldermen deemed it seemly one day last week to refer to their Committee on Cemeteries an offer from Mr. ANDREW CARNEGIE to endow the Louisville Public Library with $125,000. We understand that the action taken was not prompted altogether by the indifference to or contempt for public libraries characteristic of the average Aldermanic body, but that its motive, to some indefinite extent, was animosity for the Mayor and certain of his appointees, who, in case the gift had been accepted on the donor's terms, would have had control of this money and some more to be raised by the city. As to the merits of the quarrel between the Aldermen and the other officials we are not competent to speak, and will restrain our natural impulse to assume that the Aldermen are in the wrong about it. The reference of Mr. CARNEGIE'S offer to the Committee on Cemeteries is what interests us. At worst, it was a grimly humorous outrage, and humor, even when grim, is so precious that nobody can be really severe toward those displaying it. The so-called burial of bills and ordinances is of frequent occurrence, and the common phrase doubtless suggested the course pursued by the City Fathers of Louisville when they wanted to get something well out of sight and hearing. They showed considerable mental agility, however, by changing metaphor to an approach to reality, and though we have faint memories of similar action by similar bodies in the past, we are not prepared to say that this substitute for laying on the table and subsequent pigeon-holing was not entirely original. At all events, it was funny as well as barbaric, and to be funny is much, very much—for Aldermen, whether in Louisville or anywhere else.

—Something that we are sorry to be unable to distinguish from intense surprise has been created at Detroit by the fact that the Rev. Dr. WILLIAM PRALL, pastor of a rich and influential Episcopalian congregation there, has not only received but heard a "call" from a church in Albany that is the very reverse of rich and marked by the signs of decrepitude sometimes incidental to advanced age. Dr. PRALL gives up a large salary for one considerably smaller and not particularly certain, if the Detroit papers are well informed, and the only reason he has apparently offered to them for his decision is his belief that a pastor should make a change at least once in a decade. Upon the adequacy of that reason we are not inclined to pronounce a decided opinion, though we would venture the suggestion that it is one the answer to which depends a good deal on circumstances. Be that as it may, Dr. PRALL'S departure is deeply regretted by his parishioners, and yet, as we said before, the comment on its financial features lays curiously emphatic emphasis on their alleged novelty. Does this indicate a general inclination to ascribe to the clergy a wisdom too practical, or rather too mundane, to be in exact harmony with their other claims to respect, or does it merely indicate that the Detroiters are a cynical lot, grievously prone to criticise the motives of their fellows? Either side of the alternative is a painful one and we are sincerely sorry that it has been presented to us.

—Young men who think they see in electrical engineering a short road to fortune and fame, and for that reason rather than because of any particular liking and talent for that sort of work are on the point of devoting time and money to the acquisition of a theoretical knowledge of the subject, would do well, before coming to a final decision, to read and ponder well the leading editorial article in the current number of The Electrical Review. The article may not turn the aspiring youth from their purpose, and, indeed, it was not the writer's desire to do so, but they may be saved from the consequences of making the grave mistake of assuming that because the practical utilization of electricity on a large scale began only a few years ago, electrical engineering presents opportunities not to be found in the older professions. A decade and a half ago there certainly was an eager demand for men entitled to call themselves electrical engineers, for just such men, that is, as the technical schools are now turning out in shoals, but electrical science has traversed in a few years the road along which the other sciences traveled for a century or more, and, considering its youth, is surprisingly mature. Already its lines have been definitely marked out, many of its most important standards have been established beyond the possibility of easy or immediate change, and from the vast majority of its practitioners there is demanded the work of trained hands rather than of progressive and ingenious minds. According to The Electrical Review, there is now to be found in this branch of engineering exactly what the other professions offer—"an opportunity to work very hard for a long time for small wages"—and in conclusion we are told that "the road to success in electrical engineering is beset with innumerable pitfalls and, even for the most successful, with almost heart-breaking difficulty."

—GEORGE WARRINGTON STEEVENS, news of whose death at Ladysmith, a victim of typhoid fever, was announced yesterday, ranked easily first, in some important respects, among the so-called foreign correspondents of the day. While he could hardly be called a literary man, he missed the title chiefly because of the line of work he chose to follow, and he certainly did as much as is either possible or desirable to dim the distinction between journalism and literature. What he wrote was more remarkable for style and form than for matter, and therefore it was something less than, as well as more than, is expected from the newspaper man, strictly and properly understood. On the other hand, he confined himself in the selection of subjects for treatment almost exclusively to those which, while the reverse of trivial, were of more or less ephemeral interest, and therefore it is only as "documents" that his writings will concern posterity. He had marvelous powers of observation, and not inferior powers of expression. He could be eloquent without pretension and humorous without frivolity or loss of dignity. His word pictures were astonishingly vivid, and, whether they were of American politicians or of battlefields heaped with dead, impressed themselves firmly on the reader's imagination. Personally most likable and known to a vast number of people on account of the length and frequency of his journeys, the untimely fate that has overtaken Mr. STEEVENS will be regretted as widely as deeply. Of course his death will be described as one of the lamentable consequences of the Anglo-Boer war. It is hardly that, for the "foreign correspondent" is a professional fisher in troubled waters, and if there had been no dangers to be encountered at Ladysmith, Mr. STEEVENS would have looked for and found them elsewhere.

THE SHIP SUBSIDY QUESTION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to correct a typographical error of some importance which occurred in my letter on the subsidy question printed in THE TIMES of to-day. Among the members of the House of Representatives who argued for free ships thirty years ago the name of "Addison" is mentioned. It should have been Allison, now the Senator from Iowa. I shall be curious to see whether in the coming debate he will adhere to the principles he then maintained, or whether his conscience will surrender to the party dictation of Senator Frye.

In the one-sided hearing now going on before the Senate committee, I find in to-day's report this argument for building up a commercial marine by means of subsidy. "In the course of his remarks Mr. Griscom said: 'Already our trade is embarrassed because of the ships Great Britain has withdrawn simply as transports in the war with the Transvaal. Suppose her flag on the high seas was threatened. It is amazing that there is a legislator who is so indifferent to the interest of his constituents as to permit this situation to longer continue to menace our export trade. No scheme will remove this point, which constantly threatens our foreign trade, that does not establish and maintain a National mercantile marine.'"

Let us suppose that such an event may transpire, and look at it from a business point of view. It would take all the shipbuilders in this country ten or twenty years to build a tonnage equal to that of the British commercial marine, which would be thus laid up in ordinary. In the meantime all ocean trade would not only be embarrassed, but it would go nearly out of sight. On the contrary, all British ships being thrown on the market a repeal of our restrictive law would enable us to buy them at half price. In this little paragraph how many words does Mr. Griscom speak for his country, and how many for the shipbuilding company in which he is interested?

JOHN CODMAN.
Atlantic City, Jan. 17, 1900.

SCOPE OF THE GERRY SOCIETY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since the recent decision of the Court of Appeals against the right of the State Board of Charities to control and direct this society, numerous articles have appeared in the daily papers containing assertions utterly false as to powers alleged to be exercised by its officers and as to laws which have no existence. I proceed to state a few of these, in order that the readers of your valuable paper may not be misled by what they may see elsewhere.

1. One of these assertions is as follows: "Mr. Gerry at the present time, for instance, has the power to go into any man's house and take from him his children, and if he can prevail upon a police Magistrate to commit these children to the care of his society, unless an appeal is taken within ten days, the children must rest there during their minority, or until such previous time as Mr. Gerry decides, subject to release by no court or other power in the State." This is utterly false and malicious. No such power exists, no such case has ever occurred, and there is no such law.

2. Another: "There is no more sacred right than that of a mother to her child. Any agency that assumes the authority to interfere with that right ought to be subject to every possible safeguard against the abuse of its powers. Nobody can be deprived of his property without due process of law. It is intolerable that anybody should be able to deprive a mother of her child by his arbitrary will." All this is quite true, and the society never attempts to interfere between parent and child, except where the latter is subject to physical or moral injury at the hands of a vicious, drunken, or malicious parent, and then only in due form of law, according to law and subject to the law. It has no power under any circumstances, nor has its President, to deprive any parent of the custody of his child "by his arbitrary will."

3. Yet another: "In the City of New York it not infrequently happens that the agents of the society virtually defy the Magistrates, and on some occasions children have been kept in custody by the society upon its own authority alone." This statement is also utterly false and untrue, and no such case can be found or any such charge substantiated.

There are also criticisms of the decision of the Court of Appeals which are fully answered by the prevailing opinions. The society has favored and invoked the broadest criticism, inspection, and investigation by the Supreme Court of this State. The latter last Summer selected one of the most eminent members of the Bar Association, Mr. Albert Stitkney, to visit and inspect everything connected with it, and every opportunity was afforded the writers of similar newspaper articles to appear and substantiate their statements, which they entirely failed to do. His report fully disposes of them.

I should be glad if you would set the matter straight as an act of simple justice to the society and its work. During the twenty-five years last past, over 125,000 complaints have been investigated, involving more than 300,000 children, and resulting in nearly 50,000 convictions, and the placing of over 80,000 children in comfortable homes under moral influences. The Supreme Court has expressed its approval of the conduct of the work. The society did not invite the contest with the State Board of Charities, but that body insisted on a jurisdiction which the Court of Appeals has just decided is not well founded.

ELBRIDGE T. GERRY,
New York, Jan. 17, 1900. President.

THE PHILIPPINES AND POLITICS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Senator Beveridge's late speech on the Philippines and their future administration takes such high ground, is so truly in accord with the best traditions of Senatorial oratory, and is so superior to what we usually receive from his colleagues in these degenerate days that it seems ungracious to criticise, but it does seem that his optimism passes the bounds of any sane expectation.

He says: "The men we send to administer civilized Government in the Philippines must be themselves the highest examples of our civilization. I use the word examples, for examples they must be in that word's most absolute sense. They must be men of the world and of affairs, students of their fellow-men, not theorists or dreamers. They must be brave men, physically as well as morally. They must be as incorruptible as honor, as stainless as purity—men whom no force can frighten, no influence coerce, no money buy. Such men come high, even here in America. But they must be had.

"I assert that such administrators can be found. * * * Necessity will produce them. Let no one fear that our party workers will seek to fill these places without regard to fitness. I know well this most maligned and valuable class of American citizens, the precinct committeemen and party workers in the country districts of the Republic, and if we truthfully, bravely state the situation at the outset, these very politicians will insist most strenuously of all on the highest qualifications in the administration of our possessions."

His portrayal of the character of those we should send to govern the Philippines is none too high, and their very incompetence for self-government should entitle them to the best ability, the strictest integrity, the noblest qualities of head and heart that we can bestow upon their need for guidance. But to look to our present party machinery to give the Philippines that which it has never given ourselves seems absurd. The assertion that "necessity will produce them," would seem to be rhetorical nonsense. The necessity existed to greater extent under Spain and produced Weyler and his tribe. The fear "that our party workers will seek to fill these places without regard to fitness," would seem to have the best justification in our own experience. When has this class of party workers ever manifested any enthusiasm for fitness for office as an essential qualification therefor? Who brought pressure to bear on our too amiable President to relax the civil service rules and who commended the resulting backward steps, outside of these same party workers? Who is responsible for the power and prominence of men like Platt, Quay, Gorman, Croker, and Louis Payn in the administration of civilized Government in our country but these same party workers? Is it credible that these same party workers are going to forget all the traditions of their order, all the lessons of practical politics they have ever learned, to "insist most strenuously on the highest qualifications in the administration of our possessions"? Can the leopard change his spots and the Ethiopian his skin? Do men gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles?

If the Senator knows these men and knows human nature he must know that what he proposes is utterly and entirely impossible. Politicians—party politicians—as a class give us just as bad government as the people will stand. As a distinguished representative of the class once said, "We must pander to the moral element to a certain extent," and the extent depends on what the community demands. In the great cities public affairs are badly managed, and officials are somewhat below the Senator's standard because the moral tone of the community is low. In the rural districts conditions are somewhat better because the moral tone is higher. If the state of public opinion throughout the Nation demanded in their officials and administrators that high standard of honor and morals so eloquently portrayed by the Senator, the party workers would undoubtedly find plenty of such men, both for the Philippines and for home consumption, but in the absence of such awakened public sentiment, to propose to secure the highest purity, integrity, independence, education, and intelligence in administration by appeal to the "party workers in the country districts of the Republic" has a savor of ridiculous anti-climax.

THOMAS CONYNGTON.
New York, Jan. 15, 1900.

THE MAZET REPORTS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your article in to-day's TIMES on "The Mazet Reports" is both timely, truthful, and convincing. Whatever of good there may be in the majority report is doubtless nullified by the wretched record of the committee itself, and the minority has plainly lost its opportunity by descending to tirade and abuse. One wonders whether the people who penned such a composition are fools or mountebanks. Do they really think people will believe such stuff?

You ask the question, "Is there no escape from Tammany except through the Republican machine, none from Croker except in the arms of Platt?" If that is the only choice, then we are indeed betwixt the devil and the deep sea. But you answer the question hopefully by saying that "the action and ideas of the Citizens' Union are the hope of decent, just, honest, and progressive government in the city."

Despite impudent denials or equally impudent avowals such as were made on the witness stand before the Mazet committee, it is becoming more evident every day, much more evident than it was in 1896 or 1897, that no relief is to be had from the machines of either party. Can decent and independent Democrats support Tammany Hall? The Wigwam has not represented Democracy for many a day. Can the Republicans, with or without their machine, elect a city Government? We know it is impossible. Then the only remedy is plain—a union of citizens on a platform of common honesty and businesslike administration of city affairs.

The Citizens' Union has recently adopted a new constitution, in which it says:

> Article 1. Object: A union of the citizens of New York City, without regard to party, for the purpose of securing the honest and efficient government of the City of New York.
>
> The action of this Union in the nomination or election of persons to office shall be limited strictly to candidates who are voted for only by citizens of the City of New York or by citizens of the judicial districts in which said city is situated.

This is a plain declaration that the Union will confine its activities to the City of New York and to municipal elections this Fall; it will have everything to do with the strictly municipal election of 1901, when a full city ticket is to be elected, and the Union expects to put a ticket in the field composed of first-class and large men even for the smallest offices.

The politicians are not 3 per cent. of the populace, and do not directly control 15 per cent. of the people. Then let us have a union of freemen to shake off this disgraceful and disagreeable machine rule. The tail has wagged the dog long enough.

CITIZENS' UNION.
New York, Jan. 17, 1900.

State Supervision of Corporations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Gov. Roosevelt's action in suggesting a State supervision over corporations commonly known as trusts deserves the united support and encouragement of the business community, which I feel it will receive, for it is only fair and just that the State should provide some means of keeping the public acquainted with the condition of concerns to which it gives its support, and in which it is specially interested.

If the Governor's suggestion is acted upon and a bill is presented for the consideration of the Legislature providing for the appointment of an official whose duties shall be to make an examination of the books of corporations and make public reports at different periods, the measure should be drafted so as to give the Supervisor power to examine only the books of corporations that are public in their nature. There are many concerns organized under the corporation laws that are really private business enterprises, the shares being held only by a few persons, and none of them ever passing into the hands of the general public. Probably it would be difficult to distinguish between private and public corporations, but there is a distinction that should be so clearly made that there would be no doubt left as to the real intent of the act. If there were a chance of construing it to affect corporations other than public, it would certainly be defeated, and the good purposes for which it was introduced frustrated, as the passage of such a bill would work more harm than good to the community.

R. P. K.
New York, Jan. 17, 1900.

Personal Service for the Church.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last Sunday the rector of an uptown church asking for teachers for the Sunday school, sewing classes, &c., said in substance that in a congregation composed as his was, of rich and poor, there must be many who would like to offset their inability to give substantial financial aid by giving personal service, and he hoped to receive, by mail, many offers of such persons able to qualify themselves under proper direction to be teachers in the Sunday school, sewing classes, &c.

Originality is very refreshing. But is not this is a little too original? The members of the church not blessed with affluence, besides giving as much in proportion to their means as the wealthy members should also feel themselves under obligation to do the work of the church from which the large donations of the rich buy them immunity. The poor are accustomed to the idea that, socially speaking, they are not considered worthy to touch the hem of the garments of the wealthy, even though they may be members of the same Christian society. But to have it suggested that to offset their misfortune of poverty a labor is expected of them in the church, which the more fortunate may leave or take, as they choose, must add a sting and humiliation to poverty.

There is a parable of a certain poor widow which would seem to have a distinct bearing on this important subject.

OBSERVER.
New York, Jan. 17, 1900.

The Hamilton Memorial Trees.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am told that some weeks ago there appeared in your paper an account of the contemplated removal of the thirteen trees planted by Alexander Hamilton as memorials of the thirteen original States on his home place, Hamilton Grange, now in the vicinity of One Hundred and Forty-fourth Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The destruction of this historical landmark was for the purpose of securing (at what dear price!) a building lot.

Has nothing been done to prevent this sacrilege? The "commercial spirit" of the American people is no doubt commendable, but should it prevail against patriotism? Surely we, as a Nation are sufficiently "new" to have need of all our traditions.

I therefore beg to present this earnest protest against an act of vandalism that should be opposed by all true Americans, and I entreat you, my dear Sir, if nothing has been done in the matter, to give publicity to this appeal through the columns of your paper, or otherwise bring it to the attention of the New York Historical Society, the Colonial Dames, or other proper authorities, that steps may be taken to prevent such a desecration.

MAUD SCOFIELD BEESON.
New York, Jan. 17, 1900.

Proposed Mortgage Tax and Debtors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The State Tax Commission recommends, among other things, a State tax upon mortgages and upon mortgage bonds of one-half of 1 per cent., with provisions to enable the collection of that tax fully and in every case, and permitting no deductions for indebtedness. It is assumed that this tax will furnish the bulk of the State revenue.

Practically everybody agrees that the tax will be shifted from the lender to the borrower in the form of a higher rate of interest. This will compel those owners of real estate who are in debt to pay the bulk of the State taxes, while real estate owners who are free from debt will pay no State tax, as it is proposed to abandon the direct levy on real estate for purposes of State taxation. This attempt to heap burdens upon debtors, burdens that are not to be borne by creditors, is a rank injustice.

LAWRENCE TELFAIR.
New York, Jan. 17, 1900.

NUGGETS.

A Set-Back.

"I thought I was all over nervous prostration."

"Well?"

"My doctor sent in his bill and I've got it again."—Detroit Free Press.

Comes High.

"Oh, yes," said Farmer Redbeet, "my son's takin' the higher education in the East, an' jedgin' by the demands he makes on me fer cash, it gits higher and higher every year."—Philadelphia North American.

No Cause for Despair.

Mrs. Youngwife—The baby talks incessantly. I think he will grow up to be a Congressman.

Mr. Oldbach—I wouldn't worry about it, if I were you. Maybe he'll be a barber.—Philadelphia Record.

A Subscriber's Little Growl.

A newspaper in a Michigan town says of its local telephone service that it is something like the horse that had only two faults—the first that it was hard to catch when in the pasture, and the other that it was no good after it was caught.—Electrical Review.

AN ANGEL UNAWARES.

T. Russell Shelton in Richmond Religious Herald.

Suppose for every act of love and duty
An angel in the path of life should lay
A lovely rose of sweet perfume and beauty—
Ah, even then, how bare would be the way!

Suppose for every kindly word unspoken,
For every fault which careless hands had done,
For every resolution made and broken,
A thorn beneath our erring feet had grown—

Ah! then the way would be one stretch of anguish,
With only here and there a flower to cheer,
Our feet would falter and our spirits languish,
And life would be a burden hard to bear.

But seldom are we outwardly rewarded
According to the deeds which we have done,
"The pure in heart" are by the world discarded;
The wicked harvest where the good have sown.

And yet to every heart in darkness hidden
There comes an angel, whom we cannot see,
Who strives to keep us from the paths forbidden,
And in the narrow way where faith may be.

His name is Conscience, and he brings us roses—
Sweet roses, borrowed from the brow of Peace,
Or thorns on which remorseful thought reposes,
Regrets whose sharp tormentings never cease.

Then, let us strive temptation's storm to weather,
Let every thought and every deed improve,
Till Conscience finds no cruel thorns to gather,
But crowns the soul with joy, and peace, and love.

Problems of Bookselling in England.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Sir WALTER BESANT,

Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," "For Faith and Freedom," &c.

The following remarks are on the Book Trade in England, not in Scotland, or in Ireland, where the conditions are in some respects different.

SOME fifty years ago Macaulay had a conversation with his bookseller. He pointed out that although the circle of readers had widely increased, the book trade was in a state of great depression; that the price of books was prohibitory, and that there would be more profit to a bookseller in selling a dozen copies at five shillings than one at ten. The bookseller listened; he was persuaded, and he offered the public all his books at a discount of 25 per cent.

This allowance was offered by other booksellers; the practice spread. It was, however, regarded with great disfavor by the London publishers, who formed a league, or a ring, and endeavored to coerce booksellers into abolishing the discount; they refused to sell to the discount booksellers; they formed a gang of spies and—their ring broke down.

After all these years the situation repeats itself; readers have multiplied tenfold and a hundredfold, yet the book trade is again depressed, and publishers are again trying to form a ring and think to improve the situation by a return to the old method of coercion and higher prices; example of the "net price," without discount of a book, now nominally 6s. and actually 4s. 6d. would be 5s.

The book trade is carried on by four kinds of machinery. (1) That of the bookseller; (2) that of the railway stall; (3) that of the circulating libraries, and (4) that of the free library. The bookseller's shop was formerly the haunt of all those who were interested in books. The scholars, divines, antiquaries, poets and "wits" of all kinds met at the booksellers' and turned over the new books. The circle of readers was small, but they were buyers; they were willing to give a high price for books. The position of the bookseller was far above that of the ordinary retail tradesman; he knew the books which he sold; there was about him a clinging suggestion of scholarship; he knew what his customers wanted. That bookseller's shop is gone; it may perhaps linger at Oxford and Cambridge; one or two booksellers of the old fashion may still remain. But the shop is now filled with stationery, photograph albums, desks, "fancy" things, birthday presents, Christmas cards, and even toys. And the modern bookseller, as a rule, knows little of the books which he offers for sale; these are no longer displayed on a table or counter as the newest and best books of the day; the new books on his shelves are mostly the popular novels in demand, with a sprinkling of religious books. Ask him for any other book, and his reply is a formula, "It is not in stock, but I can get it for you." There are many English towns of importance in which there is not a single bookseller's shop; one, that is, devoted wholly and solely to the sale of books. In East London, a city of two millions, there are one or two second-hand bookshops. There are also shops which, among other things, offer a shelf or two of books; but there is not a single bookseller's shop in that huge mass of streets, where only books are sold and nothing else. Even in West London there are lines of roads along which one may walk for miles without finding a bookshop.

The second machinery for selling books is that of the railway stall, which, in England, is almost entirely in the hands of one firm—Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son. At the railway stall no discount is allowed; it is, however, the chief place for the sale of books. At a London terminus, at any great station, you may see the passengers buying books all day long. The objection to the stall is that it has neither table nor counter for the display of books; that the space allotted to it is very small, even in the largest stations, and that serious literature is hardly represented at all. Like the ordinary bookseller, however, Messrs. Smith & Son will get any book that is wanted.

The third machinery for the purchase of books is that of the circulating library. It is only by means of this institution that people living in the country can see the new literature of the day at all. The circulating library supplies practically the reading of the whole country, especially of those households where the love of books is great and the means of purchase are small. The circulating libraries, taken all together, are by far the largest buyers of books in the country.

There is, again, the free library. There are now some hundreds of free libraries in the towns, many of them with several branches. The free library is also a free circulating library, by means of which the whole of our people can be supplied for nothing with the best literature, ancient and modern. There ought, of course, to be no rubbish at all sought for or accepted by a free library; even with this proviso, it is obvious that the free library is becoming a large and important factor in the buying of books.

Now, while it is beyond a doubt that the number of those who read is increasing with astonishing rapidity, it is also beyond a doubt that the part of the book trade which is represented by the booksellers has fallen into a depression which threatens to become every day more serious. Perhaps the following considerations may help to explain the situation:

1. It is unfortunate that publishers have arrogated to themselves the right of naming the price at which books are sold to the public. The discount system was a partial revolt against that claim. It has, however, from the first been refused recognition by publishers. They give no better terms, although booksellers have to sell so much more cheaply; they have said, practically: "Give discount if you like, but out of your own profits." It would be far better for the book trade if the publishers simply sold their books to the retailer without any kind of stipulation or restriction as to the price afterward put upon them. As it is, the individual bookseller seems to shrink from the responsibility of fixing the price of a book for himself.

2. The chief risk of the trade is laid upon the bookseller. That is to say, the publisher does not, as a rule, bring out a book unless he is reasonably satisfied as to its prospects. But the bookseller has to buy every book on the chance of being able to sell it again.

3. The vast increase in the production of books has enormously increased the booksellers' risk. Buyers do not increase in the same proportion as readers. Yet the bookseller is every day besieged by publishers' travelers pressing books upon him with assurances of their certain popularity. He is fain to subscribe with caution, even, in many cases, not to subscribe at all.

What is the result? Simply that a large number of books are not published at all—only produced. Publishing includes the exhibition or the offer of a book to the public. If the bookseller will not subscribe, the book is simply not offered to the public; that is to say, it is not published at all.

4. The free library, the School Board, the grammar school for boys, the high school for girls, do not buy their books of the local bookseller, but go straight to a London bookseller—or to the publisher direct.

5. Other trades are beginning to offer books. There is a large book trade done by the army and navy stores. There is also a cheap series offered at 4½d. or 6d. by drapers and grocers. It is destestable in paper and print, but it is cheap. News agents also offer books that are cheap and popular.

6. The high price of books prevents their sale. There is only half a million of families in this country who have an income of £200 a year or more. How many books at 4s. 6d., the ordinary price of a novel, can such a family, on an income of £200 a year, afford to buy? A great many people wait for the sale of the circulating library's books when the first run is over. A 6s. book is then offered for 1s. 6d. or 2s. The rapid sale at this price proves the demand for cheap literature.

7. The old tradition among booksellers is that they must not "push" their wares. They sit in their shops and wait. They do not advertise; they do not send round circulars; there is no margin which would enable them to do so; they do not invite people to see their books; they only sit and wait. And the unthinking folk who in all other trades are invited and pressed to come in pass by.

These are some of the reasons why the book trade is in a condition of apparently hopeless decay.

The committee of the Publishers' Association is attempting to improve the situation in the old familiar way. It is once more endeavoring to compel booksellers to abandon the discount system; it has learned nothing from the past; with all these reasons for the depression staring it in the face, it again offers the remedy of raising the price of books and depriving the public of the discount to which long years have accustomed it. It has persuaded a majority of the booksellers to agree to the following method:

1. The publishers are to fix a "net" price, which the booksellers are to accept. The book is to be sold at that price. No discount is to be permitted. If a bookseller breaks the rule he is to be boycotted; he is to have no more "net" books supplied him.

2. The discount on books at 6s. and under is to be continued, but no easier terms are offered to the trade.

3. The booksellers are to conduct their own espionage, in order to enforce these conditions.

The arrangement begins with the new year.

The committee of the Society of Authors, while pointing out the obvious defects and dangers of the situation, and especially the one-sided part of it which binds the bookseller and does not bind the publisher, has recognized the fact that the booksellers think there may be some salvation in this scheme and has recommended no interference for a time long enough to show its practical working. Meantime, while the publishers are trying to raise the price of books by abolishing discounts, they have actually stultified themselves by the suicidal folly of flooding the market by issuing the most popular books at 6d. The result is that the unhappy bookseller has his shelves loaded with unsalable stuff because the public has very quickly persuaded itself that 6d. is the outside price that ought to be given for a book, and then the publishers have on their hands a great part of the books issued this Autumn.

The recommendations made by the committee of the Society of Authors after a very careful and prolonged inquiry, during which much evidence was received, were as follows. It will be seen that they were practical, at least:

1. That books now priced at 6s. and under should remain, as at present, subject to discount.

2. That every "net" book shall be the subject of special contract between the bookseller and the publisher, and that there shall be no attempt at coercion or any interference, unless by contract, with the bookseller's liberty to deal with his own property as he pleases.

3. That the system of sale or return shall be more widely extended. We have seen that under the present system of making every bookseller buy the books he offers a great many books are not published at all.

4. That there must be a margin of 20 per cent. at least above trade price to include "office expenses," if the bookselling trade is to be carried on at all.

Not one of these recommendations has been adopted by the publishers, who have since issued a manifesto demanding those very percentages for their own "office expenses" which they refuse to booksellers.

Other recommendations might be added as follows:

The cultivation by booksellers of a wider acquaintance with current literature so as to be better judges of what is wanted; more "push" and energy in the conduct of their business; a closer connection with customers, so as to find out what is wanted; the creation of a confidential bureau by the Booksellers' Association, which shall read new books and advise as to purchase; a revision of trade prices and the united resolution, which would be irresistible, to pay publishers such a price as will cover office expenses and leave a reasonable margin; a lowering of the price of books (it is absurd that a new novel by a new writer should be charged at the same rate as one by a highly popular and successful writer; it is also foolish to ignore the vast public who would buy cheaper books;) the issue of popular books in two or more forms, cheap or dear, bound or unbound; freedom to every bookseller to put what price he pleases on books that he has bought (he is now unwilling to have that freedom, but he would rapidly appreciate the advantage;) the addition, after the German fashion, of a second-hand book business—but only of good books; in case of "sale or return" to reserve the right of refusal, so as not to have his shelves loaded with rubbish; to agitate continually for the local business of schools, libraries and prize books, and to support the endeavors of certain authors to substitute a commission agent for a publisher, a step which would enable the bookseller to deal directly with the author and to obtain very much easier terms. In one word, the key to the present situation is an entire revolution of an antiquated system, only possible when books were few and readers were wealthy. There are as yet few signs that booksellers are understanding the tendencies of the time; they will learn, one fears, too late that free competition, low prices, publicity, and intelligent activity are as necessary in the trade of books as in every other trade.

WALTER BESANT.

Delagoa Bay.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Poultney Bigelow.

Author of "White Man's Africa," "History of the German Struggle for Liberty," &c.

It made the heart of an enterprising Yankee ache to look in at Delagoa Bay and see how a swarm of little ginger-colored officials were wasting the opportunities which a caprice of Providence had placed in their path. Their antics suggested the behavior of monkeys let loose amid the costly instruments of Greenwich Observatory. They appeared to have, in common with their arboreal kinspeople, the spirit of mischievous destruction largely developed; but very little of the sportive quality which makes a monkey cage the central point of every menagerie. Delagoa Bay owes its great commercial, and just now strategic, importance, to two important facts:

First, it is the nearest port to the gold fields of the Transvaal.

Secondly, it is far and away the best natural port in all South Africa.

Both these advantages are neutralized by reason of Portuguese domination, so that, as a matter of fact, on the occasion of my visit (1896) many merchants preferred to send their goods by the longer route through Natal, via Durban, merely because the Delagoa route offered much risk by reason of rapacious or at least very negligent management at the otherwise more favored harbor.

The first glimpse of Delagoa Bay made me feel that a successful Jameson raid would be welcomed by even the most orthodox of humanitarians if it succeeded in expelling the present misrule and placing in its stead the government of any respectable set of white people.

I am not here commending piracy or brigandage in the abstract; but I call history to witness that what we to-day call the progress of civilization has been largely made up of movements which might roughly be likened to substituting good government in lieu of what now disgraces the neighborhood of the fairest port in South Africa.

Let me illustrate.

On arrival at that beautiful port we anchored in midstream and were taken ashore in rowboats. Private companies had over and over begged permission to erect at their own expense wharves where vessels might load and unload with facility; but this eminently practical, if not philanthropic, request had been invariably refused because it might deprive the Government of one more means of extracting bribes from merchants.

As I made my way from the landing stage to the town it was through an accumulation of merchandise which reminded me of goods rescued in haste from a great fire or some other disaster. Boxes were smashed, and stuff of the most incongruous description lay helter skelter, as though dropped from some mammoth grab-bag. Imagine the army and navy stores lifted in midair and dropped upside down on the swampy, sandy shores of a tropical port—there you have the Custom House of Delagoa Bay under Portuguese rule.

Distracted merchants or forwarding agents wandered amidst the ruins of what had been valuable ship's cargo, hunting for the goods for which they waved the bills of ladings in their weary fingers. Here lay a bag of lime, beneath was a sack of rice. Their contents were making a blend which even an ostrich might have regarded as discouraging. Delicate electrical plant destined for a Johannesburg mine lay scattered in the open, while in the heavy sand were countless nuts, bolts, and other parts of machinery, all rendered valueless to the men of capital and brain waiting in vain for them at the end of the railway. Barrels of treacle were leaking into goods marked "To be kept dry"; sewing machines, typewriters, church organs, clothing, blankets, furniture, tinware, and crockery—all were knocking about in the open air, not merely at the mercy of rain, but of thieves in and outside of the official lines.

There is no newspaper in this beautiful place, and for obvious reasons. If it told the truth the Governor would send the editor to jail. If it did not discuss the scandalous state of things, it would have no support among the only people likely to give it subscriptions and advertisements.

When I speak of Delagoa Bay as a pestiferous port, I mean that it is so to-day because of bad administration. Durban was unhealthy until England drained the swamps and looked to the sanitation of the place. The Portuguese Government has done nothing for the colony beyond what might be expected of any band of pirates, and mighty short-sighted pirates at that. The natives are debauched by the sale of "fire-water," and the Government encourages this because it brings in a certain amount of revenue. In Natal I saw not a single drunken black. At Delagoa Bay employers of labor told me that it was the curse of the natives, that bad rum was thrust at them all along the highways leading to their work. The native is after all a child in a man's body, and while he cordially approves of a law forbidding the sale of strong drink, yet so incapable is he of resisting temptation that he will lose no opportunity of getting drunk if drink presents itself in attractive form.

There is, of course, a Portuguese Governor at Delagoa Bay, a fort, an army of petty negroids—officials about as big as Filipinos and with ancestry about as ambiguous. I was shown maps of the colony which indicated splendid parks, avenues, embankments, plazas, and other adjuncts of a metropolis. None of these things existed excepting on official paper intended for the public of Lisbon. In 1896 there were dirty streets and shabby houses, two or three vile hotels, and a drinking booth, near which the little military band made music on occasion—and this was called the promenade. There was no such thing as a public conveyance to be had—not even a jinrikisha. The British Consulate stood in lonesome dignity on top of the bluff overlooking the river and harbor—in fact, that building represented to me the one hopeful element in the neighborhood.

There was no American Consulate there at the time. Indeed, in all South Africa I do not remember seeing a single American Consul. Tradition referred to one at Cape Town, but while Americans were in trouble in the times succeeding the Jameson raid, it was from the English authorities, and not from their own Consul, that help came. An American at the Cape told me that in his experience of twenty years he had not known an American Consul who had succeeded in keeping sober after 12 o'clock noon. I hope this was not true.

There was once a noble and progressive Governor at Delagoa Bay who was shocked by the number of accidents to ships entering the port. He succeeded in securing a lightship to mark the channel. This was so radical and so violent a reform for a Portuguese Governor that some suspected his sanity. But, on the contrary, he proved to be a very sane and businesslike man—for a Portuguese. Indeed, so businesslike was he that he employed this lightship during the day in carrying bricks, and in that way earned a considerable addition to his salary. Malicious critics pretend that he used it for private purposes at night as well, but that is not founded on satisfactory evidence. It would have been better had he done so, however, for so ignorant were those in charge that the lightship was each night anchored in a different part of the bay. Incoming vessels soon came to dread this erratic lightship more than they did the perils of the deep, and it was the cause of more accidents than were ever known before it was invented. It shows us, however, that now and then Portugal produces a Governor who means well, though he may have eccentric ways of showing it.

POULTNEY BIGELOW.

Municipal Trading in Great Britain.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By EDWARD W. BEMIS

Of the Bureau of Economic Research.

IN a widely quoted letter in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Oct. 31, 1899, Mr. Robert P. Porter, Chief of the last census, vigorously attacked the city ownership movement in Great Britain, which is there known as municipal trading. Among other things, he says: "The immediate cause for alarm and dissatisfaction on the part of taxpayers is the increase of local indebtedness and taxes since the inauguration of municipal trading. * * * To this case of the municipal trader, which I have put in a nutshell, the English opponent of municipal Socialism aptly and vigorously replies, sustaining his position with an array of data that confounds the college professors and the Socialistic clergymen who have rushed madly into the municipal ownership arena and want our cities to absorb alike all the lighting and street railway enterprises. In the first place, these English economists claim that the cost of borrowed money is a small element in the success of municipal trading when there is a loss of 10 per cent. in cost of management when municipal is compared with personal talent in management. * * * In short, the claim is being made in England, and sustained with an overwhelming amount of facts, that in twenty years municipalities have not given so good an account of their stewardship as private enterprises would have done."

It is worth while to examine for a moment the serious charges above mentioned. Coming from one who has had such high official positions in statistical lines as Mr. Porter, these statements deserve careful consideration. What are the facts?

On March 6, 1899 the Local Government Board, as previously ordered by the House of Commons, submitted a return of all the leading municipal undertakings from which any revenue is derived in the United Kingdom. It appears that the average annual net profit on water works during the five years ended March 31, 1898, was 4.2 per cent. of the outstanding capital. In gas works the profit was 7.47 per cent., in tramways 6.09 per cent., and electric lighting 4.6 per cent., making a total average profit of £3,215,281, or 5.14 per cent. of the total capital outstanding in March, 1898, of £62,547,963. The total average annual net income on certain other municipal undertakings, such as markets, baths, cemeteries, working-class dwellings, and piers, was £398,387, or 4.27 per cent. of the capital of £9,335,263. Still other undertakings of municipalities, such as sewage disposal, slaughter houses, public libraries, harbors, &c., were not investigated, since the revenue feature with them is intentionally and rightly made subordinate to considerations of health, education, and general social advantage in their management. Neither are we much concerned at present about the revenue feature of markets, baths, cemeteries, &c., just mentioned, although the percentage earned by them is enough to pay both interest and sinking fund charges. In the case of municipal water works, lighting, and tramways, there is left even an excess above interest and sinking fund charges, which can be used for other purposes if desired. It must be borne in mind that English municipalities to-day can borrow for under 3 per cent., and that 2 per cent. furnishes a liberal sinking fund allowance. How, in the face of this financial situation, Mr. Porter can claim that the English taxpayer is burdened is unaccountable.

The growth of local indebtedness means nothing to the taxpayer if counterbalanced by corresponding growth of revenue-producing assets. There has been, indeed, a considerable growth in English local taxation during the last twenty years, but this has been due not to the assumption of municipal undertakings such as the above, as Mr. Porter's paper would imply, but to the vast development of the public school system, sanitary improvements, street paving, &c., which are everywhere recognized as legitimate functions of city expenditure and of increasing importance and even necessity.

In the British Journal of Finance for the first quarter of 1899 Mr. A. Still analyzes and tabulates the returns of the English Government of all the gas companies in Great Britain, and shows that while the public gas works sell 36.9 per cent. of the gas sold in the kingdom, and reach 48.8 per cent. of the number of consumers, they charge so much less than the private companies that their receipts are only 33.5 per cent. of the total, and that their net income or profits above operating expenses are only 32.5 per cent of the total. Their capital was originally 34.8 per cent., but by sinking fund payments it has been reduced to 29.2 per cent. of the gas capital of the kingdom.

My own computation from the report of the British Local Government Board shows that the average charges for gas in the private companies are about one-seventh higher than in the public-owned gas plants.

The most careful comparison of the large gas companies is made yearly in England in what is known as Field's "Analysis of the Accounts of the Principal Gas Undertakings in England, Scotland, and Ireland." In the issue for 1898, without a word of text, most careful statistical analyses are given in parallel columns of eight of the leading private companies outside of London and eight of the leading public plants. The average candle power of the private plants, due account being made of the different outputs of the different plants, was 16.4 and of the public plants 18.8. This difference of 2.4 candle power and possibly some difference in location relative to mines and markets accounts for the fact that the average net cost of coal and oil in the public plants (13.82 cents) was 3.8 cents higher per thousand feet than in the private plants. All the other costs of manufacture and distribution, aside from rates and taxes, were 22.12 cents in the public plants and 23.3 cents in the private plants. Even the wages cost per thousand feet was less in the public plants. This indicates conclusively that in these typical undertakings public plants are as well managed and as well equipped with labor-saving machinery as the private plants. In these particular cases the public plants in 1898 charged 5 cents per thousand feet more than the private plants, but charged so much less for rent of meters and stoves and paid so much more for taxes that the real excess charge was only 2.72 cents, and this was counterbalanced, as already indicated, by the difference of candle power.

The real superiority of the public plants appeared in the fact that after paying interest and depreciation charges they had a balance of 7.78 cents, of which 1.82 cents was devoted to the sinking fund and the balance was a net profit to the city, while the private companies had no corresponding benefits to bestow upon the people. The sinking fund in the public plants already amounts to about 53.4 cents per thousand feet of annual sales, or over one-fifth of the original cost of about $2.63.

Any one skeptical of the results of municipal operation should carefully study English gas history, not only because, next to water, the gas industry and its management by municipalities is the oldest of any municipal undertaking for profit, but because most of the opponents of such public operation have given up the fight against public operation of water works and concentrated attention on gas and electricity. In a prominent English gas journal, known as The Gas World, for June, 1897, appeared the most scholarly criticism of municipal gas works that the writer has seen. So far however, from accusing public ownership of bankrupting municipalities and injuring the taxpayers, as does Mr. Porter, this article shows by elaborate statistics that the tendency is rather to earn a considerable net revenue for the city, besides creating, from charges upon consumers, a sinking fund that shall in thirty or forty years pay off all the capital borrowed. The criticism of Mr. Herbert Lees of the private gas company at Hexham in this Gas World article is that the consumer is thus being sacrificed for the benefit of the taxpayer, and consequently, that, where, as in these six northern counties of England—Lancashire, Yorkshire, Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmoreland—the cost of coal is practically the same for all companies, the consumers really pay more under public than under private ownership. He admits, however, that cities borrow at present for at least ¾ per cent. less than private companies. It is further notable that in all the lengthy discussions among gas engineers of public and private companies that followed this paper, there was no charge that the public plants were inferior in progressiveness or in amount of operating expenses.

In order to make the kind of comparison between public and private ownership that this critic insisted on as the only fair one, I have made a study of the 100 private-owned gas companies and the 79 public plants in these six northern counties, using the latest returns to the House of Commons that are at hand, viz., those for the fiscal year 1897-8. These private companies, with sales of 15,531,705,000 feet, received from gas, rent of meters and stoves and from residuals and other sources 74.7 cents per 1,000 feet. The public plants, selling 20,511,331,000 feet, obtained 75.4 cents, or seven-tenths of a cent more than the private companies. On the other hand, not only were the operating expenses, before deducting residuals, 2.3 cents less in the public plants, being 52.4 cents per 1,000 feet, as compared with 54.7 cents in the private companies, but the consumer obtained three advantages from his slightly higher payment of less than three-quarters of a cent per 1,000 feet on the average. One of these advantages arose from the considerable payment to the sinking fund, so that ultimately, after the debt has been paid, the cities will be able to sell gas at mercly operating cost, if they so desire. In the second place, so far as the consumer is a taxpayer, relief in tax burden from the net profits of the gas works equaled in a large proportion of cases the very slight additional charge for gas. The third advantage of the gas consumers of the public plants, and one that alone much more than counterbalances the above three-quarters of a cent of increased charge, was the higher candle power. Of the gas sold by the public plants in these six northern counties, 41.8 per cent. was above 18.5 candle power and only 2.3 per cent. was below 16.5 candle power, while of the sales by the private companies only 27.5 per cent. was above 18.5 candle power and 37 per cent. was below 16.5 candle power. A clearer illustration of the superiority of public management under what the critics consider substantially similar conditions could not be imagined. To be sure, the average sales of the 100 private plants, of about 142,000,000 feet, was considerably less than the average sales of 260,000,000 feet in the public plants, but after the output of a plant reaches 140,000,000 feet the economies do not increase rapidly with the increase of another 120,000,000 feet. In the above companies is sold nearly one-half of the gas of the public-owned plants and one-fifth of that of the private-owned plants of the United Kingdom.

It is no wonder that during the past ten years thirty-eight private gas works have been bought by cities and no changes have occurred in the opposite direction in Great Britain. There would be much more rapid change to public ownership of the gas industry were it not for the English laws, which prevent a municipality entering upon this business without first buying out the existing company at its franchise value. Gas franchises in England were granted many decades ago, before limitations of time and provisions for public purchase at reasonable prices were thought of.

In the case of electric lighting the superiority of public ownership is remarkable. In an address last September before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, by Robert Donald, editor of The British Municipal Yearbook and of The Municipal Journal and London, a comparison was made between what appeared to be the twenty-one largest municipal electricity supply works of Great Britain and the twenty-one largest private works for the last fiscal year prior to the reading of the paper. Mr. Donald computed in his very full tables that the municipalities averaged only 9 cents charge per kilowatt, while the private companies averaged 11 cents, although the municipalities secured a profit of. 7½ per cent. on their mean capital and the private companies 7½ per cent. Most remarkable was the cost of production per kilowatt, aside, that is, from profit. The average cost in the case of municipalities was 3.74 cents, and in the case of private companies 5.42 cents. The average taxes, however, in the case of the public companies I found to have been about a quarter of a cent less than paid by the private companies, so that the fairest comparison would be had by assuming the cost of the public plants as 4 cents in comparison with 5.42 cents per kilowatt, or 35½ per cent. more in the case of the private companies.

I have attempted an independent investigation of the latest figures of the fifty-nine public lighting plants and the thirty-eight plants as reported in the famous English weekly, Lightning, on Dec. 28, 1899, for the previous fiscal year. The list seems to include all the large electric lighting plants of Great Britain, and gives most detailed information of all the items of expense and receipts and sales of energy. From the column giving total operating expenses in both public and private plants the writer deducted the amount reported as spent for "rent, rates, and taxes," since these do not vary with the efficiency of the management, and, unlike the gas works described in Field's analysis, seem to be less for the public than for the private plants. Arranging the whole ninety-seven plants in order of their operating expenses, the startling fact appeared that in the twenty plants showing the lowest expenses, there were only three privately owned and operated, and these ranked, aside from taxes, &c., seventh, eighteenth, and twentieth. Leeds, which was the seventh, had an expense, aside from taxes, &c., of 2.84 cents per kilowatt of sales, while the best public plant, that of Edinburgh, had a cost of only 2.2 cents. Bradford 2.34 cents, and Nottingham 2.56 cents.

Space forbids reference to the astonishing success and progress within the past two years of municipal tramways in Great Britain. Even now these British undertakings may not be, in some respects, as progressive as our own best street railway systems, but it must be borne in mind that private enterprise in the case of street railways, and also in the manufacture and use of farm machinery, elevators, bicycles, machine-made watches, and countless other things, is far less progressive than in Yankeedom. The fundamental fact that has a bearing on the general question before us is whether public or private ownership and operation are more progressive in the same country in the same period, and whether either policy has won such general approval as to be making rapid strides past the other. Judging by this standard, there can be no doubt that municipal operation of so-called city monopolies has won the day in the mother country.

The Select Committee on Telephones of the House of Commons in 1898 gave a sufficient answer to Mr. Porter's charges when it reported. "From the point of view of local finance the telephone service will be as successful as has been the supply of gas, water, tramways, and electric light by local authorities."

We are now in position to understand why some English towns, as Mr. Porter asserts, have secured from the Government permission to construct electric light plants and tramways before being actually ready to begin operations. British experience has been so favorable to municipal undertakings, and it has been found so hard to dislodge a private company when once in the field, that some English towns have been willing to forego the immediate construction of a private plant in the hope that a public plant could soon be built. Municipalities throughout the United Kingdom have constructed at much cost plants which they have found, as above shown, much superior to private undertakings. The absurdity of competition in these matters, also, has been more clearly seen in England than in America. Hence it is easy to understand why municipalities should have united, as Mr. Porter charges, in order to prevent permission by Parliament to an electric company to wire or distribute electrical energy over several hundred miles of territory. It was not believed that the company could really sell energy cheaper than the cities could manufacture it, while the introduction of a private company would be the beginning of an expensive duplication of plants and a cutthroat war of rates.

Mr. Porter writes: "Will Dr. W. S. Rainsford or Dr. Lyman Abbott or Albert Shaw or Prof. Bemis please answer the question put by Dixon Henry Davies when he asks, 'Where is the inherent beneficence or nobility in those who merely adventure other people's money?' There are just as many good, sterling qualities required in venturing your own money—courage, steadiness in adversity, tenacity of purpose, faith, and loyalty, all necessary to steer great undertakings through troubled waters."

To refer to the business men of high standing who, without pay, serve any British Town Council, as "those who merely adventure other people's money" and as lacking in "inherent beneficence or nobility" is to entirely misconceive the motives of those men. While private business interests, indeed, when honestly conducted, promote "good, sterling qualities," public management, when successful, implies the development in the community of two qualities that are grander and higher than are developed in, I will not necessarily say all, business, but at least in the management of privately owned natural monopolies as usually conducted. I refer to patriotic devotion to the public weal on the part of all men in office and the capacity for self-government by the democracy that puts them there. Modern social problems need the cultivation of these qualities more than all the "courage, steadiness in adversity, tenacity of purpose," &c., which private business cultivates. Municipal ownership and operation, at least as carried on in England, has as its highest merit not so much the evident financial advantages which it brings as that it cultivates these qualities of patriotism and capacity for self-government in officials and voters.

EDWARD W. BEMIS.
Bureau of Economic Research.

Capital Punishment Not a Deterrent of Crime.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Gen. NEWTON M. CURTIS.

THE aim of criminal law is the prevention of crime and the protection of the orderly and well-disposed. Penalties imposed to secure these objects are to be judged by the speediness and certainty of their infliction. The Legislature should determine in affixing punishments for crime the maximum which public sentiment will support, for under our system of jurisprudence the sanction of criminal laws cannot be enforced, except in extreme cases, unless supported by the mass of the people from whom jurymen are selected to determine the merits of each case. This fact was strongly expressed by Sydney Smith, who said "the efficient maximum of punishment is not what the Legislature chooses to indicate, but what the mass of the people think that maximum ought to be." Our capital punishment law possesses none of the essential qualities to make it a fit preventive of crime. First, it is not supported by public sentiment, and on account of its severity a large proportion of those subject to jury duty refuse to serve in murder trials. There are no means of compelling men to serve as jurors who declare that they have conscientious scruples against the infliction of the penalty of death. Year by year the empaneling of juries in murder trials has been attended by increasing difficulty, and we are rapidly approaching the time when our criminal courts will be brought to a standstill in the trial of persons accused of murder in the first degree by reason of the reluctance of men to sit as jurors in capital cases. The truth of these assertions will be accepted by those who have noted the proceedings of such trials in the last decade.

It is a question for the Legislature to determine whether it will permit this unsatisfactory condition to continue to exist until capital punishment shall be abolished because of the actual inability of courts to convict, or remedy it by substituting for this inefficient penalty one supported by public sentiment.

Not only does the death penalty tend to prolong trials—it tends to prevent witnesses from testifying clearly and positively and to cause jurymen to commit "pious perjury" rather than be responsible for the taking of human life. That there has been a growing feeling against the infliction of the death penalty throughout the United States is clearly established by Federal statistics. Ex. Doc. No. 146, Second Session 20th Congress, Feb. 26, 1829, shows that from the adoption of the Constitution to the end of the year 1826 there had been 138 capital trials under the authority of the United States, resulting in 118 convictions and 42 executions by hanging; the convictions were 85 per cent. of the indictments, showing that public sentiment during that period of nearly thirty-seven years supported the death penalty. Compare this with the report of Richard Olney, Attorney General of the United States, made Oct. 21, 1893, giving the number of indictments, convictions, and executions in capital cases under authority of the United States for the year of 1891. It shows there were 98 indictments, 23 convictions, and 1 execution by hanging; the convictions were about 23 per cent. of the indictments.

At the time I called for this information from the Attorney General of the United States, I requested the Attorneys General of the several States of the Union to furnish me with the number of indictments, convictions, and executions under the authority of the State courts for the same year. Several replied that it would be impossible to obtain this information without a large expenditure of money, as there were no laws in their States requiring such reports to be made by Prosecuting Attorneys or other officers of the several counties. From the reports made it was shown the percentage of convictions in capital cases in the States reporting was a little less than the percentage of convictions in the United States courts.

In about sixty years the convictions had fallen from 85 to 23 per cent., indicating a rapid decline of public sentiment in respect to the infliction of the death penalty as a punishment for crime.

During the Fifty-second Congress I presented to the Secretary of State a number of questions relating to the subject of crimes and punishments, with a request that he direct our representatives abroad to obtain answers to them from the Ministers of Justice of the several Governments to which they were accredited. One asked them to state the results of the abolition of the death penalty, if at any time it had been abolished in whole or in part. These replies came to me through the State Department from thirty-five nations. The substance of these replies was published in a pamphlet I prepared for the consideration of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, before which I had a bill pending to abolish capital punishment under the authority of the United States, and this information was subsequently made use of by the Committees on the Judiciary of the House and Senate, as an appendix to their report on my measure.

It appears that the death penalty had been abolished in whole or in part in twelve foreign nations; ten of this number reported that the abolition had been followed by satisfactory results, viz.: Brazil, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Haiti as to political matters, Holland, Italy, Portugal, Russia, Switzerland as fifteen cantons, Venezuela. Denmark had not abolished the death penalty, but the King had refused to sign warrants for executions since 1866. The statistics show that the years following 1866 compared with a like number of years preceding it, that there had been a slight decrease in the homicidal crimes since the suspension of executions.

Colombia, Ecuador, all South America reported that the results of the abolition were not satisfactory, and it could, perhaps, not be expected in States subject to frequent revolutions.

In the United States we now have the experience of five States, in each of which the results of abolition have been satisfactory:

Michigan abolished in 1847, Rhode Island in 1852, Wisconsin in 1853, Colorado in 1897, Maine abolished in 1876, restored in 1883, and again abolished in 1876. All have continued non-capital punishment States, excepting the four years of restoration in Maine.

Iowa abolished in 1872, previous to which time she had one murder to 800,000 of her population. During the six years following, without the use of the death penalty, murders decreased to one in 1,200,000. In 1878 the Legislature of Iowa revised her criminal laws and authorized juries to affix for the crime of murder the punishment of death or imprisonment for life.

Those who demand the retention of the death penalty for a punishment claim that it is the most deterrent. This claim is disproved by the experience of every State which has abandoned it.

I will concede that the fear of death is most terrifying, but unhappily the terror or fright it produces does not affect the murderer at the time of the commission of the crime for which death is the punishment. It only acts at the time that death is imminent and certain, and that the victim is overcome with terror when taken to execution does not prove that the fear of death would have had any restraining influence upon him at the time of committing the offense. Fright comes to him for the first time when he comprehends that he is to meet death. The fear of death is not one of the strongest passions, according to Bacon, Montagu, and nearly all the philosophers, nor is it the opinion of those who have had experience in positions of great danger.

Men readily engage in the most hazardous occupations; positions in powder mills, after explosions have destroyed all the employes, are especially sought after; the authorities have no difficulty in obtaining firemen, nor the Government in securing soldiers and sailors. Men who have been in action know how little the fear of death influences soldiers in battle. They promptly fill any breach made, although it may require them to step over the bodies of their dead comrades.

A well-authenticated case is reported by Mr. William Tallack, Secretary of the Howard Association of Great Britain, that of a young man who was hanged in Clonmel, Ireland, in October, 1786, for theft. After he had hanged six minutes the Sheriff was induced to give the body to the friends of the offender. By rubbing the body and the application of warm bricks he was restored and sent to his home in the north of Ireland, and before reaching home he committed another theft.

The Rev. Mr. Roberts of Bristol, England, expressed his opinion that the death penalty was not a deterrent, and said that of 167 men consoled by him before their execution, 164 confessed that they had frequently witnessed executions. Like opinions of other persons having had large experience with criminals and executions could be quoted to fill pages of your paper.

Perhaps no man in the County of New York engaged in the prosecuting of criminals in the last fifty years had a larger experience than the late District Attorney John R. Fellows. I insert a letter given me by him to be made use of if necessary during his absence when my bill was under consideration by the Committee on the Judiciary.

House of Representatives, U. S.
Washington, D. C., Feb. 27, 1893.

Gen. N. M. Curtis, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir: In reply to your inquiry as to my views of the expediency of enacting your bill, H. R. 7,197, providing for the abolition of the penalty of death under United States laws, I have to say briefly that I am heartily in favor of the abolition of the death penalty under Federal laws, as well as in our State of New York.

Formerly I regarded the death penalty worthy of retention as a deterrent against atrocious crimes, but, having had large opportunities while discharging the duties of District Attorney for the City and County of New York to give the question special and careful consideration, I came to thoroughly believe that the retention of the death penalty directly tended to prevent convictions in proper cases, and as a consequence a weakening of the arm of justice and demoralization in the administration of our criminal laws in every part. I shall, to the extent of my influence, do all in my power to secure the abolition of this inefficient and unsatisfactory penalty under both Federal and State laws. Respectfully,

J. R. FELLOWS.

If we will carefully consider the question of punishment we will see that capital punishment is supported by our desire for vengeance against the culprit rather than because of its efficiency in the prevention of crime.

I am not an apologist for the murderer; my chief objection to capital punishment is that it is demoralizing, burdensome to the taxpayer without possessing a single useful quality in the prevention of crime in a civilized State. NEWTON MARTIN CURTIS.

FINANCIAL DIRECTORY.

Chemical National Bank
270 Broadway.

National Bank of Commerce
CAP. AND SUR. $4,500,000.
31 Nassau St.

Hanover National Bank
Capital $1,000,000. Surplus and profits, $2,500,000.
9 and 11 Nassau St.

The Nassau Bank
Corner Beekman and Nassau Streets.

Central National Bank
320 Broadway.

Continental Trust Company
30 Broad St.

Colonial Trust Company
CAPITAL & SURPLUS, $1,500,000.
ST. PAUL B'LD'G. 222 B'way.

Washington Trust Company
Stewart Building, 280 Broadway.

PHILADELPHIA.
Fourth Street National Bank
Capital, $1,500,000. Surplus, $1,500,000.

BANKERS' CARDS.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS,
BANKERS,
Broadway & Cedar St., NEW YORK.
Investment Securities.
Foreign Exchange.
Loans made against approved collateral.
Interest allowed on deposits.
LETTERS OF CREDIT.

G. Sidenberg & Kraus,
BANKERS,
20 BROAD ST., NEW YORK.
Members of N. Y. Stock Exchange.
Transact a general Banking Business.
Interest allowed on deposits.
Orders for Stocks and Bonds executed for cash or on margin.
Investment Securities

HENRY CLEWS & CO.,
BANKERS,
11, 13, 15, & 17 Broad St.
MEMBERS N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE.
Orders executed for investment or on margin. Interest allowed on deposits subject to check at sight. Railroads reorganized and trade combinations effected. Act as Financial Agents for Corporations and Investors.
U. S. Bonds, all issues, bought and sold.
Branch Offices: 202 FIFTH AV., cor. 25th St. / 487 BROADWAY, Silk Ex'ge Bldg. / 36 WORTH ST. & 29 Thomas St. / 87 HUDSON ST., Mercantile Ex. / 16 COURT ST., Brooklyn.

Sutro Bros. & Co.,
BANKERS,
56 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Negotiate Security Issues of Railroad, Street Railway, Gas, Electric, and other Companies, and transact a General Banking Business.
Investment Securities.
Private wire connection to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Atlantic City.
Members New York and Phila. Stock Exchanges.
H. F. Bachman & Co., Philadelphia.

Geo. H. Holt & Co.,
10 WALL ST., N.Y.
BANKERS,
Members of New York Stock Exchange
Dealers in Investment Securities. Purchase bond issues of solvent corporations, and act as Fiscal and Transfer Agents. Execute orders at the New York Stock Exchange, either for cash or on margin. Daily market letter issued. Correspondence solicited.

HAVEN & STOUT
Bankers and Brokers,
1 Nassau Street, Cor. Wall St.
Members of
N. Y. Stock Exchange, N. Y. Cotton Exchange,
N. Y. Produce Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade.
Branch Offices:
392 Broadway, cor. Duane St., New York.
84 Broadway, cor. Berry St., Brooklyn.

SIMON BORG & CO.,
BANKERS,
No. 20 Nassau St., New York,
INVESTMENT SECURITIES.

W. C. Ashwell. E. D. Morgan Waterman.
Ashwell & Co.
30 BROAD ST.
MEMBERS { N. Y. Stock Exchange. / N. Y. Produce Exchange.

P. J. Goodhart & Co.,
Dealers in
Bank & Trust Co. Stocks.
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
38 WALL STREET.

FINANCIAL.

NOW READY
The third and enlarged edition of the "Common Sense" book on stock speculation, entitled
"BULLS AND BEARS OF WALL ST."
Full explanation, chart theory of trading, handsomely illustrated, etc. 83 pages. Price 10 cents in coin or stamps. Mailed to any address.
JOHN B. McKENZIE, 11 Broadway, N. Y.

Bankers' Trust Co. of N. Y.
10 WALL STREET.
Capital & Surplus, $3,000,000.
OFFICERS:
George W. Ely, President.
Francis H. Leggett, Louis V. Bright, Alfred H. Swayne, Vice Presidents.
John H. Allen, Asst. Secretary.

MORTON TRUST CO.
38 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK.
Capital & Surplus, $2,500,000.
LEVI P. MORTON, Pres't. EDWARD J. BERWIND, V.-Pres't.
JAS. K. CORBIERE, 2d V.-Pres't. WM. REDMOND CROSS, Sec.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Outside Securities a Specialty.
DAVID PFEIFFER, 18 Wall St.
BEFORE INVESTING IN MINING STOCKS write us. We have inside information with regard to several good gold and copper stocks, which can be bought cheap. THE KENDRICK PROMOTION CO., Denver, Col. Highest references.

MONEY TO LOAN on first and second mortgage, as low as 4½, city or country. Any amount. Right expenses. KENNEDY, 237 B'way, N. Y.

FINANCIAL.

January 15th, 1900.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE

CONSOLIDATED GAS CO.

In January, 1899, at the time of your last Annual Meeting, the Consolidated Gas Company was profitably engaged in the business of manufacturing gas and retailing the same at the price of $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The stockholders were receiving dividends upon their investment at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and the stock, by reason of these satisfactory and prosperous conditions, enjoyed universal favor and confidence on the part of the investing public.

On the first day of May, 1899, your directors saw fit to reduce the price charged to consumers for gas to 65c. per thousand cubic feet, its rivals and competitors perforce meeting this act by similar reductions in price. A ruinous rate war, thus entered upon, has resulted in serious loss to the stockholders of the Company, and in a reduction of their dividends to one-half of the amount previously paid.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company, to be held on the 22nd day of January, 1900, finds a demoralized condition of its affairs prevailing. Dividends have been gradually reduced until they are now one-half of those formerly received, and the stockholders are confronted with the possibility that if the Company continues its present policy respecting the price of gas to the consumer for any period of time, the restoration of more favorable conditions may be prevented by the enactment of hostile legislation on behalf of a public that, having become accustomed to the present price, will tolerate no change.

A matter fraught with so much of vital consequence to those whose capital is invested in the securities of the Company is one that merits the serious and thoughtful consideration of every stockholder, especially in view of the fact that a continuance of the present disastrous policy of the directors may produce further reductions in dividends and even place the Company in a position where it cannot continue to earn its fixed charges. The stockholders are copartners with each other in the business of manufacturing and selling gas, and they owe a duty to themselves to demand and obtain at the annual meeting of the stockholders full information concerning the business policy of the Company, and before re-electing any of the directors to know whether a continuance of the course adopted by the present directors is warranted by existing conditions, or is to the best interests of the Company.

One competitor of your Company has already restored the price of the gas sold by it to $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The other competitors of the Consolidated Gas Company, not being charitable institutions, would doubtless be exceedingly glad to co-operate with the Consolidated Gas Company in restoring the price of gas to a normal and proper level.

In the absence of very positive information to the contrary, this course would seem to be to the best interests of the Company, and no selfish aims or private purpose of any officer of the Company should prevail at the expense of the stockholders.

Your directors have recently purchased, by a certain private arrangement, a large number of shares of the capital stock of the New York Mutual Gas Light Company. It is believed by many that the price paid for this stock was enormously in excess of its actual or prospective value.

This transaction may have been a profitable one for the Company, but the surface facts disclosed warrant a close investigation into its details, and satisfactory assurance that it was not dominated by the individual interests of any person in a position to shape the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company to the accomplishment of his own ends.

It appears by a publication contained in The New York Herald of Jan. 4th, the correctness of which is admitted by the President of your Company, that on or about that date your Directors acquired control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company. This transaction is one of great magnitude, and the details of it should be scrutinized with great care by the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company before ratification by them. The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company is a consolidated or parent company of a number of electric light companies, most of them absorbed on a most extravagant basis of valuation. As an instance of this: $21,000,000 purchase money bonds of the present Company were issued to acquire $9,200,000 of the Common Stock of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. The assumption by the Consolidated Gas Company of the control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, with its enormous bonded indebtedness, and its $36,000,000 of Capital Stock, marks a radical step in the history of the Consolidated Gas Company, and the stockholders can certainly ask in all fairness that they be given a most thorough opportunity to consider this momentous financial operation after a submission to them of the full details thereof, before being called upon to ratify it.

It is understood that your Company has also purchased control of another great electrical company, but the persons directly interested are emphatic in their refusal to state anything concerning the price paid.

The belief is beginning to be held by many stockholders that they would receive much larger returns upon their investment, and their stock would have a much greater market value, were the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company divorced from the control of men having vast personal ambitions to serve. The stock of the Company is selling for much less than its actual worth, because its affairs have not been in the hands of men who have administered their trust with a sole view to the earning of as much money as possible by the manufacture and sale of gas, and the resulting payment of large dividends to the stockholders.

It is beginning to be felt that the stock of the Company is being used as a mere factor in vast and involved financial intrigues and in attempts at the accomplishment of far-reaching personal ambitions by men who, in their lust for financial power or the gratification of personal desires, have become indifferent to the interests of the stockholders of this gas company.

The stock of the Consolidated Gas Company is held very generally by legitimate investors, who have purchased the stock of the Company with the intention of permanently holding it for the dividends to be earned from the manufacture and sale of gas in New York. It is not fair that their interests should be subservient to those of men who, having many diverse and complicated interests, serve them at the expense of the stockholders. There are on the board of your Company many men of uprightness and integrity who are conscious of their responsibility as trustees for the stockholders, and who, it is believed, will respond at once to the just demand of an expressed public opinion that they conduct the business of the Company in the sole and exclusive interests of their stockholders.

The stockholders have it within their power, by an insistence upon conservatism and of their rights to be fully informed concerning the business of the Company, to greatly enhance the market value of their stock and to obtain much larger returns upon their investment, by way of dividends.

The attention of guardians, trustees, executors, administrators and those acting in a fiduciary capacity for stockholders of the company is especially called to this communication. A duty is imposed upon them of seeking full information concerning these matters which may affect the value of the securities held by them, and of asserting and enforcing the full rights of stockholders in the management of the Company.

It is desirable that as many stockholders as possible shall attend the annual meeting in person. Those who cannot do so, and believe that the directors should be called upon to furnish information concerning the affairs of the Company, are requested to sign the proxy which has been sent to them, and to mail the same to

GEORGE ALFRED LAMB,
c/o LAMB & VOSS,
Attorneys & Counselors at Law,
32 Nassau Street, N. Y. City.

The Colorado Coal and Iron Company,
6% MORTGAGE BONDS.

The Colorado Fuel & Iron Company, successor, by consolidation, to The Colorado Coal & Iron Company, proposes to extend above bonds at the rate of 6% per annum until February 1, 1902, the present security and lien to remain in full force, the principal and interest of the extended bonds to be payable in gold.

Arrangements have been made to purchase the bonds not extended by the holders, and to extend the same. Bondholders who wish to avail themselves of the privilege of extending the bonds may notify the Knickerbocker Trust Company at once of their intention so to do, and must present their bonds at the office of the Knickerbocker Trust Company, No. 66 Broadway, New York, between January 15th and January 27th, 1900, to have the contract of extension and new coupon sheets attached.

Bonds not extended by present holders should be presented to the Knickerbocker Trust Company on February 1, 1900, when the last coupon will be paid and the bonds will be taken at par by a purchasing syndicate.

JOHN L. JEROME, Treasurer.

N. Y. SECURITY AND TRUST CO.
46 WALL STREET, NEW YORK.
Capital & Surplus.....$3,000,000
CHARLES S. FAIRCHILD, President.
WM. L. STRONG, 1st Vice-Prest. ABRAM M. HYATT, 2d Vice-Prest.
OSBORN W. BRIGHT, Secretary. ZELAH VAN LOAN Asst. Secretary.
TRUSTEES:

Chas. S. Fairchild,	Edward Uhl,
Wm. L. Strong,	Frederic R. Coudert
James J. Hill,	B. Aymar Sands,
Wm. F. Buckley,	John W. Sterling,
Stuart G. Nelson,	John A. McCall,
Hudson Hongland,	H. Walter Webb,
James Stillman,	James A. Blair,
Edward N. Gibbs,	Frank W. Stearns,
M. C. D. Borden,	Edm. D. Randolph,
Jno. G. McCullough,	Aldace F. Walter.

This company is authorized to act as Executor, Trustee, Administrator, Guardian, Agent, Receiver, Registrar, and Transfer Agent.
Receives deposits subject to sight drafts, allowing interest on daily balances.

BOND DEPARTMENT.
CAREFULLY CHOSEN SECURITIES FOR INVESTMENT ALWAYS ON HAND.

GENTLEMAN, CONFIDENTIALLY ENGAGED, has extraordinary opportunities making money, seeks acquaintance gentleman of means; object, mutual profit; lifetime opportunity; references exchanged. STOCK EXCHANGE, Box 161, Times Office.

WANTED—Man who can influence some business for Consolidated Stock Exchange; member in good standing. Address B. R. T., Box 130, Times Office.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES.

MR. GEORGE ROUNTREE of WILMINGTON, N. C., has this day been admitted a member of our firm. R. H. ROUNTREE & CO
Jan. 20th, 1900.

International Zinc Co., Ltd.

SHARES ADVANCE JAN. 25th TO 85c.

Purchasers at present price,

75c. Per Share,

secure 16% on their investment and the regular monthly dividend, payable Feb. 1st to all shareholders of record Jan. 25th.

Applications for stock at 75c. per share must bear date not later than Thursday, Jan. 25th, 1900.

Such applications, accompanied by remittance, will be received at either of the following offices of the fiscal agents.

JOSHUA BROWN & CO., Bankers,
89 State St., Boston.
45 and 47 Wall St., New York.
421 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
409 The Rookery, Chicago.

DIVIDENDS.

The Colorado & Southern Railway Co.,
New York, January 11th, 1900.
At a meeting of the Board of Directors held this day there was declared from the net earnings for the calendar year 1899 a dividend of two per cent. on the first preferred stock of this Company, payable to the holders of record of the first preferred stock on February 14th, 1900. For the purpose of such dividend the transfer books of this Company will be closed at three P. M. on January 31st, and will be reopened at ten A. M. on February 15th, 1900.
The Colorado & Southern Railway Co.,
By HARRY BRONNER, Assistant Secretary.

28 Broad Street, New York, January 11th, 1900.
The transfer books of the Voting Trustees for the First Preferred Stock of the Colorado & Southern Railway Company will be closed at three P. M. on January 31st, 1900, and will reopen at ten A. M. on February 15th, 1900. On February 14th, 1900, the Voting Trustees will be prepared to distribute the above Dividend of two per cent., when received by them, at the office of Messrs. Hallgarten & Co., among the parties entitled thereto as same appear of record on their books when closed as above.
HALLGARTEN & CO.,
Agents for Voting Trustees.

Office of American Ice Company,
133 E. 23d Street,
New York, Jan. 18th, 1900.
A dividend of ONE PER CENT on the Common Stock of this Company has this day been declared, and will be payable Feb. 15th, 1900, to Stockholders of Record at the close of business Feb. 1st, 1900.
The transfer books of the Common Stock will be closed from 3 o'clock P. M., Feb. 1st, 1900, until Feb. 16th, 1900.
Dividend checks will be mailed to Stockholders of Record unless otherwise instructed.
J. T. SPROULL, Treasurer.

SEMI-ANNUAL CASH DIVIDEND.
Illinois Central Railroad Co.
The Board of Directors has this day declared a dividend of 2½ Per Cent. in cash, payable March 1st, 1900, to the holders of the Capital Stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company as registered at the close of business January 31st, 1900.
The stock transfer books will be closed for the purpose of the above dividend from January 31st until February 23d, 1900.
A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.
New York, January 17th, 1900.

PRECIOUS METALS PRODUCT.

The express and banking house of Wells, Fargo & Co., in its annual report on the precious metals product of the United States of America and Mexico during 1899, which is dated from San Francisco and signed by President J. J. Valentine, gives much valuable and interesting data and information. The production of precious metals in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River, including British Columbia and Yukon Territory, in the twelve months attained the gross result of $203,541,937. The gross yield, segregated, is approximatively: Gold, 44.31, $90,190,167; silver, 19.07, $38,804,498; copper, 29.11, $59,244,994, and lead, 7.51, $15,302,248. The report is careful to present this explanation with the figures:

Allowance must always be made for probable variations from reported figures, by reason of constantly increasing facilities for transporting bullion, ores, and base metals from the mines outside of the express and the difficulty of getting entirely reliable data from private sources. Estimates obtained in this way are liable to be exaggerated and are, to a considerable degree, guesswork; but with some modifications on this account, made herein, the general results reached, while only approximately correct, may be accepted as the closest approximation possible under the circumstances.

First in the list as a producer of gold dust and bullion which was handled by express is Colorado, with $26,348,050, but its total of gold production handled by express and other conveyances, silver bullion by express, and ores and base bullion by freight is only $43,180,913, while Montana's total is $50,695,000. Montana, however, had but $5,167,500 in gold dust and bullion, while its ores and base bullion by freight amounted to $36,802,500. For gold dust and bullion by express, British Columbia and Yukon Territory are credited with $17,622,721, California with $13,796,498, Dakota with $6,750,000, Idaho with $2,495,210, Utah with $2,239,532, Arizona with $1,874,551, Oregon with $860,910, New Mexico with $259,896, Washington with $215,840, Wyoming with $8,950, and Texas with $3,160. Alaska furnished gold dust and bullion by other conveyances than express $4,545,646. The totals of express gold receipts were $78,974,721, of gold by other conveyances $11,215,446, of silver bullion by express $33,208,015, and of ores and base bullion by freight $80,143,725.

The year's combined product of the metals treated of, says the report, is the greatest in the histories of the countries—United States of America, British Columbia, and Yukon Territory; that of gold, $90,190,167, being above any previous record officially reported, and the world's output of gold for 1899—approximately $304,000,000—is amazing. Australasia increased $18,000,000, the British possessions of the Northwest $5,000,000, and the United States of America $6,000,000. The rapidly increasing production of South Africa was arrested by the Boer war about the 1st of October. To that time it showed an increase over corresponding months of last year of $14,000,000.

The annual products of lead, copper, silver, and gold in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River, including British Columbia and Yukon Territory, 1870 to 1899, is exhibited in tables. One gives the product as per Wells, Fargo & Co.'s statement, including amounts from British Columbia and Yukon Territory. This shows an advance from $54,000,000 in 1870 to $98,421,754 in 1877. The product fell off and never reached this figure until 1886, when it was $103,011,761. In 1890 there was a slight falling off, from $127,677,836 in 1889 to $127,166,410, and a gradual decline to $104,081,591 in 1893. Then the advance was by strides to the extraordinary figures of the past year.

The following table gives for the past thirty years the product for silver and gold for the States and Territories west of the Missouri River alone, and exclusive of British Columbia and Yukon Territory:

Year.	Silver.	Gold.
1870	$17,329,000	$33,750,000
1871	19,286,000	34,398,000
1872	19,924,429	38,177,395
1873	27,483,302	39,206,558
1874	29,699,122	38,466,488
1875	31,935,239	39,968,194
1876	39,292,924	42,889,935
1877	45,846,109	44,880,223
1878	37,248,137	37,576,030
1879	37,632,857	31,470,262
1880	38,033,055	32,559,067
1881	42,987,613	30,653,959
1882	48,133,039	29,011,318
1883	42,975,101	27,816,640
1884	43,529,025	25,183,567
1885	44,516,599	26,393,756
1886	52,136,851	29,501,424
1887	57,852,884	32,500,097
1888	53,152,747	29,087,702
1889	64,808,637	32,527,661
1890	62,930,831	31,795,361
1891	60,614,004	31,085,118
1892	50,807,601	29,847,444
1893	38,499,521	33,148,723
1894	28,721,014	45,623,291
1895	35,274,777	48,399,729
1896	33,684,963	53,015,242
1897	34,034,034	63,655,597
1898	35,081,385	66,486,202
1899	34,594,498	72,567,226

The report gives the product of gold and silver in the Republic of Mexico, values in mintage basis, from 1877 to 1899, at $953,029,000, or $56,701,000 gold and $902,238,000 silver. The product for 1898-9 was $10,112,000 gold and $65,310,000 silver, or $75,422,000. From 1873 to 1899 Mexico's coinage of gold, silver, and copper amounted to $631,881,824, or gold dollars $13,189,655, silver dollars $618,488,873, and copper dollars $203,296. The coinage of Mexico from the establishment of the mints in 1537 to the end of the fiscal year of 1899 was: Colonial epoch, from 1537 to 1821, $2,151,581,969; independence, from 1822 to 1873, $809,655,251; republic, from 1873 to 1899, $631,881,824. Total, $3,593,119,035. The gold coinage for this period, unmilled coin, pillar coin, bust coin, Iturbide's bust, republic eagle, and eagle coin, was $127,569,086, and the silver coinage $3,459,571,583. The copper coinage was $5,981,366.

The exports of silver in 1899 to Japan, China, the Straits, &c., were: From London, $33,923,252; from San Francisco, $5,963,543, or $39,886,795, against $32,622,032 in 1898.

Davis Will Contestant Loses.

BUTTE, Mon., Jan. 20.—Judge Beatty of Idaho, sitting in the United States court here, has decided the last of the famous bank stock cases growing out of the fight over the estate of the late millionaire and banker, Andrew J. Davis. Harriet Wood, a sister of Davis, sued to set aside the deathbed bequest of the decedent to his nephew and namesake, Andrew J. Davis, by which the latter acquired practically the whole of the First National Bank of Butte. The decision is in favor of the defendant and confirms his title to the bank.

Third Avenue Road's Debt.

The negotiations for the taking up of the Third Avenue Railroad's floating debt were progressing favorably yesterday. The lawyers are still working on the papers, and it is understood that their investigation is the only thing which delays the official announcement of the details.

Admitted to Philadelphia Exchange.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—Alexander C. Robinson of the firm of Robinson Brothers of Pittsburg was to-day elected a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. His was the first application for membership since the recent ruling of the Exchange prohibiting division of commissions with brokers in other cities.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 4 per cent. Registered Bonds of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago Ry. Co. will close at the office of the Central Trust Co. of N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the quarterly interest thereon, due Feb. 1, 1900, and will reopen Feb. 1, at 10 A. M.
E. F. OSBORN, Secretary.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1900.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 7 per cent. registered bonds of the Columbus & Toledo R. R. Co. will close at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the semi-annual interest thereon due Feb. 1, 1900, and will open Feb. 1st at 10 A. M.
WILLIAM N. COTT, Treasurer.
Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1900.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Few features other than dullness have marked the security market of the past week. On no day have transactions reached an encouraging aggregate, totals running only at about one-half of what are ordinarily recorded as a normal business showing—being barely a quarter of the total for the corresponding week a year ago.

Of new developments during the week none has been discouraging, some have been positively favorable. The weekly bank statement issued yesterday was more a cause for cheerfulness than any other disclosure of the week. It shows deposits increased over $16,000,000, loans extended and surplus reserves $7,400,000 beyond where they were a week ago. This, in the language of Wall Street, is "good." Nothing surprising is in the exhibit, however. It has been amply understood in every quarter that funds are coming this way from the West in larger volume, while mercantile borrowers are being more liberally accommodated than hitherto. Increase in loans, probably to the extent of 75 per cent., represents extension in commercial uses of money. In so far as Wall Street speculative demands upon the banks go, no substantial new dispositions show upon the part of borrowers or lenders. Stock Exchange call rates have declined, but the loan clerks at the banks are enforcing more stringent rules as to the character of collateral. Industrials are less in favor than they have been. Not very much clamor is heard on this account, and most banks will blandly aver that they are not discriminating against trust stocks. But the fact is that the borrower who does not present the gilt-edged collateral of stocks which represent conservative, open management, and which have stood the tests of the market for more than a few months past, has difficulty in making a satisfactory loan arrangement. One important bank is credited even with having established a rule that trust stocks can be regarded as having a collateral value equal only to the lowest point they have sold at since issuance. Rules like this operate not so much against people who have industrial securities already in hand, for such holders may have more of less acceptable finance accommodation, for the present at least; what chiefly is effected is that new buyers are handicapped; and thus it is that Stock Exchange brokers, recognizing the attitude of banking authorities, are urgent in advising customers against taking industrials, however tempting the promises of profits seem.

The extraordinary gain in deposits shown by the Clearing House statement of yesterday is variously construed in financial circles. Speculators working for market improvement put forward the view that the gain in funds represents not only the return of crop money from the West and South, but that it results from completed liquidation in some conspicuous quarters which have recently been under pressure. This theory does not, however, wholly prevail in banking circles. There also is the view that large transfers of deposits have been made during the past week from trust companies to Clearing House banks. Estate funds in some volume have been so transferred. It may be that ample warrant has not existed for operations of this sort, but bankers seem convinced that such transactions reach large figures.

What most directly concerns Wall Street is the extent to which the gains in Clearing House deposits and surplus reserves are available for new security market uses. If such increases represent chiefly the return of money recently tied up for crop uses, it is not unreasonable to assume that some tonic effects may be shown upon the Stock Exchange, for funds sent West and South for harvest purposes during the Fall were withdrawn from quarters where security market accommodation was thereby restricted. But if the Clearing House gains represent transfers of estate and trust funds, it requires overmuch Stock Exchange enthusiasm to count upon the employment of such resources in the stock market—actual speculative buying capacity being in no such way enlarged.

It is idle, however, for those who are bearishly inclined to affect to ignore the fact that public sentiment is improved so far as consideration of general money market conditions are involved. Evidences of easier loan market conditions show in a variety of ways. Not only are funds in larger supply and at rates substantially under where charges hitherto have been ruling, but money may be had on time, and on long time, under the legal rate, which but a fortnight ago was almost uniformly exceeded.

Not only here but abroad the money rate declines. Call funds at London have been down during the past week to 1½ and 2 per cent., and the Bank of England's discount charge has been cut since New Year's from 6 to 4½ per cent. Some theories have it that the lowering of English rates is simply a manipulative preliminary to the issuance of a big British war loan whose success would be furthered by a current showing of international money market ease. This view makes drafts upon professional pessimism, however, and it may be safer to trust banking authorities having international relations who aver that lower loan rates abroad show but a natural reaction from recent speculative congestion, such troubles having passed. Theories pro and con aside, the one certain fact evident is that British consols are soon to be marketed.

Meantime, along with the Bank of England's rate reduction—and forecasts have it that it may even go to 4 per cent. next Thursday—there have been similar reductions by the Bank of France, the Bank of Germany, and the Austro-Hungarian Bank. Such easier conditions abroad forbid gold exports from New York, for the present, at least.

Wall Street still persists in regarding the South African war as a matter of moment for the American security market. It requires the use of much logic to figure out all that Wall Street contends for on this account, but the fact during the past week has been made clear, over and over again, that Wall Street sentiment is ready to fluctuate temporarily as British fortunes go. In the face of a dullness which ordinarily would have forced declines, the market for days past has had firmness, inspired largely by curious bulletins given out by speculators who have been daily relieving Ladysmith over and over again. It is easier to discern how damage can be done to financial sentiment the world over by British reverses than it is to calculate upon material buoyancy to come from British successes. An immediate end of the war would be sure, of course, to exert tonic effect, not only at London but throughout the world; but so long as actual hostilities continue it is idle to count upon abiding betterment, in so far as Boer war news counts at all.

Some disclosures confronting Wall Street are disturbing. The confession of the Third Avenue street railroad that its fortunes are so bad that outsiders must come to the rescue does damage to confidence beyond the Third Avenue's own connections. And the suggestion that still more securities are to be issued by the Metropolitan Street Railway gives no encouragement to a situation which has had the embarrassment of such sensationalism as has attended upon the affairs of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

Iron market conditions show some improvement. Those indications which lately seemed to be threatening substantial price reaction appear to have passed for the time. Other trade situation signs are better. The fact that the United States is prosperous is a fact not at all debatable, and Wall Street's failure to reflect good times cannot be lasting. But the public holds aloof—just as conservative financial counselors have been advising and are still advising—waiting for the passing of what, though temporary, are speculative interferences.

SATURDAY.

Stocks irregular.

STOCK TRANSACTIONS.

	Shares.
Jan. 20	159,442
To date this year	7,100,032
Corresponding date last year	15,135,707

BOND TRANSACTIONS.

Jan. 20	$1,703,000
To date this year	$30,482,500
Corresponding date last year	$35,716,540

Money rate Collateral loans on call, 2½@3½ per cent.; at three months, 5 per cent.; at six months, 5½ per cent. Commercial paper, sixty to ninety days, 5 per cent.

***

Net changes in stocks of one-half of 1 per cent. or more were:

Stocks Advanced.

Am. Dist. Tel.	5	Mexican Central	½
Am. S. & W. pf.	½	M. St. P. & S. S. M.	¾
Am. Steel Hoop	½	M., St. P. & S. S. M. pf.	2
Brunswick	1¾	N. J. Central	½
Chi., M. & St. P. pf.	1½	Del., L. & W.	½
General Electric	1	St. L. S. W.	½
Lake Erie & West	1¼	W. & L. E. 1st pf.	⅞
		Wis. Cetral	1

Stocks Declined.

Am. Tobacco	1¼	Cont. Tob. pf.	1½
Anaconda Copper	¾	Erie Tel. & Tel.	¾
At., T. & S. F. pf.	½	Great North. pf.	1
Chi. & N. W.	1	Met. Street Ry.	½
C., C., C. & St. L.	½	Pressed S. Car pf.	¾
Col. Fuel & Iron	½	Tenn. Coal & Iron	½
Cont. Tobacco	¾	Third Avenue	1¾

***

Net changes in bonds of 1 per cent. or more were:

Bonds Advanced.

Int. & G. N. 1st....1 W. N. Y. & P. gen..1
Mex. Cent. 1st inc..1½ Wabash, Des M. 1st..1
Stand. R. & T. 6s....1½

There were no declines.

SHOULD TRUST COMPANIES HAVE TO KEEP RESERVES?

[FROM A SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.]

The bill reported to the Legislature by the joint Committee on Taxation putting banks and trust companies on the same footing in the matter of taxation has been followed by another, introduced in the Senate, requiring trust companies to keep on hand at all times a cash reserve amounting to 15 per cent. of their deposits in this city and 10 per cent. in other cities of the State. The requirement is similar to that imposed upon State banks, but half the reserve of any trust company may be kept on deposit in a bank having not less than $200,000 capital.

There is no evidence that this bill has been demanded by the banks or that they are in any way responsible for its appearance at Albany. The committee of the State Bankers' Association which has been working for an equalization of taxes upon banking capital has had nothing to do with it and is apparently taking no interest in it. That committee has been working chiefly in behalf of the banks away from this city, which do not seriously feel the trust company competition. There is little indication that the officers of banks here are in favor of requiring trust companies to keep a fixed minimum of reserves, which would add materially to the volume of funds that is constantly tied up in idleness, regardless of the varying needs of the money market. Those who express themselves in favor of such a requirement generally qualify their statements by saying that if trust companies are going to do a general banking business by taking mercantile deposits subject to check and practically discounting commercial paper by the indirect process of buying notes and bills, then they ought to be subject to the same rule that is imposed upon banks. If it were practicable to require a percentage of reserve against deposits held and used in that way, the banks would perhaps be in favor of it, but as matters stand bank officers in this city are more than doubtful about such a requirement. It would somewhat diminish their own deposits and the available supply of loanable funds.

It is needless to say that the trust company officers are unanimously opposed to being required by law to keep a 15 per cent. reserve, even though one-half of it may be deposited in banks. They regard it as unnecessary for any legitimate purpose. Some of them question the policy of compelling banks to keep a fixed percentage of their deposits always on hand as security for the part that is loaned out, declaring that competent bank officers will always make their loans safe and have such funds on hand as they need, and that no amount of reserve will make a bank safe that is incompetently or dishonestly managed. It is a common claim that superior management is the chief security of the trust company.

But a conservative trust company, devoted to the business for which those institutions are primarily organized, needs no fixed amount of cash on hand. The restricted investment of its capital is intended as a security for its trust funds, which cannot be withdrawn without notice, and its loans will be adequately secured, while a sufficient proportion of them will be subject to call to furnish available funds for all demands. It will keep in its own vaults or in bank all the cash that it needs in the daily transaction of its business, even if it allows to certain trusted customers the privilege of drawing upon their accounts at sight. No doubt most of the trust companies pursue this prudent policy, which makes the legal requirement of a reserve unnecessary and undesirable, but the whole trouble has been caused by a few, mostly of recent organization, which branch out freely in the banking business, soliciting mercantile deposits, on which they pay interest, while allowing them to be drawn by check, investing largely in commercial paper, and making loans upon questionable security. If the trust companies should be subject to new restrictions and requirements, which would be regarded as oppressive by most of them, it will be due to this departure from their proper field by a smaller number. Perhaps the more conservative institutions and the Clearing House have the remedy in their own hands.

A. K. F.
New York, Jan. 19, 1900.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The bank statement issued yesterday shortly before the close of business was, as had been anticipated, of a very favorable nature, showing the substantial gain of $7,478,325 in the surplus reserve, while specie increased no less than $7,341,700, and legal tenders $4,194,300. There was an increase also in loans of a trifle over $4,500,000.

The increase in loans was the only item that occasioned any particular comment, the course of speculation during the week having led to the belief that if there were any change in the loan item it would rather be along the line of contraction. It is now explained that a part of the increase may be ascribed to the extra dealing in bonds. As for the increase in surplus reserve, it was about what was estimated, allowing for the actual gain from the Sub-Treasury and the interior, and, of course, for the increase in deposits necessitating a greater sum for reserve purposes.

***

As on the previous Saturday, though not nearly to so great a degree, the market sold off after the statement, said to be due principally to profit taking and the desire of some speculators not to carry over their commitments to Monday.

***

The week's averages of the banks compare as follows with the same period in 1899 and 1898:

	1900.	1899.	1898.
Loans	$680,817,200	$72,351,600	$623,470,100
Deposits	705,518,100	84,074,100	714,472,800
Circulation	.....	1,439,300	14,593,600
Specie	152,607,800	18,073,100	110,647,600
Legal tenders	62,957,400	8,889,100	90,245,800
Total reserve	$215,565,200	$26,962,200	$209,893,400
Res. required	191,379,525	22,268,525	178,618,200
Surplus res've	$24,175,675	$4,693,675	$31,275,200

WALL STREET AND WHEAT.

Wall Street is disappointed at the course of the grain market. While other staples have advanced, yielding large profits to producers, agricultural commodities have not only lagged, but drooped. Foreign war, famine in India, and what is estimated to be a substantial increase in ordinary consumption, both at home and abroad, are factors which Wall Street counted on to make better prices. And the disappointment is especially acute in quarters where close consideration is given to fluctuations in international trade balances.

Discussing the situation, which professional Wall Street insists upon regarding as abnormal, Mr. J. Van Raalte said yesterday to a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES:

"There are two things which the oldest inhabitant does not remember, and which he has never seen before. First of all, such general genuine prosperity all the world over, and, secondly, that, when things are generally prosperous, we should have such cheap bread to eat as we are having now. Give me the pulse of the iron market, and I will tell you the course of wheat. This is an old saying, upon which theory large profits have been realized, and he who has bought wheat from no other motive than to act on the general principle that the foremost staple in the world should share in the present general prosperity, and that the latter should become a factor and act as a healthy stimulant in mainta grave political complications which might suddenly arise, there would have been a great short interest in the market. As it is, the short seller held aloof, and consequently values have for some time been held up only by those who bought for an advance. The advance did not materialize, and consequently the market broke by its own heavy weight. The longs got tired, and there was too little short interest to give the market any substantial support.

"I have thus tried to explain why in theory we wonder that wheat should not advance, and also that in reality we need not wonder that it does not advance. The average operator, however, takes all these arguments into consideration, and as a result he does but seldom enter upon any venture and leaves wheat speculation severely alone, while many and many others have given wheat a very wide berth. The narrow fluctuations so long prevalent do not fascinate them any longer. The Stock Exchange, with its wild and exciting fluctuations, is far more inviting to one who desires to speculate. Wheat has become altogether too slow of action. This considerably curtailed speculation may probably be salutary in its effect in so far that the market, being more than usually left to take care of itself, may thereby more precisely record values in keeping with the actual condition of affairs, and thus the recent decline which we experienced has been the outcome thereof, and has certainly in great part cleared away the heaviness which hangs over the market for so protracted a period. We are about to enter upon a rather critical time for the growing crop, and we are already advised from France that frost has done quite some damage to the plant. No doubt before harvest we will hear of many such reports from everywhere. We will hear also many of them contradicted; and, as we are now upon the eve of the era of crop scares, we all wonder whether wheat will go up and—stay up.

***

A New Era in Values.

The Chicago office of Counselman & Day sums the situation up as follows:

"The closing year of the nineteenth century marks the dawn of a new era and the advent of a radical range of values for wheat. So many conflicting factors combine to establish market prices for wheat that experience teaches little and statistics prove unreliable guides. The consumption of wheat yearly naturally should keep pace with the increase in population, but careful research by economic writers reveals the fact that in periods of prosperity and enlarged purchasing powers other foods are extensively substituted for wheat.

"The decreased cost of production is an important market factor, the exact result and extent of which cannot be established. The decreased cost of transportation is more easily established and both reductions certainly contribute to lessen values in comparison with previous years.

"Laws of supply and demand continue to govern market prices, but the changed conditions previously enumerated account for the lower level of values. There has been no overproduction of wheat during the past crop year, but an average crop in America, England, and Continental Europe, a famine crop in Russia and India, and a bumper crop in Argentina. In toto, this has been no excess of production over consumptive requirements. The crop prospects for the ensuing year are brilliant. An enlarged area has been seeded to Winter wheat, and up to the present time weather conditions have been extremely favorable.

"The unknown quantity in the situation is the amount of farm reserves. Conservative authorities estimate them in America at 50,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. Visible stocks, while large in this country, are smaller in Europe than for many years. The present price of wheat in America is within 1½ cents per bushel of the average price during the panic years of 1893 and 1895, the lowest prices on record. The price of flour at Minneapolis is within 30 cents per barrel of the lowest in fifteen years. It would seem that the market has been depressed during a period of general prosperity and enhanced prices for all other commodities sufficiently to discount all the changed conditions in the cost of production and transportation, but central stocks in America are large, grain speculation is dormant, and the export demand slow.

"These conditions must change in order to advance prices. We are approaching the season of crop scares, but with enlarged area seeded as per the Government report any damage would have to be excessive to offset the increased area. The position in its entirety does not encourage short sales; on the contrary, the chance of loss to the buyer is apparently limited, and, all in all, the chapter of accidents in his favor."

Calculations Upset.

J. F. Harris of Chicago, correspondent for Price, McCormick & Co., discussing the same subject, says:

"Cash wheat sold lower in Chicago last week than at any time since September, 1896. On the last day of May, 1899, it sold at 70½, and on Thursday of the week just closed it touched 61½. A drop of 18 cents in so short a time, in the face of almost general expectation of higher values, has upset the calculations of the most experienced speculators. At one time last Spring it was supposed by the trade that our Winter wheat crop might prove a practical failure, and there was considerable apprehension in regard to the Spring wheat. As the trade always accounts probabilities, and oftentimes probabilities, there was a snarp advance of 15½ from the bottom price of the March preceding. The early popular estimate of the last crop was nearly as misleading as that of 1898. In September of the latter year the Government estimated a crop of 625,000,000. At the close of the crop year the distribution showed that the yield had been fully 725,000,000. Last Spring it was believed that the 1899 crop would not exceed 450,000,000. The Government's estimate last month was about 900,000,000 more. The last two world's crops of wheat have been about 500,000,000 larger than the yield for the two preceding years. Leiter bit upon a fortunate time to run his deal, and if he had not wanted the earth he might have succeeded in getting at least a slice of it. The prices he paid brought the world's available supply into sight, but left empty bins among producers, and this was a powerful incentive to increased production. Prices have declined as evidence of this increased production has been impressed on the trade.

"The tendency in speculation is to go to extremes. The pendulum having swung too far in one direction last Spring is now probably going too far in the opposite direction, but this will doubtless adjust itself in due time. The data with which the market is now being hammered is the Argentine crop, but the exportable surplus of the harvest just secured is estimated but little larger than the preceding crop, and it will be remembered that a year ago, instead of that proving a depressing factor, there was a January boom of 12 or 14 cents."

AFTER FOUR YEARS.

